SOME LETTERS OF INTEREST

ANOTHER BRAVE BROTHER ACROSS THE SEA

(NINETEEN YEARS OF AGE—WRITTEN IN THE GUARD ROOM)

MY DEAR BRETHREN:—

Greetings! You will be glad to know that your little brother in England is now privileged to share with the others the experiences peculiar to us over here. Truly, although the present surroundings are not congenial to the new creature or to the flesh, one realizes how GOOD the Lord is. Experiences which we would naturally shrink from are taken as among the "all things," because of the trustful confidence we have in our great God. He has guided and blessed me richly thus far, and my desire is to just continue daily to abide in him, to faithfully seek to uphold the principles we have grown to love and appreciate. Under these circumstances one is able to reflect the light by the life lived, and to be an example of the believers. My prayer is that my heart shall always respond joyfully to his loving leadings, and be submissive in all the way he shall lead.

Taking such experiences as he sees fit to permit with joy and gratitude, one is able to count all as light afflictions, as surely they are. When we think of all the blessings he has showered upon us since we were brought into the light, why, our hearts bubble over with joy and the joy of the Lord becomes our strength! Our great hope, too, is so bright that it surely stimulates us to cheerful, patient endurance.

In this peculiar position one is able to bear the reproaches of our Master in various ways, and it gives us great joy to be so permitted. Today I have been thinking of our dear Redeemer's example—he endured all things unmurmuringly, without retaliation. It is my heart's desire to prove worthy of his leadership, following the more faithfully in his footsteps daily. Truly the heavenly hopes and joys are the only enduring, eternal things!

This morning, as I was marched before the Colonel, the words on page 238 of our Poem Book flashed into my mind:

"He rose, and from that hour went forth
To trial and to death, in peace—
A calmness born of perfect confidence in God."

That last line has many times in the past been helpful to me; and under the present circumstances it is more than helpful, it is inspiring.

I feel it a great privilege to be permitted to bear this witness. The Colonel told me this morning that I shall be ordered to don the King's uniform, and if I refuse, I shall be court-martialed. That is the usual experience, of course. Most sentences are commuted now to four months hard labor, and after about ten weeks one is released and put somewhere on Work of National Importance, so-called, under the Government's Home Office scheme.

Truly, the Lord is very good and we rejoice in his loving leadings; and our desire is to be more faithful day by day, to do always those things pleasing in his sight! Rev. 2:10, all of the verse, is very forceful to us while in the hands of the Military. It is indeed a happy privilege to bear his reproaches with meekness and pitying love for our would-be enemies. I am assured of an interest in your prayers, and I commend all the dear ones in America to our Father's tender care and keeping.

Later.—I thought I would like to send just a few more lines before I go to prison, to let you know of our continued trust in our dear heavenly Father's love and providential care. Surely one has abundant cause for gratitude—we truly find what we seek! We are daily counting our blessings and find fresh causes to thank our loving Father.

By Tuesday next it will be three weeks since I came into the hands of the Military. I have had a nice and happy time, because after a few days I was in the company of four other Conscientious Objectors to Military Service on religious grounds. The difference in our religious views makes little difference—we have all been quite happy. There have been many opportunities for presenting the truth to my fellow "C. O.'s" and to the soldiers who are supposed to be guarding us prisoners.

One realizes the need for patient endurance, yet we can rejoice that in all the various experiences which we have been privileged to pass through his grace has been sufficient. This morning the last performance was gone through—that of being marched before the troops and hearing the sentence read out: "The accused is found guilty and sentenced to suffer imprisonment for 112 days with hard labor."

So I go away to prison tomorrow, dear ones. What a grand privilege! It is very sweet to suffer a little for his dear sake who has suffered so much for us. We rejoice in his tender care who loves us with such a strong love. (2 Chron. 16:9; Num. 6:24-26, Hymn 307.) With fondest Christian love, I am,

Your little brother "in bonds" for his sake,

STANLEY W. WILLIS.—England.

A VOICE FROM FAR-OFF AUSTRALIA

BELOVED BRETHREN:—

Greetings in the name of our blessed Master! May his peace be multiplied unto you. Although somewhat late in forwarding a message to you, we nevertheless have had you continually in our thoughts, and rejoice in our privilege of remembering you daily at the throne of grace.

Some few years ago, an ecclesia was formed in this city, and our Brother Russell consented to be our Pastor. We thank our heavenly Father for his provision in our Brother Russell, through whose ministrations we have been built up and enabled to grow in knowledge and grace. We also thank him for having answered the prayers of so many of his saints, in that our brother was kept faithful until death.

While assembled in Convention (one day Convention), we desire to convey to you our Christian love, and to assure you that you have taken Brother Russell's place in our prayers and as our guides. Further, this ecclesia unanimously resolves to accord you our unreserved and loyal support in forwarding the work of the kingdom, so soon to be established.

Our message to you, dear Brethren, is expressed in Isaiah 41:10 and Joshua 1:8, 9, "Fear thou not, for I am with thee; be not dismayed, for I am thy God. I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee, with the right hand of my righteousness." "This book of the law shall not depart out of thy mouth; but thou shalt meditate therein day and night, that thou mayest observe to do according to all that is written therein; for then thou shalt make thy way prosperous, and then thou shalt have good success. Have not I commanded thee? Be strong and of a good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed, for the Lord thy God is with thee withersoever thou goest." God is our strength. How strong we are in him!

With Christian love, we remain,

Your brethren by his grace and in his service,

BRISBANE ECCLESIA.—Australia.

FLEECING THE SHEEP

DEAR BRETHREN:—

I want to congratulate the Editorial Committee for their forethought, wisdom and general ability. I have the March 1 TOWER, and was glad to note article on fly leaf, "Warning to the Friends," also letter on page 78, top of 1st column, and the reply thereto, As the secretary of the class for eight or ten years, I have been up against all the propositions contained in those articles; and from the fact that I was a traveling salesman for twenty-eight years and know the ways of the world and human nature, I have naturally become what the boys term a "wise guy." I have not been duped to any great extent, but my experiences, if I could tell you about them, would be quite laughable.

I, however, know of many innocent and unsophisticated brethren that have been imposed on and duped shametully. And it has been in most cases the new friends, fresh in their first love for the truth, that have been the victims.

You have acted wisely in not publishing the names and addresses of the class secretaries. Yet mine has gotten out pretty generally, and I am a constant recipient of letters and callers of doubtful intentions. It is a real, genuine privilege and pleasure for wife and myself to extend hospitality and generosity to the authorized pilgrims, colporteurs, agents and helpers sent out by the Bible House; but when it comes to lazy, never-do-well, spiritually sick hangers-on, I never let them lie down on me. I feel that it would be encouraging them in a wrong. Having had much personal experience all along the line that both of those articles suggest, I think they are very timely indeed, and I am sure the friends will profit thereby. With much personal esteem, I am,

Your fellow servant in the Lord, W. B. SUTTON.—Va.

MAY OUR HEARTS BEAT AS ONE

MY BELOVED BRETHREN:—

We know your hearts have been touched with sadness. What a shock Brother Russell's death must have been to you of the Bethel home! The day the news reached us it seemed as though we were in a stuffy room, unable to get a full breath. It was so hard to realize it was so. But, as we remembered the fruition of our hopes was a participation in the first resurrection with our dear Redeemer, and that Brother Russell had gone to his reward, "to meet the Lord in the air," and that he was one of those "blessed in the Lord that die from henceforth," we could not help but rejoice with our dear Brother. We have been personally acquainted with him for fifteen years, and have been greatly blessed by his life—and wonderfully blessed by his death—knowing that his trials are over and that he has gone beyond the fiery darts of enemies and people who did not understand him; and, additionally, blessed in the glorious fact that he now lives forever—changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye—having closed his eyes to temporal things and opened them to eternal things—to see Jesus as he is, and be like him! We know that all is well, and that he had finished his work this side the veil.

We pray our Father's richest blessings on the dear Israel at Bethel, that wisdom from on high may be abundantly bestowed on you to carry on the great work uninterruptedly, and that there may be a remarkable manifestation of the sweet spirit of Jesus in all that is done, that every word, thought and deed may redound to the glory of God and his dear Son, our High Priest and Advocate, and that we all may meet each other soon in the realms of glory, honor and immortality.

We are pledging ourself anew to God, his truth, and his called ones, that our hearts may beat as one during the stirring scenes which will mark the close of "Elijah's" career. Continuing in daily prayer for you, my brethren, I remain,

Your brother by his rich favor, C. E. STEWART.—Ill.

EARTH NOW POORER—HEAVEN RICHER

DEAR BRETHREN:—

We desire to express to you our love in the Lord, and our loyalty to you as the channel he is now using to bring to us the clear and refreshing waters of truth.

We find it difficult to express in words our feelings on learning that our Pastor was found faithful and taken home. We hardly realized how much we loved him. Was ever a man truly loved so well since our dear Lord was on earth as a man? We think not, and yet he was worthy of it all, for it was his self-sacrifice and zeal for the truth which in our Father's hands and with his blessing brought us all here into the glorious light of present truth.

Our hearts go out in thankfulness and praise to our loving heavenly Father for sparing him so long to us, as well as for the example he was to us of loving devotion and sweet, patient endurance under all circumstances. Though earth is poorer, heaven is richer, and we would not wish it otherwise than as it has pleased our Father to arrange it; but we look forward to meeting him again, now very soon, when we too have made our calling and election sure.

We pray our Father's blessing on all the work in your corner of the vineyard, and that he may guide and direct you in all your labors and service and multiply his love and peace unto you.

Yours in the fellowship of the mystery.

ONLY A LITTLE WHILE

DEAR BRETHREN:—

We bow in loving and humble submission to the divine will, confident that the seventh and last special "angel" to the church is now like our blessed Lord and Head, and can see him as he is.

We resolve to redouble our diligence to make our calling and election sure; to renew our consecration vows, and to pledge our cooperation in all possible ways to the Society, who though bereft of its best friend on earth are bravely seeking to complete their share in the kingdom work yet to be done this side the veil.

We also desire, at this time, to extend to you our deep appreciation of the faithful, loving ministrations of both our dear, departed Pastor and of all at the Brooklyn Tabernacle and Bethel home, who were closely associated with him in the harvest activities.

WITNESSING AT FUNERALS

DEAR BRETHREN:—

Your letter of the 13th came to hand this P. M., and was much appreciated. Many thanks for the careful way in which you replied to our several inquiries.

For some weeks we have felt that the matter of conducting funerals should be mentioned to you, and by you to the friends in some general way. Three very sad cases have recently come to our attention, instances in which we would have thought the dear friends would have known better how to proceed. In each of these cases some of the friends had the matter of funeral services placed in their hands, but they were unable to secure a capable brother to conduct the service. In two of these cases a nearby brother could have been easily secured, but the friends did not know of this until too late. They seem to have done the best they knew, but they did not know the best to do.

It would have been very simple and inexpensive to have wired you asking for someone to render this service, and a capable speaker could have been provided at small expense. The friends would have been glad to pay all the expenses, and a wonderful witness for the truth could have been given.

We consider these great opportunities for witnessing. So does the SOCIETY, as evidenced by the fact that mention is made of such free service on the volunteer matter.

Could not some brief, pointed, yet comprehensive instructions be given to all through the TOWER? You will know what would be the best thing to do. With fervent Christian Love to all, I am,

Your brother by his grace, W. H. SPRING.—Ohio.

[The SOCIETY has for a long time cooperated in the matter of furnishing capable brethren to speak at funeral services whenever requested so to do, whether near or far, and shall be glad to continue to render such assistance wherever possible. Requests of this character should be wired to the SOCIETY without delay, giving place, day and time of funeral. We will in turn wire information.]

MEN AFTER GOD'S OWN HEART

DEAR BRETHREN:—

The Suffolk, Va., Ecclesia celebrated the Memorial of our dear Saviour's death on the evening of April 5, in my house, in which, in an adjoining room, lay the dead body of my wife. There were ten present, one of our sisters being absent on account of sickness. It was a blessed experience to each and all as we again commemorated the death of our dear Lord and Master and once more renewed our consecrations to be dead with him.

As we partook of the emblems which symbolize his death we thought of and prayed for all of like precious faith the world over. In our daily prayers, we fail not to remember the household of faith, and in an especial manner do we invoke wisdom and guidance for the dear brethren upon whom the Lord has now placed the duty and responsibility of directing the harvest work, that they may be men after God's own heart, as we believe them to be, so that the work may be conducted in a manner that will command his approval, and bring the best results, to the glory of his great and holy Name.

In much Christian love for all, WM. W. MURRAY.

EARNEST WORDS OF APPRECIATION

DEAR BRETHREN:—

Just a line or two to tell you how much we all appreciated the series of public meetings we have had here in Columbus. It was an inspiration to us to see and hear the hearty responses to the messages from the dear Brooklyn brethren who spoke.

We all wish to thank the SOCIETY for arranging such a precious season of blessing for us and such a wonderful witness to the truth once more in Columbus. May God continue His rich blessing on you all and make you at one and complete in him who is the Savior of the body.

We made judicious use of the newspapers in advertising these meetings and feel that we had excellent results. We used mostly "Readers" scattered through the papers. The total cost of the four meetings will reach about $380, which was all pledged before we started the series for the public.

We feel richly blessed and more determined than ever to go on to the end. With fervent Christian love to you all,

Your brother by his grace, C. B. SHULL.—Ohio.

FOUL SCANDAL'S DANGER

"Brakes on! Go slow! you do not know,
You are not sure that it is so.
A vagrant whisper overheard,
A sneer, a shrug, a dastard word
Are not sound evidence—you may
Unjustly hurt a man today.
The thoughtless things that people say,
The vandal rumors gossip spreads,
The 'I have heards' and 'Someone saids,'
And like remarks, destroy and blight
Without a chance to prove the right.
Noblesse Oblige! Who knows when you
May stand in need of fair play, too?
A thousand men and women die
At heart each day because a lie—
Some ill-considered, vicious fling—
Has robbed their lives of everything."

ANGELOPHONE COMPANY REORGANIZED

In a recent issue of the THE WATCH TOWER we announced that the Angelophone Company was going out of business. We are glad now to inform our readers that this work will continue, some brethren having taken over the Company and reorganized it.

There was a legal question raised as to whether or not the SOCIETY had authority under its charter to sell talking machines, together with the records. It is our desire to be strictly law-abiding. There could be no question about the right of the SOCIETY to manufacture and sell talking and singing records, because this is another method of preaching the Gospel.

The records made by Brother Russell proved unsatisfactory, but there has been such a demand for them that the SOCIETY has arranged to have these records made again, which is now being done by the same person who made the PHOTO-DRAMA RECORDS so great a success. The new records are clear and distinct, and easy to be understood, and will be much appreciated by every one, especially by those who enjoyed Brother Russell's discourses. These records will be handled by the Angelophone Company, which still has on hand a few sets of records in the voice of Brother Russell.

Because of the increased cost of rerecording and remaking, and the increased cost of material, the Angelophone Company is compelled to sell these records at 25c each or $5 per set of twenty-five. Even at this they are cheaper than any other records on the market.

Orders should be sent to us or to the Angelophone Company, 184 Fulton St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"WHY DO THE NATIONS WAR?"

The announcement that there would be a new issue of Volunteer literature has awakened many to the importance of ordering the first Volunteer matter—Vol. 9, No. 1—"The World on Fire"—and distributing it. We believe that the time is more propitious now than ever for the Lord's people to work, and "The World on Fire" is excellent to begin with. People are thinking now as never before. We believe, too, that the Lord expects us to keep on witnessing as long as it is "called day." It will be time to stop when the night has so far come upon us that no one can work.

The leading article of the new volunteer matter will be: "Why Do the Nations War?" Many orders have been received for it. When ordering it please mention Vol. 9, No. 5. We had thought to make it eight pages, but after considering every detail, it was concluded, the Lord willing, to issue another volunteer number before the summer ends.

The printers are at work now upon the new issue, and orders will be filled as rapidly as the printing proceeds. There should be no delay in putting it out when it reaches you. A combined effort and systematic distribution would be best!

Whenever there are classes, orders should be sent by the Secretary, and orders should be carefully estimated on a basis of one copy for each English-speaking family. Where there are no classes individuals may order, based upon the same estimate. The literature is furnished free; but we do not pay the transportation charges.

"Finally, brethren, be strong in the Lord and in the power of His might!"

VIEWS FROM THE WATCH TOWER

"THE HANDWRITING ON THE WALL"

We append an editorial from the New York American of May 18, which we believe sets forth without exaggeration present conditions throughout the world. After certain parts we have inserted some paragraphs from Vol. IV, "THE BATTLE OF ARMAGEDDON," of the series of "STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES."

The "BATTLE OF ARMAGEDDON" was written twenty years ago, and so faithfully does it picture present events leading up to their climax, "THE BATTLE OF ARMAGEDDON," and the introduction of earth's new Government, the kingdom of God's dear Son, that we could wish a copy of it in every home throughout the whole earth. Truly there lived among us in these last days a prophet of the Lord; and although now he has passed from human sight, his works remain an enduring witness to his wisdom and his faithfulness! Following is the editorial referred to with the insertions from "THE BATTLE OF ARMAGEDDON":

"BATTLE OF THE GREAT DAY OF GOD ALMIGHTY"

May 18, 1917, The N. Y. American said:

"The official mind seems to take it for granted that when the governments have made peace and have arranged the division of whatever spoils there may be, the peoples are going quietly back to work for their former masters, to live under the same institutions, to be, in short, the same nations, guided and controlled by the same financial, aristocratic and diplomatic castes that have ruled them for many centuries."

Twenty years ago Pastor Russell said:

"It is becoming more and more manifest to the masses of men that in the present order of things they are between a nether and upper millstone, whose rapid revolutions must eventually, and at no distant date, grind them down to a miserable and ignoble serfdom, unless interfered with in some way. Such indeed is the actual condition of things: human necessity is the feed-pipe which presses the masses between the millstones; the lower millstone is the fixed law of supply and demand which is crowding the rapidly increasing and growingly intelligent population of the world closer and closer to the pressure of the upper millstone of organized selfishness, driven by the giant power of mechanical slaves, assisted by the cogs and levers and pullevs of financial combinations, trusts and monopolies."—Vol. IV, p. 372, par. 2.

May 18, 1917, The New York American said:

"These seem to be also the views and conceptions of the public journals and of most private citizens, who naturally have no other sources of information and of opinion than the public journals.

"We can excuse the private citizen, but it is amazing that men who are hailed as statesmen cannot see what is going on before their eyes; cannot see that the Europe of 1913 has vanished as completely as the Europe of the dark ages; cannot see that the proletariats have at last in their hands the weapons and in their minds the thought and in their hearts the resolve to do away with all the old distinctions and social inequalities; that the institutions of government and laws which still seem to be solid and enduring edifices are in reality only hollow shells, mined and ready to be blown to pieces when relief from the pressure of outside war gives the peoples time and opportunity to overthrow and to rebuild the fabrics of society."

Twenty years ago Pastor Russell said:

"It will be impossible to reestablish the present order, (1) because it has evidently outlived its usefulness, and is inequitable under present conditions; (2) because of the general diffusion of secular knowledge; (3) because the discovery that priestcraft has long blinded and fettered the masses with error and fear will lead to a general disrespect for all religious claims and teachings as of a piece with the discovered frauds; (4) because religious people in general, not discerning that God's time has come for a change of dispensation, will ignore reason, logic, justice and Scripture in defending the present order of things."—Vol. IV, p. 551.

May 18, 1917, The N. Y. American said:

"This talk about autocracy still to be overthrown and democracy still to be saved and established is proof enough of the mental incapacity of so many men, esteemed wise, to realize what has happened in Europe. For the war has already achieved those two tremendous results. They are accomplished facts.

"The basis of any government and of any institution is the state of mind of the masses and the inability of the masses or the ability of the masses to impose their desires upon government.

"Now, any thinking mind must perceive that the masses in every country in Europe have the ability to set up at any time any form of government or any institutions and laws they desire, because the masses of Europe, for the first time in history, ARE CITIZEN SOLDIERS, equipped with all the weapons and munitions of war and as able to subjugate their masters, to coerce their officers and to overthrow their governments as were the Russian citizen soldiers.

Twenty years ago Pastor Russell said:

"Where, then, we inquire, is there such an army, under present instruction and training?—an army before which the earth [society] shall quake and the heavens [ecclesiasticism] shall tremble (Joel 2:10); which shall boldly array itself against the conservative forces of Christendom, both civil and ecclesiastical, and hope even to cope with its present strength? Where is the army that in the near future will dare deny Christendom's time-honored doctrines, its statecraft and priestcraft? that will sullenly ignore all its anathemas, spurn its orders, and hurl back its thunderbolts of authority and organized power? that will face the roar of its Vesuvian artillery, defy its missiles of shot and shell, plow through its fleets and naval armaments, and, snatching the diadems from crowned heads, topple the kingdoms into the midst of the sea? that will set the heavens on fire, and melt the earth with fervent heat, thus making one vast universal wreck of the old order of things as predicted by the prophets?

"That such an army is coming into existence and preparing for the desperate conflict we are none the less forcibly assured by the signs of the times than by 'the sure word of prophecy.' And it is the recognition of this fact (without any reference or knowledge of the word of prophecy) that is now filling the heart of Christendom with fearful foreboding, and impelling statesmen everywhere to take extraordinary measures for protection and defense.

"But in these very measures for self-defense devised by 'the powers that be,' there is probably a snare which they do not realize. The armies upon which they depend for defense, be it remembered, ARE THE ARMIES OF THE COMMON PEOPLE; these millions of disciplined warriors have wives and sons and daughters and brothers and sisters and cousins and friends in the ranks of the common people, with whose interests their own are linked by nature's strong ties; and their service of thrones and kingdoms is only secured by imperative orders, and made endurable by a remuneration which they are fast coming to consider as no satisfactory compensation for the hardships and privations which they and their families must undergo, not to mention perils of life and limb and health and fortune. Year by year these armed hosts are less and less infatuated with the 'glory' of war, more keenly alive to its sufferings and privations, and less and less devoted to the sovereign powers that command their services, while the armies of toilers, of the common people at home, are becoming more and more irritated and dissatisfied with their lot, and more and more apprehensive of the future.

"All of these things are indications of at least a possibility that in the crisis approaching the mighty armed and disciplined hosts of Christendom may turn their powers against the authorities that called them into being, instead of to uphold and preserve them. That such a possibility has not been entirely unthought of by the rulers is witnessed by the fact that in Russia, when the famine prevailed and led to riots among the common people, the facts concerning it were diligently kept from their friends and brothers in the Russian army, and the soldiers detailed for the suppression of the riots were from remote districts."—Vol. IV, pp. 545, 546.

May 18, 1917, The N. Y. American said:

"In 1848, when Europe rose and struck for freedom, the rebels could neither mobilize nor communicate quickly with one another, because there were neither railways nor electric telegraphs. So they were beaten in detail.

"In 1848 one monarch could and did lend another thousands of mercenary standing troops to beat that other's subjects into submission.

"In 1917 there are no mercenaries, no standing troops, no Pretorian Guards. They were all shot to pieces long ago on the battlefields—nourishing the hugest satire the world has ever seen, the tree of universal human liberty with the blood of tyrant's hirelings.

CONDITIONS OF THIS BATTLE UNPRECEDENTED

"The millions of men now in the camps and trenches of Europe are not mercenaries, not hirelings, petted and trained to shoot down rebellious subjects—THEY ARE THE PROLETARIATS THEMSELVES. And whenever they decide to quit slaying one another at their master's orders, and decide to go home and take over the control of their own countries, to constitute themselves the lawmakers, to abolish the institutions of property in land and of private exploitation of public functions—that day they will accomplish these things because they have in their hands the weapons with which to make good their purposes and resolves. Every day the signs of this coming revolution multiply faster and faster.

"The Russian Social Democracy has determined that a congress of Social Democrats shall be held in Sweden, there to formulate, NOT A PETITION to the sovereigns and cabinets to end the war, but AN ULTIMATUM to the sovereigns and cabinets to end the war or to take the consequences of domestic revolutions with the armed aid of the Russian Democracy.

"We suppose that no man familiar with history can fail to perceive the exact parallel between the course the red-capped Russian revolutionists are pursuing and the course which the red-capped French revolutionists pursued a hundred and twenty years ago; nor can fail to remember that when the French revolutionists started out to aid revolution and republicanism in other countries of Europe, their tumultuous sans-culotte armies were irresistible, and drove before them in battle with the same fierce ardor to the same headlong rout the trained troops alike of Prussia and Austria, of Holland and of England, of Italy and of Spain.

Twenty years ago Pastor Russell said:

"In all those leading causes which culminated in the terrors of the French Revolution we see a strong resemblance to similar conditions today which are rapidly and surely leading to the foretold similar results on a world-wide scale. Mark the growing animosity between the privileged classes (royalty and aristocracy) and the working classes, the discussions of the rights and wrongs of the people, and the decline of respect for both civil and ecclesiastical authority. Note also the revolutionary current of popular thought and expression—the increasing dissatisfaction of the masses of the people with the ruling powers and the institutions of government. And if the American Declaration of Independence, with its proclamation of human rights and of the foundation of government in contract and the consent of the people, inspired the masses of the French with a desire for liberty and independence, it is not surprising that the successful experiment of this government of the people and by the people, for a century past, and the measure of liberty and prosperity here enjoyed, are having their effect upon the peoples of the old world. The ever-continuous tide of emigration from other countries to this country is another evidence of the impression which this experiment has made upon the peoples of other nations.

"And yet, the liberty and prosperity here enjoyed are far from satisfactory to the people here. They crave a still better condition and are seeking measures to attain it. Nowhere throughout Christendom does this determination assert itself more positively and boldly than here. Every man is on the qui vive to assert his real or fancied rights. The trend of thought here, as elsewhere, is in the current of revolution, and is daily becoming more so.

"The French Revolution was a struggle of a measure of light against gross darkness; of the awakening spirit of liberty against long established oppression; and of a measure of truth against old errors and superstitions, long encouraged and fostered by civil and ecclesiastical powers for their own aggrandizement and the people's oppression. And yet, it exhibited the danger of liberty unguided by righteousness and the spirit of a sound mind. (2 Timothy 1:7) A little learning is indeed a dangerous thing."—Vol. IV, pp. 533, 534.

"We should not commit the stupid blunder of looking upon these Russian revolutionists as a helpless, anarchic mob. They ARE just that at present; and all their longings are for peace. But once let them resolve, in some fierce enthusiasm of new-found liberty, to carry the red flag to other countries, they would become an irresistible storm, a rushing tempest of war and victory.

"Nothing is easier than to underrate the weighty importance of this Stockholm conference, nothing more statesmanlike than to give it serious consideration.

"OUT OF THINE OWN MOUTH WILL I JUDGE THEE"

"We hear here at home talk of war being carried on for another year, for two years more, for three years more.

"We do not believe it.

"We do not believe that war can be carried on by any government on earth through another year.

"If there were not famine to reckon with, the universal weariness of slaughter in Europe would end war, either by persuasion of by armed revolt.

"We believe that unless the European Governments soon negotiate peace for Europe's suffering peoples, then Europe's suffering peoples will before long rise in mass and overthrow their governments in a common outburst of revolution and ruin.

"We do not hazard this as prophecy. We simply state it as fact.

"The truth is that the very situation we predicted, as you will remember, more than two years ago, and many times since, has now arisen—and Armed Socialism is marching steadily and rapidly to overthrow the institutions and governments of all Europe and to raise the red flag of internationalism over every capital of the Old World.

"Because this is so apparent, because this seems so inevitable and so near, we do not believe that the war in Europe will be prolonged over another year.

"We believe that unless the governments of Europe soon make peace, THE PEOPLES of Europe will make peace by overthrowing all thrones, nobilities and privileged castes and classes; and in that case peace will come to us automatically.

"We repeat that all calculations of prolonged warfare in Europe, based upon continued obedience of the masses to their present governments, are idle speculations, foolish calculations that will be blown to pieces by the storm and tempests of social revolutions unless the governments of Europe make peace before their peoples rise against war and against their governments.

"The signs of these troublous and momentous times could not be more plain to thinking men if they were written by some mighty angel's moving hand, in letters of fire, across the sky that domes the earth."

Twenty years ago Pastor Russell said:

"Truly this is the predicted time of distress of nations with perplexity! The voice of the discontented masses is aptly symbolized by the roaring of the sea, and the hearts of thinking men are failing for fear of the dread calamity which all can see rapidly approaching; for the powers of heaven (the present ruling powers) are being terribly shaken. Indeed some, instructed by these signs, and calling to mind that Scripture, 'Behold, he cometh with clouds,' are already beginning to suggest the presence of the Son of Man [come as a thief, as foretold] although they greatly misapprehend the subject and God's remedy.

"But amidst all the shaking of the earth (organized society) and of the heavens (the ecclesiastical powers) those who discern in it the outworking of the divine plan of the ages rejoice in the assurance that this terrible shaking will be the last that the earth will ever have or need; for as the Apostle Paul assures us, it signifieth the removing of those things that are shaken—that those things which cannot be shaken—the kingdom of God, the kingdom of light and peace —may remain. For our God is a consuming fire. In his wrath he will consume every system of evil and oppression, and he will firmly establish truth and righteousness in the earth."—Vol. IV, pp. 149, 150.

HUMAN RACE TO BE RESTORED TO PREFECTION

As a sample of the Scriptural Message of sweetness and comfort which Pastor Russell taught the people, we quote from Volume I of his STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES, pages 191 and 192, written thirty-one years ago:

"The Apostle Peter, our Lord, and all the prophets since the world began, declare that the human race is to be restored to glorious perfection, and is again to have dominion over earth, as its representative, Adam, had.

"It is this portion that God has elected to give to the human race. And what a glorious portion! Close your eyes for a moment to the scenes of misery and woe, degradation and sorrow that yet prevail on account of sin, and picture before your mental vision the glory of the perfect earth. Not a stain of sin mars the harmony and peace of a perfect society; not a bitter thought, not an unkind look or word; love, welling up from every heart, meets a kindred response in every other heart, and benevolence marks every act. There sickness shall be no more; not an ache nor pain, nor any evidence of decay—not even the fear of such things. Think of all the pictures of comparative health and beauty of human form and feature that you have ever seen, and know that perfect humanity will be of still surpassing loveliness. The inward purity of mental and moral perfection will stamp and glorify every radiant countenance. Such will earth's society be; and weeping bereaved ones will have their tears all wiped away, when thus they realize the resurrection work complete.—Revelation 21:4."

Any thoughtful man can interpret prophecy after it has been fulfilled. Pastor Russell interpreted these prophecies twenty years ago, and the clergy scoffed and persecuted him because he told the people the truth. Truly, as was said of the Master, "They hated him without a cause!" Truly, "The darkness hateth the light!"

MORE ABOUT SELECTIVE DRAFT

At the time of going to press with the last issue of THE WATCH TOWER the Selective Draft Act was before the conferees of the House and the Senate. Some changes were made in the Bill, and the Act as finally passed by Congress on May 16th and approved by the President and relating to exemption is as follows:

"Sec. 4. That the Vice President of the United States, the officers, legislative, executive and judicial, of the United States and of the several States, Territories and the District of Columbia, regular or duly ordained ministers of religion, students, who at the time of the approval of this act are preparing for the ministry in recognized theological or divinity schools, and all persons in the military and naval service of the United States shall be exempt from the selective draft herein prescribed; and nothing in this act contained shall be construed to require or compel any person to serve in any of the forces herein provided for who is found to be a member of any well-recognized religious sect or organization at present organized and existing and whose existing creed or principles forbid its members to participate in war in any form and whose religious convictions are against war or participation therein in accordance with the creed or principles of said religious organizations, but no person so exempted shall be exempted from service in any capacity that the President shall declare to be noncombatant; and the President is hereby authorized to exclude or discharge from said selective draft and from the draft under the second paragraph of section one hereof, or to draft for partial military service only from those liable to draft as in this act provided, persons of the following classes: County and municipal officers; custom-house clerks; persons employed by the United States in the transmission of the mails; artificers and workmen employed in the armories, arsenals and navy yards of the United States; and such other persons employed in the service of the United States as the President may designate; pilots; mariners actually employed in the sea service of any citizen or merchant within the United States; persons engaged in industries, including agriculture, found to be necessary to the maintenance of the Military Establishment or the effective operation of the military forces or the maintenance of national interest during the emergency; those in a status with respect to persons dependent upon them for support which renders their exclusion or discharge advisable; and those found to be physically or morally deficient. No exemption or exclusion shall continue when a cause therefor no longer exists; Provided, That notwithstanding the exemptions enumerated herein, each State, Territory, and the District of Columbia shall be required to supply its quota in the proportion that its population bears to the total population of the United States.

"The President is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to create and establish throughout the several States and subdivisions thereof and in the territories and the District of Columbia local boards, and where, in his discretion, practicable and desirable, there shall be created and established one such local board in each county or similar subdivision in each State, and one for approximately each thirty thousand of population in each city of thirty thousand population or over, according to the last census taken or estimates furnished by the Bureau of Census of the Department of Commerce. Such boards shall be appointed by the President, and shall consist of three or more members, none of whom shall be connected with the Military Establishment, to be chosen from among the local authorities of such subdivisions or from other citizens residing in the subdivision or area in which the respective boards will have jurisdiction under the rules and regulations prescribed by the President. Such boards shall have power within their respective jurisdictions to hear and determine, subject to review as hereinafter provided, all questions of exemption under this act, and all questions of or claims for including or discharging individuals or classes of individuals from the selective draft, which shall be made under rules and regulations prescribed by the President, except, any and every question or claim for including or excluding or discharging persons or classes of persons from the selective draft under the provisions of this act authorizing the President to exclude or discharge from the selective draft 'Persons engaged in industries, including agriculture, found to be necessary to the maintenance of the Military Establishment, or the effective operation of the military forces, or the maintenance of national interest during the emergency.'

"The President is hereby authorized to establish additional boards, one in each Federal judicial district of the United States, consisting of such number of citizens, not connected with the military establishment, as the President may determine, who shall be appointed by the President. The President is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to establish more than one such board in any Federal judicial district of the United States, or to establish one such board having jurisdiction of an area extending into more than one Federal judicial district.

"Such district boards shall review on appeal and affirm, modify, or reverse any decision of any local board having jurisdiction under the rules and regulations prescribed by the President. Such district boards shall have exclusive original jurisdiction within their respective areas to hear and determine all questions or claims for including or excluding or discharging persons or classes of persons from the selective draft, under the provisions of this act, not included within the original jurisdiction of such local boards.

"The decisions of such district boards shall be final except that, in accordance with such rules and regulations as the President may prescribe, he may affirm, modify or reverse any such decision.

"Any vacancy in any such local or district board shall be filled by the president, and any member of any such local board or district board may be removed and another appointed in his place by the President, whenever he considers that the interest of the Nation demands it.

"The President shall make rules and regulations governing the organization and procedure of such local boards and district boards, and providing for and governing appeals from such local boards to such district boards, and reviews of the decisions of any local board by the district board having jurisdiction, and determining and prescribing the several areas in which the respective local boards and district boards shall have jurisdiction, and all other rules and regulations necessary to carry out the terms and provisions of this section, and shall provide for the issuance of certificates of exemption, or partial or limited exemptions, and for a system to exclude and discharge individuals from selective draft."

The Act as originally passed granted absolute exemption to certain persons, but as finally passed and approved by the President, no person will be exempt from service in any capacity that the President may declare noncombatant.

REGISTRATION FIRST—EXEMPTION LATER

On June 5 every male person and every alien who has declared his intention to become a citizen, who is 21 years old and who has not yet reached his 31st birthday, will be required to register at the voting precinct wherein he resides. At the same time 12 questions will be propounded to him, which he must answer and which are as follows:

"1 Name in full Given name Family name
2 Home address No. Street City State
3 Date of birth Month Day Year
4 Are you (1) a natural-born citizen, (2) a naturalized citizen, (3) an alien, (4) or have you declared your intention (specify which)?
5 Where were you born? Town State Nation
6 If not a citizen, of what country are you a citizen or subject?
7 What is your present trade, occupation, or office?
8 By whom employed?
Where employed?
9 Have you a father, mother, wife, child under 12, or a sister or brother under 12, solely dependent on you for support (specify which)?
10 Married or single (which)? Race (specify which)?
11 What military service have you had? Rank
Branch Years Nation or State
12 Do you claim exemption from draft (specify grounds)?
I affirm that I have verified above answers and that they are true. ....."

These questions must be answered. Any one refusing to answer them will be subject to fine and imprisonment. In answer to Question 7, Pilgrim Brethren and regularly elected Elders of Classes can answer, "Ordained Minister of Religion." If you claim exemption because of your religious conviction, then you should answer Question 12 merely by saying, "Because I am a member of the International Bible Students Association." The Government has been advised from this office of the reasons why members of the INTERNATIONAL BIBLE STUDENTS ASSOCIATION come within the terms of the law and should be granted exemption.

After registration the Government will draw by lot the names of 500,000 of those who are registered; and all of that number who have stated at the time of registration, in answer to Question 12, that they claim exemption, will then be given an opportunity to be heard as to the reason or ground for exemption.

The rules and regulations governing this part of the Act are now in course of construction under the direction of the President, and therefore cannot be given at this time, but we are advised that the Government will make wide publication thereof as soon as formulated. If you expect to claim exemption you should procure a copy of these rules as soon as published, read and carefully follow them. They will doubtless provide for the filing, before the Board constituted for that purpose, of a petition for exemption, which will be heard in due time by the Board.

We stand ready to render any and all assistance we can to the brethren in this behalf.

THE PASTORAL WORK

There seems to be a misunderstanding in the minds of some with reference to the Pastoral Work. It has been suggested that the SOCIETY has changed the method of work since Brother Russell finished his course. Such is not the case, however! We here desire to consider some salient points with the hope of making clear the whole proposition and enabling all to have a better understanding of this excellent feature of the harvest work.

We call attention to an article in the November 1 WATCH TOWER, 1916, page 331, under the caption of "World-Wide Pastoral Work." It will be observed there that Brother Russell stated that about 500 classes had voluntarily elected him as Pastor. Therein he states, "Only of late has the Lord deeply impressed upon our attention a considerable work in which the sisters might engage with profit both to themselves and to the cause." He further stated that, as Pastor, he was calling attention to this new field of service; but that before calling the attention of the outside classes to it, he had first made a trial in N. Y. City, adding, "the resulting success was so pronounced that we felt justified in calling it to the attention of all the classes which have notified us of our election as their Pastor, sending to each class copies of the following letters." The letters were published in said article.

It is readily to be seen that this work, begun with the sisters, was directly under the supervision of Brother Russell as Pastor. After Brother Russell had finished his course here, the church had no Pastor. It was deemed wise not to elect another, as we have heretofore stated in THE WATCH TOWER. Since this work, begun by him, was clearly a part of the harvest work, it was the privilege and the duty of the SOCIETY to continue it. When Brother Russell was here, the reports were made direct to him. After his decease it seemed proper that this work should be under the SOCIETY'S direction.

In the January 1, 1917, issue of THE WATCH TOWER it was stated that Brother Sturgeon would have the oversight of the Pastoral Department at the Brooklyn office. In the adjustment of the office work it was afterwards deemed best that everything should be under the direct supervision of the SOCIETY, so that any one might be assigned to that work as occasion required. While it was proper for Brother Russell to have the work under his direct supervision as the Pastor of the various Congregations, since his demise it seems that the only proper course would be to have this and all other branches of the work under the direct control, oversight and supervision of the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY, and not under the oversight of any individual. The friends will no doubt recognize the wisdom of this course. Acting upon this thought, the Board of Directors rescinded its action taken in December, of placing the direct oversight of the Pastor Department under any one. Brother Sturgeon, therefore, is no longer in charge of that work. This does not mean, nor should it be interpreted to mean, that the SOCIETY is in anywise dissatisfied with the services of our dear Brother, but that its action has to do, solely and completely, with the matter of the best policy. Hereafter, therefore, all communications relating to the Pastoral Work should be addressed, "WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY, Pastoral Dept."

In the March 1, 1917, issue of THE WATCH TOWER we said: "We are convinced that it is now no longer wise to limit this work to the sisters, but rather that the responsibility should rest upon all the Congregation." We therein suggested that henceforth the Lieutenant and other officers to conduct the Pastoral Work should be elected by the vote of the entire class, adding, "The Pastoral work will then be carried on practically as before, with the exceptions herein stated."

SOME QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Some of the questions that have arisen in the minds of a number since then are, SHOULD BROTHERS be elected to the office of Lieutenant, Secretary, etc.? and, Should they engage in the Pastoral Work?

In answering these questions we quote Brother Russell's language in the November 1 WATCH TOWER, page 334, as follows: "We have not invited the brethren to engage in this work, because we believe that there are other things which they can do that sisters cannot do." The SOCIETY still adheres to this policy; viz., that all officers of the Pastoral Work, such as Lieutenant, Secretary, etc., should be sisters, and that these sisters should be elected by the entire congregation and not by the sisters alone. The only part that the brothers have in this work is that of giving Chart Talks after the sisters have made the calls and arranged for the meetings. The Brother to give the Chart Talks should be assigned by the congregation in its usual manner of assigning speakers. Frequently the congregation delegates to its Board of Elders, or to a committee, the duty of assigning the various speakers; and where the congregation has done this it would be proper for the elders or the committee designated by the congregation to make such assignment of some suitable brother to give the Chart Talks. Such assignment should be made at the request of the Lieutenant, she having previously arranged for the Chart Talks. Some of the classes have informed us that a brother has been elected as Lieutenant. This was not the thought of Brother Russell, and the Society has made no change.

At one of the last conventions that Brother Russell attended, this question was asked him: "Should the sisters start the Pastoral Work without consulting the elders and should they go ahead with it even though one of the elders is not in favor of it?" His reply was: "The elders have nothing to do with the Pastoral Work. The elders are elders, and should therefore attend to the work of the elders. The Pastoral Work is for the Pastor, and the Pastor should therefore attend to it. If any of the elders hinder or find fault with this work, our advice to the class would be that at the next election such elder be dropped from eldership. Each one should learn to attend to his own business, and not interfere with others; and in this way the work will prosper."

In relation to the Pastoral Work, the SOCIETY now takes the place of Pastor Russell, and of course some minor adjustments must be made to fit the conditions. The Pastoral Work is distinctly a work for the sisters; but the whole ecclesia, under the SOCIETY'S direction, now has the responsibility of electing the officers.

Question: Suppose there is a small class in a town, in which all the members of the class are brothers and not one a sister, what then should be done about the Pastoral Work?

Answer: If it cannot be conveniently arranged for some sisters from another class to come and do the work, then rather than neglect it, our thought is that the brothers should do the work; but this is the exception to the rule. No rule can be made that will apply absolutely to every case.

ASSIGNMENT OF TERRITORY

Where the Pastoral Work is in progress and there are no colporteurs in the town, should the Pastoral Work be suspended until an assignment from the Society can be had for the Pastoral Work?

Certainly not! There should be no delay in or suspension of the work, but it should progress. In the meantime the Lieutenant should notify the SOCIETY of the situation; and if there are no colporteurs at work in that town, the SOCIETY will assign all the territory of that place to the Pastoral Workers. After receiving the assignment of territory, the Lieutenant will district the town or city for the work in the same manner pointed out in the November 1 issue of THE WATCH TOWER.

Question: Should the work be going on in all the district at the same time?

Answer: No arbitrary rule can be followed in this regard. Where it be found to be to the best advantage to have the work progressing in several districts at the same time, that should be done; but if it be found best to pursue some other method, then that method should be adopted. In some of the larger cities the friends have found it very advantageous to work one district at a time. They do it somewhat in the following manner:

The various District Workers go into one district, select a public hall centrally located, and engage it for a certain date. Then the District Workers canvass or call upon everybody in that district in the usual manner, loaning the books, etc., and inviting them to a Series of Chart Talks at the hall previously hired. One of the most competent brothers is selected to give the Chart Talks. This method has met with splendid success in some places, and is worthy of serious consideration by others, we believe. After a district is thus finished, the entire force moves to another district and a similar course is pursued there. It will not be necessary to wait until the Series of Chart Talks have been completed in one district before the work begins in another. It should be kept in mind, however, that no fast or fixed rule can be laid down to be followed in every instance. The Lieutenant and her assistants must exercise some judgment in the matter and pursue the course that seems to be the best. In smaller cities and towns it would seem best to follow the method of having the Chart Talk in homes where a suitable room or rooms can be had for that purpose. Conditions differ in different places, and each place should govern itself accordingly.

Because there is some slight deviation in working out the details of this matter let no one think that Brother Russell's method has been changed. We wish here to state emphatically that the SOCIETY has made no change in the method adopted by Brother Russell for the Pastoral Work, and it has no intention of doing so, unless the Lord should direct some change. The change in the manner of election of officers has nothing to do with the method of the work.

From time to time questions of minor details will arise which have not been covered in anything that has been written. Under such circumstances the Lieutenant should use her best judgment, in the meantime communicating with the SOCIETY for suggestions or advice.

THE LORD HAS BLESSED THE BOOK LOANING

In a recent issue of THE WATCH TOWER it was stated that "the book-loaning feature of the Pastoral Work, instituted by Brother Russell, was originally intended by him to be merely incidental and not to be a prominent part of the work; the chief part of the work being to call on those who already have the books and encourage them to read, etc."

Question: Is it the thought, then, that the Book-loaning feature should not be pushed?

Answer: The matter was experimental, of course, to begin with. As the Pastoral Work has progressed, reports indicate that the Lord has especially blessed the loaning of the books; it gives the sisters an opportunity to reach a class of people who have not heretofore considered the truth. It is in the nature of a Circulating Library, and many have been influenced thereby to read "THE DIVINE PLAN OF THE AGES" who subsequently became deeply interested in the truth.

The loaning of books at once appeals to some as an entirely unselfish manner of presenting the message. The Lord's blessing upon this part of the work has been so marked that we believe we should take it as an indication that he is pleased to have the message put out in this manner. The amount of books loaned will depend largely upon the quantity desired to be supplied by the local Ecclesia. This is another reason why the entire class should have the responsibility of the Pastoral Work; for it is the class that supplies the books for loaning, the work being done particularly by the sisters, as heretofore suggested. We desire to encourage the book-loaning feature.

VERBI DEI MINISTER

"Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."—Malachi 3:10.

The V. D. M. Questions, under the Lord's guidance and blessing, have proven to be of such value to the church that they have been in the past, and continue to be in the present, recognized as one of the features of the harvest work which has a close relationship to all the other features of that work. They have emphasized in a particular way the third article of The Vow, which reads: "I vow to still more carefully, if possible, scrutinize my thoughts and words and doings, to be intent that I may be better enabled to serve thee and thy dear flock"; and they have been used by the Lord, we believe, to greatly assist his people in fulfilling this part of their vow.

From the great number of letters we have received from the friends, we have come to see that the thought has been gradually developing in their minds that they no longer consider themselves as fully qualified for the particular service of the present hour unless they be able to give, in a satisfactory manner, "a reason for the hope that is in them." This seems to be one of the reasons for the Lord of the vineyard's giving these questions at this evening time, when the harvest work is protracted beyond the harvest day, leading up and merging into "the night when no man can work." They seem to be his examination papers given to his people at the close of the day to prove which ones are fully qualified for the service reserved by him for this momentous hour of the Gospel age.

Hundreds of Ecclesias, beginning with the New York City Congregation, have reached the conclusion that no brother is properly qualified to serve them, either as elder or as deacon, unless he be able to give a satisfactory answer to the V. D. M. Questions. Many colporteurs and pastoral workers have likewise reached the same conclusion with respect to qualification for their respective services. This is the standard required of all the workers at the Tabernacle and in the Bethel home. Brother Russell handed his paper in to the Committee the same as any one else; so also have Brother Rutherford, the members of the V. D. M. Examining Board, and the other brethren at Bethel and the Tabernacle.

Surely no Bible Student would consider the V. D. M. Questions to be too high a standard! And yet, we doubt that few of the ministers occupying the pulpits of the land today could pass this examination (simple though it seems) on the fundamental teachings of the Bible. One dear sister whose answers to the Questions were recently approved has just written to us expressing her thankfulness to the Lord for having passed, and saying that she now feels qualified to teach the truth to her children in her own home! Evidently the passing of these examinations has something to do with the sealing of the saints in their foreheads and with their approval by the Unseen Judge as worthy a share in the Smiting of the River Jordan—that special feature of the harvest work reserved by the Lord to be the closing one, just preceding the final trial time of the little flock, which will culminate in their glorification. And yet we realize that in this, as in all other works during the Gospel age, the Lord accepts the spirit of those who cannot engage therein.

THE SCOPE OF THE V. D. M. QUESTIONS

The required amount for passing this examination is 85%; and we are reserving for a subsequent article an explanation of the principles followed and the methods adopted by the Examining Board for determining as far as possible the standing of each student who submits his V. D. M. Question papers for inspection. However, we have thought it best not to give individual percentages, except to say that one has received the required 85% or over. This simply recognizes all who have passed as being in one class, without making any further and unnecessary distinctions. No one can possibly make 100% who does not possess an accurate knowledge of every main feature of the divine plan and of the necessary requirements of every candidate for the positions of Priests and Kings, to reign with Christ a thousand years for the purpose of blessing all the families of the earth.

The doctrinal part of the examination commences with "the first creative act of God," centers in the ransom, and culminates in the completed work of Christ at the end of the Millennium, merging into the ages beyond—a comprehensive sweep of all revealed doctrine. The experimental part commences with the initial point of conversion, or turning from sin, centers in consecration and spirit-begetting, and culminates in spirit-birth into the divine nature, to be forever with and like the Lord—a comprehensive survey of the whole process of character building. It includes the symbolization of one's consecration, the taking of The Vow, the careful reading of the Six Volumes of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES, the "enlightenment and benefit therefrom," and climaxes with the belief that one has "a substantial and permanent knowledge of the Bible which will render him more efficient AS A SERVANT OF THE LORD throughout the remainder of his life"—a period of time which is now quite short, we believe, as far as the little flock on this side of the veil is concerned. This seems to be the Lord's way of approving "the laborers" for the special service, as an additional favor, now before the church—these laborers having been called together in all parts of the harvest field last summer by means of the many conventions held—more in number than ever held at any previous time in the history of the church.

Each question, and each part of each question, should be concisely answered in one's own words; and after each answer, citations to the Bible and the SCRIPTURE STUDIES, as authorities, should be given. This will not only make each answer complete in itself, but will also make the examination more valuable to the one being examined. The thought is to get the largest possible amount of blessing out of these V. D. M. Questions. The foot-note on the Question blanks has seemed to some to leave the matter of citations optional, and these have inferred that their papers would be the more acceptable if the citations were omitted. However, this is not the case. Each answer should be given in one's own words, and citations to the Bible and the SCRIPTURE STUDIES should be given as authority for the answer.

EXAMINING BOARD KEPT BUSY

More than four thousand of these papers have been received, examined, answered and filed. But we believe that fully as many more will be received within the next few months, when the friends get the right focus on this matter, appreciate what it means, and understand its relationship to the service of the church yet on this side of the veil. As stated in a previous article, the SOCIETY is desirous of serving the best interests of the friends in every way it can, and has therefore continued the V. D. M. Department, established by our dear Brother Russell, in order that it may serve the friends in this connection.

Every mail brings many inquiries, requests for blanks, and answers; and still the stream flows on, and will no doubt increase in volume until the work is done. Unavoidably, there have been some few losses, delays and mistakes; but this has afforded a good opportunity for the exercise of forbearance, patience and, in the case of failures, brotherly love, with the result that it has all worked together for good. However, it is surprising to know how comparatively few mistakes have been made. In this connection, we would like to request that every one who mailed his answer to us previous to the last Memorial supper, and who has thus far not received an answer, will kindly drop us a postal card at once, giving full name and address, saying, "Please make report on my V. D. M. papers, sent in about ———." This will enable the Examining Board to look up their files; and, in case the paper be missing, we will send another set of Questions, which will afford another opportunity for answering them. In case the answers should be on hand, we shall thus have opportunity for making a report without further delay.

V. D. M. DEPARTMENT PERMANENT

No doubt there are many friends who have delayed sending in their answers for one reason or another until they have concluded that it is now too late; or else they may have concluded to wait until the promised standard answers shall appear in THE WATCH TOWER, thus hoping to get their share of the blessings at that time. For several reasons which have since come to our attention we think it best not to insert these standard answers in THE WATCH TOWER. In the first place, should this be done, it would cut off any further opportunity for passing the examination—a step we do not wish to take until it becomes necessary. It would also close this door of opportunity for a great blessing to many who have not previously given this subject the serious consideration which we believe it merits.

Additionally, it would deprive the colporteurs and the pastoral workers of one of their best arguments to induce the people to read the SCRIPTURE STUDIES. When they tell the prospective reader that the SOCIETY which has inaugurated this Circulating Library has appointed an Examining Board for the purpose of examining the papers of all readers and passing upon them, somewhat after the manner of Universities, it will be quite an incentive to them not only to read the book, but also to make a study of it for the purpose of passing the examination, if possible, when they have finished reading, and of receiving the honorary degree referred to in each issue of THE WATCH TOWER, second page, second paragraph, which has appeared there since February 1, 1906. In other words, it now seems clear to us that this V. D. M. Department should remain a permanent feature of the work until the harvest shall end and the labors of the little flock shall cease.

PURPOSE SERVED BY THE V. D. M. QUESTIONS

Finally, we believe that the V. D. M. Questions enable each one to get a better focus upon himself, his standing before the Lord, his accurate knowledge of the truth, his attainments in character development, his relationship to the brethren, the church, the SOCIETY and the harvest work. On the other hand, we believe these Questions enable the brethren, the church and the SOCIETY to get a better focus upon each one in these various connections and relationships—all of which would be beneficial and helpful in the way of an intelligent coöperation in the Lord's work. Anything like pride or division should be carefully guarded against and avoided. This is the main reason for not giving individual percentages. We would also deprecate the use of the letters V. D. M. after one's name in the way of distinctive title. To use this in advertising a public speaker in order to gain a better hearing for the truth would be a wise use of the letters, in our judgment. And now, dear Brethren,

"What more can he say than to you he hath said?
You who unto Jesus for refuge have fled!"

Surely we are on the eve of a great forward movement, in which all of the Lord's approved ones desire to have a share! It is evidently the most appropriate time to give heed to the words of our text: "Bring YE ALL THE TITHES into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and PROVE ME NOW herewith, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."—Malachi 3:10.

THE UNTRIED YEAR

"If thy presence go not with me, carry us not up hence."

"Lord, go before and point the road,
I know not whither it may lead,
Nor what the work thou hast decreed—
Enough that thou wilt bear the load!

"It is thy hand that stirs the nest,
That sets these changeful tunes for me;
But, Lord, there is no change with thee,
And thou art my unfailing rest.

"Oh, help me through the toil and heat,
To follow closely by thy side,
Ere yet the gracious dew has dried
From off the treadings of thy feet.

"That which I see not, teach thou me;
And that thy wisdom still withholds,
Until thy patient love unfolds,
In child-like trust I leave to thee.

"Let thy sweet presence light my way,
And hallow every cross I bear;
Transmuting duty, conflict, care,
Into love's service, day by day.

"Whatever future lot be mine,
My Savior, bless its good or ill;
And let thy hand be with me still,
And turn the water into wine."

JESUS CRUCIFIED

[This article, excepting the paragraphs below, was a reprint of article entitled "Why Our Lord Was Crucified," published in issue of March 15, 1908, which please see.]

"A LOOK AT THE CRUCIFIED ONE"

Comparing the details as given in the different Gospels, some are inclined to think a difference exists between St. John's statement in 19:14 and St. Mark's in 15:25. We think both are correct. St. John evidently followed the Roman custom of reckoning from midnight to midnight. He does not mention the hour of the crucifixion, but the hour when Jesus was first presented before Pilate which, according to St. Matthew (27:1, 2) was early in the morning, probably shortly after sunrise. St. John omits many details; and, were it not for the other Gospels, we might infer that the crucifixion followed immediately. Note a similar abbreviation in Luke 24:50-53 as compared with St. John 21 and Acts 1:1-10.

The examination of Christ before Pilate, thence to Herod, thence back to Pilate, and the trip to Calvary, would surely occupy three hours. St. Mark states particularly that Christ was crucified at the third hour. If this were Roman reckoning, it would be three o'clock in the morning, but the Jews frequently reckoned a twelve-hour day—sunrise to sunset. See Matthew 20:1-6; John 11:9. The third hour would, therefore, be about nine o'clock in the morning. Critical students agree that the expression, "from the sixth hour until the ninth hour" (Matthew 27:45; Mark 15:33; Luke 23:44), indicates from noon until three in the afternoon. According to the Jewish law, the body must be removed before sunset. This would, therefore, give ample time for the removal of Christ's body from the cross to the tomb before the closing of the twelfth hour, which according to the Law, would be the last hour of the day.

SOME LETTERS OF INTEREST

FORMER PILGRIM HEARD FROM

DEAR BRETHREN:—

Although dear Brother Russell will be greatly missed by us all, he is greatly the gainer, having gone beyond the veil to be forever with the Lord. You may be assured that whatever influence I can exert in the interest of the SOCIETY and the work it is doing, I will be very glad to exert. My humble prayer is that all the dear brethren at the Headquarters and everywhere may work together most harmoniously and successfully.

With much Christian love and very best wishes in which Sister Draper joins me, I am.

Your brother in the Lord. FRANK DRAPER.—Mich.

GOD WILL GIVE NEEDED GRACE

DEAR BRETHREN:—

We were blessed with the account of what took place at Brother Russell's funeral; also by one of the most beautiful, loving tributes possible for one man to pay to the memory of another, given the Detroit class by our dear Brother Wisdom. And the best of it is, I know all was true. I can say with dear Brother Wisdom, that I have lost my best earthly friend amongst men. I know that is also true of all the dear Bethel family.

Our prayer, dear Brethren, is that the dear Lord will give you the needed grace and strength to carry on the work that remains. Much love and best wishes.

Your brother in Christ, FORRESTER H. TAYLOR.—Mich.

ENDEAVOR TO FINISH OUR COURSE WITH JOY

BELOVED BRETHREN:—

We are praying that the Lord's blessing may rest upon you, giving you more of that wisdom which comes from Above, that as a family we may still enjoy sweet communion with each other until our probation closes.

We mourn with you the taking away from our midst of our dear Pastor, through whom we have been richly fed for these many years. Although feeling his loss, our hearts rejoice to see that he was faithful unto death, instantaneously therefore entering into his great reward as promised. (Rev. 14:13) Let us continue to do the Lord's will so that we also may finish our course with joy.

Yours in him, CAMBERWELL CLASS.—Jamaica.

MEMORIAL TOWER PROVED GREAT BLESSING

DEARLY BELOVED BRETHREN:—

We wish to extend to you our love and best wishes, and to assure you that you may rely upon our coöperation in the Lord's work in this city, and in any other way in which we are privileged to serve.

We have received a great blessing, from the reading of the Memorial TOWER; and our earnest desire is to emulate our dearly beloved Pastor, as he so faithfully followed in the footsteps of our dear Master. We resolve to remember you daily at the throne of heavenly grace.

Your Brethren in the dear Redeemer,

LOWELL ASSOCIATED BIBLE STUDENTS.—Mass.

A WORD OF WARNING!

Sheep that browse in every pasture, measurably regardless of the "green pastures and still waters" of truth of the Lord's provision, are in constant danger of enemies lurking about.

The increasing number of inquiries coming from frightened sheep of this character prompts us to sound a note of warning at this time. Truly, "The hour of temptation" is upon us, and the "strong delusions" abroad will be sure to sift out all except those which stray not from the fold of the Lord.

VOL. XXXVIII BROOKLYN, N. Y., JUNE 15, 1917 No. 12

FAITH AND ITS REWARD

"Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee the crown of life."—Revelations 2:10.

At this momentous hour the truly consecrated this side the veil await the completion of the church, looking eagerly for evidence as to the consummation of their hopes. All these faithful ones fully realize that the church is now in a time of crucial trial and testing. And many such are asking, "How long will it be until the trials are ended, and we may see our Lord face to face?" Some having a greater degree of imagination than others state with positiveness that the completion of the church in glory will be at a certain date, which they proceed to set forth; and their opinion thus expressed is accepted by some as absolute truth. Others, however, require a greater degree of evidence, and confidently wait upon the Lord to give the desired information in his own "due time." What is the cause of this difference in the attitude of Christian brethren seeing that all such are consecrated unto the Lord? We answer that some of the dear friends have a greater degree of faith or something like unto it than others, and that we are now in a time of special trial of faith. In this connection we are reminded of two texts; viz., "That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried by fire, might be found unto praise and honor and glory at the revelation of Jesus Christ"; and "according to your faith be it unto you."—1 Peter 1:7; Matthew 9:29.

These texts suggest a testing of the faith of all Christians, and imply that according to faith exercised will be the degrees of reward. In order to appreciate the importance of this test upon the church, it is necessary to mark the distinction between credulity and faith. Some Christians have much credulity and little faith, while others have little credulity and much faith. From the foregoing texts and many others it is evident that the faith of all must be tried, and that the trial will be severe.

THE CHURCH NEARING THE HAVEN OF REST

When a mariner is nearing what he believes to be the entrance of a haven and finds the fog so thick that he is unable to tell definitely his location, he applies the mariner's test. Carefully referring to his log, charts and compass, he determines approximately his location, and then moves cautiously on, keeping cool and sober, and watching with great carefulness.

The evidence is strong and clear that the church is now nearing the entrance to the haven of her eternal rest; but having no positive knowledge as to the exact date, we might properly say that the fog obscures our getting a clear view. It is, therefore, a time for solemn and sober consideration. While it does not please the Lord to show us the exact day of the church's complete glorification, we can confidently wait upon him and joyfully sing:

"I know not what awaits me;
God kindly veils mine eyes;
And o'er each step of mine onward way
He makes new scenes to rise.

"One step I see before me—
'Tis all I need to see;
The light of heaven more brightly shines
When earth's illusions flee;
And sweetly through the silence comes
His loving 'Follow me.'"

Having referred to the divine Word and helps which the Lord has provided and which constitute our log, chart and compass, and having determined that we are on the right course, then we are encouraged to move on with reasonable speed. Relying upon the exceeding great and precious promises of God's Word, the burden of the Christian becomes lighter, his journey easier, and joy fills his heart.

CREDULITY AND FAITH DISTINGUISHED

As we have said, some have mistaken credulity for faith. What is the difference? Credulity is a disposition to believe something upon slight or no legal evidence. It is a conclusion reached by relying upon opinion-evidence, upon supposed proof, which does not come from an absolutely reliable source.

Faith is a positive or definite conclusion reached by relying upon competent evidence, which comes from a reliable and truthful source.

A small amount of information suffices for credulity; but accurate knowledge is essential to faith. Credulity is usually based upon the mere opinion of a finite mind. Faith results from reliance upon the testimony of the infinite God. Credulity has a poor foundation; faith has a sure foundation. The stronger our faith, the greater is our ability to withstand the storms which beat upon us and the fiery trials through which we must pass.

PROGRESSIVE STEPS OF FAITH

A strong faith is not acquired instantaneously, but is a matter of gradual growth. As a man of intelligence looks about him, beholding the wonders of creation, he marks the myriads of stars, the moon, the sun, all moving noiselessly in their orbits without jar or disturbance. Then he reasons, "Surely there is a great First Cause, who created these countless worlds and holds them in their places!" He beholds the wonders of the earthly creation, and observes man, the highest of earth's creatures, "fearfully and wonderfully made."

The reverential mind, meditating upon the beauty and order of nature, says: "If there is a great Creator should not we expect to find that he has given us some revelation concerning his purposes toward man?" He finds that the Bible claims to be just such a revelation. A careful examination reveals the fact that "holy men of old spake as they were moved by the holy Spirit" of God—that the Bible came from a reliable source, from Jehovah, through his spokesman—and sets forth a plan so wonderful and so beautiful that nothing short of the divine mind could have arranged it. Believing it to be God's Word, given to man for his instruction in righteousness, the reasoning mind who examines its contents begins to have faith. As his knowledge of the Word and his appreciation thereof increase, he finds that he has a sure foundation upon which to build.

Defining faith the Apostle says: "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." (Hebrews 11:1) The word "substance" may be properly rendered, standing under—understanding. The word "evidence" means proof. Then, analyzing the Apostle's words, we would say, "Faith is the understanding of things for which we hope, and the proof of things which our natural eyes do not see."

What is the desire of all sane men? We answer, To live everlastingly in a state of happiness and peace. But do mankind generally have a hope of such a life and such conditions? They do not, for the reason that they have nothing upon which to base that hope. What is the desire and hope of the Christian? We answer, To have life everlasting on the divine plane, associated forever with the King of kings, and serving to the glory of Jehovah in ruling the world for its blessing and uplift. How could any imperfect being dare to entertain such a hope? We answer, The basis of such hope is faith in God's Word.

FAITH'S SURE FOUNDATION

Every intelligent man realizes that he is imperfect. Evolutionists tell us that this imperfection is due to the fact that we have not been progressing for a sufficient length of time; that man was once of a much lower order, but that by processes of evolution he is gradually rising and will some day reach perfection. Whoever believes this has a vast amount of credulity, but absolutely no faith; for there is no real evidence that man has evolved from the lower creation. From God's Word, we learn that human imperfection is the result of Adam's disobedience to God's law; that mankind as descendants of Adam have inherited the penalty of sin, death; and that for this reason the whole human race is in a dying condition. We further learn that God graciously provided an atonement for this sin of Adam, through the death and resurrection of his beloved Son; that "Whosoever believeth on him shall not perish, but have everlasting life." Believing these statements, hope begins to spring up in our minds that we may live, and this hope is based upon faith.

Faith has two component elements: first, an intellectual understanding and appreciation of the Word of God; and second, a confident reliance upon that Word. Both elements are necessary to constitute a faith that is pleasing to God. One might have an intellectual understanding of the Bible and might appreciate it in a sense as the Word of God; but unless he relied upon it he would have no faith. He could not rely upon it, however, unless he had the knowledge. Hence the necessity for both intellectual understanding and confident reliance.

From the Bible we learn that to share with Jesus in his glory one must deny himself, take up his cross and follow the Master. He must become a footstep follower of Jesus. (Matthew 16:24; 1 Peter 2:21) Having this knowledge, and relying upon it, we make a full consecration to do the will of God, before entering upon the course of following in the footsteps of the Master.

NEW CREATURES NOW

Our consecration being accepted, we are begotten of the holy Spirit and are now new creatures in Christ Jesus. How do we know that we are new creatures? We know it because of our faith in the exceeding great and precious promises of God set forth in his Word, and through his manner of dealing with us. "His Spirit beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God; and if children, then heirs, heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ, if so be that we suffer with him." (Romans 8:16, 17) He assures us through his Word that we are begotten to a hope of life on the highest plane. "If any man be in Christ he is a new creature."—1 Peter 1:3-5; 2 Corinthians 5:17.

Having the witness that the Lord gives us, we may now hope to live with Christ. (Colossians 3:3, 4) This hope is not based upon works. Our justification did not come to us through works. Jesus did all the work for us, and our justification was the result of his merit imputed to us when we fully surrendered ourselves to God, and he counted us righteous by reason of this imputed merit of Jesus.

THE WORKS OF THE NEW CREATURE

But now, as new creatures, we must perform some works before we can gain the crown of life. By these works we must demonstrate that we have a real hope of life, that we appreciate the prize of immortality set before us, and that we are willing to give everything that we have for it. "Faith without works is dead." (James 2:20) By our works we prove our faith.

One enters a school to be trained in physical culture. His teacher provides him with books of instruction, teaches him how to understand these books and shows him what exercises he must perform in order to develop physical strength. Suppose the pupil sits quietly by and says, "Yes; I believe all that you say and all that the books say; and I approve of what I see you do"; but he does no work. It is manifest that he will not develop at all.

As new creatures in Christ we enter the school of Christ, to be trained for the position of kings and priests for his kingdom. If we really believe that so great a prize is set before us, we will prove our faith by our works. God's Word is our book of instruction, and Christ Jesus is our great Teacher. If we would progress as new creatures we must acquire a knowledge of the Word, confidently rely upon that Word, and prove our reliance by doing what the Word tells us to do. For this reason the Lord permits to come to us various experiences. He is seeking for those who are willing and anxious to have their faith developed. He permits discouragements, discomforts, trials and tribulations to come to his children begotten to the divine nature, in order that full faith may be developed and that they may grow up into the full stature of men in Christ. It is therefore apparent that the faith of such an one must be tried, and that according to our faith shall the trial result unto us.

TIME OF SEVEREST TRIAL

Written aforetime for our learning are the words: "The Lord your God proveth you, to know whether ye love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul." (Deuteronomy 13:3) Again, the Apostle Paul enjoins, "Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves. Know ye not your own selves how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye are without proof?"—2 Cor. 13:5.

Is there any reason to believe that the trial would be more severe at one period of the church's history than another? We answer, Yes. It is clear that the crucial test will be during the time of the presence of the Lord at his second coming. In Daniel 12:10 the Prophet, speaking of the time of the end, says: "Many shall be purified and made white and tried." The purification comes by the washing of the Word. They are made white by reason of the robe of Christs righteousness; and then comes the trial. In Malachi 3:2, 3, the Prophet says, "Who may abide the day of his coming, and who shall stand when he appeareth? For he is like a refiner's fire and like fuller's soap; and he shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver; and he shall purify the sons of Levi and purge them as gold and silver; that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness."

In 1 Corinthians 3:13 we read, "Every man's work shall be made manifest, for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is." As we have observed, works are built upon faith; and it is manifest, therefore, that that which is put to the crucial test is our faith, though the superstructure of many will be "burned." The Apostle Peter corroborates this, saying, "That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried by fire, may be found unto praise and honor and glory at the revelation of Jesus Christ."—1 Peter 1:7.

HOW FAITH IS TRIED

There being two component elements of faith, as we have observed, it follows that we shall be tried respecting both of these; namely, our intellectual understanding and appreciation of the Word of God, and our confident reliance upon that Word. This trial fully tests our loyalty to God, and it is reasonable to conclude that this trial would be more severe near the end of our journey than when we first believed. Even as it would be impossible to destroy a house by fire before the house was built, so it is impossible to try the character of a Christian built upon faith until after that character is developed. If we should become negligent in the study of God's Word, the knowledge thereof would gradually slip away. If we had that knowledge and failed to rely upon it, our faith would grow weaker. If our faith is strong, our hope of entering into the kingdom will be proportionately strong; and if we have this good hope within us we will strive to know the rules governing such entrance into the kingdom and seek to conform ourselves to those rules. This we will do in proportion as we have strength of faith. Every trial that comes to a Christian is a trial of his faith; and in the results of these trials his loyalty to the Lord is demonstrated.

ABIDING IN THE DOCTRINE

Jehovah, through Christ Jesus, has provided the spiritual food for the household of faith. Concerning such the Apostle Paul declares, "If any man teach otherwise and consent not to wholesome words, even the words of the Lord Jesus Christ, and to the doctrine which is according to holiness, he is proud, knowing nothing, but doting about questions and strifes of words whereof cometh envy, strife, railings, evil surmisings, perverse disputings of men of corrupt minds and destitute of the truth, supposing that gain is godliness; from such withdraw thyself."—1 Timothy 6:3-5.

Our Lord Jesus promised that during his second presence he would gird himself and make his followers to sit down to meat, and that he would come forth and serve them. (Luke 12:37) Furthermore, he promised that he would provide a "faithful and wise servant," whom he would make ruler over all his household, to give them meat in due season. (Matthew 24:45) The Scriptural proof is abundant that the Lord is now present in his second advent, and has been present for more than forty years; that he has during that time had one faithful and wise servant, through whom he has provided meat in due season for the household; that all who have a knowledge of present truth received it through this channel and from no other source.

If the food upon the table provided by the Master through his servant was essential to bring us to a knowledge of the truth and establish us in the faith, then it is manifest that to abide in the faith we must adhere to that doctrine which was taught us through his chosen channel. Any one departing therefrom would prove his lack of faith in the Scriptural declaration above quoted.

If the Berean Bible Studies have been needful for the household to develop strength and faith in the Lord, they are still necessary to maintain strength and faith in the Lord. A departure therefrom would show lack of faith and would mean a consequent loss of strength.

PRIDE THE CHRISTIAN'S ENEMY

Pride is a great enemy of the new creature. It results from a failure to have a proper appreciation of one's self, and a proper appreciation of the Lord. If one who has been some time in the narrow way, and has made progress in the knowledge of the Lord's Word, should reach the point of believing that the Lord really needs him, that his wisdom far exceeds that of many others in the body, that without his aid it would be difficult for the class to make progress, that his ability to teach is such that it should have recognition—such an one would be developing pride. This condition would show that his faith was on trial, and that the trial was going against him. The Scriptures declare, "Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall"; "God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble."—Proverbs 16:18; 1 Peter 5:5.

If such an one knew that these admonitions were contained in the Bible and did not rely upon them, this test of faith would manifest his weakness. If he did not know they were there, it would show a deficiency in the knowledge of the Lord's Word, and therefore a lack of faith. He must see that pride would lead to the destruction of the new creature, and if his hope is strong of gaining the kingdom, he will war against pride as a deadly enemy. How shall he do this? The Apostle answers, "Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time."

JUDGING THE BRETHREN

It is not an unusual thing to find some brother or sister judging another by calling in question his motives. Such a course demonstrates that the one who is judging another is having his faith tested, and that the trial is resulting adversely to his own interest; for the Scriptures advise, "Judge nothing before the time." (1 Corinthians 4:5) "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth." (Romans 8:33) We have no authority to appear as judges against our brethren. There is only one Judge who has access to Jehovah's court—the Great Master, who appears for us and not against us. Appreciating this fact and relying upon these Scriptures, one would refrain from judging another.

SELFISHNESS VS. LOVE

The natural tendency of man is selfish; he is inclined to do many things from a motive of self-interest. When he becomes a new creature in Christ he finds this natural tendency warring against the new mind. If we find ourselves inclined to yield to selfish desires and to have our own way, unmindful of the rights and privileges of others ,we may know that our faith is being severely tested; and according as we govern ourselves shall we come forth from the fiery test. The antithesis of selfishness is love, which is an unselfish desire to do good to others. Selfishness is the fruit of the mind of the flesh, while love is the fruit of the Spirit.

If we are not developing in love, then our faith is not increasing. We base this conclusion upon the Word of the Lord, which says: "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and though I have the gift of prophecy and understand all mysteries; and though I have all knowledge, and have faith sufficient to remove mountains; and though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and give my body to be burned, and have no love, it profiteth me nothing." (1 Corinthians 13:1-4) "And besides all these things, put on love, which is the bond of completeness." (Colossians 3:14, Diaglott) Seeing that we must both know these Scriptures and confidently rely upon them in order to have faith, then it follows that our faith is weak or strong in proportion as we know and confidently rely thereupon.

WORRY VS. PEACE

Sometimes we are inclined to worry, to become much exercised about our business affairs or about the harvest work or the manner in which it is being conducted by others; etc. Worry drives away the peace of mind; and when we find ourselves in this disturbed condition of mind we may know that our faith is being tried; and in proportion as our faith is strong shall we be able to overcome the disposition to worry and to leave all in the Lord's hands. The opposite of worry is peace, repose and tranquility. As proof that worry indicates a trial of faith, we note the following: "Be careful (over-anxious, unduly exercised) for nothing; but in everything by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God; and [as a result] the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus."—Philippians 4:6, 7.

If, after having done all that we can do, we have full confidence in the promises of the Lord and rely thereupon, our minds should be at rest; we should have a rest of faith in God. The Lord has given us many precious promises in his Word, and he invites us to rely upon them that our faith may be strong. For instance, he says: "Rest in the Lord and wait patiently for him; fret not thyself because of him who prospereth in his way, because of the man who bringeth wicked devices to pass." (Psalm 37:7) If our enemies persecute us unjustly, we are not to be disturbed, but to calmly rest in the Lord. Again, we have the injunction, "Wait on the Lord, be of good courage, and he shall strengthen thine heart; wait, I say, on the Lord." (Psalm 27:14) In this last Scripture the word "wait" means to lay hold upon, to trust implicitly our heavenly Father. Again the Lord gives us a remedy to drive away worry and enthrone peace in our hearts, saying, "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee, because he trusteth in thee."

In the testing of the Christian's faith he sometimes finds himself in fear. An opportunity of service is presented; he fears he cannot do it. If his faith is strong, he will chase the fears away, remembering the words of the Apostle: "I can do all things through Christ, who strengtheneth me." (Philippians 4:13) It is a good thing not to have too much confidence in ourselves, but to have full and confident reliance upon the Lord. Doubts in our minds increase fear; doubts and fears undermine the faith of the Christian and cause his hope to grow faint. At times the thought may arise in the Christian's mind as to whether or not he belongs to the Lord and whether or not the Lord loves him. He realizes that he has been trying to serve the Lord, but, being displeased with himself, he doubts that the Lord could be pleased with him.

INCENTIVES TO HOPEFULNESS

Because of the seeming delay in the establishment of Messiah's kingdom, some have feared that "the door is shut" and the opportunity for them to enter the kingdom forever closed. All of this results from weakness of faith. The trial of faith has come; the Lord is permitting us to be tested as to whether or not we will rely fully upon him. Nowhere in his Word has he told us the hour when we shall enter into the kingdom. He has positively told us through the words of the Apostle, however, "that of the times and seasons ye have no need that I write unto you; for yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night; . . . . but ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief."—1 Thessalonians 5:1-4.

All about us we see the fulfillment of prophecy in that the kingdoms of this earth are passing away; and the Lord Jesus says to us, "When ye see these things begin to come to pass, then look up, lift up your heads, for your deliverance draweth nigh." (Luke 21:28) He has given us numerous promises in his Word by which we can determine upon examination whether or not we are his children. If we find that we have the zeal which is peculiar to the house of the Lord (Psalm 69:9); that we understand and appreciate the mystery of God (Colossians 1:26, 27; 1 Corinthians 2:14, 9, 10; Romans 8:16, 17); that we love the brethren (1 John 3:14); that we have opportunities for service, which the Lord is still permitting us to use (John 4:36); and that we are keeping his commandments with a joyful heart—these, together with the clear fulfillment of prophecy daily being manifested, should make our faith strong, and all doubts and fears should vanish.

TWO COMMON BESETMENTS OF THE NEW CREATURE

It has been truly said that one of our most crucial tests is patient endurance of the hardships, tribulations and trials that daily come to the child of God. Upon examination how do we find that we are receiving these trying experiences—patiently or impatiently? If we are chafing under the trial, murmuring under the hardships, or complaining that our lot is harder than that of some one else; if we are discontented, it means that our faith is on trial and that we are failing under the test. On the other hand, if these hardships and trials are calmly received and are permitted to work out in us a sweet and submissive disposition, with the realization that they are all being permitted by the Lord for our good, then our faith is increasing and the trial is resulting beneficially to us. If we have in mind the precious words of the Master and the Apostles and are relying upon these words, then we must have faith. It was our Lord Jesus who said, "In your patience possess ye your souls." In harmony with this, the Apostle Paul writes: "Cast not away your confidence, which hath great recompense of reward; for ye have need of patience, that, after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise."

In tears some of the Lord's dear children are fighting the good fight of faith, often expressing disappointments because of their own fleshly weaknesses; many times having failures, until despair overtakes them and they are inclined to say, "What is the use of my trying further? I might as well give up the fight." Here again is a severe test to their faith; for the words of the Lord spoken to St. Paul apply to each of us, "My grace is sufficient for thee, for my strength is made perfect in weakness."—2 Corinthians 12:9.

Again, many of the consecrated have spent practically all their earthly substance; their homes and lands are gone, and family responsibilities still devolve upon them; they had hoped that ere this they would need no earthly substance; they become fearful for the future and almost reach the point of despair. This is a severe test of faith; but God's Word gives full assurance to his children through our Lord and the Apostles, saying, "Be content with such things as ye have; for . . . . I will never leave thee nor forsake thee" (Hebrews 13:5); "Casting all your care upon him, for he careth for you" (1 Peter 5:7); "He that endureth unto the end, the same shall be saved" (Matthew 24:13); "Let us not be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not" (Galatians 6:9); "Hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take thy crown."—Revelation 3:11.

FIERY TESTS UPON GOD'S PEOPLE

As these tests grow in severity we can understand why the Apostle said that the trial of our faith is a fiery one. The fires are now burning; and everyone that is being hurt by the fire has something of the mind of the flesh—the dross which the Lord desires to be burned away, that the character of the new creature may stand fully approved before him. This trial is precious in his sight; for he desires to see his children win the victory.

Viewing ourselves in the light of God's Word, we see that it is impossible for us to live perfect lives. We cannot be perfect, in the absolute sense, in the expression of love, perfect in loving actions towards others. Nor can our words or even our thoughts be perfect. But we can have a perfect purpose and a perfect faith. The true sentiment of our heart should find expression in the words of the Prophet Job: "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him." (Job 13:15) This is the kind of faith we desire; this is the faith that is pleasing to the Lord.

"Oh, for a faith that will not shrink,
Though pressed by every foe;
That will not tremble on the brink
Of any earthly woe!"

We observe, then, from these examples, that all the trials that come to the Christian test his knowledge and appreciation of God and his confident reliance upon God, and are therefore tests of his faith.

PRECIOUS IN GOD'S SIGHT

Why is this trial of faith spoken of as being more precious than gold? It is because gold and silver cannot purchase such faith. God has been developing this new creation for many centuries. He foreordained it long before the beginning of its development. These sons are precious in his sight; for they will be recipients of his choicest blessings. The church is the bride of Christ. The Bridegroom has watched her for nearly nineteen centuries as she has journeyed through "the valley of the shadow of death," undergoing many trials and hardships and much suffering, all of which have been designed to develop a faith that is pleasing to the Father.

The trial of this faith is very precious in his sight. It is precious in the sight of the intelligent hosts of heaven who have remained in harmony with God. These have beheld the development of those Christians who have had promise of being exalted, if faithful, to a high position with the Lord in glory, and they have ministered to this end. It is precious to those who are running for the prize and that faith if held firmly will result in the greatest riches that God has at his disposal for any of his creatures. For this cause it is a wonderful privilege to undergo the trial of faith.

HOW MAY FAITH BE INCREASED?

How, then, shall we be able to hold on to these precious things with which God has provided us? Let us always keep before our minds the foundation of our faith—God's Word. It was necessary to acquire a knowledge of that Word before we could have faith. Manifestly, then, it follows that if our faith is to be increased and kept strong we must constantly feed our minds upon the Word and confidently rely upon its precious promises. Nothing could give us greater strength than to go often to that Word, and find it reassuring us of the interest which the Lord manifests in our behalf. When depressed, when undergoing a trial, let us go to the Bible and the helps which have been divinely provided to understand that Bible, and fill our minds therewith and rely upon their statements and then mark the joy that will fill our heart.

Music tends to soothe the passions and fears of earthly creatures. Jesus has likened the Word of God to a harp strung for harmonious music. (Revelation 15:2, 3) That Harp of God is perfectly attuned—the Law and the Prophets, the Gospels and Epistles constitute its many strings. By God's grace we are able to use that harp and produce harmony. The Spirit of the Lord is in its strings; and when these are swept by the fingers of one who is devoted to the Lord and who searches for his truth and relies thereupon, it yields the sweetest music that ever fell on mortal ear. Praise God, then, for this wonderful melody that enables us to sing and to appreciate the "Song of Moses and the Lamb"!

Those who have brushed away the cobwebs of the dark ages, who have gained the victory over the beast and its image, who have destroyed credulity and established a sound faith, by permitting the glorious truth of God's Word to shine daily into their hearts, are now, amidst the great confusion of the nations of earth, standing, as it were, upon "a sea of glass," and beholding the melting of the elements; and they are striking their harps in unison in one grand anthem to the praise of the present Bridegroom, and are confidently and trustfully waiting until their full union with him is consummated in the first resurrection.

WHEN SHALL OUR GLORIFICATION COME?

How long shall we continue to fight this good fight of faith? When may we expect to end the journey and enter into the glory of the Lord? By reading the 11th chapter of Hebrews we draw the conclusion as to how long. St. Paul there set forth a long list of faithful ones whom God approved. Be it noted that each of these died faithful. God's Word abounds with promises of reward to the faithful overcomer. To those ancient worthies were given good promises; but to the Christian are given "Exceeding great and precious promises." The ancient worthies had to die in faith and wait for the coming of their reward. All faithful Christians now living will receive their reward at the death of their humanity. Therefore Jesus promised, "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee the crown of life." Our faithfulness and loyalty must continue until the end in order to receive the glorious reward. Mark, the text says, "until death," which means that each one who has entered into a covenant with the Lord by sacrifice must be faithful and loyal to his part of the covenant, or contract, until his sacrifice is fully consumed in the complete death of the human being. It means constant holding fast the beginning of our confidence and rejoicing even unto the end.

THE NATURE OF THE REWARD

Since Jesus has promised that all who continue faithful unto death shall receive the crown of life, this means life on the very highest plane—the divine nature, like unto our glorious Lord and Master. But St. Paul points out that there will be different degrees of glory even in the kingdom—"as star differeth from star in glory." (1 Corinthians 15:41) The Master in the parable of the pounds holds forth the same thought. (Luke 19:17-19) The degree of faithfulness will mark the degree of shining forth in the kingdom. "According to your faith be it unto you."

Those who have been faithful in all that has been committed to them—faithful in the performance of their covenant, faithful to God, faithful to his Word, faithful to the brethren, faithful in the performance of the little things—if they permit all the trials that come to them to properly exercise them concerning God's will, such will be more like the Lord and nearer to him in the kingdom. It is not the one who is most favored this side the veil with service or honors or plaudits, but the one who grows most in the likeness of the Master, who will shine the brightest in his kingdom.

The evidence is clear, cogent and convincing that the kingdom of the Lord is near at hand. Believing this to be true, let us do that which will bring us the approval of the Lord, that we may have an abundant entrance therein. If there is anything we are not doing that will help us on this way to glory, let us do it now. If we are striving to enter in, putting forth our best efforts, then may we at the close of each day be able to say with St. Paul, "I have fought a good fight, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, will give to me at that day, and not to me only, but unto all them who love his appearing."

Surely we have not fought a losing fight if we have been fighting faithfully! Ours has been a good fight, even though we have been ever so weak in ourselves and unable to meet the onslaughts of our enemies. No matter what the trials may be surrounding us—the mists may be thick, the storms raging and the billows roaring with great fierceness—now is the time for us to heed the words of the Apostle and to "gird up the loins of our mind and be sober and hope to the end." (1 Peter 1:13) A little while and the fight will be over and our journey ended; a little while and we shall see our glorious Bridegroom face to face; and then, when we have proven our loyalty to the last and our faith has successfully withstood the fiery trials, the result will be to the praise and honor and glory of him who bought us with his own precious blood.

"Beyond the river's brink we'll lay
The cross that here is given,
And bear the crown of life away
And praise the King of heaven."

THE PURPOSE OF JOHN'S GOSPEL

[This article was a reprint of that entitled "Lovest Thou Me More Than These?" published in issue of June 1, 1908, which please see.]

"Haste thou on from grace to glory,
Armed by faith and winged by prayer;
Heaven's eternal day before thee,
God's own hand shall guide thee there.

"Soon shall close thine earthly mission,
Soon shall pass thy pilgrim days;
Hope shall change to glad fruition,
Faith to sight and prayer to praise."

ISAIAH'S CALL TO HEROIC SERVICE

[This article was a reprint of that entitled "The Prophet Isaiah's Vision," published in issue of October 15, 1898, which please see.]

"HE CARETH FOR THEE"

"No anxious thought upon thy brow
The watching world should see;
No carefulness! O child of God,
For nothing care-full be!
But cast thou all thy care on him
Who always cares for thee.

"It is thy Word, it is thy will—
That is enough for me!
Henceforth no care shall dim my trust,
For all is cast on thee;
Henceforth my inmost heart shall praise
The grace that set me free.

"I want to praise, with life renewed,
As I never praised before;
With voice and pen, with song and speech,
To praise thee more and more,
And the gladness and the gratitude
Rejoicingly outpour!"

AHAZ, THE FAITHLESS KING

JULY 8.—II Chronicles 28.

AHAZ BEGINS HIS REIGN—HE REIGNS IN JERUSALEM FOR SIXTEEN YEARS—HE DOES EVIL IN THE LORD'S SIGHT—THEREFORE SMITTEN BY SYRIA AND ISRAEL—ALSO BY EDOMITES AND PHILISTINES—JUDAH BROUGHT LOW—ALLIANCE WITH ASSYRIA—AHAZ DISTRESSED, INCREASES TRANSGRESSION—RUINED—BURIED IN DISGRACE—OUR LESSON—HOW TO DISPLEASE THE LORD—THE RESULT—HOW TO PLEASE THE LORD—THE RESULT—GOD'S OVER-RULING PROVIDENCE—SUN-DIAL OF AHAZ AN ILLUSTRATION.

"Without faith it is impossible to be well-pleasing unto him."—Hebrews 11:6

Saul, the first king over Israel, reigned 40 years in Jerusalem. He was succeeded by David, who also reigned 40 years, seven in Hebron and thirty-three in Jerusalem. Solomon succeeded in Jerusalem. Then came the division of Israel into two parts. Because of Rehoboam's harsh answer to the children of Israel the ten tribes revolted and chose Jeroboam for their king, who reigned at Samaria. Rehoboam, as king of Judah, reigned at Jerusalem. This division continued until both kingdoms were taken into captivity. David's line continued through or in Judah, the eleventh king from Rehoboam being Ahaz, who reigned in Jerusalem 16 years and was succeeded by his son, the good King Hezekiah.

THE FAITHLESS KING

The name Ahaz means possessor or grasper. It is quite evident from our lesson today that Ahaz was a self-server. It was not necessary for him to do anything to become king, for the reason that he was of the royal line of David and succeeded to the throne at the death of his father Jotham. But while the record does not indicate any action on his part to achieve this object, yet the quality of covetousness was there, as evidenced by what he did after he came into office. Covetousness is idolatry—the idolatry of self. It is the opposite of faith in God and his plans, which makes God and his will first.

Ahaz was quite young when his father died—only twenty—consequently his covetous disposition had not had time to ripen into unlawful acts to attain his desires. However, the sixteen years during which he was in office were sufficient to manifest that his name was not a misnomer. He was a grasper—a possessor—and a holder of what he possessed at all odds. At no time did he ever display any real faith in the God of his father David, nor seek to do his will, as was manifested in the life and the work of the sweet singer of Israel. Read 2 Kings 16.

AHAZ'S ACCESSION TO THE THRONE

The country of the two-tribe kingdom was prosperous, and conditions were favorable for a glorious reign. His grandfather, the good King Uzziah, had reigned well for fifty-two years—ruling in the fear of God, although near the close of his life he made a sad blunder—that of failing to observe the proper limitations of his kingly office. Over-stepping for a moment into the priestly office, he burned incense unto the Lord, for which he was smitten with leprosy in the forehead, indicating a leprosy of the mind, resulting from a single act of exceeding his authority. Otherwise, however, he was a wise, prosperous, God-fearing ruler. He had subdued Edom on the south and Philistia on the west, and had done much for the kingdom inwardly. He had taken Elath on the northern shore of the gulf of Akaba—an arm of the Red sea—and had populated it with Jews.

King Uzziah was succeeded by his son Jotham, who did what was pleasing in the sight of the Lord. Therefore the land was prosperous for another sixteen years—making a period of about 70 years of prosperity—when Ahaz, the grasper, came into power. It is true, Rezin and Pekah were assuming a threatening attitude; nevertheless the kingdom of Judah was in a good and prosperous condition, so that there was nothing to fear, providing that the nation would walk in the way of David. But, alas, while Ahaz had ascended to the throne of Judah, he had not enthroned God as the ruler of his heart! Trouble was therefore ahead, and a great opportunity for doing good was missed. How often is this the case among both rich and poor, high and low, saint and sinner!

CHARACTERISTICS OF HIS REIGN

Faith is a tender plant and cannot thrive in an idolatrous, selfish heart. The experience of his predecessors should have led him to have faith in God, but the cruel king of selfishness strangled the promptings to trust in and obey the God of his fathers. Unbelief is a plant that finds congenial soil in such a heart, and when the dictates of unbelief are obeyed, it inevitably leads rapidly down the broad way. Such was the case with this faithless king of Judah, Ahaz.

"He did not that which was right in the sight of the Lord like David his father." (V. 1) Faith is the eye of the soul and enables one to walk before the Lord with the thought, "Thou, God, seeest me." But unbelief is blind and darkens the soul by saying, "God has forsaken us; he cares not for us, neither does he see us."

"He walked in the ways of the kings of Israel." (V. 2) The kings of Israel, beginning with Jeroboam at Samaria, had a rebellious spirit. Instead of walking according to the words of God, as spoken by the Prophet Isaiah, the seventh to the twelfth chapters of whose prophecy were given to guide and encourage King Ahaz, he walked in the ways of his own worldly wisdom. Thus he walked contrary to the Lord, as did the kings of the ten tribes. The Lord was represented by David and those in harmony with him. When therefore Ahaz failed to follow the example and advice of David and went the way that he chose, he thereby rebelled against the Lord, as did the kings of Israel.

This led him to follow the ways of the more idolatrous nations surrounding Israel and Judah. There was a valley to the south and east of Jerusalem called "the Valley of the Son of Hinnom"; and this valley was so given over to heathen practices and idolatrous worship that in time it became a place of abomination. It was used later on as a place of fire into which dead animals, refuse from the city, and, at times the bodies of dead criminals, were cast. Consequently, it was used by New Testament writers to illustrate hell-fire (Gehenna), the second death, "everlasting destruction," under the symbolic term, "the lake of fire with brimstone." This faithless king was therefore typically pointing out by his example the way into the second death, by sinning against light—against the holy Spirit.

He even had molten images of Baalim made and set up in Judah. Baal was the supreme male deity of the Phoenicians and Canaanites. The name Baal means lord, in the sense of possessor, so that the position ascribed to this god by the idolators of that time, among the gods—that is, demons, fallen spirits—was the same spirit that Ahaz had, as supreme ruler in Judah. A true worshipper of Jehovah has the spirit of Jehovah, the same as a true Christian has the spirit of Christ—the spirit of love, joy, peace, long-suffering, etc., as contrasted with the spirit of the adversary, which prevails in the world—the spirit of malice, hatred, war, murder, etc.

Even worse, King Ahaz "burnt his children in the fire, after the abominations of the heathen, whom the Lord had cast out before the children of Israel." (V. 3) So an early evangelist in this country used the expression, "There are thousands of children a span long in hell," which is the modern way of burning little children in the fire unto the god Satan. It was the king's unbelief which caused him to set such a terrible example before the people of Judah, and which caused them to do many things that were an abomination in the sight of the Lord.

THE RESULT OF HIS FAITHLESSNESS

Because of his rebelliousness, God delivered him, (1) to Rezin, the king of Syria. Rezin reigned over Syria at Damascus; and because of the unfaithfulness of King Ahaz God permitted the Syrians to carry a great multitude of the people of Judah captive to Damascus. In a similar manner, disloyalty to Christ leads his followers to be taken captive by the world, the flesh and the adversary.

Again, because of King Ahaz's rebelliousness, God delivered him (2) to Pekah, king of Israel. Pekah reigned at Samaria, and came with Rezin against Ahaz. In one day their combined armies slew 120,000 valiant men of Judah, because they had forsaken the Lord. Among the slain were the one next to the king, the governor of his house and his own son. Besides this, 200,000 men, women and children with much spoil were taken to Samaria. What terrible results follow the path of unbelief, faithlessness, rebelliousness, disloyalty! It is far better to follow the Lord.

DEEPER TRANSGRESSION ON THE PART OF THE KING

Not having Jehovah as his friend and helper, therefore in his time of greatest need, he leaned on an arm of flesh, in the person of Tiglath-Pileser, king of Assyria, with whom he made an alliance. He made the same mistake that many of the kings and rulers of the earth are making today. In their hour of need, they are allying themselves one with another, instead of looking to God and his Son, Jesus Christ, as Lord and King. Ahaz, not having profited by the chastisements which Jehovah had sent him through Syria and Israel, was further punished through the Edomites and Philistines. Having been smitten in the north and the east, he was next smitten in the south and the west. Thus from every quarter Jehovah would teach him the foolishness and wickedness of rebellion and unbelief.

But instead of growing better and profiting by these increased judgments, King Ahaz even took money from the city treasury, and also consecrated money from the Temple, and gave it to the Assyrian king as his part of this unholy alliance. Any highly favored country that will take both the people's money and the money that should be devoted to God in the way of Christian service, and will use it to seal an alliance with nations that have forsaken the Lord, must, like Ahaz, be plunged into a great time of trouble! Ahaz went so far as to close the Lord's house, and to sacrifice to the heathen gods on the altar at Damascus. In fact, there was nothing too extreme for him to do to further his own selfish ends and promote his unholy purposes.

GREATER CONSEQUENCES OF HIS DISLOYAL COURSE

Since the kings of Judah were representatives of Jehovah, it is no wonder that our lesson tells us that the Lord was angered with King Ahaz. Judah was consequently brought low, financially, politically and religiously, so much so that the Scriptures say it became naked. Thus we see Ahaz ruined the country over which he reigned, reduced the people to great straits, caused many thousands to be slain, and many more to be taken captive. Moreover, by his course of unbelief and faithlessness, he ruined his own family as well as himself. Finally he was buried in Jerusalem in disgrace.

LESSONS FOR OUR DAY

The course of unbelief is ever downward, leading one further and further away from God and from Christ. Its influence is bad, not only upon ourselves, but upon our own loved ones in our homes, and upon our companions and friends. "If ye will not believe, surely ye shall not be established!"

Faith in God leads upward. The first step in turning away from sin to faith in Christ is an upward one and leads towards peace. Faith in him as the ransom-sacrifice brings one out of the condition of condemnation to a condition of peace with respect to sin. Progress in the life of faith leads one to put away defilements of the flesh and of the spirit. It will further lead to a consecrated life, a justified life, a spirit-begotten life when one becomes a new creature in Christ. It will lead one to put on Christ more and more and to grow up in him as the Head of all things. This course will terminate in heavenly glory. "Be thou faithful unto death; and I will give thee the crown of life."

King Ahaz was moved like the trees of the wood, through the blowing of the winds of the confederacy of Syria and Israel against him; still he refused to believe the word of safety spoken to him by the Lord through the Prophet Isaiah; nor would he ask the Lord for a sign for professedly religious reasons; yet the Lord overruled all this unbelief and self-will, and used it to give the church two important truths:

(1) The Lord gave the sign of the virgin with child in the form of a prophecy, which has greatly assisted the eye of faith to identify Jesus as the Messiah.

(2) The inclination of King Ahaz to make friends with Damascus and Samaria and to ally himself with Assyria through unbelief in the promises of Jehovah became the means whereby the Prophet Isaiah has pointed out to the church of the present time that it should not join the Confederacy of the churches in close alliance with the Governments of the world, but rather to remain loyal to Christ as the only Head of the church and the one King over all kings. believing his promise that "if we suffer [with him] we shall also reign with him." The federated churches of America and the world are closely allied with the governments of earth and constitute the greatest power of the present time. Consequently they will win the allegiance of any and all except "the very elect," who refuse to bow the knee to Baal, and receive not "the mark of the beast," because they will worship God only and prize above all things the "sealing of the saints in their foreheads."

SUN-DIAL OF AHAZ—AN ILLUSTRATION— ISAIAH 38:8

The sun shining upon the face of the dial indicates the time of the day by means of the shadow cast. The sun now shines upon the pages of Holy Writ, and by means of certain marked-off periods, indicates to an illuminated mind the time of the day—"the great day of God Almighty"—in which we now live. This is one of the great blessings which the eye of faith now brings to the consecrated children of God and which enables them to walk in the light of the presence of God's dear Son. Shortly The Christ—Head and body—will arise as the Sun, with healing in his beams for the blessing of the troubled nations of earth. The times of the Gentiles have closed. The kings of earth have had their day; and soon Immanuel will take possession and bring peace and gladness everywhere. "The night is far spent; the day is at hand." After the war, which, according to present signs and "the sure word of prophecy," will be followed by revolution and anarchy, the Prince of Peace, now present but unseen, will take possession of earth's affairs, and then the prayer, "Thy kingdom come," shall be answered.

"The 'Gentile times' are closing, for their kings have had their day;
And with them sin and sorrow will forever pass away;
For the tribe of Judah's Lion now comes to hold the sway;
OUR KING IS MARCHING ON!"

BROOKLYN ACADEMY OF MUSIC—JUNE 3

The first public meeting held in Brooklyn under the auspices of the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY since the death of our dear Pastor, was the afternoon of Sunday, June 3, in the Academy of Music, in which Brother Russell spoke once a month prior to the completion of the Temple in New York City. Brother Russell always spoke to large audiences in the Academy, and many have been the requests for another series of discourses there. The meeting proved to be such a success that at its conclusion announcement was made for another discourse the following Sunday. The auditorium was crowded to the roof, about 2,500 being present Excellent attention was given throughout the discourse, and many favorable expressions were heard among outsiders respecting the beautiful tribute paid to the man who for 40 years stood as a beacon light proclaiming a time of trouble at this time, preparatory to the inauguration of Messiah's Millennial kingdom for the blessing of all mankind. Practically all the Brooklyn newspapers, including The Brooklyn Daily Eagle, spoke favorably of the service. Following is one of the published reports:

"J. F. Rutherford, addressing an audience which crowded the Academy of Music yesterday afternoon, arraigned Billy Sunday with having appropriated to his own use Pastor Russell's published views on the second coming of Christ. The speaker charged the evangelist with preaching questionable theology, declaring it wholly inconsistent.

"'Are we at the End of the World?' was the subject of Mr. Rutherford's address. This was his first public appearance in Brooklyn since the death of Pastor Russell.

"'Criticism of a man is hardly the proper course for a Christian,' he said, 'but criticism of a man's teachings is always proper. A man who addresses the heavenly Father and our Redeemer in familiar terms, such as Old Pal, is irreverent toward God and the Lord Jesus. Such conduct and such words lead to irreverence on the part of the people.'

"The present world-war, the threatening famine and pestilence, the fomenting revolution in various parts of the world, all are evidences of the passing away of the present unrighteous order."

FAITH

"To follow where an unseen Captain leads,
To heed commands unheard by mortal ear,
To battle with a known, yet unseen foe—
Ah! This is faith.

"To choose the right when others think you wrong,
To stand for Truth while Error laughs in scorn,
To tread the lonely way unto the end—
Yes! This takes faith.

"To wear a smile where you receive but frowns,
To kiss the hand that wounds your poor heart so,
And pray for those who fain your life would take—
Ah! This is faith.

"To fix your eyes on 'that within the veil,'
Your heart's devotion set on things above,
To wait with patience till God calls you home—
Faith's victory won!"

SOME LETTERS OF INTEREST

SUFFERING FOR RIGHTEOUSNESS' SAKE

DEAR BRETHREN:—

You will perhaps know that the address which I give you is actually another name for the famous —— Prison. There are about 900 Conscientious Objectors here, mostly working on the land. At present there are nearly 70 of our brothers; and we have very helpful times together, both at work and in fellowship at our studies. We have elected elders and deacons, and have a series of meetings, just like an ordinary ecclesia. It is a remarkable fact that quite a large number of the brothers have served the Lord in their local classes in the capacity of elders and deacons.

You may be sure that the Lord's blessing is with us, in spite of certain restrictions of our liberty, in that we are mostly hundreds of miles away from our loved ones and allowed to visit home only twice a year. We are fed, clothed, and paid 4/s per week. However, we who realize the Lord's guiding hand in all of our affairs are quite content and glad to submit to these things for conscience' sake. At present the local and the London papers are making violent attacks upon us, in many instances misrepresenting our position, probably to further prejudice public opinion against us, which is already very bitter. Fellows who have ventured to enter nearby towns have been mobbed and attacked several times, and others have had narrow escapes from being "ducked" in a river, etc. There is no clear distinction at present between the truth Friends and other C. O.'s who have received service here for a variety of reasons, many merely socialistic and anarchistic. But when the Lord's due time comes for us to suffer especially for the truth's sake, then and not before, the dividing line will be manifest.

You will perhaps like to know a little about one's experience in prison. As this letter will be censored, I cannot tell you all details. It will suffice to say that having the truth makes all the difference in the world. By the inspiration, by the 'spirit of power" which the truth gives, one is enabled to bear patiently and unmurmuringly things which are much harder for others to bear, and which often have the effect of making them bitter and anarchistic. We, however, who have learned to trust in the precious promises, we who cast our burden on the Lord, can rejoice in our privilege of suffering a little for his dear name's sake, and can indeed be content. We seek contentment, and have it, by his favor. The prison diet weakens one physically, of course; but an outdoor open-air life is healthful; and one can thus pull up his strength when he leaves prison and comes here or wherever the home office sends him.

One of the greatest blessings obtained from these recent trials is the privilege of having a fair amount of quiet for prayer, meditation and study; and the London office has placed the volumes in the prison library now. I had such a delightful feast on Vol. V and VI, and continually lifted up my heart for all God's blessings. Truly, our dear heavenly Father is never limited in his ability to cause ALL things to work together for our good, as long as we love him supremely, which is ever the desire of our hearts! So we can all say, "Bless the Lord, O my soul; and all that is within me, bless his holy name. Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits."—Psalm 103:1, 2.

It is such a privilege to be permitted to suffer a little for his dear name's sake, and to prove his faithfulness all the way along. Surely we can trust him firmly to the end, ever trusting, not in self, but in the Lord! As far as the brothers of military age are concerned, harvest work seems to be at a standstill, and our chief lesson seems to be to learn to love one another. The final polishing is the test of whether or not we truly love the brethren. Fellowship is very sweet; and we can live above the various circumstances of life which may be unpleasant to us.

Ever your loving brother, by his grace,

STANLEY W. WILLIS.—Eng.

CLAD IN THE BLOOM OF IMMORTAL GLORY

DEAR BRETHREN:—

Greetings from the church at Dublin, Ireland! We desire to convey to the members of the Bethel Family at Brooklyn our sincerest Christian love. We deeply sympathize with you in the great loss you have sustained, as a result of our dear Pastor's death.

We rejoice to realize that his sufferings are all over, and that he is now a partaker of the divine nature—the highest spirit nature in the universe. He now knows in the very fullest sense of the word all that it means to be "made like him," the dazzling brilliance of whose glory outshone the sun in its meridian splendor.

How supremely happy he is now is beyond our power to comprehend! He has long ere this come into direct personal contact with the Lord Jesus and all the apostles, besides an innumerable company of the glorified saints.

What a sublime experience it must have been for our dear Pastor when he entered the presence of our Lord clad in the bloom of immortal youth! What a noble example our dear brother left us! He was surely a pattern worthy of imitation! He was truly the greatest man of our day—great not merely mentally, but also morally and spiritually!

May it be our great joy to soon meet him again, under grander and far happier conditions, at the supremely grandest of all gatherings—the general assembly of the church of the first-borns, whose names are written in heaven!

With warmest Christian love, and assuring you of our loyal support, we are

Yours in the Master's service.

FROM OLD-TIME FRIEND OF BROTHER RUSSELL

DEAR FRIENDS:—

I read the newspaper story of Mr. Russell's death. I had known him forty years, and had followed his most remarkable career with esteem and affection. I had seen him but twice in many years, but I have a keen recollection of our cordial relations in the long ago. I would like to know more of his recent years and about his most lamentable departure. He seems to have died on the battle line. The newspaper accounts were all too brief for such a life as his.

Perhaps you have some more complete account that you can give me. A memoir of him should be an inspiration to those, of whom there must be many, who desire anxiously to know the truth as to our Father's purposes toward his children. I had been feeling my way, more or less blindly, through books and men and nature, when I met Mr. Russell, both of us young men, I the older. In coming years he helped me greatly.

We had occasional business relations, I visiting Pittsburgh frequently, but we always talked of religion far more than of business. One day we met on the street and after a long talk I said of one or two points under discussion that I was not sure about them. With that wonderfully brilliant and sweet smile and his assured but gentle tones he said, "If you would study you would know."

I made my home many years ago in an interior town in New York. I attended the (Dutch) Reformed church, my wife being a member. I did not believe in any hopeless hereafter. The minister was from Maryland, a pupil of a famous Kentucky theologian, whose daughter he had married. He was in middle life. Some of his uncompromising "hell" sermons irritated me. Many years after I spent an evening with him. He had always been a student. His daughter said once that if Gabriel should call her father almost any time he would be found with a Hebrew Bible in one hand and a Greek Testament in the other.

Well, as we talked after those many years, he surprised me by his Millennial views. At length I said, "Much that you have said reminds me of Russell's teaching in MILLENNIAL DAWN." "Yes," he said, "I am not quite in agreement with him as to the person of Christ, but otherwise I think he is about right." That seemed to me as great a triumph as any writer or preacher could achieve. I felt surer that he was right because he had convinced about the last man I would have expected.

Sincerely and cordially yours, J. ALBERT STOWE.—N. J.

A NOTE OF WARNING

DEAR BRETHREN OF THE WATCH TOWER:—

I feel that it is my duty to the interests of the Lord's work to mention two matters that are being continually brought to my attention during my visits from place to place. The first is the tendency of some of the friends to speculate upon various matter in Revelation and Ezekiel. I have observed since the death of our Pastor that quite a number of the friends are trying to "dig" out "new" things, and are probing the pilgrims along this line, and I regret to say that some of the pilgrims even are giving "private" interpretations of these prophecies. To me, dear brethren, this seems to be more confusing than helpful to the friends. I wish some way were possible to remind the pilgrims and all the dear friends that we are just as obligated to be loyal to the wishes of our dear Pastor as we were when he was with us in the flesh. Surely, this is a time when the Lord's people are to be tested along this line! If there are any things to be brought out respecting Revelation and Ezekiel, etc., do we not expect them from the proper source, the home office? I would be glad if you saw fit to assist the dear friends along this line.

The second matter is in respect to other publications than THE WATCH TOWER. Wherever we go, questions are asked in regard to this paper and that, etc. I am mindful of the kindly way in which our Pastor always treated these things. All the pilgrims doubtless remember that in special conferences with us he never was much in favor of other publications than those from the home office. Of late in some of these outside papers have appeared articles that are not in fullest support of the truth as taught by our Pastor and, in one instance, advertisements were there, and when some of the dear friends responded they received messages derogatory to our Pastor. Can you recommend anything that can be done? As one illustration, dear brethren, one little pamphlet published by a brother, seemingly in full harmony with the truth, was widely circulated. Perhaps subscriptions to the extent of over a thousand dollars were given to that pamphlet. Is it penurious for me to feel that the dear friends could have more profitably spent that thousand dollars in helping the TRACT Fund? Our dear Pastor has written so much we can still read that it seems to us that we have quite enough with his words and THE WATCH TOWER.

We hope that nothing in this message seems to have other than the kindliest feeling toward those who no doubt prompted by zeal have been writing or publishing such articles, for we believe the best intentions have no doubt governed much, if not all, of it, but we also feel that the friends can be helped by some suggestion from Brooklyn especially along this line. Please pardon my taking so much of your time. May the dear Lord continue to guide and direct you is my prayer. With fervent love and greeting, I am, by his favor,

Your brother, W. H. BUNDY.

"A WORD TO THE WISE"

MY DEAR BRETHREN:—

Greetings and much love in Christ! There are just a few things which I feel led to write you about:

(1) Having the privilege of attending the Scripture study meetings, both as chairman and otherwise, I notice that there is often a lack of ventilation in the rooms. The one in charge is sometimes very sensitive when the subject is broached, and so I was thinking that a hint from you would be a word in season. Many are misled into thinking that to stop up every crevice will prevent a draught, which will in turn prevent taking colds; but they do not consider the dangers of foul air and the more serious chill likely to accrue through passing out of a hot room into the cold atmosphere!

(2) I should like also to tell you of the blessing realized from the class study of the volumes in conjunction with the Question Books. I must admit that once I favored Bible study alone; but the dear Lord has led me to see the several advantages of the former method, one of which is that both question and answer are before the student, therefore any new thought or question arouses the mental activity of all.

It is wonderful to my mind how lucid and reasonable the answers are in the volumes! and as one and all are led to that same conclusion, the spirit of oneness and sweetness of fellowship becomes apparent which is not attainable in the usual denominational Bible study classes.

(3) The elders, deacons and workers have been an inspiration as they have quietly and earnestly labored together in the various departments of service; and I know, dear Brethren, that we have your prayers for a continuance of this blessed unity.—Psalm 133.

Yours in that wondrous favor,

FREDERICK LARDENT.—Eng.

ADVERSARY SPEEDING UP—HIS TIME SHORT!

DEAR FRIENDS:—

Some time ago some of our class received copies of enclosure marked No. 1. After careful perusal of it we thought a gentle criticism might be in order, so we composed and forwarded a reply (which we also enclose and mark No. 2). In reply we received enclosure marked No. 3.

We then thought to let the matter drop; but on second thought I have decided to forward this correspondence to you. The reason why I am doing so is because there seems to be a growing tendency on the part of some to put out publications of this kind. We know of one man near here who claims to have more light than Pastor Russell had. Doesn't it seem strange that no one else has yet discovered this, although he has thought so for years?

Also, there is a great tendency on the part of friends to patronize these various publications, and while they get some truth, as from the creeds, they are in grave danger of falling into the snares of the adversary.

There seem to be many people who are conversant with the contents of the STUDIES, but who never have affiliated with the classes, and who now advance the Pastor's doctrines, claiming them as their own. I heard such an one a few days ago and asked him where he learned it all. He stated that he had been a very earnest Bible student from childhood and the Lord had shown him these things. But after some quizzing he finally admitted that he had read Pastor Russell's books.

The adversary seems to be speeding up a little in these perilous times! The great personal pronoun "I" is getting large and is one of his chief weapons.

Let me suggest that if the money spent on these various publications were to be sent to the SOCIETY it would do much more good.

Yours in the Master's service, EDWARD BARKER.—Pa.

REDEEMER MADE HIM OF SO MUCH SERVICE

DEAR BRETHREN:—

My heart was made solemn and filled with the sadness that comes with the knowledge of the loss of a blessed association, by the death of our beloved Brother Russell.

How thankful we ought to be to our heavenly Father for the knowledge that it has been the unseen presence and supervision of our dear Redeemer himself that made his servant such a source of comfort, help and instruction to us all, and so we need not be disturbed at his taking him away as it hath seemed to him good.

How fitting it was that our dear Lord should at this time remove every earthly prop supporting us and compel us to lean wholly upon himself and his Word, so that we might become strong in him "and in the power of his might" in order to be able to endure in his strength, steadfast and faithful unto the end!

Please extend my loving Christian greetings to the dear ones at the Bethel Home, for whom it has been my daily privilege to pray nearly eighteen years, commending them to our heavenly Father's care in the words of our beloved Brother Paul: "Unto him that is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory, with exceeding joy, to the only wise God our Savior, be glory and majesty, dominion and power both now and ever, Amen!"

Sincerely your brother in Christ, CHAS. OWENS.—Tenn.

CONFIDENCE AND TRUST

DEAR BRETHREN IN CHRIST:—

We assure you, dear brethren, that the passing of our beloved Brother Russell beyond the veil has not had a tendency to slacken our zeal for the truth and its service, but has, on the other hand, increased it, and we are more determined than ever before to be faithful, that we too may have some part and lot in the kingdom so soon to be set up.

We assure you of our confidence and trust in whatever arrangements Brother Russell has made for furthering the harvest work, realizing that he was "that servant," especially chosen of the Lord, and that the "meat in due season" which he has been putting forth for about forty years will continue to go forth through the same channel, THE WATCH TOWER. Assuring you of our unreserved co-operation in the work, and of our desire to continue to do with our might what our hands may find to do, we remain,

Yours in the Master's service,

UNION MEETING OF ASSOCIATED BIBLE STUDENTS.—Joplin, Mo.

A BEAUTIFUL LIFE—A MARVELOUS EXAMPLE

DEAR BRETHREN:—

I returned to my home from Winsted, Conn., and learned of Brother Russell's death. I am deeply grieved at his passing away. We have lost a dear, helpful and most valuable minister of the Gospel. It seems as though we do need him so much. But God knoweth best, and doeth all things well.

I am so thankful that the dear Lord permitted me to receive Brother Russell's written words. They have taught me concerning the Scriptures what God has in store for those who love and obey him. I feel in my mind and heart that I should never have known otherwise that it was my privilege to strive for the bride class, and that I must live the Christ life in order to be a member of the church of the living God, a member of Christ's body (the opportunity is so great and good!), had I not received Brother Russell's sermons, TOWER, DAWNS, and his other writings.

I thank and praise the dear Lord and Brother Russell for all these. How could I live without them? I have prayed that the Lord would raise up some one to carry on the work he has laid down. What a great reward he will receive for his untiring efforts in the Lord's work for humanity—and so ably performed! It seems to me that he stands above all men or persons, next to Christ—so much like his Savior. What a beautiful life! What a marvelous example to Christians and the world! No wonder we all loved him, and love him still!

While in Winsted, Conn., I received the package of WATCH TOWERS you so kindly sent me. Thank you a thousand times! I appreciate and love them. The BIBLE STUDENTS MONTHLY was left at my door this week, and I am very thankful for it (I am going to order it soon). In it I notice that to any one wishing a copy of "Facts Foil the Assassination of Pastor Russell's Character," it will be sent on request. Who could doubt his purity? I should like one, because I cannot understand how any one can say a word against the pure, Christ-like person that he was. Yet they did the same to Jesus, and crucified him.

Please send me a copy and accept many thanks. I do not doubt his splendid life. His enemies were jealous of him. Truly these are trying times for the saints; but God's promises are great and true—"Great peace have they that love thy law, and nothing shall offend them." Brother Russell's God is our God, and his Bible our Bible.

Dear people, you who have known Brother Russell so intimately, you have my sympathy in this hour of separation and loneliness. May the dear Lord bless and comfort, sustain and keep you all through this present life, and give you an abundant entrance into his kingdom, is my prayer.

Hoping and praying that I may be an "overcomer," and may sit with Jesus on his throne with his redeemed ones, I remain,

Truly your sincere sister in Christ,

MRS. J. E. MORRIS.—Conn.

PRAYERS FOR INCREASED UNDERSTANDING OF GOD'S WILL

DEAR BRETHREN:—

We desire to assure you of our willingness to co-operate with you as may be, and to have you know that we have had constantly in mind those who have been so intimately associated with our dear Pastor and who now, by his physical absence, are required to walk more steadfastly by faith rather than by sight.

We have remembered you in our prayers at the throne of grace, asking for you increased perception and understanding of the Father's will in the conduct of the many interests of the harvest work! We pray the continued manifestations of God's love and care for all who are striving to carry forward the work begun by God's special servant.

Humbly in his service, BLOOMFIELD ECCLESIA.—N. J.

HIS MEMORY WILL ASSIST IN THE FIGHT OF FAITH

DEAR BRETHREN IN CHRIST:—

We take this time and means to convey to you our sincerest sympathy in our mutual bereavement, and also to rejoice with you for him who, we believe, has already heard that sublime welcome, "Well done, good and faithful servant!" Furthermore, we testify that the remembrance of his faith, zeal, loyalty and love will be a great help to us to keep up the "good fight" and to continue to show forth the praises of our dear Redeemer and Lord, to the end that our heavenly Father's name may be glorified.

Yours in the fellowship of the One "altogether lovely,"

AURORA ECCLESIA.—Ill.

CANADIAN'S VIEW OF VOW AND RESOLVE

DEAR BRETHREN:—

It seems expedient that I should write you a few words regarding the Resolve and the Vow.

The more I examine the principles of thought contained in these helps, the more do they appear to be meat indeed for the household.

There is one thing that appeals to me very much. It is the concise form in which these principles are stated. While concise and brief, the language is comprehensive and sufficient. For example, take the first thought of the Resolve, "My earliest thought." This gives us a good start. Likewise with all the other features.

I have often thought of the paragraph on trust as taking out a life insurance policy with Jehovah, without any premium to pay, except the exercise of the faculty of trust.

The Vow also contains pearls of great price, special treasures to the kingdom class. First, I note that it is a vow unto Jehovah our Father, the Maker and Sustainer of the boundless universe. Coming unto him in the name of his Son our Lord, with reverence, one desires his law to rule in his heart, believing in his faithfulness to perform that which he has promised.

The mutual tie of Christian fellowship and oneness of the church is displayed in the second paragraph, and recalls to my mind instances in the history of the early church when the prayers of some ascended to the heavenly Father for the blessing of the fellow servants.

The more I scrutinize paragraph 3, the more am I convinced that divine wisdom guided in the insertion of that clause. There is an unfathomed mine of truth and wisdom in those words. Some day in the Lord's providence I hope to come up to the standard there set forth. A retrospective view convinces me of the need of scrutinizing carefully one's thoughts, words and acts.

All these helps are beneficial to the new creature in his efforts to be conformed to the image of God's dear Son, by the renewing of the mind.

Praying Jehovah's blessing on the Bethel Family, and in the fellowship of his Son and the saints, I remain

Your brother in Christ, ERNEST H. WALKER.—Ont.

HEAVENLY FATHER'S WISDOM MANIFESTED

DEAR BRETHREN IN CHRIST:—

Our heavenly Father has, in his infinite wisdom, seen fit to call our beloved Pastor to his long-needed rest. Most naturally we now turn our attention, our sympathies and our prayers toward THE WATCH TOWER and the dear brethren upon whose shoulders has fallen the responsibility of carrying on the work from which our Brother Russell has been taken, and that of the I. B. S. A. in general.

We have felt that we could see significance and wisdom in the expressed wish of our Pastor, several years ago; namely, that THE TOWER be regarded as the Lord's servant, rather than himself. The earnest, heartfelt prayers of our class, dear Brethren, are being offered up to the God of all grace on your behalf and on that of the tender interests of the Lord's "little flock," scattered throughout the world. "The Eternal God is our refuge; and underneath are the Everlasting Arms." Shall we not "speak to the children of Israel, that they go forward?" May we not prove henceforth that our dear Pastor has succeeded in accomplishing the greatest desire and effort of his life-work—the leading of all truth-hungry hearts coming under his influence to Christ and the Bible instead of to himself?

Your brethren in Christ, WAUKESHA ECCLESIA.—Wis.

HASTENING COMPLETION OF BRIDE OF CHRIST

DEAR BRETHREN IN THE LORD:—

We convey to you and all the dear colaborers our mutual sympathy in the passing of our beloved Pastor from his labors of love in the flesh to a full realization of that divine, immortal nature which awaits those who have made their calling and election sure. Our sorrow is turned into gladness as we realize that he whom we have every reason to believe was true and faithful has passed beyond the veil, thus hastening the completion of the "bride of Christ," who will soon rejoice with her Lord in bringing deliverance to all the captives of death.

We assure you, dear brethren, of our hearty co-operation in all your efforts and labors of love, trusting that whatever is done in thought, word or deed may be done with an eye single to the honor and glory of God.

With Christian love, MEAFORD ECCLESIA.—Canada.

PICTURES OF BROTHER RUSSELL FOR CLASSES

September 10 last, about two months before Brother Russell's death, Brother Mitchell, of Los Angeles, made some photographs of Brother Russell which have been much appreciated by those who have seen them. Brother Mitchell now advises us that he desires to present each class of the INTERNATONAL BIBLE STUDENT'S ASS'N with one of these photographs, provided the class is organized and has a definite meeting-place. All requests must be sent by the Class Secretary, and addressed to the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY, Brooklyn, N. Y. The picture is a splendid likeness.

VOL. XXXVIII BROOKLYN, N. Y., JULY 1, 1917 No. 13

VIEWS FROM THE WATCH TOWER

"WHAT SHALL BE THE SIGN OF THY PRESENCE?"

"AND THERE SHALL BE FAMINES"

One of the leading economists in the United States, Arthur R. Marsh, recently wrote in the N. Y. City World regarding the earth's food supply as follows (the article speaks for itself):

"If there be any virtue in publicity, the people of this country are now completely informed of the seriousness of the present and prospective food situation throughout the world. It may perhaps be doubted, however, whether they have as yet really passed from the stage of intellectual apperception of the facts to that of personal realization of what these facts will ultimately mean for themselves as individuals.

"The people of the United States have to face, certainly for the coming twelvemonth, and in all probability for more than one year thereafter, a condition of things with respect to their supply of food the like of which has not been seen on the North American Continent since its earliest colonization by the white race, unless exception perhaps be made of the first winter of the Pilgrim Fathers.

GREAT DRAIN UPON OUR OWN GRAIN STOCKS

"The American crop season of 1916 was relatively one of the most unpropitious experienced in this country within the memory of any persons now living. Two of our major food crops, wheat and potatoes, were short of a comfortable provision for our own population; a third food crop, corn, fell three or four hundred millions of bushels below the aggregate of the natural domestic demands upon it. The production of vegetables was scanty in proportion to our own needs. Of only two or three of the minor crops could it be said that they gave a full yield. Taking all our crops together and adding to them the food reserves brought forward from the previous year or years, the total food supply for the crop season 1916-1917 was a close fit against our domestic requirements for consumption, seed and carry-over, and afforded nothing in the way of a surplus out of which a reasonable amount of exports could be drawn.

"With such a crop out-turn for 1916 in the United States for the period up to the harvesting of the crop of 1917 it was obvious that the important food-importing countries of the world should look elsewhere than to us for their supplies. This, however, was not to be; on the contrary, the needs of these countries are greater than ever before, while the production of the other food-exporting countries has been disastrously small in comparison with that of recent normal years, while at least two of these countries—Russia and Roumania—are to a very large extent cut off from any exportation of foodstuffs by reason of the war situation. Accordingly we have been subjected to an insistent demand for considerable portions of this supply for export, and under conditions such that we could not well refuse to let it go.

SITUATION MOST THREATENING KNOWN

"It is unnecessary to dilate upon the really appalling seriousness of the situation—a situation so threatening that no one now living in a civilized country has ever known its like. On the basis of the most trustworthy statistics and estimates obtainable, we have been forced to the conclusion that, with every elevator in the world drained of its contents, with every bin and crib in the world scraped to the bottom, the world's supply of the grains usable for human food, whether directly or in the form of meat, not only would not suffice to meet the requirements of the unblockaded countries from April to August, but would fall 130,000,000 bushels short of those requirements.

"With the severest restriction of their consumption by multitudes of people somewhere, the last weeks of the period must be weeks of positive privation in some or all of the countries affected; and, except by chance here and there, not a bushel of these grains would remain at the end of the present crop year to serve as a surplus to supplement any possible deficiencies of the production of the coming year.

FAMINE THREATENS PREMATURE AND INCONCLUSIVE PEACE

"The case presented by the International Institute of Agriculture, was by no means as bad as the actual facts. In its calculations the Institute undoubtedly assumed that the winter wheat crop of the United States would be at least of normal size, as its acreage was record-breaking and it was not known, even as late as the end of March, that the average condition of the growing crop had been extensively impaired. When, however, the Department of Agriculture, on April 7, estimated the condition of the crop at practically 23 per cent. lower than the past ten year's average, and indicative of a production of only 430,000,000 bushels of winter wheat, as compared with 481,744,000 bushels last year and 673,947,000 bushels in 1915, it was seen at a glance that but an infinitesimal chance remained that the total wheat production of the United States in 1917 would even fairly come up to our own normal requirements for consumption and seed—about 640,000,000 bushels—to say nothing of leaving an exportable surplus of proportions commensurate with the requirements of our allies in Europe.

"The first outstanding fact, as shown above, is that assuming only normal crops (aside from winter wheat in the United States in 1917 for the food-exporting countries of the Northern Hemisphere and a normal consumption and distribution of the same, our European allies in the great war for democratic civilization have to face so great a shortage of their supply of grain that both their armies and their populations can scarcely hope to avoid the severest privations for more than a year to come and may conceivably have to yield that to hunger which they would never have yielded to the force of arms—a premature and inconclusive peace, WITH NONE OF THE GREAT ENDS OF THE WAR ATTAINED!"

"AND THE FIELDS SHALL YIELD NO MEAT"

"Americans should get along on two meals a day during the war," Carl Vrooman, Assistant United States Secretary of Agriculture, told the members of the Medico-Psychological Association at the Hotel Astor, in a speech in which he made a bitter attack on food speculators and asked the physicians' help to arouse public sentiment that would 'club them into submission.'

"In advocating two meals a day for the duration of the war, Mr. Vrooman said that at that we would be eating twice as much as the Germans get to eat.

" 'There are more than 30,000,000 people in Germany who have had less than one square meal a day for weeks,' he said. 'There is not a country in Europe where the people are on full rations. We can get along very well on two meals a day.'

"Mr. Vrooman asked the heads of institutions present to see that enough food was raised on their farms to feed the inmates. He said that not only was this country called upon to feed itself and the Allies, but that at the end of the war it would be called upon to feed the decimated millions of the Central Powers.

" 'I don't intend to make any statements to you that are exaggerations,' he said, 'because it would be impossible to exaggerate the seriousness of the war and what goes with it. It is America's problem to see that more men do not starve in Europe this year than were killed in the trenches last year. Famine is looking over the sky-line of every European country. If we do not keep starvation away from the capitals of Europe it will not be kept away. Our crops are all that stand between mankind and starvation in the months to come. It is not humanly possible to overstate the seriousness of the food shortage the world is facing today.' "—New York Times.

"THE PRUDENT HIDETH HIMSELF"

From THE WATCH TOWER, Nov. 1, 1914:

Let no one suppose that it will be possible to escape the difficulties and trials of the great time of trouble, whose shadow is now beclouding the earth. The most and the best that could be hoped in this direction would be an amelioration of the conditions by the exercise of that wisdom which cometh from above, described by the Apostle, who says that it is "first pure, then peaceable, easy of entreatment, full of mercy and good fruits." To whatever extent any individual, anywhere, shall follow this prescription of heavenly wisdom, to that extent we may be sure he will have God's favor; and that favor guarantees to the recipient that "all things shall work together for his good."

The most valuable lessons that any parent or counselor can give to those subject to his direction would be, first, the Golden Rule—inculcating absolute justice—nothing less; second, in addition to justice as represented by the Golden Rule, should be the lesson of mercy, compassion, sympathy, the spirit of helpfulness. The third lesson in the series should be meekness, gentleness, patience, long-suffering. The fourth lesson should be economy in everything—avoidance of waste—the realization that what he does not need, some one else does need.

In suggesting the foregoing lessons, we are presupposing a Christian basis—that our readers are themselves children of God, who have been feeding at the Lord's table upon spiritual, heavenly food; and that they have been seeking to bless their families by training them in harmony with God's will.

A PARENT'S BEST HERITAGE TO HIS CHILD

For the dire distress which we see nearing, such character preparation is the best heritage that any parent could leave to his children. Bonds and stocks will be unavailable for food; bank accounts may become uncertain; and the possession of money may become a temptation to the vicious to rob and to murder; but a good character cannot be taken away. Its possession will give a measure of peace, security and confidence in the Lord that is beyond all price.

We recommend that none be urged unduly to make a full consecration of their hearts, their lives, their all, to the Lord and to his service. The lives of God's people should in every case be "living epistles, known and read of all men"—especially by their own families. Those lives should testify not only to the completeness of the consecration to the Lord, but also to the peace, joy and comfort resulting. "Let the peace of God rule in your hearts; and be ye thankful." (Colossians 3:15) Your being a living epistle, without a single word of exhortation, will be powerful in its lessons to all those directly under your influence. Additionally, at a suitable time, it would be proper to intimate to your family, friends and neighbors the comfort and joy, the peace and blessing, which you have received through a full acceptance of the Lord Jesus Christ and the message of his Word, and what a pleasure it would be to you to see your dear ones similarly blessed, comforted and spiritually healed.

It is better, however, that your children and friends should refrain from any profession of consecration to the Lord which would be a mere hypocrisy. There are too many hypocritical professors already. They are doing harm to the cause of Christ as well as harming themselves; for hypocrisy seems to be especially disdained of the Lord, and an insurmountable wall of hindrance to the hypocrite himself. Our influence, therefore, should always be on the side of honesty, not only in matters financial and social, but also, and particularly, in respect to God and religion.

ALSO PROVIDE THINGS HONEST

The Apostle urges God's people to provide for their own—for their own families—their necessities; and he also urges that such provision shall be honestly made—if not honestly, then not at all. Again, he exhorts the Lord's people to "labor with their hands," that they may have to give to others who may be in need. These exhortations are not to be understood as recommendations to lay up earthly treasure—an earthly fortune. The Lord's people are to live in harmony with their faith—to lay up their treasure in heaven. These suggestions, therefore, respecting temporalities are not recommendations to hoard wealth, but merely "to use this world as not abusing it."

In harmony with the heading of this article, and in accordance with our views of the possibilities of the future, we have some recommendations to offer to our readers. While we are not certain that all the dire calamities of the day of the Lord will befall the earth within the next eleven months, nevertheless there seems to be a sufficient possibility of this to warrant us in making certain provisions against the distress of that time—in the interest of our families, our friends and our neighbors.

We recommend to those having clean, dry cellars or other places suitable and well-ventilated, to lay in a good stock of life's necessities; for instance, a large supply of coal, of rice, dried peas, dry beans, rolled oats, wheat, barley, sugar, molasses, fish, etc. Have in mind the keeping qualities and nutritive values of foods—especially the fact that soups are economical and nourishing. Do not be afraid of having too much of such commodities as will keep well until the heat of next summer begins even if it were necessary to sell them at a loss, to prevent spoiling. Think of this hoard to eat, not too selfishly, but as being a provision for any who may be in need, and who in the Lord's providence may come your way—"that you may have to give to those who lack."—Eph. 4:28.

Do not sound a trumpet before you, telling of your provisions, intentions, etc. "Hast thou faith? Have it to thyself before God." Only your own family should know of this storing of food, and they should be under strict injunctions not to tell it to others. At most, suggest to your friends or neighbors the wisdom of keeping a stock of staple foods ahead in view of the possibilities of storms, strikes, etc., during the winter. Do not attempt to go into too great details respecting the time of trouble; for the majority of people are blind and deaf anyway on this subject.

Do not make these purchases on credit if you have not the money. Leave the matter, and exercise the more faith, remembering that the Golden Rule is the very lowest standard that can be recognized by the Lord's people, and that it comes in advance of any kind of charity.

EAT CORN AND SAVE MONEY

From the Literary Digest:

One way to reduce the cost of food, according to specialists in the United States Department of Agriculture, is to use more corn-meal. At present prices charged in retail stores, corn-meal costs about half as much per pound as wheat-flour, one-third as much as rolled oats, one-fourth as much as rolled wheat, and about half as much as broken rice. That is, it costs less than any of the other popular cereal foods, yet even the bolted meal usually sold has a food value that compares favorably with that of wheat-flour. Says the author of a recent food-bulletin issued by the Department:

"'The old-fashioned unbolted corn-meal made from the whole grain, which can often be obtained by the farmer who will take his grain to mill, and can often be purchased in shops and markets, contains more of the tissue-building material and has what many consider even a better flavor than the bolted meal, and is much liked for making some forms of corn-bread.

"'Any family, in town or country, can have the best of corn-meal by grinding it at home in a hand grist-mill. The city man can buy corn by the bushel at a grain-store. He can grind it coarse or fine, to suit the taste of the family, and in quantities to last a day or a week, or longer. Most people will agree that this meal containing the germ is very palatable and compares well in this respect with that ordinarily purchased ready ground. Prices of hand-mills of substantial make run from $2.50 to $5. A small mill can be had for as little as $1.50, though this probably would prove too tedious to use, except for small quantities.'

"In this connection, Dr. Arthur W. Smith, a consulting chemist of Baltimore, writes us that he has recently made an exhaustive investigation of the comparative food-value of the products of white corn, and that the results show these products to be much more economical than many of the foods commonly used. He says:

"'The food value of one pound of corn-meal, grits, or hominy, costing three cents, is equal to the food-value of any of the following used foods:

1 pound of wheat flour, costing	$0.06
1 pound rice, costing	.09
1½ pounds of cheese, costing	.60
2¾ pounds of round steak, costing	.80
2 dozen eggs, costing	.90
½ peck of potatoes, costing	.45
6 pints of milk, costing	.30

"'The South knows and appreciates the value of white corn for table use; why not the North, the East, and the West?'"

"THE MEANING OF THE DAY"

One of the most widely known syndicate writers, Dr. Frank Crane, has recently penned something which corresponds so well with what THE WATCH TOWER publications have from Bible chronology and prophecy advanced for about forty years that we append it here. The Lord of the harvest is surely waking up the nations:

"This is the strange day. This is the day of his coming.

"Terrible and strange is his coming; with tramplings of innumerable armies, desolate and salt-sown fields, strewn with corpses; soil-ploughed, crater-furrowed with monstrous shells; the night sky starred and streaked with deadly shrapnel.

"It is the day of judgment. It is the end of the world.

"History has two phases. One, a slow preparation—forces brewing, fires long kindling, waters gathering, electricity generating. The other, a sudden change; at last the barrier falls, the vessel explodes, the electric force leaps out in flash and fury, the dam breaks, the floods roar forth.

"This is the day of accomplishment. The bell has rung. The signal has been given. The titanic potencies accumulating through centuries have come to a head.

"Evolution moves slowly, as a glacier; but at times leaps, as an avalanche.

"This is the extravagant day, the day of melodrama, of the impossible, of miracles and madness.

"The world is drunk with freedom. They are toppling over old thrones, sweeping away ancient dynasties, bursting through venerable creeds, snapping the rusted chains of tradition, smashing impregnable institutions.

"Nature has her own plans. God maketh the wrath of man to praise him. What began as a quarrel between rival nations will end as a triumph for humanity. Out of the clash of kings the people will emerge victorious. Democracy is using the quarrelling autocracies to kill each other.

"Terrible is the day of the Lord and past understanding. Yet his purposes are for the health of the world. After the storm, the ozone-laden sunshine. After the volcanic upheaval, the smiling and fertile continent.

"And after all this destruction—peace, with law. He is trampling the wine press; from the crushed grapes shall flow the sweet wine.

"After this the ships of the world shall sail more safely, the lanes of commerce shall be opened, the barriers between nations weaker, and their bonds stronger. After this shall men work with gladder songs, and women love with less fear.

"Look forward! Look to the end! Look to the golden year!"

A noticeable absence in the Doctor's article is the failure to attribute the crumbling thrones of earth to the presence of earth's new King and the imminence of the time for the establishment of his kingdom, for which the true church has so long and earnestly prayed, "Thy kingdom come!"

WHOM DO WE SERVE?

As we advance into this time of "distress of nations" (Luke 21:25), the wiles of the devil will be more and more exerted through every device of his cunning to befog and entrap the awakening masses of the world.

We are admonished that "there is a time for every purpose under heaven" (Ecclesiastes 3:1-8); and from the signs of the times we know that God is judging the nations (Psalm 82:8), gathering them into "the Valley of Jehoshaphat" to execute retribution upon them for their wickedness, manifested in misrule and oppression. (Joel 3:2, 12, 13; Jeremiah 25:15-29) These conditions are of man, under the machinations of the arch-enemy—Satan. Forseeing the issue in the permission of evil, God designed to permit this time of war, "the day of vengeance of our God" (Isaiah 61:2), that its fruitage, as a great object lesson, should help to demonstrate the exceeding evil of evil, the exceeding sinfulness of sin—sin in its full fruition. "The harvest is ripe."—Joel 3:13.

In the arrangement for the delivery of President Wilson's war message, one of the most notable electrical displays was entitled, "Jesus, The Light of the World," thus by implication proclaiming that this nation was going forth in its mission under the authority of the Prince of Peace—a claim which every one of the warring nations has made. It is true that the position of this country is unique. It is standing squarely on international law and believes it is fighting for the maintenance of justice and liberty. Truly a noble purpose! But the Prince of Peace, while upholding the law of justice, taught and exemplified another law for himself and his followers; i. e., the law of love, in which by laying down his life, "the Just for the unjust," he satisfies the claims of divine justice against condemned man, and brings life and immortality to light, "leaving us an example that we should follow in his steps."—1 Peter 2:21.

OUR LORD'S INSTRUCTIONS TO HIS FOLLOWERS

When in judgment before Pilate our Lord was asked about his kingdom, he specifically stated, "My kingdom is not of this world [order]; if my kingdom were of this world [order], then would my servants fight" with the weapons of carnal warfare. (John 18:36) The Apostle Paul, truly taught of the Master, elaborates the teaching still further saying, "Though we walk in the flesh we do not war after the flesh; for the weapons of our warfare are not carnal [fleshly], but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds; casting down imaginations and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ."—2 Corinthians 10:4, 5.

Recognizing our Lord Jesus' word as not his own, but that of the heavenly Father, we recall that he taught positively that neither he nor his faithful church was to resist by force the injurious person; and in fidelity to his teaching he laid down his own life, and thus emphasized—proved—his statement that "the Son of Man is come not to destroy men's lives, but to save them." (Luke 9:56) The servant is not greater than his Master; and "as he was, so are we in this world." (1 John 4:17) This being true of the individual, it is perforce true of any association of individuals in his name. If therefore this were a nation of obedient followers of Jesus, it would be—as it claims to be—a Christian nation. If as a nation it is not obedient to this fundamental doctrine, can it rightfully claim to be a Christian nation?

"Well," one says, "if we were a Christian nation, should we unresistingly endure all that has been put on us? If so, this war-mad nation buffeting us would destroy us!" True, provided God himself in his own power and way did not protect. In his protection of the Jewish nation under the law dispensation, when faithful, we see his protecting power exemplified. Again, it was demonstrated in Jesus' experience; for when his enemies would destroy him, he could go out from their midst unarmed, and this repeatedly, under divine protection, until "his time was come." And "when his time was come," he suffered willingly.

A DEVICE OF THE ADVERSARY

As our Lord was taken up into an exceedingly high mountain and shown the kingdoms of the world and their glory, and was offered them by Satan—who was permitted dominion for a predetermined time—so now as his lease expires, and he is being dethroned, he seems to be taking apostate Christianity into a high mountain and showing them the kingdoms of the world, and a prospective glory, if they will worship him. And they are accepting the terms and worshiping him as they cause their sons and their daughters to go through the awful fire of this most demoniacal war. It is a cunning device, and belongs among the things that will deceive, if possible, the very elect.—Matthew 24:24.

We are reminded that the Master spake a parable of this time, saying, "Strait is the gate and narrow the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it. Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves. Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit. Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down and cast into the fire. Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them. Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity.

"Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which build his house upon a rock; and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not; for it was founded upon a rock. And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand; and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell: and great was the fall of it."—Matthew 7:13-27.

GOVERNMENT RECOGNIZES OUR ASSOCIATION

The appended correspondence between this office and the War Department in Washington, D. C., is self-explanatory. We believe it will be read with interest by our many friends. We call attention especially to paragraph No. 4 of the Official Bulletin of the War Department which states that members of religious bodies which were organized and existing on May 18th, and whose religious convictions are against war or participating therein, according to the principles of said organization, cannot be compelled to serve in any of the military forces. The War Department has on file a statement from our Association showing it has been a recognized religious Association for more than thirty years. We publish the correspondence, together with the Bulletin for the benefit of our readers:

OUR LETTER

June 15, 1917

GEN. E. H. CROWDER, Provost Marshal,
Office of Provost Marshal General,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIRS:—

On the 24th of May, 1917, we filed with you a statement of the INTERNATIONAL BIBLE STUDENTS ASSOCIATION, which is a religious organization, setting forth the reasons why such Association comes within the purview of the Selective Draft Act with reference to exemption. We understand that the question of exemption will, of course, be determined by courts constituted by the President for that purpose, in due time.

The County Clerk of one County has made statements to some of our members that his office has received from the Government a list of such religious organizations as would be recognized, and that the Government had not recognized the INTERNATIONAL BIBLE STUDENTS ASSOCIATION; and this statement is disturbing some of our people.

We will thank you to kindly write us concerning this matter, so that we may be able to set at rest the minds of many who are disturbed and to assure them that in due time the Government will consider their application for exemption along with any others claiming exemption because their religious belief or teaching forbids them to engage in war, as provided by law. An early reply hereto will be very much appreciated.

Very respectfully yours,

INTERNATIONAL BIBLE STUDENTS ASSOCIATION.

PROVOST MARSHAL'S REPLY

June 19, 1917

International Bible Students Assn.,
Brooklyn, N. Y.

DEAR SIRS:—

Receipt is acknowledged of your letter of June 15th.

For your information I enclose herewith bulletin No. 1, which covers the subject of your inquiry.

By direction of GENERAL CROWDER:

D. L. ROSCOE, Captain of Cavalry, U. S. A.

WAR DEPARTMENT
Office of Provost Marshal General
Washington

BULLETIN

Concerning Exemptions, Exclusions and Discharges

1. From the lists of persons registered on June 5th, names will, on a day to be announced later, be drawn by lot by the fairest system that can be devised. Persons whose names are drawn, and other persons interested, will be given an opportunity to present claims for exemption, exclusion or discharge from the draft and to support such claims by evidence.

2. The determination of whether a particular claim for exemption, exclusion or discharge shall be granted, will be made by boards to be appointed by the President. These boards will function under the law and under regulations prescribed by the President. Regulations governing the determination of exemptions, exclusions and discharges will, when promulgated, be made available to all concerned at the offices of the local and District Boards. Until such regulations have been promulgated further information cannot be given, as it might later prove misleading; and even after the regulations have been made public, decisions concerning exemptions, exclusions or discharges in individual cases cannot be made by this office, since the law provides that all such cases shall be heard and determined by the Boards to be established for that purpose. The President's Regulations, for the execution of the draft, will be given to the public as soon as possible.

3. The law provides for the exemption from draft, of persons in the military and naval service of the United States, of officers of the legislative, executive, or judicial departments of the United States and of the several States, Territories and District of Columbia; of regular or duly ordained ministers of religion and students who on May 18th were preparing for the ministry in recognized theological or divinity schools, of aliens and of subjects of Germany whether they have or have not taken out their first papers.

4. Persons who are members of well-recognized religious sects or organizations, organized and existing on May 18th, and whose creed at that time, forbade its members to participate in war in any form, and whose religious convictions are against war or participation therein in accordance with the creed or principles of said religious organizations, cannot be compelled to serve in any of the military forces created by the Selective Service Act of May 18th, but no such person shall be exempted from any service which the President may declare to be non-combatant.

5-a. The President is authorized to exclude or discharge from the selective draft, or to draft for partial military service only, persons of the following classes: County and municipal officials; customhouse clerks; persons employed by the United States in the transmission of the mails; artificers and workmen employed in the armories, arsenals and navy yards of the United States and such other persons employed in the service of the United States as the President may designate; pilots; mariners actually employed in the sea service of any citizen or merchant within the United States; those in a status with respect to persons dependent upon them for support which renders their exclusion or discharge advisable; and those found to be physically or morally deficient;

(b) Also, persons engaged in industries, including agriculture, found to be necessary to the maintenance of the Military Establishment or the effective operation of the Military forces or the maintenance of national interest during the emergency.

6. No exemption or exclusion shall continue when a cause therefore no longer exists.

7. Whether or not any class or any individual, falls within the meaning of any of the above enumerated provisions, is a question of fact and must, in order to constitute a proper claim for exemption, be proved and established before the boards to be appointed by the President for the purpose of passing upon all such claims.

8. There will be one board in each county or, in large cities, one for each 30,000 inhabitants. These boards will hear and determine, subject to review by District Boards, all questions of exemptions except those coming under Par. 5-b above. Those coming under the provision of that paragraph must be determined by District Boards, one of which will be appointed by the President for each Federal District. These District Boards, in addition to having original jurisdiction over the classes falling under Par. 5-b, shall also on appeal, have the power to affirm, modify or reverse any decision of any local board, and the decision of such District Boards will be final, except that the President may affirm, modify or reverse such decision under such rules and regulations as the President may prescribe.

E. H. CROWDER, Provost Marshal General.

"FAITHFUL UNTO DEATH"

"'Faithful unto death!' Lord, day by day,
Help me thus to keep the narrow way!
Strengthen me to bear the scorn and shame—
Portion of all those who take thy name.
'Faithful unto death!' When all is done,
Cross is changed to crown, the victory won,
Let me hear thee say, O, blessed Lord,
'Child, come enter into thy reward!
Faithful thou hast been, come share with me
Glory, honor, immortality!'"

SOME LETTERS OF INTEREST

"MUCH DIVERSIFIED WISDOM OF GOD"

DEAR BRETHREN:—

Greetings and much love in Christ! My former studies in connection with light and optics have enabled me to appreciate so much Brother Russell's valued remarks in regard to the colors of the "Tabernacle in the Wilderness," and especially those found in the garments of the high priest.

How appropriate that the sun is a symbol of the divine Creator, seeing that the sun is the source of light, warmth and color, and God the source of life, love and grace! (Malachi 4:2; John 8:12; 1 John 1:5) It is generally known among optical students that sunlight is vibration of that elastic, subtle medium pervading space and termed ether. These vibrations are due to the disturbing influence of the sun, which affects the ether just as a stone dropped into a pool of water sets up circular ripples therein.

It is interesting to note that just as love is the sum of all the divine graces, so white sunlight is the sum of all the known varied hues; for the prismatic effect of rain, which produces the bow, tells this story of a complication of colors derived from sunlight.

Moreover, it is the same white light that falls on every object perceived by the eye, and yet in what exquisite variety of shades is the light reflected! This is due to the intrinsic property of the material upon which the light falls, which absorbs certain vibratory wave-lengths, responsible for color, and reflects others.

There is a beautiful harmony found in the scientific and Scriptural viewpoint of all this; for instance, note how unselfishly white objects will reflect the purity of the sunlight, and how it is written that white raiment is reserved for those who will most unselfishly reflect divine grace and truth.—2 Chronicles 5:12; Revelation 3:4, 5; 19:8.

We note, too, in vivid contrast how black objects will practically absorb all white light. They destroy every beauteous ray from the sun, so that darkness and blackness are apparent; and so, too, for all who will not reflect divine grace and truth is reserved blackness and darkness forever. (Jude 13; 2 Peter 2:17) The wearing of black mourning apparel tells the sad story of a "light" gone from a home. Hence black is synonymous with death. Other Scriptures are harmonious with the thought.—Canticles 1:5, 6; Isaiah 50:3.

Scarlet reminds one of shed blood, the penalty of sin, and is a symbol of the precious blood of our dear Redeemer, who took the sinner's place. The saving and cleansing power symbolized by this color permeates throughout Scripture.—Ex. 12:13; Lev. 14:51, 52; Josh. 2:18-20; Isa. 1:18; 1 John 1:7.

Blue implies faith. The very heavens cast this beautiful color into the eyes of all observers, and that while they reflect on the importance of a faithful law-giver. The necessity of maintaining full control of the stellar system is evidenced when we are told that the system containing more than a thousand million suns with their satellites is traveling at about twelve miles a second through space, and yet order and harmony are so accurate that positions and eclipses may be gauged thousands of years apart with perfect accuracy.

"Thy faithfulness," says the Psalmist, "shall thou establish in the very heavens."

The sign of blue as representing faith is general; for we remember the Blue Ribbon League and the street guardians clothed in blue and the Scriptural testimony including the blue robe of the ephod.—Psalm 89:1,2; Num. 15:38; Isa. 54:11.

It is interesting to note how this color tells in such plain language that none should be a king unless he prove faithful unto the shedding of blood, or death.

In history, purple has been a sign of royalty, and mention is made of this fact so far back as the time of Israel's judges.—Judges 8:26.

Purple is a compound of blue and red, blue implying faithfulness, and this, together with red, implying faithfulness even unto death.

It is remarkable that it was just at the appropriate time, when Jesus had practically demonstrated his worthiness of the kingly title, that he was arrayed in this regal-colored apparel, even though through the scornful mockery of base men.—Mark 15:9-20.

Gold seems a very fitting symbol of divinity. It is wonderfully malleable—one ounce of beaten gold covering the area of 1466 square feet, thus portraying how divine glory may spread throughout the universe. Further, of all metals, it is most like the sun in appearance, and the sun has light within itself and can impart the same without apparent exhaustion, and so, too, the divine nature with its inherent life.—Lamentations 4:1, 2; Psalm 45:9, 13; Exodus 25:10, 11.

Green, being like fresh vegetation, tells its own story in Scripture.—Psalm 23:2; Luke 23:31; Revelation 8:7.

Where many colors are manifest there is portrayed the manifold glory of sunlight, from which all the colors are derived, and herein lies the appropriateness of the Scriptural symbol generally portrayed by the rainbow; for just as in the latter beautiful elementary colors are seen by the natural vision, so by the eyes of understanding the graces divine are manifest as we gaze and reflect upon the covenants.—Genesis 9:11-17; Ezekiel 1:28; Rev. 4:3; Ezekiel 28:13; Isaiah 54:11.

It was upon the reflection of this latter thought that I felt impressed with Brother Russell's statements in regard to the ephod and its jeweled breastplate; for he says that the ephod represented the Abrahamic and the New Covenant. Truly, as we meditate on the meaning of each of its five colors, and see how they twine about, it must be so, for the covenants in question very particularly manifest the manifold glory of God, which will be revealed to all mankind in due time.

This had led me, dear Brethren, to alter a few words here and there of the beautiful poem found in the DIVINE PLAN OF THE AGES, and illuminating the thought just given:

Loveliest to the fairest eyes,
Grand the mystic ephod lies;
Soft and smooth and glory shedding,
As if made for angels' treading—
Wondrous tintings, touching ever,
White and blue and these together
With purple, red and shining gold:
In God's own Word it all is told.
Every color has its meaning
(Deeper thoughts from deeper gleaning),
And illumined—what a riddle—
By the gems that deck the middle!

There is a truth—though some reject it—
That its light is all reflected,
That the ephod's hues are given
By the sun that shines in heaven;
And 'tis thought—by saints believing—
That great God himself is weaving,
Bringing out the world's dark history,
To the light of truth—its mystery;
And as works of men diminish,
Comes the grand and glorious finish,
When begin the Golden Ages,
Long foretold by seers and sages.

With much love in our dear Redeemer,
Your Brother, rejoicing in the glorious hope, through divine favor, FREDERICK LARDENT.—England.

SWEDISH—NORWEGIAN—DANISH—FINNISH REPORT

DEAR BRETHREN:—

It is herewith my privilege to send you the usual financial report for the last quarter and at the same time to be able to add that the harvest work continues to make very good progress here. Our present prospects are still better.

During the past three months, Nov., 1916, to Jan., 1917, the Orebro office has sent out more than 12,000 copies of the STUDIES and about 3,000 other books, DRAMA SCENARIOS, MANNAS, etc. In that same period of time we have received 2,034 subscriptions to the Swedish WATCH TOWER, and 2,724 letters and cards. The letters and cards sent out amount to 2,481, and the total number of sendings (by mail and by railroad) from this office is 18,658. The number of meetings held under its direction was 427, and the number of kilometers traveled in its service, 29,340. It may be of interest to you to know that I had four meetings in Stockholm yesterday, amongst which was one baptismal service, in which 10 brethren and 9 sisters (all belonging to the class in Stockholm), symbolized their consecration. At the beginning of this year (Dec. 30, 31 and Jan. 1), we had a splendid and very well attended convention in Gothenburgh. This week I am going to Norway, in order, D. V., to give some more "push" to the SOCIETY'S work there, by some necessary changes and improvements in the Christiania office, etc.

From that (the Norwegian) office I am able to give you the following report, or figures, for Nov. 1 to Jan. 31: STUDIES sent out, 1,245; other books, MANNAS, DRAMA, SCENARIOS, etc., 1,187; letters received, 96; letters sent out, 58. Expenditures, kr. 874:18; receipts, kr. 851:15.

The Danish office has during this same quarter sent out 2,333 copies of the STUDIES and 881 other books, MANNAS, etc. Its income during the time was kr. 5,185: 58, and its expenditures kr. 5,436: 90. It has amongst other meetings during the quarter also given 73 DRAMA presentations at different places in Denmark and attended by 23,395 people.

The Finnish report for the quarter (Oct. 15 to Jan 15) shows the following figures: STUDIES sent out, 1,472; other books and booklets, 1,582; letters and cards sent out, 1,285; letters and cards received, 276; subscriptions to the Finnish TOWER, 477; meetings held, 109; kilometers traveled in preaching tours, 10,360; receipts, Fmrk. 7,872: 93; expenditures, Fmrk. 5,166: 07.

We continue the printing of the Dano-Norwegian STUDIES and pamphlets and tracts here in Orebro as rapidly as possible. By the Lord's grace I hope that our next quarterly report will show you a not insignificant increase above this one.

Assuring you of our deep appreciation of the great privilege of being your (and the Lord's) colaborers, and asking you to kindly accept our heartiest greetings and love in Christ, I remain as ever,

Yours in our dear Redeemer's blessed name and service,
AUGUST LUNDBORG.—Sweden.

NOT ASHAMED OF THE TRUTH

DEAR DOCTOR:—

Your kind letter we have received. To say that it did not cost us a severe pang of sorrow to think of severing our connection with the Central Church, would be to say what is untrue; but when it comes to a matter of conscience, there is One above and beyond all others to whom we owe first allegiance. "Lovest thou me more than these?" applies to all sincere and consecrated followers of Jesus.

I doubt whether you fully realize with what implicit faith I received the interpretation of our "orthodox" preachers as to the meaning of the Greek text. I verily believe that they were giving us the full benefit of the true meaning. Instead, I find upon personal inquiry, after learning through Pastor Russell's clear interpretation, that the Bible does not teach, for instance, the doctrine of eternal torment, which the ministers have to admit. Now the truth is that eternal torment is publicly preached and privately denied. I for one cannot conscientiously stand for this. Do they not realize in permitting the world to think they stand for this devilish doctrine that they are defaming God's character? I have always had to keep this doctrine behind my back, as it were, in order not to go too deep in questioning God's love and mercy. Think of the many who have not only questioned, but have given up all faith and trust in a God whom they were taught could inflict such punishment upon humanity! I do not think, dear Dr. ————, that our ministers realize how fully the common people trusted! I now have the Greek Testament and see for myself that the true meaning is not eternal torment, but is the aionian cutting off (Matt. 25:46), as of a branch cut off, this being in the second death—everlasting destruction.

Then there is the great doctrine of restitution, which I certainly never was taught in either of the Baptist churches with which I was affiliated, and yet this is clearly taught by the apostles. And, oh, what a wonderful, glorious doctrine it is! How clearly we can understand in this light why God has been selecting a "little flock" in this Gospel age, of consecrated believers, to be the bride of Christ, who with him are to reign for the thousand years on the spirit plane. All humanity, those brought forth from their graves as well as those who shall be on the earth when he begins his glorious reign, shall have an opportunity to be raised to a perfect, human condition, those not accepting this great offer of mercy being cut off in the second death.

How beautifully clear and Scriptural it all is to me now! In view of all that I now see clearly, and which I fully believe, I cannot remain in a church which would prevent my expressing these views. I should be looked upon as a heretic. I also believe that there should be no division in the church; it should be one body of consecrated believers—Christ being the Head, and the little groups being the congregations; as we read in the Greek; the congregation at Corinth, Philippi, etc.

Mr. A—— and I are therefore identifying ourselves with these followers of Christ, who we believe are more nearly keeping to the simple form our Savior instituted. You remember, Dr. ———, there was no recorded membership in the early church—take instance after instance in the book of the Acts, and there is no word of such an arrangement; there was only a bond between Christ and the believer. I believe out of a recorded membership many evils grow.

We meet Sunday morning and evening for worship and have the mid-week prayer and testimony meeting, so surely we are not neglected.

You mentioned in conversation with me that Pastor Russell teaches that Christ is a created being. Yes, do not the Scriptures so teach? For instance, Rev. 3:14, which says that he was "the beginning of the creation of God"?

Now as to the last matter mentioned. You will recall, perhaps, that my reason for leaving the People's Church was the disreputable character of the minister. Leaving there almost cost me the loss of my class of young men, of whom, as you know, I was extremely fond, yet I could not stand for this. You may rest assured, therefore, that Mr. A——— and I have been and are fully convinced, after a very careful investigation of all the evil things that have been brought against Pastor Russell, that these accusations are wholly false. If one will take the trouble and time to inquire into many of the evil reports one hears of others, he will as a rule find them to be untrue. You remember our Savior's words: "Woe unto you when all men speak well of you!" "If any man will live godly in this life he shall suffer persecution." "If they have called the Master of the house Beelzebub, how much more shall they call them of his household!"

It is my sincere desire that with an unprejudiced mind you may look into this matter for yourself, letting God's Spirit guide you into all truth. With sincere appreciation of your kind offer of friendship for us both, I am

Yours sincerely, ———.

HARVESTING IN MEXICO

DEAR BRETHREN:—

In sending you this letter, I desire to tell you of my joy in the precious message which brought light to my mind—this precious light which has come to awaken us out of the sleep in which we were, to recognize the presence of the Great Anointed of Jehovah, who will be the King, both of the living and of those sleeping in the tomb.

This message has completely changed my plans. I was thinking of studying medicine; but since I have come to know of the glorious work of our Head and his glorious body during the Millennium, already begun, I have changed from medicine such as men teach, to the great plan of God.

I came here to this place with the object of presenting the glad tidings to the Indians who live here. Yesterday I gave them an explanation of the plan of the ages, with a chart given to me by Brother Moreyra, of San Antonio, Texas. After the talk, I distributed copies of the BIBLE STUDENTS' MONTHLY, and took a note of those who wished to have books on the DIVINE PLAN and the SCENARIOS. These persons already number fifteen.

In the evening I celebrated the Memorial Supper of our Lord, in which several brethren took part. May the Lord give me more of his spirit, that I may be faithful to my vow, renewed on partaking of the symbols of his body and his blood, offered for our benefit.

This morning, I gave another explanation of the divine plan, the brethren having been very desirous of hearing it. On concluding, I distributed more B. S. M.'s. In these places, as in many others in Mexico, the sickle of the Lord has not yet been put in for the ingathering of the wheat, which is scattered in many places. I thank the Lord for this grand blessing granted me of participation in the work of the harvest. Truly, "the harvest is great, but the laborers are few!"

I am in expectation of receiving literature for which I asked Brother Montero of Los Angeles, to distribute at once.

I beg that you will be so good as to send me a copy of the second edition of the Memorial number of THE WATCH TOWER of the pilgrimage here of our dear brother, Pastor Russell, whom I had not the pleasure of knowing in this life, but whom I hope to see, by the grace of God, in the glorious kingdom of our Savior Jesus Christ. For the moment, I want to know more of his character, so full of zeal for our Redeemer and the brethren, and of his ardent zeal in the upholding of the truth at all costs. The portion of his life which he left in the STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES has been for me a powerful influence. All we who love him rejoice to know that he is already participating in the joy of our Lord.

With Christian love, and praying the Father of mercies that he may bless you richly in the precious work that is in your hands,

Your brother in the Lord, ABEL ORTEGA.—Mexico.

FAITH IN GOD VS. FAITH IN CHRISTENDOM

DEAR BRETHREN:—

We are taking this opportunity of conveying our love to you in the Lord. We almost feel as if we were intruding on your time in writing you; but as no reply is expected, it would perhaps be a little relaxation for you to know how we are getting along over here. Our great thanks go out to Almighty God for his great goodness in permitting us to bask in the light of his glorious revelation as contained in the divine Word, when many others are in darkness. We realize that every good and perfect gift cometh from the Father, and rejoice that Pastor Russell has been favored above so many to unfold to the household of faith the things both new and old from the divine storehouse.

We are truly living "in the days of the Son of Man," and we in this country are receiving at the present time many evidences of the establishment of the kingdom, and that the adversary has but a short time in power. We would like you to know that our faith in God, in spite of the dark clouds on the world, is increasing in contrast to the faith in Christendom, which is almost at vanishing point.

The classes in Liverpool and district are, we consider, in a healthy condition, and all the dear brethren are eager to coöperate in the harvest work. We have had a number of productions of the PHOTO-DRAMA here and in this vicinity, and with the "follow-up" meetings our time has been very well occupied. The seating accommodation at our Sunday meeting-place in the city is limited and prevents us from having as large attendance as we would like. Our efforts to get another place have been unsuccessful.

We are now every second or third month having what we call "home gatherings," when all the brethren in the suburbs, etc., join in a combine meeting. On the last occasion we had the use of the Deutsche Church (it not being in use on account of so many being interned), and we had an attendance of about 300. We have, regularly, afternoon and evening meetings every Sunday in five places in the district, and seventeen week-night meetings. Then we have also calls upon us for "follow-up" meetings in districts beyond our own.

Last year we had a convention under the auspices of the Society, resulting in a most uplifting time for all. We would like another if we can induce the London friends to move; and we are still hopeful that we may succeed. There are, of course, no excursion fares here since the outbreak of the war, but everybody is employed, and money is being spent freely. We have a nice number of young men in our meetings; and as you know, they are under a severe test just now. I am pleased to say that their faith in him to whom they have consecrated themselves is unwavering, and they are prepared to show their loyalty to the Lord even unto death, and despite all the pressure that may be brought to bear upon them by the powers that were. We think that the British thinking people are being sobered by this war now. Of course, we know that we are the Lord's peculiar care, and that no evil can befall us, everything being of his permission.

And now, with much love in the Lord from Sister McCloy, myself and all our household, I remain

Your fellow-servant in the Lord,

THOMSON MCCLOY.—England.

TRUTH STANDS MAJESTIC AS THE CLIFFS

DEARLY BELOVED IN CHRIST:—

I received your kind letter telling me of Pastor Russell's death. He rests from his labors and his works do follow. How true this is of him! My daily prayer before the throne of grace is that we may be strong enough to carry out the noble work he has left us to do. We should endeavor to grow stronger all the while; for it does seem as if the blessed Master thought we were able to carry on this grand work now which was so well done by our dear, faithful Pastor.

How many times daily do I thank our dear Master for sending us such a teacher as our beloved Pastor was! We will certainly miss him, although it had never been my pleasure to meet him. I always looked forward to having the pleasure of doing so sometime.

We are very isolated here—no one of like precious faith. They will not even let one of the pilgrims speak here. It makes life almost unbearable. My daughter is such a good Bible student and longs to get near some class. I am trying to teach the truth to all my little ones, and we have our music in our home every eve. Pray for me, for it is a great undertaking it guide these little feet alone. I have been a widow for three years and I need your prayers, and be assured you have mine daily.

Let us go on with this grand work until, like our Pastor, we hear the sweet words, "Well done." May we be just as well prepared as he was, and I feel all will go well for us. I am always so glad to hear from the Bethel Home.

Please pardon me for taking so much of your time, but I feel as if I must tell you a little of my life experiences, and how I came into present truth. It was just a short time before my husband's death—about a week, I suppose. We were in the South for my husband's health, when one day a book agent came to my house. I would not talk to him at first, but I saw the title "WATCH TOWER" on a paper in his pocket, and immediately became interested, because several years before I had seen and read some of them, but could never get any more.

We bought the books and my husband would have me read to him from them. He did not live more than one week afterwards. So I have found a great deal of comfort from the books. The man who sold to me was a dear, good pilgrim. He came back to our house when he heard of my husband's death, and gave a lecture, and I found more relief from the sweet, simple story, the way he told it, than ever before; and I have been tried as by fire since coming into the light. But the truth stands out as majestically as the cliffs along the shore that are lashed by the waves. When the furious storms abate, the cliffs are there just the same. So it is with me; when my people and my friends turn me down, the truth stands there just as plain as ever, and I can say, "Why can they not see, too?" Oh, what a joy to know that I have come from darkness into day! God bless you and keep you all, is the prayer of

Your humble servant, MRS. ANNA BROCKWELL.—Mo.

OUR "BLESSED HOPE"

"Waiting for that blessed hope, even the appearing of the glory of our great God and Savior Jesus Christ."—Titus 2:13.—Diaglott.

St. Paul here speaks the sentiment of his own heart and that of every truly consecrated child of God who is waiting for the full consummation of his hope and for the appearing of the Lord Jesus Christ, that he might be with him forever in glory. Hope and faith are inseparably allied, for there can be no real hope without a well-grounded faith.

Hope means a keen desire for a good thing, with the expectation of receiving that thing, and with the belief that when received it will afford great joy and pleasure. We do not hope for a thing which we do not wish, but for that which we greatly desire. There must be, however, a sound basis for that hope; for without some sure foundation upon which to build there could be no continuing, abiding hope of receiving the good thing.

What is it that all intelligent creatures most desire? All will answer, "Life everlasting in a state of perfect happiness." Yet there might be a strong desire for life, and no hope whatever of receiving it. But in due time all will have an opportunity to obtain life everlasting.

THE HOPE SET BEFORE THE CHRISTIAN

For what great thing, then, do we now as children of God hope? What do we expect to receive? And to what are we looking forward with rejoicing? Is it that we might wield a golden sceptre and exercise power over others? No; for that would be selfish ambition. Is it that we might be like unto the angels? No; for we are not called to that position. Or that we might get away from this earth and thus see greater things than others of God's human creatures see? Could any such hope inspire with zeal and love and willingness to sacrifice everything else to obtain it? Without the one great thing for which we really hope, all other things would fail of accomplishment.

Standing as we are today in the very last hours of the Gospel age—a fearful and wonderful time in which to live—and looking back over the way we have traveled, we as children of God do well now to pause and with sobriety of mind ask, Why do we find ourselves in our present position? Behind us we have left earthly homes, earthly friends, earthly hopes and prospects, earthly ambitions and desires. What is the reason? With one accord we answer, Because of the blessed hope that is set before us. And what is this hope? It is that we might have life everlasting on the divine plane; that we might see and be like Jesus, who redeemed us from death and called us out of darkness into the glorious light; and that we might behold Jehovah in his grandeur, receive his loving smile and hear his words of approval.

If we have such a hope as this, there must be good reason for it. How could imperfect creatures such as we dare have so wonderful a hope? It is not because there is merit in us deserving of such great favor, but because God in his loving-kindness has made provision that we might have this wonderful blessing, because he has promised it to those who exercise faith in his great arrangement and who strive with joyful hearts to obey his rule and comply with the terms that lead to a consummation of such a hope. Therefore the basis for that hope is faith in the exceeding great and precious promises of God.

The Apostle Paul advises us that "faith is the basis of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." There might be a hope based upon vague and uncertain testimony, but such a hope would not bring joy; for it would not bring full assurance of receiving that for which we hoped. Hence the importance of seeing that our hope has a sure foundation. Many who claim to be Christians say, "We hope to go to heaven"; yet they are filled with fear and superstition. They have no desire for the second coming of the Lord and his glorious revealment. They do not possess that blessed hope which yearns for the coming of the day when they shall see him face to face. The reason for this is that what hope they have is based upon credulity, and not upon faith.

A hope that is based upon credulity merely has the word or opinion of another as to what the future holds. A hope that is based upon faith has the unimpeachable promise of the everlasting God that the things for which the Christian hopes are absolutely certain if he continues faithful unto the end.

BEGINNING OF OUR HOPE

Since no one can have hope without faith, so none can have faith without knowledge. "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God." It therefore follows that the one who knows not of God cannot have the blessed hope mentioned by St. Paul in our text. The Apostle points out our original condition, and then shows us how we are led to this blessed hope. "Wherefore, remember that ye being in time past Gentiles in the flesh, who are called uncircumcision by that which is called the circumcision in the flesh made by hands, that at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world; but now in Christ Jesus ye who sometime were afar off are made nigh by the blood of Christ."—Ephesians 2:11-13.

The hope of the Christian is progressive. First he has the desire to live everlastingly. He hears the words of Jesus, saying, "I am the Way, the Truth and the Life; no man cometh unto the Father but by me" (John 14:6); and, "This is life everlasting, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." (John 17:3) This knowledge gained from the Word inspires a hope that he might attain unto this life.

The hope of many is that they may escape eternal torment. Such is not the Christian's hope. That could not be a hope attended with joy such as is contemplated by the text. Having now gained some knowledge of the way leading to life, such an one begins to progress in hope; and to him the Apostle says, "This is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life." (1 John 2:25) Thus the searcher for truth sees that eternal life is promised to some. He may ask, Why do not all have life everlasting? The Scriptures answer, Because death—the absence of life—is the penalty for sin; our first parent brought this penalty upon us by disobedience; and by inheritance we are all now imperfect. Our present hope is inspired by the fact that Jehovah, through Christ Jesus, has made provision for the satisfaction of that one offense of Father Adam's. "For if by one man's offense death reigned by one, much more they which receive abundance of grace and of the gift of righteousness shall reign in life by one, Jesus Christ. Therefore, as by the offense of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation, even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life."—Rom. 5:17, 18.

SUCH A HOPE DEPENDENT UPON CONDITIONS

While Jehovah has made provision that all who are obedient to his law may live everlastingly upon some plane, yet he has set this blessed hope before a limited number and has made it dependent upon their compliance with certain conditions. What are the conditions? We answer: They are (1) Faith in the merit of the precious blood of Jesus; (2) Justification; (3) Spirit-begetting; (4) Sanctification; (5) Transformation; (6) Suffering and tribulation. Ultimately comes the realization of the hope—the receiving of the glory of God. Let us consider these conditions in the order named, to the end that our hope may be strengthened.

FAITH IN JESUS' BLOOD

It has pleased God to arrange that those who may entertain this blessed hope shall base that hope upon the merit of Christ. Every doctrine is to be tested by the ransom-sacrifice. It is the square, the infallible rule, by which we are to measure every doctrine that is presented for our investigation. If we find that any doctrine does not square with the ransom-sacrifice, we may be absolutely certain that such doctrine is false.

The Apostle Paul presents this argument: "Moreover, brethren, I declare unto you the Gospel which I preached unto you, which also ye have received, and wherein ye stand; by which also ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I have preached unto you, unless ye have believed in vain. For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins, according to the Scriptures; and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day, according to the Scriptures; and that he was seen of Cephas, then of the twelve; after that he was seen of above five hundred brethren at once, of whom the greater part remain unto the present time, but some are fallen asleep. After that he was seen of James; then of all of the apostles. And last of all, he was seen of me also, as of one born before the due time." (1 Cor. 15:1-8) Faith in the shed blood of Jesus means a recognition that we are sinners by nature; that Jesus died to save us from our sins; that he rose again and appeared in the presence of God for us. Knowing these facts, and relying on them, we have faith.

JUSTIFICATION FOLLOWS

Justification means to be made right with God. Nothing imperfect is right with God. Before we can be justified, however, some one must stand for us and make up for our deficiencies. After Jesus had ascended on high, he appeared in heaven and presented the merit of his sacrifice on behalf of all who should come to Jehovah through him during the age of sacrifice. (Hebrews 9:24) If we believe and rely upon these facts, and present ourselves in full consecration by surrendering our will to do God's will, our Lord Jesus imputes to us a sufficiency of his merit to make up our deficiencies. Thus we stand before God as perfect human beings, and he counts to us, or imputes to us, righteousness, thereby justifying us.—Romans 4:1-11.

"It is God that justifieth." This justification is granted upon condition that we become a part of the sacrifice of the body of Christ. Therefore our consecration must precede our justification. God now accepts us and begets us by his own spirit to the divine nature. As St. Paul puts it: "Therefore, being justified by faith, we have peace with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ; by whom also we have access by faith into this grace wherein we stand, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God. And not only so, but we glory in tribulations also; knowing that tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience, and experience hope; and hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the holy Spirit which is given unto us."—Romans 5:1-5.

According to St. Peter, all such are begotten to a hope of life through Christ Jesus, "to an inheritance incorruptible [which means the divine nature] and undefiled, reserved in heaven for you, who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time."—1 Peter 1:3-5.

SANCTIFICATION NEXT IN ORDER

Sanctification means to be completely set apart for the purpose of Jehovah, according to his holy will. "This is the will of God [concerning you], even your sanctification." (1 Thess. 4:3) Now, we have left all to follow in the footsteps of the Lord Jesus, obeying the Father's will, saying as did our Master, "Lo, I come to do thy will, O my God!" This setting aside of ourselves to do the Father's will means that now, as new creatures, we shall walk in newness of life while in the flesh, the complete sanctification, or setting aside, being when we have received our glorious new bodies in the first resurrection. But how is this sanctification to be accomplished? The Lord Jesus said, "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy Word is truth."—John 17:17.

THE TRANSFORMATION PROCESS

The transformation is the process of bringing us to full and complete sanctification, preparing us and making us meet for the Master's use in glory. St. Paul exhorts, "Be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove [try—put to the test] what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God." (Romans 12:2) The transformation into the likeness of our Lord is accomplished by feeding upon the Word of God, appropriating it to ourselves, and having our characters developed in harmony with the principles thereof. For this cause the exceeding great and precious promises are given. When we enter the narrow way, we begin to hear the words of the Lord saying to us, "All things heretofore written were for your learning, that ye through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope." (Romans 15:4) And thus we see that our hope increases as we feed upon the blessed Word of promise.

For our benefit the Psalmist has said, "Thou hast seized hold of me by thy right hand; with thy counsel thou wilt guide me, and afterwards take me to glory." (Psalm 73:23, 24—Leeser) Jesus is the right hand of Jehovah here mentioned; his Word by which we are sanctified is his counsel; and thus being led on we shall be received into glory—the full consummation of that blessed hope! Again the Lord through the Psalmist said, "I will instruct thee and teach thee in the way which thou shalt go; I will guide thee with mine eye" (Psalm 32:8) The eye is a symbol of wisdom; and his wisdom is expressed in his Word. Thus by his Word he leads us on to a fuller appreciation of our blessed hope.

Again we read, "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart, and lean not unto thine own understanding; in all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths." (Proverbs 3:5, 6) "And thine ear shall hear a voice behind thee, saying, This is the way, walk ye in it, when ye turn to the left." (Isaiah 30:21) The voice here mentioned is the Word of God, written before we knew of it, before we were born; therefor it is said to be behind us. Thus he assures us again that he will guide us by his Word.

This transformation comes to us gradually, as one beholding the Lord's face in a mirror. St. Paul says, "But we all, with open face, beholding as in a mirror the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the spirit of the Lord."—2 Corinthians 3:18.

TRIBULATION AND SUFFERING NECESSARY

But this wonderful transformation does not come to us with ease and comfort; for, as the Apostle says, "Through much tribulation must we enter the kingdom." (Acts 14:22) "It is a faithful saying: For if we be dead with him, we shall live with him; if we suffer with him, we shall reign with him." (2 Timothy 2:11, 12) We shall experience that blessed hope, "if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end." (Hebrews 3:6) Who would care to enter the kingdom of the Lord amidst ease and comfort when our Lord endured such great suffering on our behalf? Truly the poet has expressed the sentiment that should be in every Christian's heart:

"Must I be borne to Paradise
On flowery beds of ease,
While others fought to win the prize,
And sailed through bloody seas?

"Sure I must fight if I would reign;
Increase my courage, Lord;
I'll bear the toil, endure the pain,
Supported by thy Word."

SOME THINGS THE CHRISTIAN MUST SUFFER

Any suffering that is endured for righteousness' sake may be counted as profitable. Physical suffering often results from faithful service. For instance, the feet of the dear colporteurs grow tired and sore from long journeys and the entire body becomes worn and weary. This suffering results from faithful efforts in trying to deliver the message of God's love to others of the groaning creation. Faithfulness in any branch of the Lord's service brings physical suffering, and one may be said to be laying down life in the cause of the Master when faithfulness in service entails suffering and destroys physical vitality, and energy. But the glorious hope set before the Christian impels him on, and fills his heart with joy when he contemplates the Psalmist's words: "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."—Psa. 116:15.

Sometimes one suffers mental anguish because of his own fault or mistake. The new creature resides in an imperfect earthen vessel and is striving to overcome the weaknesses and besetments of the flesh. Failures result; and there is much suffering of mind, and sometimes the disposition to feel that he has been cast off from the Lord's favor. Hope, however, revives when he calls to mind the precious promises of the Lord: "If any man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Christ Jesus the righteous." "Let us therefore come confidently unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need." (1 John 2:1; Hebrews 4:16) "Blessed are they that mourn; for they shall be comforted."—Matt. 5:4.

Being misunderstood is the cause of much suffering. So it was with the Lord himself. Of him it was written, "I have trodden the wine-press alone, and of the people there were none with me" (Isaiah 63:3)—because they could not understand him. Even so it is with those who are his followers. They are misunderstood by the world, and often misunderstood by the brethren. One may try to do right in the faithful performance of his duty. Being misunderstood by another brother, his motives are impugned. His brother may, therefore, become a conscientious busybody and unwitting persecutor.

Trouble in the homes of the consecrated and in the classes is very frequently the result of a misunderstanding. Such experiences bring fiery trials. The church is now in the midst of experiences of this kind, and many think it strange. St. Peter responds, "Beloved, be not surprised at the fire among you, occurring to you for a trial, as though some strange thing was befalling you; but as you partake of the sufferings of the Anointed One, rejoice; so that at the revelation of his glory you may rejoice exultingly."—1 Peter 4:12, 13.—Diaglott.

Because of the Christian's faithfulness in maintaining his stand for the principles of righteousness, he is persecuted; and such persecution would become unbearable, even overwhelming, except for the blessed hope that is set before him. In the time of keenest suffering he calls to mind the precious words of the Master; "Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake; for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. Rejoice and be exceeding glad; for great is your reward in heaven; for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you."—Matthew 5:10-12.

THE PURPOSE SERVED BY TRIBULATION

Jesus proved his loyalty and obedience to the Father's will by the things which he suffered. "The disciple is not above his master, nor the servant above his Lord. It is enough for the disciple that he be as his master, and the servant as his lord." (Matthew 10:24, 25) The Lord said concerning St. Paul, "For I will show him how great things he must suffer for my name's sake." (Acts 9:16) And so it is with all of the Lord's followers who would continue faithful unto the end. To be counted worthy of suffering implies that there is a glorious prospect in the future, that the Lord has in reservation some great prize. Inspired with such a blessed hope the Apostle wrote, "For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen." (2 Corinthians 4:17, 18) They are the unseen things for which we hope. The Christian possessing such hope of glory rejoices in tribulation, and therefore patiently endures the same.

That our hope may grow brighter, our faith must grow stronger; and to accomplish this, trials, tribulations and tests must come. The Apostle likens our hope to an anchor. A ship tossed by the storm drops its anchor for safety. The anchor would be of no value without a strong line and a solid place in which to fasten the anchor. The anchor therefore represents our hope; the line or cable, represents our faith; and the sure fastening of the anchor is in the exceeding great and precious promises that God gives to assure us of entering into glory. As St. Paul says, "Wherein God, willing more abundantly to show unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath, that by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation, we who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us; which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within the veil." (Hebrews 6:17-19) If our faith is strong in his precious promises, our hope of entering into life everlasting will be strong; and we shall be very desirous of knowing the rules whereby we may enter into the fulness of life and of conforming ourselves to those rules.

WHAT ARE THE REQUIRED RULES?

The Apostle Peter lays down these rules explicitly, saying: "Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises, that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust. And besides this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly-kindness; and to brotherly-kindness love; for if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins. Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure; for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall." (2 Peter 1:4-10) Let us now measure ourselves to see how we are coming up to these rules.

The Revelator says, "And he that talked with me had a golden reed to measure the City." (Revelation 21:15) John, the Revelator, pictured the church. The golden measuring-rod represents the divine truths given to the church, whereby each member may measure himself.

The first of these rules is a strong and abiding faith; and to this the Apostle says add virtue, which means fortitude, the standing firmly upon the precious promises and developing that Christian character which nothing can shake. To this we are to add knowledge, which means a knowledge of the exceeding great and precious promises. Having acquired this knowledge, we must rely completely thereupon; and this constitutes our faith in God's Word. Hence to grow in faith we must grow in knowledge. To these we are admonished to add temperance, meaning self-control, or moderation in all things. And to these we are to add patient endurance, which is one of the crowning attributes of Christian character, and which results after many and severe trials of faith. We must learn to be patient with the babes in Christ, patient with those who are more fully developed, patient with the slow and stupid, patient with the excitable and quick-tempered, patient with the blundering ones, forbearing one another. To forbear means to be patient under provocation. The Lord permits these trials to come to us for the very purpose of developing the quality of patient endurance; and hence we find amongst our number some slow, some stupid, some excitable, many blundering, but all striving for one end, all having the same blessed hope. These light afflictions, which endure but for a short season, serve to polish us and to make brighter the hope set before us, and ultimately lead to glory.

The measuring-rule further requires us to develop godliness, which means a joyful and loving conformity to God's holy will, thereby proving our love for him, thus growing God-like. (1 John 5:3) Furthermore, the rules require the development of brotherly-kindness, which means duty love of the brethren, acquired by putting into operation the Golden Rule. Finally, says the Apostle, we must develop love in its highest form, which means an unselfish desire to do good and the doing of good to others at a sacrifice to ourselves. The putting on of such love leads to perfection.

THE GLORY OF THE LORD

If thus we continue diligently and faithfully to the end, what will be the result? The Apostle says: "For so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." Ah, what a wonderful blessing that will be—to be made in the likeness of our Lord and Master! The attaining of this glorious hope means to receive life everlasting, life inherent—immortality. (1 John 3:2, 3; Colossians 3:3, 4) It means that we shall dwell in the house of the Lord forever and behold his beauty. In all the ages to come the members of the bride class will continue to increase in knowledge. (Psalm 27:4) It means that those who reach this glorious consummation of their hope shall shine forth as the brightness of the sun in the firmament.—Matthew 13:43.

Jesus is head over all things, and those who enter with him into the kingdom shall be joint-heirs with him of the glories and wonders of that kingdom. Concerning these the Prophet of the Lord has said, "Thou shalt be a crown of glory in the hand of the Lord, and a royal diadem in the hand of thy God." (Isaiah 62:3) With Christ Jesus, those who reach the fulness of this hope, shall bless and uplift the human race, shall wipe away all tears and bring joy to every obedient heart. As the poet has aptly said:

"And thou with grace and glory crowned
Mayest lavish blessings all around."

Then, dear brethren, what shall we do? The Apostle answers: "He who hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he [the Lord] is pure." (1 John 3:3) None but the pure in heart can truly and honestly entertain this hope. When we speak of the pure in heart, we are not to be understood as meaning perfect men and perfect women in the flesh, perfect in every word and act and thought; for we have God's Word that there are none such. But we know from his Word that the Lord makes up for our unwilling imperfections. Being thus grounded in the faith, and having set before us this glorious hope, we shall seek to cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of body and mind, perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord.

"But the blessed hope of sharing, Lord,
Thy glory from above
Is linked with that most precious thought—Thine everlasting love."

MY BEST AND TRUEST FRIEND

"How shall I praise thee, Savior dear,
For this new life so sweet,
For taking all the care I laid
At thy beloved feet,
Keeping thy hand upon my heart
To still each anxious beat!

"Oh, thou hast done far more for me
Than I had asked or thought!

What thou, my Lord, hast wrought,
And wonder what glad lessons yet
I shall be daily taught."

THE COLPORTEUR FIELD

"Thrust in thy sickle and reap; for the time is come for thee to reap; for the harvest of the earth is ripe."—Rev. 14:15.

Below we present extracts from a typewritten bulletin issued by the Colporteur Department some time ago, and sent to all the workers in the field. Throughout the Winter over 300 of this noble band of sacrificers have braved both storm and cold, and each month have received a bulletin from headquarters, giving crisp and up-to-date information respecting conditions at home and abroad and containing advice and letters of special interest and comfort. This bulletin has served those afield so well, and proved to be such a blessing, that it has been thought well to continue it throughout the Spring and Summer.

About three years ago there were upwards of a thousand colporteurs at work; but when the world-war broke out and disturbed business in every country for a time, many were obliged like St. Paul of old, to resort to "tent-making" for a time. Now that business improvement is general, and colporteurs afield find wonderful opportunities for placing the message of the kingdom, and report their business good, we would not be surprised to see many of the veterans of this class return to their first love, remembering that "he that reapeth receiveth wages and gathereth fruit unto life eternal." —John 4:36.

"THE HARVEST IS WHITE"

"The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest." (Matthew 9:37, 38) While thus praying, let us each consider his share in the same and see if he cannot increase his efforts in forwarding the message in this, the most wonderful period of the age—when the world is waking up and signs are multiplying on every hand that the overthrow of the present order is fast approaching, to make ready for the new order of a thousand years of peace, to be inaugurated by Messiah's kingdom! Following are the extracts from the colporteur bulletin and a few letters from those afield:

"DEAR FELLOW SERVANTS IN THE LORD:—

"What might be termed the Colporteur's Season begins in the Spring and continues throughout the year until the holidays. During these months the colporteur usually obtains the best results.

"The past year has been a prosperous one in the industrial world, likewise to the colporteur, for the success of the latter is usually proportionate to the success of the former.

"Big business reports that 1917's outlook is not a shade less favorable than was the past year—in fact, promises to eclipse it.

"As has been remarked in the previous monthly letters, increased interest in THE WATCH TOWER publications is found everywhere. An Ontario colporteur writes: 'I find quite a number who bought the books some years ago, and have read them; others are interested with a talk on the coming kingdom. I find many hearing ears.'

"From New York State a colporteur writes: 'It is a common occurrence to meet those who are reading the STUDIES and have sufficient interest to stand for the teachings even to endurance of persecution. The truth is finding its way into the hearts of the truly humble.'

"From Florida we hear: 'I find many who are disposed to give good attention to the message of present truth.'

"A California colporteur writes: 'I find a great many are more anxious than ever to obtain books written by Pastor Russell.'

"From Washington come this: 'Have found many interested ones who have read borrowed volumes or sermons.'

"A Minnesota colporteur advises: 'I notice quite a difference in the attitude toward Brother Russell and his work.'

"A successful Virginia colporteur writes: 'Enclosed find an order for 100 hz (hell towers.) The reason I am ordering so many is that I use them in connection with my canvassing. I put about six in my pocket when I go out to canvass, and sell them for 5c each, or take orders. I have sold a few every trip. I show it only when people fail to order even Vol. I. They will often say, 'I don't believe in hell.' Then I explain what the pamphlet teaches, and they are anxious for it.'

"From Arkansas we hear: 'It is surprising to see how the people take to the SCENARIO—men, women and children. They seem able to comprehend it—the pictures interest them, and the lessons are short and condensed. One young man who had studied evolution was interested in the first lessons in the book on the creation of the earth. He said that he could not believe the earth was created in six twenty-four hour days. Another man told me he had a discussion with an infidel and answered all his objections from the SCENARIO; and now he carries it around with him and settles every argument with it.'

"Another colporteur, ten years in the service, writes from Virginia: 'The past year has been the most blessed and successful of my ten and one-half years of colporteur service, not only in the sale of books, but also in the number of grains of wheat gathered. We have knowledge of several who now are rejoicing in present truth as a result of our recent labors. It has been a very busy year. Often I am out evenings talking to the interested ones; and the present year bids fair to be as busy, if not more so. Many who are interested desire me to call again; and we are doing our best to help them along.'

"From Utah we hear that 'the harvest work is great. Although not placing so many volumes, yet we find a great many whose minds are opening up to the great truths of God's Word. I had a sweet experience canvassing a lady—was very busy, could hardly give me time. I left her a Do-You-Know? tract. The following day, when I was going along the next block, one of her neighbors said, Mrs. Forshaw wants to see you. When I met her she said, I read your tract through, and I became so interested that I wanted more. She ordered the six volumes.'

"Another writes: 'About six weeks ago I called to see a lady who had attended the PHOTO-DRAMA. She talked with me in her parlor; and a young man, her son, was in the room, but apparently engrossed in his newspaper. I told her about the books; and finding her not inclined to buy, I told her as much as I could of the plan of God. When I arose to go, the young man put aside his paper and said, 'I'll take the books.' I delivered them. He has since read the six volumes, and is convinced that he now has the truth. Evidently he is in a consecrated condition, though from the world. He took the first volume to the Baptist minister, and requested to be baptized. The minister said that Russell was the greatest impostor of the 20th Century. He did not join the minister's church. Then he wrote to Brooklyn to find if there were any interested in Boston; and you can imagine his joy when he sat in the hall with over 400 of like precious faith. I feel that we must be using every minute to spread the truth. People are hungry as never before. Thank God for the arrangement of the harvest work that gives us a share!"

We append herewith a letter from our colporteur brother, Joseph Greig, which is self-explanatory:

"DEAR FRIENDS:—Enclosed find letter replying to communication I had in a local paper. Have not called on the party as yet. I am of the same opinion as outlined in a recent TOWER regarding the changing sentiments of the people. My letter also appeared in the Des Moines Register. The newspapers present a big field for feeling the public pulse. Brother Woodworth was quite successful along this line.

Faithfully, JOSEPH GREIG."

Following is the letter referred to by Brother Greig: "DEAR SIR:—I was much interested in reading your communication in tonight's Messenger. You are evidently a student of prophecy, in which I, too, am much interested. May I ask you to call and make yourself known to me, as I would surely like to meet you and have a talk with you. If you are a resident of ——, it might be that you would enjoy meeting with a small company of others who also are interested in the study of the future in the light of the Scriptures. Assuring you of my desire to meet you, and trusting that I may have the pleasure of your acquaintance in the near future, I am very sincerely, G. P. ALLARD.—Iowa."

Here is an inspiring letter from a couple who have been in the colporteur service for many years:

"DEAR FRIENDS:—Greetings in the name of our dear Redeemer. Enclosed please find Money Order for $——, for books ordered yesterday. Our territory has been worked over and over for the STUDIES. Now we are placing the SCENARIOS and the MANNAS in the same homes where the STUDIES have been sold. People will read them who would not read the STUDIES.

"Our hearts are being greatly refreshed in overcoming some of the bitter opposition against the truth. The dear Lord has given us great victory in overcoming the fear of what man might do to us. We never have experienced such joy and peace in the midst of bitter opposition. The little town of —— has been greatly stirred by one of the D.D.'s who tried to hinder the Lord's work. The dear Lord showed how he could use a weak, broken vessel to confound the wise. The D. D. tried to have a public burning of the STUDIES; but the people refused to cooperate. They said that we had been in their homes and had manifested a nice spirit; that our books seemed to be according to the Bible; and that they were going to read them. We know of only one burning the book thus far. We asked to have an interview with the D. D.; but he refused, saying that I would come with the intention of convincing him that he was wrong. This was the best advertisement he could have given us. Some of his flock said that his foundation was not very strong if he feared that one woman could upset him.

"How we pity these blind leaders! How glad we are that soon all the blind eyes shall be opened! We bore with him until he slandered our beloved Pastor's character from the pulpit. Then we distributed 1,200 B. S. M.'s—'Why the Preachers Attack Pastor Russell.' We have also started a series of chart talks. We had twenty out at the first meeting; and they are anxious for us to continue the meetings. We are not strong physically, so cannot keep at the work as we would like. But we do thank the dear Lord for the little share he has given us in this glorious work, and we are looking forward to the time when in glory we can do his will perfectly. Continue to pray for us, as we do for you daily. With warmest Christian love to you all,

"Yours in joyful service of our King,"

J. & E. HETTENBAUGH."

"P. S. We want to thank the dear one who is helping the colporteurs materially—and the dear Lord, too."

Prospective colporteurs should write us at once for information respecting territory, etc. Our Colporteur Department is keeping close watch upon the field, and from Bradstreet's and other sources is obtaining reliable information respecting conditions in practically every section of the country.

SOME LETTERS OF INTEREST

REAL TEACHING OF BIBLE VS. THE CREEDS

DEAR BRETHREN:—

I heard Brother Russell preach once at the London Tabernacle; and though we shall never meet again in the flesh, his warm hand-grasp will never leave my memory.

I was brought up a baptized member of the Calvinistic Presbyterian church of Ulster. When I reached manhood I deliberately concluded that a God capable of dooming his creatures to eternal torture must be the essence of hate, and therefore unworthy the worship of any intelligent person.

I had always been a student of the Scriptures, but the fixed ideas of the trinity, hell and human immortality with which I had been saturated, prevented my really understanding them. I therefore abandoned them as well as the Presbyterian creed, taking refuge in agnosticism and indifference.

Passing through our showroom one day my attention was called by the head clerk, who was a papist, saying, "This man (a colporteur) wants me to buy and read THE DIVINE PLAN OF THE AGES, which the priest would not let me read."

Not being under such control, I bought the book. I read it and, noting its appeal to reason, I reread it, referring to the Scriptures cited. This induced a new study of the Bible, which proved to me that the creeds, irrational and illogical in themselves, wholly misrepresent the plain Bible teaching.

I then bought the other five volumes, which confirmed the strong impression created by the first one. I have since bought and circulated many copies among my friends.

Invoking upon you the divine blessing, I remain

Your fellow-servant., R. C. LEES.—Eng.

MAY THE KEYS BECOME INCREASINGLY PRECIOUS

DEAR BRETHREN:—

The news that our beloved brother and pastor had been called away caused a deep impression amongst us. We realize our loss to be very great, the extent of which can be appreciated only by those who have enjoyed the same spiritual fellowship with him, and have learned to love his words of sane counsel and exhortation as "meat in due season." Verily his ministrations to us, as "that faithful servant," have been characterized by unabating zeal and love; and we earnestly pray that his works (the result of faithful service and loyal devotion), the key which has unlocked so much of present truth, may become increasingly precious and more encouraging as the day of our deliverance draws nigh.

As members of the I. B. S. A., we desire to assure you of our united, loyal and continued support in the work in which we have been privileged so far to engage; and we trust with increased vigor to accept the added responsibilities which, we understand, devolve upon every branch of the SOCIETY as the result of our great loss.

While our hearts are wounded by our dear brother's removal, we rejoice to think that his is the reward of the faithful, and that he is now crowned at the hands of the dear Master, whom he loved and for whom he labored so much. We pray that all our dear brethren will more zealously endeavor to emulate the beautiful examples which characterized his noble life, so that when the call shall come, each one may be found as faithful a follower of our dear Lord and Master. With much Christian love,

Your brethren in Christ, SYDNEY CLASS.—Australia.

SERIOUS MISTAKE MADE BY SOME

DEAR BRETHREN:—In the issue of THE WATCH TOWER of June 1, 1916, article on "The Harvest Siftings," page 172, is found this clear, concise statement, "The BOOK, 'Food for Thinking Christians' (now out of print), published and circulated during the year 1881, I no longer commend, because it is less systematic and therefore less clear than later publications." Then in the same article reference is made to two other publications, "The Three Worlds," and "Day Dawn," and answer is made to a suppositional question as to whether these are considered profitable books to loan to truth seekers. The reply is, "Certainly not!" Then are given cogent reasons for the reply. It seems almost inconceivable that the clearness of the language could be misunderstood; but such is the fact.

The issue of THE WATCH TOWER (the Journal, not book) of Jan. 15, 1910, treats the subject of "Where are the Dead?" —likewise every text in the King James Version of the Bible, containing the word hell. This issue is usually referred to by the friends as the "Hell Tower." On the top margin of the front cover is the suggestive expression, "FOOD FOR THINKING CHRISTIANS." Now, how any thinking Christian could confuse this expression with the title of a book, I cannot imagine; yet that is just what has resulted in some instances.

To my astonshment some of the dear friends have told me that since the item above referred to in the TOWER of June 1, 1916, came to their attention, they had burned the "HELL TOWERS" they had in their possession, "thinking" that this was in line with the suggestion as noted.

This matter seems of sufficient importance to merit your attention, in order to save some of the unthinking Christians from unwittingly cooperating with the enemies of the truth by burning what you commend and send forth for enlightening the blinded minds of Satan's dupes.

With ever increasing love and abiding confidence in you, dear brethren, I am, by his kind favor,

Your brother and fellow-servant in the Lord,

W. M. WISDOM.—Pilgrim.

AS TO THE DESERVING

Frequently mention has been made in THE WATCH TOWER regarding schemes worked by various people for securing alms or donations from the friends. We have recently received a number of letters, some of them enclosing missives from a person in Georgia. These letters have a very pitiful tone, and would naturally work upon the sympathies of any who are seeking to serve the Lord. A brother who recently made inquiries into the case writes as below. As we have suggested before, we believe that it would be wise for the friends to exercise more caution regarding solicitations for funds, by letter or in person. The brother's letter follows:

DEAR BRETHREN:—

"The individual knew but very little about his Bible, could not locate the chapter (John 12:1) in which the lesson was to be found, knew nothing about consecration, etc. Would state further that the individual was given a cow by the readers of a paper published in Maine, called 'Comfort.' This cow keeps the family supplied with milk and butter, and is a source of income from a calf each year. They have a good house and fine garden spot, free of rent, and about three acres of very fertile land, rent free; and the County pays them $5 per month.

With much Christian love to each and all, and praying our Father's continued love and guidance upon you,

Very sincerely yours in our dear Redeemer.

CHAS. OWENS.—Tenn.

RENEW VOWS WHILE SOME FALL AWAY

DEARLY BELOVED BRETHREN:—

Words are inadequate to express to you dear ones the feeling of deep appreciation to you, for so kindly remembering us at this season. The beautiful hymn books were received this morning. The dear Lord has dealt so kindly with us, that our hearts are filled to overflowing. Pray for us; we need your prayers. We have renewed our vows, and as we see many who were once true and loyal fall from their steadfastness, it drives us closer to the One who never forsakes his children.

Truly your sisters and coworkers,

MRS. IDA ZALLMANZIG, MRS. H. A. VARRO.—Cal.

"WHAT HAVE I THAT I DID NOT RECEIVE?"

DEAR BRETHREN:—

Greetings in the name of our Lord!

Please find enclosed Postal Money Order for $———, to be applied to the interests of the harvest work, wherever, according to your best judgment, it is most needed. I want to assure you of my cooperation in the future as in the past, and am glad to observe that the work is going grandly on. I am sure we are greatly encouraged with the thought that we did not merely consecrate until Brother Russell's death, but until our own death: "Be thou faithful unto death."

Am still enjoying the SCRIPTURE STUDIES and TOWERS, written by dear Brother Russell's pen. The more I read them the more I feel my responsibility increases. We know the dear brother didn't write these things for fun nor form, but wrote them to impress upon our minds the necessity for putting the admonitions into practice, if ever we expect to gain the kingdom. I assure you I appreciate his great labor of love as much as ever.

Another thought: I feel I have been greatly privileged in the harvest work, yet I have never felt once that I have ever done enough; and no matter what I do in the service there is no praise coming to me; for "what have I that I did not receive?" We are assured that "the meek will he guide in judgment; the meek will he teach his way."

I feel that there are three great things to cultivate—love, self-sacrifice and submission. How it makes us put forth every nerve to yield full submission! But we know that being submissive is the road to happiness—and further, our great enemy is "Self."

I trust I have not wearied your patience in the reading of this epistle, but it is some time since I have written the SOCIETY, and thought a few words would be in order.

Dear brethren, I assure you that all will have my prayers in future as I have offered them in the past. With much Christian love,

Yours by his grace, MRS. DANIEL F. ROBINSON.—Pa.

"HIS WRITINGS OPENED THE BIBLE TO ME"

DEAR BRETHREN:—

Though late, accept my heart's deepest sympathy in your great loss—it is also my loss—in the death of our beloved Pastor, C. T. Russell. What could replace on this earth that pen, that eloquent voice, calling the world to Christ! For us it is deep grief, for him joy. What a glorious Christmas must have been his! Oh, that God in his mercy may raise one to continue his work! Not until the last day will it be known the numbers of souls he has been the means of bringing to God. As for me, his writings have brought peace to my soul and opened the Bible to me as no preaching in the nominal church could ever do.

Soon my earthly career will be run. Soon we shall be in the midst of the dreadful world-conflict, when God seems forgotten. All the illusions of this world are passing away. What joy for us to know we shall be called upon! May the Lord Jesus strengthen us, so that our hearts may not fail, and that no matter where we may be, we shall be ready to give our testimony.

May God comfort all the brothers and sisters and assist them in carrying out our beloved Pastor's wishes. I remain,

Your aged sister in the Lord,

SUSANNA RAPPLE.—Ireland.

LOYALTY AND EARNEST COOPERATION

TO THE FRIENDS AT BETHEL:—

The passing away of "that servant"—loyal, loving, humble and faithful—has deeply affected the friends in the truth everywhere. We all have great love for him and for the fruit of the spirit he displayed; but we appreciate the fact that those in the Bethel family must feel our Pastor's departure more keenly, having been so closely associated with him for so many years.

The Philadelphia Ecclesia, therefore, by unanimous vote, extends to the Bethel family their great sympathy in this time of mutual bereavement. We pray that our dear Lord will encircle you with his arms of love and give you that peace which passeth all understanding. At the same time we wish to assure you of our earnest desire to cooperate and to assist you in carrying forward the great work which our Lord has determined and has given to us through "that servant." With great Christian love,

"DECEIVING AND BEING DECEIVED"

DEAR BRETHREN:—

I am enclosing herewith a clipping which is self-explanatory. I thank you for mailing the SPIRITISM booklet. We have read it with much interest and profit. We are surprised at the extent to which Spiritism is spreading throughout the world. Not having seen any of the workings of professional spiritualists and mediums, we were inclined to disbelieve that they actually did the things which we read in the newspapers. When I was a young man, thirty-three years ago, two of us sat at a seance with some professed mediums. When the working of the table began, some of us, by prearrangement, directed that the knocking indicate two of us to be the chief mediums, and it responded perfectly. This aroused the jealousy of the professed spiritualists. Our seances were prolonged and we met together all winter, often having fifty at our Sunday night meeting. This depleted the attendance at the village church. We had the table move around the room, had it stand on two legs, answer questions, and in this way we entertained doctors and bankers, who often sat with us. However, strange as it may seem, we never thoroughly believed in it.

Since reading, WHAT SAY THE SCRIPTURES ABOUT SPIRITISM? we have been wondering whether one of the demons was assisting us in our seances at that time. Long since, we left the village, and have many times thought of how we used to talk and laugh over the events of the evening, and as to what the crowd would have done to us if they had found out our deception. And now comes the thought that perhaps we ourselves were the ones deceived.

Very truly yours, S. P. GRABILL.—Mont.

[We are in receipt of other letters respecting the one published in THE WATCH TOWER of March 15, page 93, and headed, "One of the Snares of the Fowler." We are not surprised that the persons mentioned foregoing were innocent of the power that operated the table at their seances. Hundreds of letters have come to us relating similar experiences. The object in moving the table and in answering the questions is doubtless intended to excite curiosity and to lead on to obsession and later to possession of both mind and body.]

LOYALTY, LOVE AND SUPPORT

DEAR BRETHREN:—

We have noticed the many letters published in THE WATCH TOWER encouraging you and assuring you of the hearty support of the writers. The fact that such a letter has not been sent by the Chicago class should not be construed to mean that those letters do not express our attitude nor that we have been so long in determining what stand we would take with regard to the changes necessitated by the passing from our midst of dear Pastor Russell.

It will be remembered that one of our elders, when speaking at the funeral service of Pastor Russell, expressed the attitude of the Chicago class with reference to the matter. However, it has been thought well by the class to approve the matter by vote. This was done by a unanimous vote, and the secretary was instructed to write you assuring you of our hearty sympathy and prayers according to the Vow and earnest cooperation to the extent of our ability and opportunity. The trial and testing of the church in general seems to be progressing with growing intensity, as we should expect, and therefore we need the sympathy and aid of each other and, realizing that as you have the greater responsibility you would also have the greater trial, we want to especially assure you of our loyalty, love and support in prayer and all possible ways.

Yours in Christ, A. L. SEELEY.—Ill.

"CHART OF THE AGES"

DEAR BRETHREN:—

Why not tell speaking brethren through THE TOWER of the great advantage in using the chart in nearly all public lectures? Nearly all of the brethren seem "afraid to touch the chart" with a pointer. Sometimes we almost feel that the public learn more by looking at the chart than from what the average class lecturer has to say. That chart, with its Millennial age, is a wonderful, Lord-given asset in public exposition, and we think should be used more. Brother Russell was very favorable to its use. Cannot you get it used more? The chart interests the public readily, when it is used, which is very seldom. With much Christian love,

Your brother in the service of the King of kings,

C. W. GERDES.—Cal.

"LET HIM DO WHAT SEEMETH HIM GOOD"

BELOVED BRETHREN:—

I want to tell you that the article in THE WATCH TOWER, under the heading, "Harvest Gatherings and Siftings," has done me a lot of good. I think that it was timely. I had heard of some of the things told in this article, but in a disconnected way. Now I am better able to look back with you and see the winding path which it pleased the Lord to cause Brother Russell to tread. There is nothing that he has said that should be an offense to any. As for myself, I am one of those in whom Psalm 119:165 is fulfilled. I love "his law," I have "great peace," and nothing "shall offend" [stumble] me. But as I now note more clearly the Lord's providential leadings in the winding, thorny [and yet flowery] path in which he had been walking, lo, these many years, my heart goes out further to you. My own experiences in the painful and joyous winding way cause me to understand and to sympathize more deeply.

I have noted how the Lord at different times in the past has delayed different publications, for a wise purpose known only to himself at the time of their delay. And although I already knew that it was he who was delaying the publication of the Seventh volume, I now know it still better, and am the better prepared to wait for it. "It is the Lord, let him do what seemeth him good." I think there is no doubt that we have reached another juncture of the harvest period, in which special sifting and testing will take place, and that our hearts will again be pained by the various experiences—the parting with some friends, etc. But, if it shall prove so, again we say, "It is the Lord, let him do what seemeth him good."

Yours in his peace and love, waiting for the kingdom,

ALEX. EVANS.—Louisiana.

THINKS THE STONES WOULD CRY OUT

DEARLY BELOVED BRETHREN:—

Often have I felt like writing to you, but knowing of your busy life, I have refrained from doing so. I can now keep silent no longer, as I feel that the very stones around me would cry out. I thank my God daily for Pastor Russell and for the grand work that he has done in conjunction with his beloved colaborers.

Now that we are in the midst of the evil day, we hourly feel the unspeakable benefit of an intellectual understanding of God's glorious plan of salvation, when all the conceivable wiles of the adversary are at work to deceive, if it were possible, the very elect.

As a worthy instrument in the hand of Almighty God Pastor Russell has led the little flock in the four corners of the earth, and patiently shown them how to adjust the "panoply of God." Many are the staunch and loving hearts that beat in South Africa for him today—both black and white—and who, in the name of Jesus (that sweetest name in heaven or on earth) bless the day that by God's command he directed the footsteps of our honored and deeply loved pilgrim brother W. W. Johnston to our shores. His grand example in laying down his life for Christ and the brethren, no less than that of our late and much beloved Pastor, has been an ever-increasing daily inspiration to us.

May the Eternal God always be your refuge, and may his everlasting arms enfold you and finally take you to himself, when your work on earth for him is done!

With loving devotion, we have the privilege to subscribe ourselves by the grace of God,

Your brother and sister in the Lord,

EDW. W. AND MABEL A. H. GAMBLE.—S. Africa.

"SCRIPTURE STUDIES" CHANGED HIS WHOLE LIFE

DEAR BRETHREN:—

While sending for supplies, as contained on separate sheet, I wish to express, as best I can, the void felt by the writer and no doubt by every member of the Bible Students in the loss sustained in the death of our beloved Pastor, Brother Russell. For the past ten years I have feasted on the words of counsel as well as upon the opened Bible as set forth in the SCRIPTURE STUDIES. Could I have known myself thirty years ago as I now understand myself, what a different life I would have led! Words fail to express the uplift in character his teachings have produced. I am now close on to three score and ten, and there remains but a brief time at most when I hope to meet him. In the meantime, I am striving to so run as to win the prize which his teachings pointed out in the Bible. In love and in the one hope, I am

Your brother, B. B. CHANDLER.—Calif.

SHIPPING DIFFICULTIES

Since the declaration of war the railroads and other transportation companies are practically under the control of the Government. Shipping of war supplies and food will have preference to all other shipments. We therefore suggest that all classes engaged in the pastoral work, colporteur work and all persons using quantities of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES order sufficient books, literature, etc., to meet the probable needs for six months or more, if possible. These books, etc., might be stored at the various class headquarters and supplied to the members of the class and others as they may desire.

PILGRIM SERVICE FOR COLORED BRETHREN

The SOCIETY takes pleasure in announcing that a pilgrim brother who is able to serve and is well qualified can be supplied by the SOCIETY for the purpose of serving the colored brethren in various parts of the country. Requests for such service should be made to the SOCIETY; and the brother will be assigned in due course of time. This is without expense to the brethren, it being understood, of course, that local brethren will be pleased to entertain the pilgrim brother.

OUR UNDER SHEPHERD

"O Under Shepherd of the flock,
Thou who didst safely keep
The little ones of God's dear fold
While hirelings lay asleep,
Thy watch upon the mountain side
Is o'er; and thou hast passed
Within the palace of the King,
With glory crowned at last!

"Thy lot, O faithful one, was hard;
Sharp were the rocks that tried
Thy weary feet, when thou didst search
The rugged mountain side
For those poor, hungry lambs who strayed
Far from the safe, warm fold,
Led by the hireling's careless voice
Into the darkness cold!

"The Master's staff was in thy hand;
The Master's rod was thine;
They comforted the weary sheep,
They spoke the Word divine.
They led through thorns and briers rude
The weakest and the worst,
Who wandered, in their blindness, far
In paths of sin accursed.

"No burning lake of awful fire
Did thy keen eye discern
To frighten timid little lambs,
And faith to terror turn;
But up the mountain's rugged height,
A path that ever led
From darkness into that clear light
Where dwells our living Head.

"Beyond the shadows thou hast climbed,
But still thy clear voice calls:
'Press onward, little flock, thy God
Is true; no ill befalls
The sheep who walk the narrow way,
The way the Master trod.
The way which seems all loneliness,
But where Faith's eye sees God!'

"The shadows o'er that mountain top
Will lift ere long; and we
Who follow on shall find him there.
And with him Christ shall see.
O thou great Shepherd of the flock,
Whom we, like him, adore,
Be with us till at last we meet
To sever nevermore!"

VOL. XXXVIII BROOKLYN, N. Y., AUGUST 1, 1917 No. 15

"WALK CIRCUMSPECTLY BECAUSE THE DAYS ARE EVIL"

[This article with the exception of the paragraphs below, was a reprint of that published in issue of July 15, 1905, which please see.]

It poorly befits an instructed child of God to denounce with scorn and contempt those of the poor world whose failings and lacks in character may be apparent to us. If in some respects we have been more nobly born than are many others, have we anything whereof to boast in this regard? "What hast thou that thou hast not received? And if thou hast received it, wherefore shouldst thou boast?" Since we realize more and more as we go on in the narrow way how many and how humiliating are our own infirmities, we should learn to be very pitiful toward the infirmities of the poor, fallen world. And since the Lord is graciously willing to cover our many blemishes with the merit of the precious blood, we cannot do less than manifest this same spirit, if we hope to be pleasing and acceptable to him. Self-righteousness and a "holier than thou" attitude will surely separate us from the favor of the Lord to whatever extent we harbor such a spirit. Let us search our hearts carefully along this line, for we have a wily adversary, and our own flesh is very deceitful.

Even though the failings and weaknesses of some of the brethren or of the members of our own family be different from our own, who shall judge that they are less acceptable to the Lord than are we? "To his own Master each servant standeth or falleth." A captious spirit of criticism and of magnifying the faults of others, a desire to show them up in their worst light, may be far more culpable in the eyes of the Lord than are the faults that seem so reprehensible to us.

Let parents and children, brethren in the church—all who name the name of Christ—be of tender compassion toward one another. All have inherited and acquired weaknesses. Our own may be as serious as are those of some whose faults grate upon our sensibilities. Do our best, yet none of us can measure nearly up to the perfect standard. Who, then, are we, that we should sit in severe judgment upon others, whether of the brethren or of those outside, whose responsibility would be far less than ours?

APPLICATION FOR EXEMPTION

The Government is putting into motion its machinery relating to Selective Draft for military service. Local boards have been selected for each county and for various districts in the cities. The drawing is now made.

If you are on the list of the called ones you will first report for physical examination on the date named in the call. If you are found physically disqualified you will receive a certificate to that effect, with further instructions from the Board as to what to do.

If you are found physically qualified and you desire to claim exemption from military service, then you should file your application for exemption. After having been found to be physically qualified you will have seven days in which to file your application for exemption; and you will be given ten days' time after the filing of your application in which to file proof in support of your claims for exemption.

We have been expecting the Government to publish a form of application for exemption, but up to this time none has been published. As the calling of the men under the selective Draft Act has now been made, and knowing that many of our brethren will be desirous of filing application for exemption, and as many have written the SOCIETY for a form of application, we have prepared one, which we publish below, and which may be used, provided the Government furnishes no form for that purpose.

APPLICATION TO THE LOCAL BOARD OF EXEMPTION UNDER THE SELECTIVE DRAFT ACT:

Comes now the undersigned..... No. ..... (here insert your name and serial number), and states that he resides at.....in the City of .....; that he has had notice of call to military service under the Selective Draft Act; that he has presented himself for physical examination, and being advised that he is physically qualified, he now makes application for exemption from military service under the provisions of said Selective Draft Act, and claims exemption upon the following grounds, to wit:

(1) Because this applicant was, on and prior to the 18th day of May, 1917, a member of the INTERNATIONAL BIBLE STUDENTS ASSOCIATION, a well-recognized religious organization, which has been such religious organization and existing for a period of more than thirty years, the creed or teaching of which said religious organization forbids its members to participate in war in any form; that the religious convictions of the undersigned, this applicant, are against war or participation therein in any form, in accordance with the creed or principles of said INTERNATIONAL BIBLE STUDENTS ASSN.

(2) This applicant therefore prays that he be exempted from military service under the provision of said Selective Draft Act.

(Signed) .....

State of.....SS:
County of.....

....., being duly sworn, upon his oath says that he has read the above and foregoing application for exemption, and is fully acquainted with the contents thereof, and that the matters and things stated therein are true.

.....

Subscribed and sworn to before me this .... day of ...., 1917
.....
Notary Public.

If you can procure a form of application for exemption use and insert the grounds named in this application.

If you claim exemption on any other ground than that of religious conviction, then insert such additional ground under paragraph marked "2" in the application; and if you claim exemption upon any further additional grounds, insert a third paragraph, and so on. Such other ground or grounds for claiming exemption are set forth in a bulletin issued by the office of the Provost Marshal General and are published in the July 1 issue of THE TOWER, page 204.

HOW TO PROVE CLAIMS

Proof must be made by affidavits. Go to the Local Board and consult the regulations to find out the form number of the affidavits that you must submit for your particular claim.

Ask the Board for the blank affidavits that are necessary in presenting your proof; if the Board has not the forms ask to consult the pamphlet of forms.

Have the affidavits properly accomplished and return them to the Board within the time limit assigned you—ten days from the filing of your claim.

Set out in your affidavit the following: that the INTERNATIONAL BIBLE STUDENTS ASSOCIATION is a well-recognized religious organization and has existed for more than thirty years; that said Association has a branch or church at (the place where you live); that you are a member of said Association and associated with said church; that you are fully consecrated to the Lord, and that you follow the teachings of Jesus and the apostles as set forth and explained in the Bible and in the publications of the INTERNATIONAL BIBLE STUDENTS ASSOCIATION and the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY; that you are in harmony with and believe the teachings of said Association, which forbids its members to participate in war in any form, and that your religious convictions are against war or participation therein in any form, in accordance with the creed or principles of said International Bible Students Association; that the teachings of said INTERNATIONAL BIBLE STUDENTS ASSOCIATION, in harmony with those of Jesus and the apostles, are briefly epitomized in the following: "Thou shalt not kill." (Romans 13:9) "All they that take the sword shall perish by the sword." (Matt. 26:52) "For even hereunto were ye called, because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example that ye should follow in his steps." (1 Peter 2:21) "For the Son of Man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them." (Luke 9:56) "No murderer hath eternal life abiding in him." (1 John 3:15) "Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." (Heb. 12:14) "As we have opportunity, let us do good unto all men."—Gal. 6:10.

You may further add to your affidavit the quotation from THE WATCH TOWER of September 1, 1915, page 260, column 2, which is quoted in the May 15, 1917, issue of THE WATCH TOWER, page 151.

Within three days after the production of this proof before the Local Board, that Board will decide the question of exemption one way or the other. Appeal may be made to the District Board, and must be taken within ten days after notice that exemption claim has been denied by the Local Board. The Local Board may grant longer time to perfect appeal, in its discretion.

Because of the fact that many of these exemption cases are apt to arise at the same time in different parts of the country, we make the above general statement in the interests of all of our brethren of the Association who may desire to avail themselves of the provisions of the law for exemption. If any one feels that he should have a lawyer to assist him, then if might be wise to employ some local counsel to advise and conduct his case before the Board. We stand ready to advise and assist any of the brethren at any time to the extent of our ability.

Let us all trust in the Lord for his guidance, and claim the promise that he will cause all things to work together for our good, because we love him and have been called according to his purpose. Be calm and sober of mind, and having done all you can, stand fast in the faith. His blessings be with you!

"UNTO THE END!"

"Having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end."

'"Unto the end!' What strange,
Sweet, wondrous love! How deep, how fond and true!
For love that knows no change
We seek, but seek in vain, the wide world through.
Until the end he loved
The frail, weak, timid ones he called 'his own.'
Nor ever heard unmoved
Their cry for help, in sorrow's plaintive tone.

'"Unto the end!' All, all
Who are his own are known to him by name;
No tear of theirs can fall
But Jesus knows the source from whence it came.
Unto the end, though
Faithless and wayward we may be,
With calm and ceaseless flow
The tide of love divine rolls strong and free!

'"Unto the end!' Though wide
And high along our way dark barriers frown,
This truth will still abide
To comfort and sustain. We are his own
Unto the end. His own!
Not death itself from him our souls can part;
His hand has overthrown
All that divides us from his home and heart.

'"Unto the end!' With arms
Outstretched, he waits to clasp us to his breast;
Where, safe from all alarms,
He offers us our shelter and our rest.
'Unto the end' to live
And know that we are his, and only his!
The joys that life can give,
Its sweetest and its best, yield no such bliss.

'"Unto the end!!' Thine own?
O dear and blessed Master! Can it be
That, never more alone,
Our weary hearts may dwell in peace with thee,
Knowing that to the end
Thou wilt be with us, walking by our side,
Our Guardian, Guide and Friend,
Until in heaven we shall with thee abide!"

THE CAPTIVITY OF JUDAH

[The first and fifth paragraphs of this article were reprinted from article entitled "A Broken Vow a Fulfilled Penalty," published in issue of September 1, 1905. Paragraphs 2, 3, 8 and 9 were reprinted from article entitled "The Holy Land Desolated," published in issue of December 1, 1898. The remainder appears below.]

After King Nebuchadnezzar had taken a part of the Jews captive, he left King Zedekiah in control as his vassal under tribute. But Zedekiah treacherously entered into a league with the king of Egypt in a vain attempt to throw off the Babylonian yoke. When Nebuchadnezzar learned of the rebellion he came again to besiege Jerusalem. Famine and pestilence resulted; and ultimately the city was captured and utterly destroyed. The king's eyes were put out; and he was taken captive to Babylon, with all the people except a few of the poorest and leas' competent. Subsequently these went down into Egypt, so that Jerusalem and the country round about lay "desolate without inhabitant for seventy years, to fulfil the word of the Lord at the mouth of the Prophet Jeremiah."

The folly of King Zedekiah in violating his oath of allegiance to the Babylonian king is only an illustration of the general folly of all who reject the counsel of the Lord. Through the Prophet Jeremiah the Lord had warned Zedekiah respecting the keeping of his oath and the certainty that the king of Babylon would vanquish him. But the selfwilled, unbelieving king, abetted by his princes and counsellors, took the course which proved to be the way of folly, and which led to the utter overthrow of the nation. The Lord permitted the natural consequences of his wrong course to overtake the king; and they were severe indeed. His sons were slain before his very eyes. Then he was blinded and carried to Babylon, where he remained a prisoner until his death.

From these facts we infer that King Zedekiah never came to a proper repentant attitude of heart before the Lord. On the contrary, Jehoiachin, the previous king of Judah, who had been taken captive to Babylon eleven years before, was subsequently released from prison and granted many favors at the hand of Evil-Merodach. (Jeremiah 52:31-34) Properly enough these high ones in natural Israel may represent the more highly favored ones of the Lord's people in spiritual Israel; and we may draw the lesson that the unfaithful, like Jehoiachin, might be chastened and afterward treated with leniency, but that those who violate the oath of their covenant with God by breaking that vow will suffer loss in every sense of the word—that thenceforth they shall be blinded by the adversary to the blessings once enjoyed, and that subsequently they shall die the second death.

Everywhere the Scriptures uphold the thought that a vow, a solemn compact with the Lord, is a most binding obligation. Under such a solemn obligation all the members of the new creation have been granted the first-fruits of the holy Spirit. Therefore disloyalty or renouncement of this vow could to us mean nothing short of the second death, from which there is no redemption.

Judah represented those Israelites who were faithful to the Lord, those who trusted in the promises, all of which centered in the tribe of Judah; and many of the faithful of the ten tribes had moved into the territory of the smaller kingdom. Yet with all these lessons, and with the instructions of the prophets, the history of the nation is one long record of unfaithfulness to their great King, Jehovah God. Now the time had come for the change which God saw best to bring upon them; and nothing could divert the impending doom. Nevertheless, they were given a hope that at the end of a certain period—after seventy years of chastisement—the Lord would graciously bring those back who reverenced him.

"THE TIMES OF THE GENTILES"

When God gave the law to Israel he plainly told them the terms and conditions upon which he would receive them as his people. If they would be obedient to the divine requirements, all would be well with them. They would be prosperous, a rich nation, blessed of the Lord. But if they should neglect the divine law and become idolatrous, the Lord would oppose them and would deliver them into the hand of their enemies for chastisement. If they persisted in following the wrong course, He would finally punish them "seven times more."—Leviticus 26:18, 21, 24, 28.

Of course God knew the end from the beginning. Nevertheless, divine patience was manifested throughout the experiences of the nation leading up to the overthrow of King Zedekiah's government; for he was the last king of the Davidic dynasty to sit upon the throne of Israel. We have seen how evil followed good, both in the kings and in the practises of the nation; and how divine providence chastened the people, yet repeatedly brought them back from idolatry. Now had come the time for the complete overthrow of the national polity, for a period of "seven times," as foretold by Moses, the mediator of the Law Covenant. In this case, however, the "times," or years, must have been symbolic; for frequently the nation had had captivities for more than seven years each.

Accepting the fact that these seven years, or "times," were symbolic years, we now proceed to determine how long a period they would indicate. We find that it is an accepted fact that in Bible symbolism a day represents a year; and that the Jewish year had twelve months of thirty days each. Thus each year symbolically represented three hundred and sixty years; and the seven years of chastisement foretold by Moses would represent 7×360 years, or 2520 years. When therefore we read the Prophet Ezekiel's statement that the kingdom would be "overturned, overturned, overturned," until Messiah should come, we are to understand that the period of the overturned condition of the Jewish polity would be 2,520 years, beginning with the time when the crown was removed from King Zedekiah—in 606 B. C., seventy years prior to the proclamation of Cyrus, king of Persia, permitting the people to return—536 B. C.

A LOOK AT THE FACTS OF THE CASE

It is always both interesting and profitable to Bible students to note the fulfilment of prophecy; for thus are the divine promises made more real, and we are assured of divine supervision respecting the affairs of Israel—both natural and spiritual. As we glance back over the pages of Jewish history, we see the fulfilment of the declaration that the nation of Israel would be overturned three times. After its restoration by King Cyrus, 536 B. C., it continued to have a sort of national existence for six hundred years. Yet in all that time it did not have one king of the line of David. On the contrary, it was ruled over by the various adjoining nations. As it is written: "Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the times [years] of the Gentiles be filled full."

Some may point to the Maccabaean kings as an offset to this declaration that Israel has had no king since the overthrow of King Zedekiah. We answer that the Maccabaean kings were not divinely appointed nor of the royal family. Others may remind us of the reign of the Herods at the beginning of the Christian era. We reply that the Herods not only were not of the line of David, but were not Jews at all; that they were Edomites—descendants of Esau, who ruled over the children of Israel as representatives of the Roman Empire.

THE PROPHET DANIEL'S TESTIMONY

When God removed the typical kingdom of Israel and his typical throne in the world, he gave over the lease of earthly dominion to the Gentiles. This lease of power, as set forth in the prophecy of Daniel, was to continue for "seven times"—2,520 years. In other words, during the same period in which Israel would be undergoing tribulation and subjection, the Gentiles would be having "seven times" of prosperity; and both periods would of necessity terminate at the same time. Since both began in the fall of 606 B. C., and since both were "seven times," or 2,520 years long, both must have ended in the fall of 1914 A. D.

During this period the world has been under the dominion of four universal empires; (1) Babylonia, (2) Medo-Persia, (3) Greece and (4) Rome. According to the Scriptural view of the matter, the fourth universal empire is still represented in the various so-called Christian governments of the world. These have practised and prospered during the long period of Israel's subjection and the overturned condition of God's typical kingdom. After the expiration of the "seven times," the next feature of the divine program will be the establishment of the Messianic kingdom and its recognition by the children of Israel. Then will follow the long-promised blessing of all the families of the earth.—Genesis 12:3; Galatians 3:8, 16, 29.

NEW CREATURES IN CHRIST

The new will begins when we turn from sin to the Redeemer, desiring to be his followers. But the new will is not then the new creature. We do not become new creatures until the Redeemer has accepted our offering, covered it with the merit of his own sacrifice, and presented it as a part of his sacrifice, to the Father. The Father, accepting all who thus come unto him through the Son—up to the full limit of the number of the elect—begets them through the holy Spirit. Then, and not until then, is there a new creature—a spirit-begotten being—whose development will be in the school of Christ, and whose full entrance upon the spirit plane as a new creature will come through the resurrection change.

The new creature does not sacrifice itself; for, as we have just seen, it did not come into existence until the sacrifice had been made and accepted by the Father. The new creature is in full accord with the consecration made originally by the new will, and with the sacrifice of its earthly rights and interests made to the Lord. The new creature therefore coöperates with the Lord, and manifests this in presenting itself daily, hourly, a living sacrifice to the will of the Lord.

It is the flesh that is to be sacrificed, and not the new creature. The High Priest, our glorified Lord, alone is able to offer the sacrifice acceptably; and we, as new creatures, merely coöperate with him, and thus make our calling and election sure. Any holding back on our part would spoil the matter as a sacrifice; and the best thing that could be done with it would be to destroy the flesh that the spirit might be saved. The Scriptures seem to indicate that this will be the experience of the great company class. Any drawing back from the Lord in the sense of the repudiation of him and his work of righteousness in them, would signify what the Apostle calls "the drawing back unto perdition"—unto destruction. (Hebrews 10:39) In that event the new creature would die; and it would be the second death, from which there would be no recovery. As we have before shown, the new creature never sacrifices itself. It merely coöperates with the great High Priest in the sacrifice of its flesh in which, for the time, it tabernacles. Prior to the harvest time, the new creature, at the death of the body, slept; for except in the case of wilful sin, the new creature is never to die. Since the Spring of 1878, however, the new creature does not sleep, but passes immediately into the new body. In the case of Jesus and the apostles the new creature slept for a longer or shorter time, awaiting the divine intervention and power for its perfecting on the spirit plane through the resurrection change.

THE SHEPHERD OF CAPTIVE ISRAEL

SEPTEMBER 2.—Ezekiel 34.

[This article, with the exception of the paragraph below, was a reprint of article entitled "Prophecy Against the Shepherds," published in issue of May 15, 1915, which please see.]

Verses 10-12 assert that at a certain time the Lord comes to the rescue of his sheep, and casts aside the unfaithful shepherds. Mark well that this time of his presence will be "in the cloudy and dark day"—in the time of trouble, already upon the nations and upon the unfaithful shepherds. Surely we have ample evidence that we are in this "cloudy and dark day"—that the Chief Shepherd is now present! Otherwise, whence comes the food upon which his flock has been feeding all these years and the refreshing rest of faith which they may enjoy even amidst the turmoil of the time of trouble now upon the world? During the past forty years the Chief Shepherd has been feeding his people upon the richest of food: and all who have been strengthened thereby should be aware that he is gathering his sheep. Although the sheep have been scattered all over the hills of sectarianism, he calls them his own: and those who hear his voice are being gathered into the one fold—the true church—even as in the beginning of the Gospel age.

INTERESTING QUESTIONS

THE LORD'S DIRECTION OF OUR AFFAIRS

Question.—To what extent does the Lord actively direct our affairs, and guide us in thought, word and deed? When two courses perplex us, how may we know the divine will concerning us?

Answer.—The Christian's relationship to God is based wholly upon faith. The Apostle declares, "According as it is written, 'I believed, and therefore have I spoken'; we also believe, and therefore speak." So likewise, we believe, and therefore we speak; we believe and therefore we act. "He that cometh unto God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarded of them that diligently seek him."—2 Cor. 4:13; Heb. 11:6.

Christians are those who have approached God along this line through Christ, who have turned from sin and have accepted the merit of Christ as their propitiation, and the divine will as their will; and who have embraced the divine promises respecting the rewards of righteousness, truth, holiness, instead of the rewards and delusive pleasures of sin. They have made their consecration unto death, have been begotten to a new nature, and have received the anointing of the holy Spirit. They then recognize themselves as children of God, BECAUSE GOD HAS SAID SO. They know that all things will work together for good to them; for God has so informed them. —Rom. 8:28.

The whole matter, then, is one of faith. It is for the Christian to perform his part and to trust that God will perform his part. God's part is to instruct him, and develop him in faith and obedience. Sometimes the way in which God will guide his people will be very contrary to the one we would naturally prefer. We are to remember, however, that we have fully given ourselves to the Lord; and that we are to abide in this condition loyally, and to accept in perfect faith all the experiences of life—the things that seem favorable and the things that seem unfavorable—and to bear in mind that all things will work out for good to us, who are the called according to God's purpose; and that "the steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord," if we continually seek his guidance.

If, therefore, trials and difficulties come, we are to look to the Lord and go to him in prayer and seek to know his will. How can we know that his will shall be done? We must make sure that we desire his will above all things—whether it be pleasant or unpleasant to us. After earnest prayer that we may be shown his will, we are to use our best judgment in the matter. We have asked God's wisdom and blessing, and we are to expect that the Lord will overrule the results for good. And we are to accept these results as of divine overruling, divine providence, whether the matter turn out as we have expected or some other way.

ASKING HIS BLESSING UPON OUR FOOD

Question.—Why do we ask the Lord's blessing upon our food unless we expect him to bless it?

Answer.—A very sensible question. Our bodies are a part of our endowment of the Lord; and we are responsible for these bodies, to keep them in as good order as possible, in addition to asking his blessing. We are to eat to his glory, and so far as possible, only foods which agree with us. The blessing we ask is supposed to be that we may have coöperation on God's part with our own endeavor. But we are to endeavor so to eat and drink as to keep our bodies in the best possible condition to render the most effective service to him. Then we should expect his blessing.

COMPROMISING THE TRUTH

Question.—Since the Lord's people are to be "wise as serpents and harmless as doves," and not unnecessarily to bring upon themselves persecution, might it have been a lack of wisdom on the part of the three young Hebrews to refuse to bow down before the image set up by Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon? Could they not, while bowing before the image, have in their hearts worshiped God?

Answer.—It would be quite contrary to the teaching of God's Word to suppose that the Hebrews who were cast into the fiery furnace because of not worshiping the image of Nebuchadnezzar were unwise. We believe that they were very wise not to compromise the truth in respect to Nebuchadnezzar and the image which he had made. A careful reading of the Bible story should convince one of this. Whoever compromises the truth is very likely to have it taken from him.

If the three Hebrews had been disloyal to God in this matter, then there would probably have arisen other circumstances of like nature; and they would have been likely to be finally swallowed up. They could not have made a reservation in bowing the knee in this instance. The king had declared that any one who would fail in this matter should be thrown into the fiery furnace; that all must bow down and worship the golden image. If they had bowed down, it would have implied that they were worshiping the image. God surely set his seal of approval on their course! Any other course would have been disloyal to Jehovah.

Applying this principle to our day, we see that churchianity is coming to be worshiped. The book of Revelation pictures the condition of things as we believe it soon will be. Whoever will not worship the first beast, nor his image, and will not receive the mark of the two-horned beast, or the number of his name, will come into a disadvantageous position. (Revelation 13:15-17) The question then would be, What shall be our attitude regarding such unfavorable arrangements? We do not ourselves take the position of some that it would be wrong to enter a Catholic church building because we would feel that we were thus worshiping the images. Neither would we think it wrong to enter a Protestant church. We would not by so doing be thought to be accepting their doctrine.

It we happened to go to a church where the congregation were partaking of their communion, doubtless we would commune with them, if they were willing. The fact that they did not understand the matter as we do would not affect us unfavorable at all. The Presbyterians, for instance, claim to recognize the great fundamentals of Christianity—the heavenly Father and the Lord Jesus as Savior; they affect to believe, at least.

Going, therefore, on that broad platform, we might be able to enjoy ourselves with them. We could not mean that we were palming ourself off as a Presbyterian, a Lutheran or a Methodist, etc. To our understanding none of these denominations are up to the divine standard of the Word of God, none of them are recognized of the Lord. But we can fellowship with those who worship there, if they profess belief in the fundamental doctrines of the Bible. We can be interdenominational on the subject and can see their good points, while we need not be influenced by their wrong doctrines.

We would not feel justified in giving any one the impression that we belonged to any of these denominations, by attending their church regularly or frequently. One might drop into any church, at any time, without being understood to be a devotee.

But when the time shall come that church federation will make a test, and every other belief than theirs will be banned, then we think it would be wrong for us to worship at all in any of their services; that it would be more or less upholding or supporting the errors for which they will be standing. We would consider it our duty then to stand out clearly and plainly, as did the young Hebrews of old, and refuse under any circumstances to bow down or worship among them.

SINS BLOTTED OUT

Question.—Acts 3:19 refers to a blotting out of sins. Will the sins themselves be actually blotted from memory?

Answer.—The Apostle Peter was not preaching restitution, although he mentioned restitution. He could not, therefore, be calling on the Jews as a nation to repent, for at that time repentance would not have been possible. Not until after Israel had been accepted could the Deliverer come out of Zion and turn away godliness from Jacob. (Romans 11:25-27) To have preached restitution at that time would have been premature by more than eighteen hundred years.

But the Apostle's words were designed to reach those Jews who might become members of the church. The sins would be blotted out at the second coming of Christ. Our sins are now covered, and because of this we are treated as sons. God gives us the spirit of adoption, brings us into his family. This present relationship shows us still sinners so far as the flesh is concerned, but righteous so far as the new creature is concerned.

However, in the second presence of Christ, he will change this vile body, the body of sin, and give us a body fashioned like unto his glorious body. We shall have none of these sins then, in any sense of the word. The sins will be absolutely blotted out—gone. God will remember them no more; that is, he will utterly ignore them, as though they had never been. He has never recognized these sins as belonging to the new creature, although the new creature has been charged up with everything derelict on the part of the body. But after we have received our "change," from that time onward there will be no sins to be remembered.

THE NEW CREATURE NOT A SINNER

We read in Psalm 32:1, "Blessed is he . . . whose sin is covered." We understand that this class whose sins were covered typically during the Jewish Age were the Jewish people, whose sins were covered year by year under the arrangement God made with them. We understand that the church's sins are actually covered by the special arrangement God makes with them through Jesus Christ. Ours is not a covenant which is renewed year by year, as was the Law Covenant with the Jews. With us, God's covenant is perpetual, so long as we abide in him. Nevertheless, though our sins are thus covered by our Lord, there is not an actual blotting out of the sins; it is a covering with the robe of righteousness, an imputation of the merit of Christ's sacrifice for Adamic sin.

There is a difference between the covering we now receive through faith, and the blotting out of sin which we shall receive later, and which the world also will ultimately enjoy. When our sins are thus covered according to the divine arrangement, our wills, which we determined to consecrate in sacrifice to God, are received of him through our great Advocate; and we are begotten of the holy Spirit as new creatures. The new creature never was a sinner. The new creature is in full accord with God. If he is a young new creature, he is, may be, not as yet fully established in his harmony with God. If an older new creature his character is crystallized.

So it could not be the new creature that would be referred to as having the sins blotted out at the second coming of Christ. But since the new creature is the possessor, or owner, of the flesh, he is responsible for the things done by the flesh; just as a man who owns a dog is held responsible for what that dog does. The new creature reigns over the body of flesh; but sometimes the flesh slips the leash, as it were. As the Apostle Paul expresses it, "In my flesh dwelleth no good thing; for to will is present with me; but how to perform that which is good I find not. For the good that I would, I do not; but the evil which I would not, that I do."—Romans 7:18, 19.

The trespasses of the flesh are those for which we ask forgiveness when we pray, "Forgive us our trespasses!" A trespass is something which is done contrary to law, and yet in this case it is something disapproved of by us. But so long as we have the flesh, the mortal body is marred by blemishes, by the imperfections of sin. Not, then, until the members of the body of Christ shall have passed beyond the veil will their sins be blotted out—be no more. Meantime they are all covered and graciously arranged for in God's plan.

We understand that all those sins that were ours up to the time we gave ourselves to the Lord were fully covered—that Christ assumed those for us at the moment of our consecration. The Apostle refers to those as "sins that are past, by the forbearance of God." But we still have the flesh and are still liable to trespass, and all trespasses are offenses against the divine law.

God could say: I will just count these as something that Jesus has arranged for. But he evidently did not see fit to do this, but to allow these trespasses to be counted up against the disciple of Christ. Thus the child of God is continually reminded of his own shortcomings, and must go daily to the throne of grace to obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need, and he becomes much more fortified against these weaknesses. It is these infirmities of the flesh that need to be settled for. These weaknesses still remain with the individual, and he has the responsibility with him unto death. This is our thought; and it is all in God's record. In God's accounting, each trespass must be reckoned for. And so we do not pray to the Lord Jesus, "Forgive us our trespasses," but we go to the Father. And we think they are still in the divine record until forgiveness is sought through Christ; for we still need the Advocate. But the blotting out of these imperfections will not be accomplished for the church until they shall have passed into glory, at the second coming of Christ.

The new creature can sin, but in the act ceases to be a new creature. If we, the new creature, sin wilfully, there remaineth no more a sacrifice for sins. But in such a case the sin is unto death. But the new creature might sin partially, through beguilement of the flesh; through the weakness of the flesh it might participate to some extent—might not properly resist sin—and therefore would be more or less of a conniver and participant in sin. In such a case we understand the Scriptures to teach that the stripes which would follow would be for that element of participation into which the new creature had entered.

The part for which the flesh would be responsible would be forgivable. Our Lord said: "If any blaspheme the Son of Man, it shall be forgiven him; but blasphemy against the holy Spirit shall not be forgiven." Christ never made atonement for the sins of the new creature. Anything that is not clearly attributable to the Adamic sin is punishable. There can be no sacrifice for it.

SIN-OFFERING—RANSOM—TRESPASS OFFERING

DEAR BRETHREN:—

In our Study of TABERNACLE SHADOWS the point has come out that on page 105 it is stated that the red heifer is not an "offering" at all. But in both the Revised and the American Revised Bibles it is called a sin-offering (see verses 9 and 17 of the 19th of Numbers); Strong's Concordance also bears this out. It seems to me that this point might help some to see that the word "sin-offering" is not synonymous with "ransom." Maybe you can explain the apparent contradiction between this statement and that of Numbers 19.

With Christian love, R. E. B. N.

We are not to assume that the revisers were any more inspired than were the translators of the King James Version. There is a haziness connected with the subject which very few escape until they come to a knowledge of that which we term "present truth."

From our viewpoint, the sin-offerings were those of the Atonement Day, which typified the satisfaction of justice in respect to the sin of Adam and its penalty, which rested upon Adam and descended by laws of heredity to all of his children. We distinguish between this original sin and subsequent wrong-doings by styling the latter "trespasses," as they are called in our Lord's prayer.

From this viewpoint, the red heifer was not a sin-offering—not offered for the original sin, either typically or otherwise; not offered on the Day of Atonement; nor connected with the Atonement in any sense.

The word ransom is separate and apart from either the trespass-offerings or the sin-offerings. It brings to our attention a different arrangement, with which we have nothing whatever to do—the arrangement that the one life of the Man Christ Jesus should constitute the basis for the satisfaction of Justice in respect to the original sin of the first man. The sin-offerings of the Day of Atonement are not to be confused with the ransom, for they are separate pictures.

"THAT THEY MAY SEE YOUR GOOD WORKS"

DEAR BRETHREN:

May I have a moment of your valuable time to call attention to the habit many of the friends have of "patting themselves on the back" and calling the attention of hotel-keepers and others, where considerable numbers are stopping, to their wonderfully good behavior, etc.?

I was privileged to attend a two-day I. B. S. A. convention recently, in a small town, where there was only one hotel, which was pretty well filled. The landlady had evidently put forth a great effort to please, in which she was successful to quite a degree, and she seemed anxious to know how her labors were appreciated.

But the slightest query would be met with, "Well, what do you think of these people? are they hard to please?" and, "Are they hard to get along with?" etc. Of course, the poor woman felt obliged to praise them, telling how nice they were, etc.

Now, would it not be much better to keep our "lamps" filled, and "trimmed and burning," so that all could plainly see the light; and not be calling attention to it, as though people would not know we are good and well-behaved if we did not tell them?

It looks to outsiders as though we are proud and boastful of our goodness. One man in our home-town, I am told, says he doesn't like our people because they are boastful and think themselves better than others.

It it meets with your approval, perhaps a line in THE WATCH TOWER would be well, calling the attention of the dear friends to these little oversights. I am sure a hint would be sufficient.

Your brother in the service. ———Kans.

"BROTHER TO HIM THAT IS A GREAT WASTER"

DEAR FRIEND::—

During the past six years I have visited many different ecclesias in Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Texas, etc., and amongst other things, one thing has impressed me more and more and has pained me much—the careless way the Lord's tracts are treated by many of the consecrated children of God, and also by some of the ecclesias as a whole.

Just a few samples: (1) I was boarding with a prominent brother and sister in the truth during the year 1916, and at different times I picked up truth literature which was thrown down on the ground and scattered over the lawn and back yard. I also picked up quite a number of colporteur envelopes in good condition. Finally I took the whole assortment and showed it to the brother, and asked him to take better care of the Lord's literature. He promised me to be more faithful in the future.

(2) Recently I noticed several thousand copies of the Lord's literature going to waste in an upstairs store room in the home of a sister. A little ecclesia of about nine members met at said home three times a week. Pilgrim brothers from the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY conduct meetings there when they come to town.

I have noticed similar conditions in other ecclesias. I feel it my duty to notify those in charge at headquarters of these deplorable conditions. From time to time we read glowing accounts in THE WATCH TOWER of the great amount of tracts sent out and distributed by the members of the International Bible Students Association—some years as high as 50,000,000 copies. To know that some of that quantity remain piled up in basements, garrets, barns, woodsheds, closets, etc., dusty and time-worn, in many of the homes of the friends in the United States and Canada, is a shame! (Luke 16:10) I am sorrowfully,

Your brother in Christ, LORENZO TRAUB.—Ky.

GREAT HELP RECEIVED FROM V. D. M. QUESTIONS

DEAR BRETHREN:—

Your favor of the 9th, re my answers to V. D. M. questions, received. I wish to express my appreciation of the same and my increasing love for God and his great plan and gratitude for all the privileges of study and helps in growth afforded by the dear servants of the Lord at Brooklyn, and elsewhere.

I have received great inspiration in the study of the V. D. M. Questions, and spent not one or two days in the study of them, but all the time I could spare for a month. They are indeed deep questions, and require skill in answering briefly. I feared I had fallen far short of the required percentage.

I thank you for your patience in considering them. I will endeavor to continue their study, so as to become more proficient in expression of these great truths. I desire, too, the character growth necessary to please him and to attain the kingdom.

May the dear Father continue his blessing upon you all and his work in your hands. With much Christian love in him, MRS. E. S. WEBSTER.—S. Dakota.

LEAVES AN EVERLASTING MONUMENT

DEAR FRIENDS:—

Our heart rejoices as we think of the glorious reward which has now come to our dear Brother Russell. Surely he did a noble work, and has left behind an everlasting monument to his fidelity, in the six volumes of SCRIPTURE STUDIES, in all the faithful warnings and exhortations in THE WATCH TOWER and his sermons!

We loved him for his faithful service, his untiring energy, and his devoted loyalty to the glorious cause to which he had consecrated his life. We are glad that he rests from his labors, and we are sure that his works do follow him. All the friends are calm and feel sure that the Lord is still at the helm and that Romans 8:28 is still true.

Doubtless other and more varied experiences and problems face the Lord's dear ones on this side the veil, to still further test our faith and patience; but we need not fear, for the "Lord is for us."

We should all heed carefully the noble words of warning left us by our dear Pastor in the November 1 WATCH TOWER. In the meantime let us also heed our Master's words, "Let not your heart be troubled!" Very soon, if faithful, we also shall join the ranks of those who have gone before; and what a blessed reunion that will be! How glad we will be to meet all those dear saints, our faithful devoted Pastor and our glorious Lord and Head!

We are praying for all at headquarters, that each one may have the "grace sufficient" to wisely and properly meet the new duties and responsibilities thus suddenly thrust upon them. May the dear Lord richly bless your hearts. Brethren, pray for us also.

Your brother and servant in His service,

R. H. BARBER.

GREATEST BLESSING OF HIS CONSECRATED LIFE

DEAR BRETHREN:—

The spiritual joy and refreshment of study and recording the great divine plan of God as outlined by the enclosed V. D. M. Question blanks has been the greatest blessing of my consecrated life. How thankful I feel to God that he has seen fit to grant me, even me, a knowledge of his glorious plan for the blessing of all.

My heart fills with gratitude and praise; for although I have been a consecrated being, a "new creature in Christ," since 1908, yet never before has the effulgence of the light of the Gospel been so gloriously mine. If the answering of these questions has brought as much joy to all who have so far answered them, there should be the greatest rejoicing in the church that has ever been experienced.

Surely all who have not answered them do well to do so speedily!

I anxiously await your decision as to granting the degree "V. D. M."; for I do want to be corrected should I be incorrect even in only one little item. In joy and expectancy,

By his grace, ELBERT THOMPSON.—Wash.

AWAKE TO THE NEARNESS OF THE KINGDOM

DEAR BRETHREN:—

Resolved, That our heart-felt sympathy be expressed to the members of the Bethel family and Brooklyn Tabernacle, who because of their fellowship with our departed Pastor are most keenly affected by the finishing of his labors. Be it further

Resolved, That while confident that our beloved Pastor is now among the glorified with Christ, we awaken more keenly to the nearness of the Messianic kingdom, increasing our zeal; and that recognizing the manner in which the work of the Society has been arranged, we will in every way possible coöperate with the work, continuing the promulgation of the Gospel of good tidings. APPRECIATIVE WORDS FROM A STRANGER

GENTLEMEN:—

I condole with you in the great loss you have sustained in losing dear Pastor Russell. I was ill at the time with an attack of heart trouble. It was a shock to me; I never felt so bad about a stranger. I was in hopes of hearing him some time. He was a man of God.

I thank you for the book and paper you so kindly sent me. I will buy another book some time, when I can.

Very cordially yours, MRS. S. ROBERTS.—Mass.

ONE YEAR'S RETROSPECTION

DEAR BRETHREN IN CHRIST:—

It is about a year since I became interested in Pastor Russell's STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES, having first read his lectures in the San Francisco Bulletin, and almost immediately following, I ordered the first volume, and I think the fourth and fifth; then the whole six. I have since had a few of the first volumes circulating, with the hope that they will be appreciated as I appreciate the light. There has been a continual flow of light as I read volume after volume. Am now reading the sixth and still progressing, and anticipate more pleasure, truth and strength as I peruse them again. But all this has not been without its trials. I can now see my own weakness and unworthiness. I can see the pitiful condition of the world, the confusion, the egotism of man. Romans 1:25—what a meaning and what a picture!

A year ago, in my estimation the Bible was not much of a book. I thought it something of a history, but not to be taken too seriously. No doubt I gave my opinion in that way many times, and I had never read it; in fact, I knew nothing about it, but was willing to express my opinion just the same! Perhaps this came from the fact that I was reared a Roman Catholic. In my boyhood days we had Bible History, a book of its own kind, and no doubt for its own purpose.

What a difference in one year! All the years before I began to read SCRIPTURE STUDIES, I was aimlessly knocking about, in mental slavery and full of self-conceit. I was seeking truth, and I thought I saw truth in Socialism that was better than our churches of today. In Christian Science, I thought I saw something better than the hell of torment, but could not see how Mrs. Eddy could take what she wanted of the Bible and leave out the rest! I could not see real Christianity in a capitalized Christianity. I mean, I thought Christ's church should be where his people are; and then I could not see anything very definite in Christian Science; yet I was trying to master it when I read Pastor Russell's lectures and began sending for his books. Now I see how logical and reasonable the law of God is—just what it should be! How could a Master Builder be without a definite plan! And how corroborative the Bible is of this wonderful and yet so reasonable plan! The higher critics in their conceit have caused a world of confusion. I shudder when I think of the blindness in Catholicism. Surely Catholicism is closely related to heathenism! Last-hour repentance is one of the strong points of the Roman Catholic church. That in itself shows the blindness that is upon Catholics; and the others are very much the same.

Sincerely yours in Christ, C. J. FRY.—Calif.

WILL CONTINUE TO CO-OPERATE IN THE WORK

Resolved, That we feel keenly the loss of our Pastor and friend, but rejoice in the assurance that he is now with the Lord in glory; and that his passing into the heavenly courts has quickened our zeal to press more faithfully along the "narrow way" that we, too, may join that happy throng. And be it further

Resolved, That we hereby assure the faithful officers of the W. T. B. & T. Society of our continued coöperation and hearty support in the advancement of the glad tidings so long as this work is conducted in the manner and spirit as exemplified by our beloved Pastor; and be it further

Resolved, That we will continue to pray for the general interests of the work, that while we cannot now ask God to bless our dear Pastor as we have formerly done, yet we can and will ask him to bless the memory of our dear Brother Russell. ATLANTA ECCLESIA.—Ga.

"THINKING MORE EARNESLY THAN EVER BEFORE"

DEAR BRETHREN:—

The reading of the article about the V. D. M. Questions in the June 1 WATCH TOWER set me at thinking more earnestly than ever before, what a great responsibility, as well as a privilege, it is to be a servant of the Lord and the brethren. By studying those questions more carefully, I came to the conclusion that I could not have the Lord's approval in letting this opportunity go by to give testimony of what I have learned in the school of Christ, since he has called me out of darkness into his marvelous light.

So, dear Brethren, I kindly ask you to send me one of those V. D. M. Question blanks, so that by trying to answer them, I may show forth his praises. With much Christian love.

Your brother and servant in Christ, C. NOUSEN.—Wis.

LONG-LOOKED-FOR SEVENTH VOLUME

Last winter, under the supervision of the SOCIETY, the compilation of the matter for the Seventh Volume was begun. A short time ago the work was finished and sent to the printer. It was learned that, in order to get the volume out this summer at all on account of other heavy contracts which might later interfere, the publication must be put upon the press at once. Hence it was rushed; and when the printing was about done, it was thought that the volume might be placed in a carton and sent to TOWER subscribers, so that everyone might receive it at the same time; this was done. The price is sixty cents per volume. Increased cost of paper and labor makes the cost of the book more.

Brother Russell often spoke about writing the seventh volume, and one of his last utterances about it was to this effect: "Whenever I find the key, I will write the seventh volume; and if the Lord gives the key to someone else, he can write it"—or words to that effect. Brother Russell's modesty and humility may have prevented him from seeing the key. When you read the seventh volume, you may readily discover that Brother Russell himself is the key. This volume shows Brother Russell's relationship to the church as the seventh messenger. It is quite wonderful to see how this is shown both in Revelation and in Ezekiel, and both books are herein harmonized.

The SOCIETY feels quite sure that the friends in reading this volume will greatly rejoice and it hopes that the book will be a strength and comfort to the church in the hour of need. To colporteurs and others the price of the volume, in lots of fifty, will be forty cents, carriage added. The SOCIETY hopes that the colporteurs will take up the sale of it quickly.

We take this method of acknowledging receipt of remittances for the volume, and also for orders for it and to give assurance that these will be filled as rapidly as possible.

Orders for Karatol and India paper editions are being entered on the books. These orders will be filled as soon as these editions are ready—about six weeks. Karatol, 60c India paper, leather bound, $1 postpaid.

THE FAITH-BATTLES OF THE KING'S OWN BRIGADE

"Fight the good fight of faith; lay hold on eternal life."—1 Timothy 6:12.

Paradoxical as it may seem, the church of Christ are the greatest warriors the world has ever known. Yet the followers of Christ are instructed to be peace-makers, to "follow peace with all men," to "live peaceably with all," so far as in them lies. This, however, is on the principle that "he that ruleth his own spirit is greater than he that taketh a city." (Matthew 5:9; Hebrews 12:14; Romans 12:18; 14:19) Nevertheless, this class are called upon to "Fight the good fight," the fight of faith.

In our text St. Paul is addressing only the brigade of the "King's Own," the body of Christ, the consecrated church. As the mouthpiece of the great Captain of our salvation, the Apostle gives this injunction to the loyal soldiers of the cross. It would be wholly out of order for an officer to issue commands to those who have never joined his army, who do not recognize his authority. So it is very evident that the world is not addressed here. This is likewise shown by the introduction to all the apostolic epistles; for they are each addressed "to the saints in Christ Jesus." St. Paul, as a faithful lieutenant, gives us here the instruction of his superior, the Lord Jesus, the great General-in-Chief of Jehovah's Army.

Jehovah has another great army, an agency which he is now using in this great time of trouble; but the army referred to in our text is composed only of the most faithful soldiers of the cross. It is a picked company of the bravest and staunchest type—the "King's Own." As viewed from the world's standpoint it is not large in numbers; its excellence consists in its quality rather than in quantity. To these the instructions come that the fight is on, and that our great Commander-in-Chief expects each soldier to do his duty, to stand bravely by the colors and bear them up.

OUR BATTLE NOT WITH FELLOW CREATURES

Against whom do these soldiers fight? Against what do they fight? We answer, Our battle is not against our fellow creatures, nor with carnal weapons. Indeed we can have large sympathy for even our most relentless foes, who, having not been enlightened as to the cause of our warfare, are willing and ready, to the extent that modern civilization will permit, to despitefully use us, to persecute us and say all manner of evil against us falsely. We can readily see that they are blinded in considerable measure either by their own prejudice and passion or by the great adversary's delusive doctrines, superstitions, etc. In most cases it is probably both. Hence our warfare is not directed against these; and as opportunity offers we are glad to do them good, "in meekness instructing those that oppose themselves"—set themselves in opposition to us.

When dealing with these, therefore, so far from battling with them and resisting evil with evil, we return good for evil, gentleness for rudeness, kindness for discourtesy, as our Captain has given us instruction. We seek to do good to those who speak evil of us, that thus the eyes of their understanding may, if possible, be opened to discern that there is such a thing as the spirit of love, of generosity and forbearance; whereas they suppose that all are actuated by the same malevolent, bitter spirit, the same spirit of selfishness, that controls themselves.

Our fight is against Sin, the great taskmaster who captured our race six thousand years ago and who has held mankind as slaves from then until now. A few only have burst these bonds of slavery, through the grace of God, and are now enlisted in warfare against this enslaver. Satan, through whom the great taskmaster gained possession of mankind, is also the special enemy of the soldiers of Christ. But our battle is not directly with Satan, nor are we to "bring against him a railing accusation." Rather we are to say with Michael —our great Captain—"The Lord rebuke thee"; and therefore we are to await the Lord's time and the Lord's way for rebuking Satan. Nevertheless, we are to resist him; we are to resist his influence, his deceptions and his endeavors to mislead us into error and sin.

The Lord instructs us through the Apostle that "we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities and powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against wicked spirits in heavenly places"—the "powers of the air." (Ephesians 6:12-18) Satan, as the great general of the army of Sin, has largely to do with all the various influences against which we battle. It is his cunning, his "wiles," that supervise the battle against us; and since he is a spirit being of a high order, and therefore much more intelligent than ourselves, the contest would be a very unequal one without a still more powerful spirit Leader. But we are not left helpless to battle against superior wisdom and cunning. Our Chief Captain, the Lord Jesus, has conquered Sin, and has been exalted to the highest position in the universe next to Jehovah. So we can confidently say, "Greater is he that is on our part than all they that be against us." Neither Satan nor his cohorts of evil spirit nor all his deluded earthly agents can harm us while we trust in our great Captain and obey his instructions faithfully.

OUR ENEMIES—THE WORLD, THE FLESH, THE DEVIL

The Apostle Paul seems to sum up the agencies through which our great enemy Sin seeks again to conquer us, as three—the world, the flesh, and the devil. All who have the spirit of the world are deceived by the arts of the adversary, Satan, who will endeavor to draw us away from the warfare in which we have enlisted, to draw us back into the world and its vanities. With this spirit of the world we must do battle. It is to be fought against and resisted. We must not permit its enticements, its ambitions, its pride, again to overpower us and bring us into bondage. These we must resist steadfastly; and it is a daily battle.

But the most crucial and continuous part of our battle as soldiers of the Lord is with our own flesh. This is ever with us. Ever since Sin captured mankind in the person of father Adam, its slavery has been conducive to mental, moral and physical degradation. Its only tendency is to evil, and that continually; and only as we become rid of its binding influences and perverted tastes, desires, ambitions and hopes which sin cultivates, are we able to see matters in their true light and to have even a faint glimpse of our naturally degraded and fallen condition. But our great Captain has redeemed us from this slavery with his own precious blood, has delivered us from the thraldom of Sin; and so long as we keep our eyes of faith fixed upon him and follow wherever he leads, we shall not be reenslaved.

But we must ever bear in mind that we are still tabernacling in fallen, earthly bodies, which have in them the motions of sin. These the Lord leaves with us to practise on and to develop in as new creatures. Consequently while we are now free in Christ, and with our minds we are serving our heavenly King, and are enlisted under the banner of the King's Son, fighting in his great army corps, yet we are still liable to temptations from without and within; and we must never for one instant trust to our own power or strength to stand. We find ourselves still harassed more or less by the perverted tastes and inclinations of our flesh toward the service of the old taskmaster. Thus we find that our battle with our old nature is also a daily battle, and that we require daily strength from above, from the Giver of all good.

CONSTANT VIGILANCE NECESSARY

Our flesh, though reckoned dead, and legally dead, is actually alive, and necessitates continual watchfulness and prayer on our part. But with the great Apostle Paul we should be able to say: "I keep my body under, and bring it into subjection, lest, while I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway." (1 Corinthians 9:27) When Satan attacks us, he appeals to these enemies in our own flesh and seeks to encourage these in a warfare against us as new creatures, as soldier of the army of the Lord. It is through our fleshly weaknesses and tendencies that the spirit of the world gains closest approach to us and seeks to recapture us and lead us back into the old slavery.

The new creature is beset, surrounded on every hand, by enemies seeking our spiritual disaster. We must battle—battle for ourselves—battle for our liberty, battle for victory over our own fleshly infirmities and inclinations, battle against the spirit of this present evil world, and against the delusions and snares set for our feet by our wily foe, Satan, who seeks to make evil appear good and good appear evil, and right appear undesirable. No wonder that the Christian soldier is urged in the Word of the Lord to be continually watchful and to have on the "whole armor of God." No wonder he is cautioned against his wily foes, and especially those of his own flesh!

"PRAISE IS COMELY FOR THE RIGHTEOUS"

Thanks be to God for the great Captain of our salvation! Thanks be to God for the great armory of his blessed word, from which we obtain the "helmet of salvation," the intellectual knowledge to protect us from the delusions of our own natural, perverted sense, and from the deceptive wiles of the adversary of our souls! Thanks be to God for the "breastplate of righteousness," the merit of our Redeemer, which covers us and compensates for all our imperfections and blemishes, which protects our vitals from the enemy's darts! Praise his name for the shield of faith, of trust, of confidence in him "who bought us with his own precious blood," of assurance that he who has begun a good work in us will complete it! Praise be to him for the "sandals," the preparation to endure hardness patiently as good soldiers! We praise him for the wonderful "sword of the spirit," the Word of his truth, a weapon both offensive and defensive, by which we can resist our great enemy and slay our internal foes, and "come off more than conquerors through him that loved us and bought us."

We are fighting on behalf of ourselves and on behalf of each other. We are fighting to the death—the death of the old creature—to maintain our liberty and that of each other. The Apostle says: "Ye have not yet resisted unto blood, fighting against sin" (Hebrews 12:4); but we must continue the fight until we have poured out our blood in the glorious cause in which we have enlisted. It is a fight to the finish. We must give no quarter to the enemy, nor seek to spare ourselves. We are not of those who flee to the rear in time of severe conflict. When the battle waxes hottest, there the faithful soldier will surely be found, face to the foe. There are no cowards in these ranks—no ignoble deserters! We rejoice to defend the honor of our King, the majesty of his righteous government.

THE PARTICULAR OBJECT OF THE WAR

There is another feature of our warfare aside from these which we have mentioned. To observe this feature with clearness and distinctness we must take an elevated position and note not only the entire trend of the conflict, which has now been in progress for over eighteen centuries, but also the particular object which the King himself has declared shall be attained by this great war. It is this: Not only the church, but the entire human race, were "sold under sin" by the disobedience of our first parent, Adam. And our great Redeemer, our Captain who bought us with his precious blood, gave his life as a "propitiation for our sins; and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world." (1 John 2:2) Thus he purchased the right, not only to release those who are now enlisted as his soldiers, but also to release from the power and slavery of Sin all the slaves of this dread taskmaster.

The great Redeemer has not been prosecuting the work of releasing all these slaves up to the present time, but has been confining his work to the releasing of a special few, a little flock, a small, choice company, that these may be used in the later features of his work as associates and joint-heirs with himself. So all the slaves of Sin who so desire are yet to be delivered through the instrumentality of those who are fighting under the banner of the King of heaven. When their mighty warfare has been finished, these faithful soldiers will be exalted to reign with the King's Son.

What a glorious prospect, what a benevolent ambition is thus set before us in the Gospel, in respect to the future work of all who are now called to be sons of God, joint-heirs with Jesus Christ, and good soldiers in his cause—the cause of righteousness and truth. Oh, how anxious we are that we shall be "overcomers," that we may inherit these blessed privileges—secure this great boon of association with our Redeemer in his work of blessing "all the families of the earth!"

Inspired by this vision of future glory, let us return to a further consideration of the requirements of this special, select company which the great King has chosen as particularly his own. Every soldier knows at the time of his enrollment that he is sure to see service, and not only in one battle, but in many; and that although there will be times of special fighting, there will never be a time until the close of the war, when there will be a cessation of hostilities. We may desert if we choose, for none are drafted in this army, but all are at liberty to abandon the cause if they wish. None are held in bondage; but true soldiers should be always at their post.

MANY COUNTERFEIT ARMY CORPS

Our Captain desires in this army only those who serve the truth in the love of it, who have a real desire for service. All others are in the wrong ranks, if they essay to join themselves to the King's brigade. The charge to each of these true soldiers is: "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee the crown of life." (Revelation 2:10) Only in death can we finish our course, and be mustered out of the war.

All who truly desire to be soldiers of Christ must beware of certain deceptions which the great adversary brings forward, by which he would get us into the wrong army, by appearing as an angel of light, as a servant of righteousness, as a fighter in the Lord's cause. He has organized numerous false army corps, into which he endeavors to attract all who learn something of the liberty of Christ and who wish to become his soldiers. In order to make the matter the more deceptive, the adversary carefully guards against any intimation of his relationship with these. Indeed, he puts forth as leaders and under-officers in these various armies as many of the soldiers of the cross as he can get into a deluded condition, that these armies may be the more attractive to those who are seeking the service of the true King.

These armies are not as select as the King's army; but they offer many inducements to soldiers, and attract very many who are really servants of this great enemy of the King, because they promise great rewards and little or no fighting, and a generally pleasant and social camp life. These conditions of enlistment seem so much more favorable than those made in enlisting in the more select army, and on the whole these other army corps are so large, so fine and so attractive in appearance, that many of the soldiers of the cross make the mistake of enlisting under some one of these wrong banners.

The banner of the "King's Own" is emblazoned with a cross and a crown and on the reverse side are the names of the great King and of the great General-in-Chief. The law of this army is briefly comprehended in one word—"Love." Hence the soldiers who are taking the proper care to be guided into the right company, who have listened with the proper diligence to the King's directions, will make no mistake. If any true soldiers of the King have inadvertently gotten into the wrong ranks, they are sure later to see their mistake; and then they promptly withdraw and join the ranks of the faithful.

A "FIGHT OF FAITH" INDEED

Our text calls this good fight a "fight of faith," and it is very properly so called; for it is a fight of faith in every particular. It is a fight under an unseen Leader and against an unseen foe. It is only by the eye of faith that we recognize the Captain of our salvation, and only by means of the Word of God do we recognize the wily leader who opposes us. It is a warfare which can be successfully conducted only by earnest prayer and constant watchfulness. If we begin to trust in our own strength and prowess, and forget to look always to our Captain for instructions, we are certain to weaken before our enemy, and are in continual danger of defeat. But with our eyes fixed on him, and keeping our banner held aloft as an inspiration, we can never fail. We can exclaim with the Apostle: "Thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ!"

This faith which we must have to be true soldiers is not only an intellectual belief in God, but both head and heart—both intellect and affections—must be enlisted. Some have only the head belief. Others have only emotion. But neither of these alone is sufficient. Neither will stand the fiery ordeal. They must abide together if one would endure to the end and win the promised reward. The trial of our faith to which our Lord and the Apostles refer is a trial not only of our intellectual recognition of divine truth, but also of our heart-reliance upon God. In both respects every true child of God will find his faith sorely tried, and as a faithful soldier let him not fail to be armed for the conflict.

If an attack is made upon the intellectual foundation of our faith, we should see to it that we have a "thus saith the Lord" for every item of our belief. Let the Word of God alone settle every question, and let no human philosophies, however ingenious, lead us into error; for if the foundation of faith become unsettled, the superstructure cannot stand when the winds and floods of adversity beat against it. Doubt and fear will cause it to tremble; and when it is thus weakened, the vigilant adversary will surely send a blast of temptation against it, and great will be the soul's peril.

"PURIFIED AND MADE WHITE AND TRIED"

But having the doctrines of the Word of God clearly comprehended as a sure foundation of faith, we need also to look well to the superstructure of heart-reliance, which is really in greater danger from storms and floods than is the foundation, being more constantly exposed. The Apostle Peter, another faithful lieutenant in the army of our King, tells us that a tried, proven faith, a faith that has stood the test of fiery ordeal, and has come off victorious in the testings, is very precious in the sight of God. (1 Peter 1:7) Every time we pass through a conflict and still retain, not only the truth, but also our confidence in God, our reliance on his promises, our integrity of heart and of purpose, and our zeal for righteousness our characters grow stronger, more symmetrical, more Christlike; and hence we are more pleasing to our King, who is subjecting us to discipline to this very end.

Then "think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened to you. But rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings, that when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy." (1 Peter 4:12, 13) The Prophet Daniel says that in this time—the time of the end of the present reign of evil—"Many shall be purified and made white and tried." (Daniel 12:10) Malachi the Prophet compares the trials and tests of this time to a "refiner's fire," and to "fuller's soap." (3:2, 3) The Word of our God abounds with promises, warnings, and counsels to these soldiers who are valiantly fighting for the Lord and for his truth. Many are the words of comfort and consolation found in this storehouse of treasure for the battle-worn people of God—both in the Old Testament and in the New.

Are you, dear brother or sister, beloved comrade in the army corps of our King, hard pressed on every side with temptations to doubt that our great King thinks upon you? Are you tempted to doubt that his love and care are yours, that his precious promises belong to you? Have you grown discouraged and disheartened? Do the foes seem too many and too strong? Do the reproaches come with crushing weight, and do the clouds hang heavy over your seemingly defenseless head? Ah! it is just here that faith must claim her victory! Is it not written, "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even your faith"? (1 John 5:4) Your faith is on trial now. You have been blessed with an understanding of God's glorious truth that few possess, that even the saints of former days did not have. Great blessings and great light call for corresponding faith. Will you rise to the occasion? Will you prove to be a faithful soldier of the cross who will stand the fiery darts of the enemy?

THE BLESSEDNESS OF PERFECT TRUST

Can you doubt that he who cares for the lilies of the field cares for you? Will not he who nourishes and waters them, and who gives them the genial sunshine and the refreshing showers, more surely feed and water and nourish and care for his child? The lilies do not trouble themselves as to whether they shall have what they need for their growth and sustenance. They simply look up to God and receive their needs.

"They do not toil;
Content with their allotted task
They do but grow; they do not ask
A richer lot, a higher sphere,
But in their loveliness appear,
And grow, and smile, and do their best,
And unto God they leave the rest."

A Christian writer has beautifully expressed the proper attitude of the true child of God. He says: "Interpose no barrier to his mighty life-giving power, working in you all the good pleasure of his will. Yield yourself up utterly to his sweet control. Put your growing into his hands as completely as you have put all your other affairs. Suffer him to manage it as he will. Do not concern yourself about it, nor even think of it. Trust him absolutely and always. Accept each moment's dispensation as it comes to you from his dear hands, as being the needed sunshine or dew for that moment's growth. Say a continual 'yes' to your Father's will."

So doing, the soul will surely thrive and grow up into the likeness of the Master, our great Leader and Captain. No sorrow can overtake us except as his dear hand shall administer it. Nothing can come to the child of God by chance. It is blessed to thus yield ourselves wholly to the Lord in perfect trust, confidence and resignation. It brings a peace that none can know who do not place themselves fully in his hands in childlike faith, glad to let him lead where he will. It is a lack of faith that causes a fear to yield ourselves thus wholly to God; and "without faith it is impossible to please him." (Hebrews 11:6) If we really believe in his infinite love for us, and in his infinite wisdom and power, we cannot doubt him.

A NOTEWORTHY EXAMPLE OF FAITH

The beloved Apostle Paul was a noteworthy example of this unwavering faith. He says of himself and of the other Apostles, "Ye have us for an ensample." (Philippians 3:17; 1 Peter 5:3) And noble examples they were of faithfulness, of zeal, of patience, of endurance, of true Christian fortitude and heroism. At the beginning of St. Paul's Christian career, the Lord said of him, "I will show him how great things he must suffer for my name's sake"; and the Apostle was not long in proving the truth of this prediction and assurance. But instead of permitting the prospect of continual tribulation to depress him, he rejoiced in the privilege thus afforded of testifying his love to the Lord. He says: "And now, behold, I go bound in the spirit unto Jerusalem, not knowing the things that shall befall me there; save that the holy Spirit witnesseth in every city, saying that bonds and afflictions await me. But none of these things move me; neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I may finish my course with joy, and the ministry which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the Gospel of the grace of God."—Acts 20:22-24.

Hear the Apostle's testimony of his experiences: "In labors abundant, in stripes above measure, in prisons frequent, in deaths oft. Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes, save one. Thrice was I beaten with rods, once was I stoned, thrice I suffered shipwreck, a night and a day have I been in the deep; in journeyings often, in perils of water, in perils of robbers, in perils of mine own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren; in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness. Besides those things that are without, that which cometh upon me daily, the care of all the churches."—2 Corinthians 11:23-28.

Through all these tribulations the noble Apostle never wavered in his faith in God. Daily he pressed toward the prize: fighting, "not as uncertainly," nor "as one that beateth the air." His singleness of purpose saved him from many temptations which come to those who are more or less double-minded. He followed the course which was sure to win, and no other course would win. He did not gaze around upon the objects on either side of him as he ran; but he kept his eyes steadfastly fixed upon the goal toward which he was bending his every energy.

Thus only can we win this prize held out to us by our God, our great King. Faith and trust in the Lord and fullest heart obedience to him are paramount essentials in our winning out in the glorious warfare in which we are engaged. If our faith be of the proper kind we can say with the Psalmist: "I will fear no evil, for thy rod and thy staff they comfort me." (Psalm 23:4) Such, and such alone, can be led of the Lord, in this time when we must walk by faith and not by sight. Such alone will have the confidence to go forward encountering the many oppositions within and without. Dear brethren, fellow soldiers in this glorious war, let us have such implicit trust and confidence in our Lord Jesus, and such entire and glad submission to his will that all the rage of the enemy, all the privations and hardships of the way, all the storms of shot and shell, the weariness of the soldier's camp life, the dreary marches, the fatigue—nothing—shall cause us to desert our great Captain.

Let each of us prove our mettle. The hosts of heaven are looking down upon us. We do not fight alone. Strength all-sufficient will be ours for every day and hour and moment. The battle will be sharp and short. The conflict of the ages is drawing to its glorious close. Victory is certain to all the loyal soldiers. Ere long the enemy will flee in confusion, and we shall triumph through him who leads us and who can know no defeat.

THE BENEFITS OF TOTAL ABSTINENCE

PROPER LIBERTY IN THE ECCLESIAS

There is a certain amount of Christian liberty that we believe the Lord would be pleased to have exercised by the members of each ecclesia. For instance, suppose that a brother were to go to the home of another brother, and a few friends came in to spend the evening. Suppose that one of these should propose to have some secular music or some social games, and that another would say, "No, let us have a Bible study!" We do not think that it would be proper for the host to reply, "We cannot have a Bible study; for all meetings held must be authorized by our class. So we will have some music or games." This would be a narrow view, an arbitrary one. We could see no objection to the holding of a Bible study under these circumstances.

The brother surely would have the right to decide how the evening should be spent in his own home, and to ask some capable brother to lead the study. And as the host, he might properly say, "We will ask in more of our neighbors for another meeting next week. I have been trying to interest my neighbors in these truths, and I shall be very glad to invite them over to hear the truth presented." We think this would be entirely proper.

If, however, those attending the meetings should desire a regular meeting, it should be turned over to the local class of Associated Bible Students, that they might assign this meeting to a certain evening in this brother's home, if he so desired, or to another home, and might supply a leader. And if certain members of an ecclesia should say, "Let us start another regular meeting," this, we understand, would be improper. They would have a right to start a new ecclesia, but if they did so they would thereby be severing their connection with the ecclesia of which they had been members. This would, we think, be very unwise, except under conditions that made such a course seem a necessity. Thereafter they would have no right to return to the other class and expect to have a voice in its matters, unless they dissolved their connection with the new class. Otherwise, confusion would result.

There must be consistency in all that we do. Those who become members of an ecclesia, by association and by voting in their elections, etc., give up a measure of their personal liberties in order that they may have the advantages of co-operation with others of the Lord's people. But this would not mean such a bondage that we could not have a study in the Bible at any time in our own home or by request in the home of another, without the consent of our class, and that we must therefore spend the evening in some far less profitable way. We are to seek to have the Lord's spirit, the spirit of a sound mind, in all that we do.

THE FIERY FURNACE

THE BOSTON CONVENTION

The convention at Boston is now a matter of history. The pleasure of the personal fellowship of the dear friends is past; but it will be a long, long time before the memory of those pleasant and blessed hours of fellowship will be effaced. We have often heard of the hospitality of the New England people; but when to this were added the graces of the Spirit of the Lord which were manifested by many of the dear friends at Boston, our hearts were made exceedingly glad.

They had placed at our disposal one of the finest auditoriums in the city of Boston—Tremont Temple, the home of the elite Baptist Church Congregation of that city. This beautiful auditorium seats about 3,000; but this was only one of the many conveniences placed at the disposal of the Convention. There were reception rooms, consultation rooms, rest rooms, hospital rooms, if needed, with necessary conveniences; chairman's room, president's room, typists and typewriters, musicians and almost everything one could think of to increase the pleasure and to manifest love and hospitality. And the entertainment committee had given such careful attention to the selection of rooms for the visiting friends that the chairman reported that during the entire Convention he had not received even one complaint from any one regarding this department. On the other hand, he had heard many expressions of appreciation and satisfaction.

The opening day, Wednesday, was exceedingly hot, the temperature ranging between 90 and 100. Thursday seemed to be even warmer; but on Friday the hot wave was broken, and during the remainder of the Convention the weather was agreeable—excellent convention weather.

However, the "feast of fat things" which the Lord provides was the chief desire of all those in attendance. Thousands no doubt had been praying for the Lord's rich blessing upon the Convention; and he richly fulfilled his promise that where two or three might be gathered together in his name he would be there, and would fulfil his promise—"Blessed are those servants whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching; verily I say unto you that he shall gird himself and make them to sit down to meat and will come forth to serve them." It was the testimony of all who came seeking a blessing that the Lord fulfilled his promises. Truly he gave "things new and old" out of his Word; and he caused such rejoicing of heart and manifested his presence and blessing to such an extent that many expressed themselves to the effect that they had never attended a Convention where the presence of the Lord seemed to hover more lovingly over every session and to bless each waiting heart!

The Convention was opened promptly on time with an address of welcome by Brother Margeson, chairman of the Board of Elders of the Boston ecclesia. Response was made by Brother Rutherford, President of the Society, accepting the hospitality of the Boston friends, and calling attention to the great privileges which are ours in attending the Convention, with the thought of being in the presence of our Lord Jesus and the fellow-members of the body and of the great opportunity of pressing forward in the race which is now so nearly completed and of the ever brightening hope that we might finish our course with joy. The Convention was then turned over to the chairman. Following was an hour of rejoicing at a praise and testimony meeting. In the afternoon there was a short praise and testimony meeting, followed with addresses by Brothers Howlett and Graham. In the evening Part I of the CREATION DRAMA was shown; and notwithstanding the exceeding hot weather the attendance was gratifying.

Thursday was called "Our Warfare Day." In the morning a praise and testimony service was followed by discourses by Brothers Thornton and Van Amburgh; in the afternoon a praise and testimony service, then discourses by Brothers Thorn and Rutherford. Part II of the DRAMA was shown in the evening; and again the attendance was good.

Friday was designated as "Consecration Day" and opened with a praise and testimony service, followed with discourses by Brothers Eshleman and Toole; and in the afternoon there were discourses from Brothers Herr, Stephenson and Barker. In the evening Part III of the PHOTO-DRAMA was shown.

Saturday was "Harvesters' Day," and opened with a delightful morning praise and testimony meeting, particularly for the colporteurs and the pastoral workers. Surely it was inspiring to listen to the many account of the Lord's blessing resting upon those labors of love! This was followed by a discourse on baptism by Brother Sturgeon, after which forty sisters and twenty-eight brethren symbolized their consecration unto death by immersion in water. In the afternoon a short prayer and praise service was followed with discourses by Brothers Brenneisen and Woodworth. Brother Woodworth related some interesting incidents relative to the compilation of the Seventh volume, and spoke on the parable of the penny and some other things. In the evening Part IV of the DRAMA was shown to an appreciative audience. This closed the meetings at the Temple.

Sunday all the services were held at the Arena. The day was designated as "Kingdom Day." The morning testimony service was much enjoyed, and was followed with discourses by Brothers Meggison and Macmillan, both of which were much appreciated. The afternoon was intended particularly for the public; and the discourse by Brother Rutherford was on the subject, "Are We at the End of the World?" It was estimated that there were between 3500 and 4000 present. Close attention was given, and many were the expressions of interest. At seven o'clock the love-feast was held, preceded by remarks by Brother Rutherford, encouraging the dear friends to run with patience the race set before them, to hold fast that which they have, to gird up the loins of their mind and to give close heed to that which they had heard, lest at any time they let these things slip. The expressions of appreciation and the good-bys and the-Lord-be-with-you during the love-feast were encouraging and uplifting. It is estimated that there were 1100 at the love-feast. The attendance at the different sessions of the Convention averaged from 1000 to 1400. Truly it was good to be there; and all felt that the Lord had surely met with us by the way and blessed us! We trust that each who attended returned to his home more determined than ever to press along the narrow way and to seek diligently to make his calling and election sure. May we have the great privilege of attending the general assembly of the church of the first-borns, which we hope will convene soon!

ANOTHER NEW REJOICING READER

DEAR BRETHREN IN CHRIST:—

For the past few months I have been a very earnest student of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES, and words will not express my joy and delight in this spiritual food that they show me in the Bible.

One day last Spring, as I entered one of our leading stores, a group of men, including our Baptist minister, several of our leading men in business and politics, and also an escaped missionary from Armenia, were having a very animated conversation about God and why he would allow this terrible war to go on. The superintendent of our Presbyterian Sunday School said, "The Bible says that God repented that he had made man, and I think it is too bad if human beings have got to suffer for God's mistakes."

Not one of the other men offered one word in God's defense, and as I could not help hearing their conversation, my heart just ached to step up and say, "Excuse me, gentlemen, but God does not make mistakes."

I am just a common farmer's wife and my natural modesty and timidity held me back, and besides I was very young in the truth then. But I know it was not fear that held me back, for if it had been a group of women, I know I should have spoken.

Just before this, in the same store, the proprietor of the store and our Methodist minister were having a similar conversation as I entered, and I saw that the storekeeper's heart was very much troubled, and that neither the Methodist nor Baptist minister could help him any or offer any explanations of the troublous times we are passing through.

As soon as I could I had a quiet talk with him alone in the rear of his store, and got him to promise to read the first volume. He kept it on his desk in the store, and soon after he told me that it had disappeared and could not be found. I said to never mind, I only hoped it had gone where it would do some one good, and I then took him my copy in cloth of Vol. 2, as he seemed very much interested in Christ's second coming.

Your sister in Christ, ALLIE J. JACKSON.—N. Y.

DAILY PRAYING FOR HUMILITY AND—DEATH TO SELFISHNESS

DEAR BRETHREN IN THE ONE HOPE:—

I have received the answers to the V. D. M. Questions, which you so kindly went over for me the second time; and words cannot express my rejoicing that I have received the 85% required to pass this examination. I truly believe that this is the Lord's work and one of the ways of proving his saints. I appreciate your kindly suggestions on the questions as numbered, and also in the reading of the six volumes at least twice; and with the help of the Lord I intend doing this as soon as I can; for I realize that we are living in a time when we need the whole armor of God to withstand the fiery darts of the great adversary, who is seeking every day to deceive the Lord's little ones. Each day I am seeking to be more humble and to keep self out of sight and to grow more in the knowledge of the Lord and in the graces of his Spirit.

Accept of my love and my heart's thanks for your kindly labor of love in giving me a second chance in examining my answers to the V. D. M. Questions. I feel the Lord's approval now in speaking the glad tidings of his glorious kingdom, which we believe is so near at hand.

With much Christian love, J. M. MOUNTFORD.—Va.

THE PASTOR'S VOICE IN HER HOME

DEAR BRETHREN IN CHRIST:—

In regard to the Angelophone, I am well pleased with it, and so glad to have our dear Pastor's noble voice in my home, as we long so much to hear him lecture and to see him as he was—so good, loving and kind to all.

We are the only ones in the truth in this part of the country. My husband and his brother's family came here seven years ago from Eastern Tennessee. Our Uncle got some truth literature. As he was a Baptist minister, he preached it at once. He stood severe trials for the truth's sake, and was faithful unto death, which came a year ago. We feel that he is with Brother Russell in glory.

Yours in hope, MRS. CORA WILMOTH.—Mo.

DEVOTED LOVE FOR DEAR BROTHER RUSSELL

DEAR BRETHREN:—

I wish to extend to you all as a family my deepest sympathy in your great bereavement, which has befallen you in the loss of our dear Pastor Russell. The sad intelligence of our Pastor's passing away was a great shock. I was greatly overcome. My husband and I devotedly loved Brother Russell. We could not help it, for he had done so much for us. He was the means of opening our blind eyes. His Bible helps gave us a more beautiful and harmonious understanding of God's great plan of the Bible. Praise the dear Lord for it all!

My husband was one of our dear Pastor's first friends. This was in the year 1886. Brother Merrill passed away Feb. 8, 1915. He went "in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye." He passed away very peacefully, at our cozy home, in his easy rocking-chair. He wanted to go that way. I am all alone, as far as truth people are concerned, and isolated. Thank God I have the truth, and am happy in believing the Bible and believing in God and in his Only Begotten Son—not in human traditions.

My husband was the means of bringing me into the truth, and he was one of the dearest men on earth. We were mutually agreed in believing the Gospel story. My husband was wholly the Lord's. One could see the Christ-like spirit in his countenance. He was so devoted to God and to Christ, thoroughly rooted and grounded in God's plan of salvation! His life was pure and spotless.

When I was married I was a Methodist—didn't know there was such a person on earth as our beloved Pastor Russell. I soon came into the truth when I heard the "glad tidings of great joy." Our beloved Brother Russell—oh, how my loved one and I loved him! We loved every sermon and message that came from his pen—could not live without our dear Pastor's sermons. God and our Savior came first in our hearts, and the plan of salvation.

The grace of God is sufficient for us all in every time of need. My loved one saw our dear Pastor. I never did, but have his photograph. Praise the Lord! I have all the STUDIES, WATCH TOWERS and sermons! Please read this letter to the Bethel family to show them my sympathy for you all. I am looking forward to that great day when I shall go to meet my heavenly Father, my Savior, my loved one, our dear Pastor, and all the dear ones gone before. Love and sympathy to all the brethren and sisters from

DEEP APPRECIATION OF THE TOWER

PRECIOUS BRETHREN IN CHRIST:—

Greetings in the sweet name of Jesus! I have been feasting this morning on the April 15th WATCH TOWER. My! those articles are so good that my heart could not help but thrill with joy! Oh, how good our heavenly Father is! What a glorious feast the dear Lord has prepared for me! Truly it is a feast of fat things! It is actually just what I need that always comes out in THE WATCH TOWER.

"Jesus Anointed at Bethany" is truly a sweeter article than honey. It made my heart leap with joy. Yes, I do want to be more Christlike. Yes, I want to be like "the servant of all," while it is day.

"The Christian's Duty in Time of War" was also a solving of a question in my mind. Those letters of the saints were an encouragement. It makes me put more energy into the battle when I see others doing the same. Be assured, loving brethren, that I appreciate your ministry of love for God and the brethren and that I do remember you at the throne of grace. Praying God's blessing upon your noble efforts, I remain, with much Christian love.

Your Greek brother, GREGORY SAKATOS.—Ohio.

A VOICE FROM IRELAND

DEAR BRETHREN:—

The members of the Belfast ecclesia desire to express their deep sympathy with the dear brethren of the Bethel family at Brooklyn in the passing beyond the veil of our dear Pastor. We hasten to assure you of our loyal cooperation in the harvest work; and we pray always for you all, that the Lord may continue to bless and guide you.

We are looking forward to engaging in the pastoral work without delay and are rejoicing in the privilege. We remain, dear brethren,

Your fellow-servants in the Lord,

BELFAST ECCLESIA.—Ireland.

"WHY DID HE NOT TELL ME?"

MY DEAR BRETHREN:—

Explanatory of the enclosed, I submit the following: About the year 1890 a friend put the volumes of MILLENNIAL DAWN in my hands, but he made no comment as to what they contained other than that they were a work on pre-millennialism. I had never heard of Pastor Russell and, therefore, was not interested in the author. At that time I was an elder in the church and my time was so fully occupied that I did not open the books, not imagining they were very different from other works. Why did not my friend tell me?

Later, I worked in an office with a Bible Student, but he never opened up on me. Once or twice I heard him use the expression, "The truth," and immediately I sized him up as being of "the home of truth" or "new thought" cult. As I had no use for the cults that repudiated the ransom, I had no use for him from a religious standpoint. He never let me know his religion was different. Why did he not tell me?

Still later I was brought in contact with one whom I subsequently learned was a pilgrim. Even he did not broach religion to me, and when I learned he was a Bible Student, I did not know that meant anything different from the general run of beliefs. Why did he not tell me?

Later still I attended now and then the Sunday services of the Bible Students, but always happened in when some ordinary Bible theme was being presented and, therefore, did not know even then that there was a difference. I did not read the literature, for I supposed it to be of the same nature as the discourses, and why take time from the reading of my Bible?

Finally, a friend of mine, a Presbyterian elder, joined the Bible Students and he told me there was a difference. Then the PHOTO-DRAMA OF CREATION came along, and I knew there was a difference. I prayed, "Lord, that which I see not, teach thou me." (Job 34:32) And my eyes were opened wide. Immediately I consecrated and symbolized my consecration at the very first opportunity, which chanced to be at the same time our dear pilgrim brother R. O. Hadley was baptized—October, 1914.

I believe I would have welcomed the truth at any time had I but known there was a difference. As it is, I have lost a lifetime of opportunity for harvest work.

Because of my experience as here narrated, it is my purpose to let my friends in the nominal church know there is a difference and a delightful and blessed difference!

ANGELOPHONE IMPROVED WITH USE

DEAR BRETHREN:—

We received the Angelophone on the 8th inst. We are indeed thankful that Pastor Russell's voice is audible. We know that it is he who is speaking. How great are God's wisdom and power! Our Pastor's memory will live throughout the ages. Through his teachings God has drawn us closer to himself.

We would have written sooner, but were waiting to see if the Angelophone would improve with use. We find that it does. We hope that the dear friends who have been so badly disappointed will find their Angelophones improving in like manner. We very much regret the impatience shown on our part, and will try to improve along that line, as well as along many others. Asking your pardon for being so impatient, we are, dear friends,

Yours in the one hope, ———.—Fla.

DOING WHAT SHE CAN DO TO SPREAD THE TRUTH

MY DEAR BRETHREN:—

Greetings in our dear Redeemer's name! Having read the article in THE WATCH TOWER regarding the V. D. M. questions, I feel that it is meat in due season for me. I received great blessing from it, and now wish to have a blank mailed to me if you please, so that I may know just where I stand in the school of Christ, I am so thankful to the heavenly Father that you had that in THE WATCH TOWER. I feel it was especially for me, I am one of the few who cannot go out in the pastoral work, but I witness to my neighbors and friends as I have the opportunity, and hand out tracts in the car sometimes and to those who come to my door. Once in a while I get a hearing ear, and it makes my heart rejoice. In sincere Christian love,

Your sister in the Lord, by his grace,

THE BOND OF PERFECTION

"And besides all these things, put on love; it is the bond of completeness; and let the peace of the Anointed preside in your hearts, for which you were also called in one body; and be thankful."—Colossians 3:14, 15, Diaglott.

The children of God, walking by faith, rejoice in the hope of the glory of God, and all along their journey are striving to put on the bond of perfection, which is love. To aid us in the development of the likeness of our Lord and Master, God has given us in his Word many great and precious promises.

Love is an inexhaustible subject. Only when we have attained to that perfect state which God has promised as a reward to those who love him supremely shall we be able to love as we ought and to manifest it as we desire.

The Apostle Paul, a faithful servant of Jesus Christ, was wholly devoted to the Lord and his righteous cause; and possessing a keen desire to build up the brethren in the most holy faith, he wrote much to them concerning love. Since he tells us it is the bond of perfection, we can with profit meditate much upon the subject.

What is love? It is the greatest and grandest attribute of character possessed by any creature. The Scripture declares, "God is Love." This does not mean that Love is God, but that in Jehovah is found the perfect expression of love.

The Scriptures show that there is a distinction between our love for God and our love for the brethren. It is well that we get this distinction clearly in our minds, that we may analyze the subject and have a deeper appreciation thereof. Love for God may be defined as a worshipful adoration of Jehovah, a fellowship of spirit, and a joyful submission to his holy will because of our reverence for him and gratitude to him as the Almighty One, for what he has done for us.

WHY DO WE LOVE GOD?

We believe that our heavenly Father is pleased with an intelligent worship of him. The Apostle Peter tells us that we should be able to give a reason for the hope that is in us. (1 Peter 3:15) We should likewise be able to give the reason why we love Jehovah. The reason that must appeal to our minds is the reason which we find in the Word of the Lord.

Sweeter than all things else is love. The human race has had only a taste of that which pertains to life, and never the enjoyment of life with the right thereto, since Adam forfeited that right. Any one who would give to us the thing that we chiefly desire would merit our deepest gratitude. Desiring life, death has ever been the certain portion of man. Desiring love, how few have found its satisfaction! Behold the unselfish desire of God to do good to man, to give him a supreme expression of his love by making provision whereby these deep longings may yet be fully gratified! "God so loved the world that he gave his Only Begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life." (John 3:16) It would be impossible for one to truly love God without having a knowledge of him; and as a man with a reverential mind increases in knowledge of the gracious and loving character of Jehovah, his love necessarily increases.

WHO IS GOD?

Who is the great and mighty One who has taken cognizance of us to provide a means whereby we may obtain life?—the Giver of this unspeakable gift provided for all his obedient creatures? Answer: He is the great First Cause, without beginning and without ending, "from everlasting to everlasting." It is he who created all things for his pleasure and for the joy of those who will love and serve him faithfully. All creation bespeaks his justice, wisdom, love and power. Truly did David, the sweet musician and singer of Israel, say to him: "The heavens relate the glory of God, and the expanse telleth of the works of his hands; day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night showeth knowledge. There is no speech; there are no words; their voice is not heard; but their melody extendeth through all the earth and to the end of the world their words. For the sun hath he set a tabernacle among them."—Psalm 19:1-5, Leeser.

As a youthful shepherd David reveled in the visible creation of God. With the field for his bedchamber, with probably a sheepskin for his mattress and a stone for his pillow, he gazed into the expanse above him with the naked eye and beheld the myriads of stars moving noiselessly through space, and his own heart was moved to adoration and praise, and with reverential mind he gave utterance to these words of worship and devotion.

What might one say if he could behold all the wonders of God's creation? By the use of modern appliances, scientists tell us that they are able to measure the distance to the sun, and even to the Pleiades, supposed to be the throne of Jehovah. They tell us that millions of planets—which are merely the satellites of great suns and which have their own satellites—have been discovered by the use of such instruments; and doubtless if man could stand on the outer rim of the orbit of the farthest world that has been discovered, and gaze on into space with even stronger instruments, millions more of God's wonderful suns with their retinue of planets would appear.

As we have in mind the visible creation of Jehovah and contemplate its wonders, beyond all that man can comprehend, we begin to have a deeper appreciation of the works of King David, when he said on another occasion, "O Lord, how manifold are thy works! In wisdom hast thou made them all! The earth is full of thy riches! So is this great and wide sea, wherein are things creeping innumerable, both small and great beasts. . . . . The glory of the Lord endureth forever; the Lord shall rejoice in his works. I will sing unto the Lord as long as I live; I will sing praises to my God while I have my being. My meditation of him shall be sweet; I will be glad in the Lord."—Psalm 104:24, 25, 31, 33, 34.

Language is a poor vehicle to convey our conception of God; and yet our conception is as nothing compared to what he really is. This is the Mighty One who takes cognizance of man. Who, then, beholding his power and wisdom, would not reverence this great One? He who possesses a reverential mind is led indeed to adore and worship such a God. It was his beloved Son Jesus who said, "This is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." (John 17:3) If to know him and his beloved Son means life, and life in perfection, the greatest thing that we desire, then why should not all with eagerness seek a knowledge of Jehovah and of his Son? Truly, if mankind knew the Lord, the earth would be filled with the creatures who would love and adore him.

But for six thousand years the adversary has blinded man to the goodness of God. As St. Paul declares, "The god of this world [Satan] hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious Gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them."—2 Corinthians 4:4.

GOD'S GREAT PLAN OF REDEMPTION

Let us review some of the reasons why we should have gratitude and why we should worship and adore Jehovah and obey his holy will. Created in the image of God, man lost this by disobedience. In sorrow he went forth to battle against his many foes, and to battle thus unto death. There was no way for him to regain life by his own efforts. But Jehovah in his own due time and in the exercise of his wisdom and loving-kindness sent his dearly beloved Son to redeem man from death. This he did at great cost to himself. He gave up the dearest thing to his heart—that great and unspeakable gift, his Only Begotten! St. John tells us, "In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his Only Begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him. Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins." (1 John 4:9, 10) All this Jehovah did for us without our knowledge, yea, even before our existence. Abstractly, then, we may define love as an unselfish desire to do good, and to do good without regard to whether the recipient knows or does not know of it. This love may include the sentiment of appreciation, or it may be only a sympathetic desire to aid, its scope depending upon the object loved.

HEAVENLY CALLING OF THE GOSPEL AGE

God foreordained before the foundation of the world that Christ Jesus should be the Redeemer and King of the world, and that he should have associated with him in this great work 144,000, designated as members of his body and as his bride. He did not call the angels of heaven to this high and honored place, but his call was issued to some from the children of men. This call was an invitation. Jesus, having ascended into heaven, opened the way to life and immortality! and then the invitation went out, calling some to become joint-sacrificers with him and to share his glory. In phrase more beautiful than human tongue could form, Jehovah sent this call: "Hearken, O daughter, and consider, and incline thine ear; forget also thine own people and thy father's house; so shall the King greatly desire thy beauty; for he is thy Lord, and worship thou him." (Psalm 45:10, 11) Never was a proposal of marriage couched in phrase so sweet! Thus he called us out of darkness into his marvelous light! He called us to a heavenly calling, to be kings and priests unto him and unto Christ, and to reign with Christ in glory; to be joint heirs with him in all blessings to be received at the hands of Jehovah in the ages to come.

Those who hear and respond to this call by fully consecrating themselves to do the will of Jehovah he begets to the divine nature. (James 1:18; 1 Peter 1:3, 4) Such also he anoints at the same time to the high office of kings and priests; and this anointing enables such to grasp the deep things of God's Word. (1 Corinthians 2:9, 10) "The anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you; but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in him."—1 John 2:27.

Foreknowing the church, God aforetime made provision for their feeding and nourishing. He caused to be prepared for their benefit the expression of his will, which is set forth in the holy Scriptures: "For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope." (Romans 15:4) All the types and shadows recorded in the Old Testament and all the exceeding great and precious promises of the New Testament God provided for our benefit—"according as his divine power hath given unto us things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue; whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises, that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature."

COMFORTS, PROTECTS AND DELIVERS

The Lord foreknew that the church would have many trials and sorrows, and that in these they would need comforting assurances; hence he provided in his Word for all such needs. And it is his will that we in turn use this same comfort which we receive to comfort and bless others who journey with us in the narrow way. St. Paul, having this in mind, exultantly exclaimed, "Blessed be God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies and the God of all comfort, who comforteth us in all our tribulation, that we may be able to comfort them which are in trouble, by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God."—2 Corinthians 1:3, 4.

In addition to all this, our dear Father protects us from the evil one; He gives us the assurance that thus he will do. "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that reverence him, and delivereth them." (Psalm 34:7) "There shall no evil befall thee, neither shall any plague come nigh thy dwelling." (Psalm 91:10) King David was a type of the Christ, head and body. David means "beloved," and he prophetically expressed the sentiment of our hearts when he said, "I will love thee, O Jehovah, my strength; the Lord is my rock [solid foundation] and my fortress [invulnerable to any enemy's attack] and my deliverer; my God, my strength, in whom I will trust; my buckler and the power of my salvation, and my high tower. [In this tower the Christian can see what others cannot see, because he is above them.] I will call upon Jehovah, who is worthy to be praised; so shall I be saved from mine enemies." (Psalm 18:1-3) Again says King David, "Blessed be the Lord, who daily loadeth us with benefits—the God of my salvation!" (Psalm 68:19) "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits."—Psalm 103:2.

WHY WE LOVE OUR LORD JESUS

In all that God has done for us, Jesus has been his honored instrument. In every purpose and work the Father and the Son are one. All things are of the Father; all things are by the Son. (1 Corinthians 8:6) If a man of great wealth should give one of us a million dollars that we might use it to the Lord's glory, we should feel very grateful to such an one. But if he would give us all of his millions, and in addition would devote his life, with us, in proclaiming the Message of Messiah's glorious kingdom, surely our hearts would respond with gratitude and love to him!

But Jesus did far greater things for us than this. "For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though he was rich, for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich." (2 Corinthians 8:9) He was rich in heavenly honor, glory and power. By him were all things made, and he enjoyed the glories and blessings of the heavenly realm. All this he left, and took upon himself the form and nature of man, and then surrendered his humanity to the most ignominious death known, in order that we might have life.

It was Jesus himself who said: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends; and ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." (John 15:13, 14) He shed his blood for us; and all who become his friends receive the benefit of the merit of that sacrifice, which leads to life everlasting in a state of supreme happiness. Man comes into the world with burdens; and as he journeys along life's way his burdens increase until he finds the Lord, who graciously says: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy-laden, and I will give you rest." (Matthew 11:28) His love prompts him thus to do.

HIS BRIDE AND JOINT-HEIR

God instituted the relationship of bride and bridegroom. It is the sweetest relationship known to mankind. From the time of the betrothal contract between the bridegroom and bride, they both look forward with sweet anticipation to the full consummation of their agreement. The Prophet of the Lord foretold this beautiful relationship between Jesus and the church, and speaking to the prospective bride as the mouthpiece of the Bridegroom, said, "I will betroth thee unto me in righteousness [and since she has no righteousness or wedding garment of her own, Jesus provides it], and in justice and in loving-kindness and in mercies [suggestion of his own beautiful attributes of character, which she must also work out in her character, while wearing and at the same time embroidering the wedding garment]; I will even betroth thee unto me in faithfulness [suggesting that she as well as he must be true and loyal to the end], and thou shalt know Jehovah." (Hosea 2:19, 20) Thus the Bridegroom offers her the wonderful blessing of being associated with himself forever in unspeakable joy, and as an additional reward, that she shall know the great and mighty God of the universe, the One who inhabiteth eternity.

AMBASSADORS FOR CHRIST

To be an ambassador of a government, such as that of the United States, to foreign courts, is a position greatly desired by honorable men. To be an ambassador of the King of kings and Lord of lords in this world, to whom the message of reconciliation is committed to be delivered to the peoples of earth, is an honor not within the comprehension of the human mind, and is greatly to be desired above all honors that could be conferred by any official position upon this earth. Such an honor the Apostle Paul declares Jesus grants unto every one of his followers who love him and manifest their love for him.—2 Corinthians 5:20.

THE PROOF OF OUR LOVE

How may we know that we love God and love the Lord Jesus? It will not always do to rely upon our feelings, because feelings are deceptive. Sometimes we feel joyful and exuberant, and at other times exactly the reverse. We must have more certain proof than this. "Jesus said, If a man love me he will keep my words; and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him and make our abode with him. He that loveth me not keepeth not my sayings." "If ye love me, keep my commandments." (John 14:23, 24, 15) "This proves our love to God—that we keep his commandments with joyful heart."—1 John 5:3.

The foregoing Scriptures approve of the element given in the definition of love as it applies Godward; namely, a worshipful adoration for God and the Master, a reverence for him, and gratitude to him for what he has done for us, bringing a joyful submission to his will. Who could know these precious things bestowed upon us by our Father and fail to love such a God and Father!

LOVE FOR THE BRETHREN

The more we understand the love of God and of Christ Jesus as manifested for us, and the more we increase in our love for them, the greater the necessity appears to us for loving the brethren, and the greater desire we have for the perfection of our love toward them.

Love for the brethren may be defined as an unselfish desire to do them good, an affectionate and tender regard, and a kinship of spirit; and this in proportion as we see the manifestation of the spirit of the Master. If we possess this love, we shall desire to do good to the brethren, even to the degree of sacrificing our own interests, having in mind the one purpose of building up the brethren in the most holy faith, that they may grow more and more into the likeness of the Lord. The comprehensiveness of this heavenly love is shown in the words of the Apostle Paul in Ephesians 3:13-21.

WHY SHOULD WE LOVE THE BRETHREN?

Our love or lack of love for the brethren will prove the extent of our love for the Lord. When we have the proper appreciation of the fact that the brethren in Christ are really a part of the Christ, and when we appreciate what it means to love God and to love Jesus, our hearts will increase in love for the brethren. Jesus said that the proof of our love for him and for the Father would be made known by the manner in which we keep his commandments. Among his commandments is a very important one. He said to his disciples, "A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another: as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." (John 13:34, 35) To what extent shall we love one another? Jesus answers: "This is my commandment, That ye love one another as I have loved you." (John 15:12) The love of Jesus for us was an unselfish love, a sacrificial love, a desire to do us good, with no thought of reward from us. And he did this at a great cost to himself. This is the kind of love he says we must have for the brethren—a sacrificial love.

The Apostle Paul tells us that if any man be in Christ Jesus he is a new creature, and that henceforth "we know no man after the flesh," but know him as a new creature. (2 Corinthians 5:16, 17) This would mean, then, that we should love each other as new creatures in the Lord. If we were required to love each other because of physical appearance, that might often be a great difficulty. But the new creature in Christ should love his brother because of the spirit of the Lord in him and manifested by him. And as we grow more in the likeness of our Lord, we thus cause the brethren to love us more.

SOME OF OUR TESTS

The Apostle Paul, giving an analysis of love in 1 Corinthians 13, points out that it is the crown of all the fruits and graces of the spirit. He emphasizes the fact that we may possess all knowledge of the Scriptures and have the ability to present them to others, may make full sacrifice of all our time, strength and energy, even to the giving up of our lives, and yet if we have not love, we have profited nothing. In our text he points out that love is the bond of perfection. In the context he has called attention to other qualities of character that we must develop, and then adds that if we would be perfect we must put on love; and that if we do this, the peace of God which passeth all understanding shall keep our hearts and minds through Christ Jesus.

So, then, if love is the chief of all the attributes of character to be developed, it follows that love must be put to the most severe tests. Tests are for the purpose of demonstrating that one possesses an approved character.

Our love for God and for the Lord Jesus will be tested in the manner of our obeying the will of God—whether we do this in a joyful manner or not. In proportion as we have and maintain our love for the Lord, in that proportion will our joy increase in the performance of his will. We can see how many have fallen under this test. Once ambassadors of the Great King, they became ashamed of the Gospel of Christ Jesus and him crucified, and desired more the plaudits of men. They failed, therefore, in keeping the commandments of the Lord. The Apostle sets us an example, saying: "I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."—Rom. 1:16.

The Lord Jesus put to the test the love of the Apostle Peter. He said to him, "Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me more than these? He saith unto him, yea, Lord, thou knowest that I love thee. He [Jesus] saith unto him, Feed my lambs." Again a second and then the third time, Jesus said, "Simon, lovest thou me? And Simon answered, Lord, thou knowest all things. Thou knowest that I love thee! He saith unto him, Feed my sheep." (John 21:15, 17) What a wonderful lesson is in this for all the brethren who are elders in the various classes! If we see pride developing in our hearts, a disposition to put aside the food that the Lord has given with which to feed the lambs and the sheep and to substitute something of our own, in order that we might shine before men, or a disposition to neglect the lambs and the sheep in helping them with the food, then this would prove that we were not standing the test being placed upon us. Addressing the elders, the Apostle said, "Take heed, therefore, unto yourselves, and to all the flock over which the holy Spirit hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with the blood of his own."—Acts 20:28.

Upon what food should the elders and leaders feed the ecclesias? How did the teachers, as well as the ecclesias get their knowledge of God's plan? Did not Jesus declare that when he came at his second advent He would provide for the household of faith through his chosen servant the food which should be "meat in due season" for them? This being true (and all who accept present truth must admit that it is true), then any disposition to depart therefrom and to encourage the flock to look elsewhere for spiritual development would prove that the test of faithfulness to the Lord and his flock was not being properly met. We observe this test being put upon the classes everywhere. Let us, then, take heed to ourselves that we prove our love for the Lord and for his "little ones" by keeping his commandments with a joyful heart and in safeguarding the interests of the little ones of the Lord.

A FINAL FIERY TEST

More than a quarter of a century ago our attention was called to the fact through THE WATCH TOWER that one of the final and crucial tests that would come to the church would be the test of our love for the brethren. Do we not see this test being applied? Jesus said, applying his words to the time of his second presence, in which time we are now living, "Because iniquity shall abound, the love of the many shall wax cold." (Matthew 24:12) The word "iniquity" is derived from the word "inequity," and literally means injustice. There can be no love without justice first. We must be just before we are generous; and any act of injustice toward a brother shows a lack of love.

After we have been for some time in the narrow way our powers of discerning between justice and injustice are keener than when we first believed, and when we see injustice on the part of another, it has a tendency to dampen our love for such an one. How often do we hear one say, "I am surprised that a brother or sister would be guilty of thus and so! It seems a strange thing that we should have such trials among us." To this the Apostle Peter answers: "Beloved, be not surprised at the fire among you, occurring to you for a trial, as though some strange thing was befalling you."—1 Peter 4:12.

THE REMEDY TO BE APPLIED

We are sure that it is the desire of all the truly consecrated to be overcomers, to grow in the likeness of our Lord and Master and to put on love, which is the bond of perfection. How, then, may we do this, and what shall we do when we see these imperfections in the brethren which bring such a fiery trial amongst us? The Lord directed St. Peter to answer this question. "Above all things have fervent love among yourselves, because love covereth a multitude of defects." (1 Pet. 4:8) The word "fervent" here means overspreading or covering up. In other phrase, the Apostle Peter says: Your brother has defects, and so have you; do not be looking at these defects, but look at him as you would desire to have him look at you—as a new creature in Christ. Have amongst you this overspreading love which covers these multitudes of defects.

Sometimes we hear of a brother who has served a class as elder for a number of years, and the class drops him from eldership for a period of a few months, subsequently again electing him to the position of elder; and he, believing that they have done him an injustice by setting him aside for a season, refuses to serve. Thus is his love for the Lord and for the brethren put to the test. His conduct shows that he is not standing the test as he should. The opportunity for service should be accepted and used as unto the Lord. The Apostle Paul shows us the proper attitude, saying, "And I will very gladly spend and be spent for you, though the more abundantly I love you the less I am loved." (2 Corinthians 12:15) By so doing we manifest a love for God and for Christ Jesus and an unselfish desire to serve the brethren, and thereby we prove our love for them also. Growing in this love we shall ultimately be united in the bond of perfection. As thus we develop the precious fruit of the spirit, the peace of God will keep our minds and hearts through Christ Jesus.

LOVE FOR OUR ENEMIES

The Lord Jesus commanded that we should love our enemies. (Matthew 5:44, 46; Luke 6:27-32) If every one loved his enemies, soon there would be no enemies. During the Millennial reign of Christ many enemies will be transformed by being gradually raised up to perfection of character, where love will take the place of hatred. Those who remain perverse will be destroyed utterly. The Lord commands that the Christian shall now develop in his heart this feeling of love toward his enemies.

In what way shall we love our enemies? With a love of fellowship, a sympathetic love? We answer, No; we have no sympathy with those who do not love God, and who are pursuing a wrongful course. How, then, shall we love them? We answer, With a pity-love. We are to have sympathy for them. "God commendeth his love toward us in that when we were yet sinners Christ died for us." He pitied mankind in their fallen condition. So we must have in our hearts a keen desire to do good even to our enemies, if the opportunity presents itself. And even though they persecute us and say all manner of evil against us falsely for Christ's sake, and defame the good name of the Lord Jesus and of the brethren, yet we should remember that in blindness and ignorance they do it. Pity them for it, and leave their judgment to the Lord.

THE REWARD OF THE FAITHFUL

As we journey along in the narrow way, walking by faith, hoping for the glory of God, let us keep in mind the words of the Apostle Paul: "And now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; but the greatest of these is love." And having this in mind let us progress unto the point of perfection in Christ Jesus. Thus doing we have the blessed assurance of the reward which God has in store for those that love him. The tests are now severe. We should expect it to be thus. These tests will grow in severity; but if we keep in mind the great reward which God has offered us, they will seem as nothing. As St. Paul puts it, These are but light afflictions and endure only for a moment, and are working out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory.—2 Cor. 4:17.

"Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things that God hath prepared for them that love him!" How wonderful must be the glories of the kingdom of our God! How transcendently beautiful the things that he has in reservation for those who prove their loyalty even unto death, and who come off "more than conquerors" through the merit of him that bought us with his precious blood! To such the Lord says through the Apostle. "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation [tests], for when he is tried he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him." "Hearken, my beloved brethren, hath not God chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him!"—James 1:12; 2:5.

THE SON ALONE SETS FREE

"If the Son, therefore, shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed."—John 8:36.

Jesus was here addressing Jews. They had the impression that they were free; but Jesus told them to the contrary, that they were still slaves, still in bondage. The Apostle Paul states that the entire race of Adam are slaves, sold under sin, sold into bondage. He explains that father Adam was the original transgressor, and that the sentence passing on him became a disability upon all his race, upon all human rights. "For by one man's disobedience many were made sinners." (Romans 5:19) If any of Adam's children had been able to live above sin, and could have said, "Lord, even though Adam gave me an imperfect organism, yet I have kept thy law," we understand that such an individual would have been granted life everlasting. But no human being could do this. "There is none righteous, no, not one." (Romans 3:10) God's requirement is that his law shall be kept fully. Although a member of the fallen race might keep the law in his mind, he could not keep it in his flesh.

The Son has not as yet fully set any free. There is neither a free man nor a free woman in the world, in the full sense of that term. Even God's children realize that they have imperfections in the flesh; but they hope for the time when they shall be fully released from them. The Bible tells us that this time will come at the moment of our perfection in the resurrection, when we shall be made like our Lord and have perfect bodies. The most that we can have at the present time is freedom of mind. Mankind has been in bondage to sin, shackled by the fallen nature inherited from their forefather, Adam.

For nearly two thousand years God had a special arrangement with the one nation of Israel. He proposed that this disability, which was resting upon the whole world, should be removed from Israel, and that he would not treat them the same as the rest of the world, but that they might be freed from condemnation and come back into his family, upon certain conditions stipulated. They thought this was a favorable offer, and that they would get a great blessing from it. The Lord had in mind that he would teach them a very important lesson, and that he would teach the angels and all of us the same great lesson; namely, that they who go into sin cannot get free except in the way God has provided—and this way is through the sacrifice of Christ.

DISABILITY TYPICALLY REMOVED

So God made this covenant with the Jews, and agreed with them that if they would thenceforth walk in his ways and keep his statutes he would be gracious to them and bless them, and they should be his people. He made this provision for them in a typical way through typical sacrifices. But we see that this provision for sins was not one which really canceled the sins. The typical cancelation of original sin for the Jews was merely for a year in advance. It did not remove the disability entirely but merely relieved the nation therefrom for another year. They were unable through the year to keep the law, and the Lord's arrangement each year was in order that they might have another year of trial. Their sins were typically canceled afresh.

If any one should keep the law, then the blessing of life would go to him. If he failed to keep the law, then he would fail to gain the blessing promised on that condition. Year by year the Israelites tried to prove themselves worthy of eternal life. But the sin was deeper than the surface. It was not merely a weakness of intention, but of character. They could not keep the Law; and God wished them to know it, and wished us to know it. They nevertheless had a great blessing in the law, so that, when Christ came, they were the most advanced nation in the world, head and shoulders above all others. Having the only true religion, they had the blessings which go with true religion, as far as they had faithfully conformed their lives to it.

When Jesus came to the Jews, he accomplished a great work, which the Father had given him to do. The Father had promised to bless the world, and he sent his Son that he might accomplish this work of blessing through sacrifice. The death of Christ was the basis of all the real setting free of the Jews and of all mankind from the death sentence that was upon them. It was the basis of setting the Jew free not only from the Adamic penalty, but from the Sinaitic law additionally. As a part of the Adamic family, the curse of death was upon the Jew. The curse was not removed by Moses (for Moses was not able to remove it), or by anything that anybody had done prior to the coming of Jesus.

THE CURSE OF THE LAW

But the work of Jesus was so broad as to clear everything against any and all. Ordinarily, it would have been sufficient that Jesus should die in any manner; for the penalty upon Adam was merely that he should die. Therefore Jesus, to become the Redeemer of man, would have needed only to die.

But the Jew had a special curse, or penalty, in the law, to be visited upon extreme cases of criminality. It read: "Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree." (Galatians 3:13) So in order to redeem every Jew, it was necessary that Christ should suffer the extreme penalty that would come upon any Jew. This is the reason, the Apostle assures us, that Christ must be made a curse by hanging on a tree. He was not made a curse for the Gentiles, but for the Jews only.

PURCHASE PRICE FOR WORLD NOT YET PAID

However, the death of Christ was the one great settlement-price necessary for the sins of the whole world. But when Jesus died, the Just for the unjust, it did not bring us to God. It was only after he rose and ascended into the presence of God—entering the Most Holy, even heaven itself—and appeared in God's presence on behalf of those who would be of the church class, that the sins of these could be covered. The world has not yet been brought to God. Christ's merit has not yet been applied for them. The time for bringing the world back to God will be the next age—now, thank God, almost here!

God's provision is that for a thousand years Christ will reign to bring the world into harmony with Jehovah. Some will need great chastisement, many stripes. It will be the work of that thousand years to instruct, to correct and to bring back to God as many as shall be willing to return. Their wills must come into harmony. But the matter will be left to their own decision. Many may then desire to be in harmony with God who do not now have this desire. One very important feature of Jesus' work during the Millennium will be to make known the marvelous riches of God's grace, that all may know Jehovah God, from the least of them to the greatest. They will have an opportunity to come back into that condition of mind and body which was originally possessed by the perfect man, plus all the experience gained during the six thousand years' reign of Sin.

ONLY THE LOYAL WILL BE RECEIVED

The work of Christ will not be accomplished for the world when they are awakened from death; that will be only a preliminary step. It will be necessary for them to be instructed, to be chastised for sinful character and to be blessed for any well-doing, etc., and thus brought back to God. But the race will not become wholly free until the end of the thousand years, because each degree of alienation is so much of bondage that came upon them through Adam's fall—they are weak mentally, morally and physically. Mankind needs to be lifted out of all this degradation. Separation from God, alienation of mind, through disobedience, brought about the original bondage. And so we read that at the end of the Millennial age Christ will present to the Father all who are worthy.

But the Scriptures assure us that any who fail to come back into harmony during the Millennium will not be delivered over to the Father, but will be destroyed during the Millennial reign. The Father does not desire any such. At the close of the Millennium, the Father will give all of the perfected ones a final test. He will say, "I condemned these once to death. I will receive back into harmony with myself only those who love righteousness and hate iniquity—none others. Those who again yield to sin will be cut off in the second death."

The Apostle tells us, in Romans 8:21, that "the creation itself shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the sons of God." This has reference to the human creation. It shall be delivered from death and from slavery to sin during the thousand years, by the great Emancipator who has already begun the work of purchasing the race, and who will complete the work in the near future, and will thus have a full right to deliver his purchased possession.

This is the glorious liberty wherewith all who accept God's terms shall be made free. This is the freedom wherewith the Son shall make them free. But we should apply our text especially to the church, for it was to this class that the Lord addressed these words. "If the Son, therefore, shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed." However, the only ones of any class who will be made free will be those who accept the terms of salvation.

JEWS FREED IN A DOUBLE SENSE

The Jews will be made free in a double sense; first, free from the condemnation of the law—upon certain conditions. They must become dead to the old law, must recognize that they could never gain life under it. If they will not become dead to the law, any such cannot gain eternal life. They can have eternal life in no other way than by accepting Christ's sacrificial work on their behalf. Some Jews accepted Christ at the beginning of this age and some have accepted him since. These realized that the law could not make them free, could not make them acceptable to God. And so they gave up hope of attaining anything through the law, and laid hold on Christ, asking what they must do to have everlasting life. Jesus told them that they must die to their own will—not only die to the law—and must take up their cross and follow him and thereby copy the pattern he set them in his own course. As many as did this became free. So far as their minds were concerned, they became new creatures. They had this freedom of mind in an earthen vessel, however, and they could not do in the human body all that they wished to do.

But the Lord said that it was a part of the test upon them that they fight a good fight against the sins of the mortal body. If they were faithful in fighting a good fight against the flesh, he would give them proportionate honors on the spirit plane. This is the requirement of all his disciples. And he promises that all those who shall overcome shall become associates with him in his kingdom for the uplifting and blessing of the world and shall be his peculiar treasure forevermore. All these were under bondage to sin; all were under the death sentence —both Jew and Gentile. All these needed to be set free from sin and death, and the Jew also from the Sinaitic law. It is the Son who sets these free!

GENTILES FREED, BUT NOT FROM THE LAW

How did the Gentile need to be set free? They did not need to die to the Mosaic law, because they never were alive to the law, never having been placed under it. But they did need to accept by faith the fact that Christ had died for their sins, and they needed to die to sin, and to give up the earthly nature. To come under the present call, they needed also to present their bodies living sacrifices, and to take up their cross and follow Jesus.

All true disciples who heed the Word of the great Master, and continue to be his faithful pupils, are set free, not only from superstition and ignorance, but also from the service of sin. They come to have a correct appreciation of their own natural infirmities and blemishes. They come into harmony with the divine mind, and love the truth. Hence their freedom is a great blessing instead of an injury. It brings humility instead of pride and boastfulness; patience and self-control instead of anger and strife; generosity, benevolence and love instead of spitefulness and selfishness; joy and peace instead of discontent and bitterness of spirit. Truly, the Son alone can make us free, and he whom the Son makes free is free indeed!

TO THE WORK

We have received letters of inquiry from many sections of the field regarding the general condition of the work and the outlook for the future. The friends everywhere are naturally very much interested in knowing how the work has been progressing since Brother Russell's passing beyond. The SOCIETY is glad to advise that since January 1 every month has shown an increase over the corresponding month of the year 1916 and that the eight months—November to June, inclusive—show a large increase in all of the branches of work over the same eight months of the previous year. This seems to us very strong evidence that the blessing of the Lord has been resting upon the work centered here at Brooklyn. The inquiries from those becoming interested are also on the increase, showing that there is a great desire on the part of many to understand the conditions as they exist in the world today. The work at the Bethel and Tabernacle is in good order, and the laborers are very desirous of cooperating to the extent of their ability. The SOCIETY believes that the outlook for the future is very encouraging and trusts, by the Lord's grace, to see a great deal accomplished during the coming six months. It urges upon the friends everywhere to put forth every effort to "work while it is called day." Now is the opportune time for presenting to our inquiring neighbors and friends and acquaintances that which will satisfy them as nothing else could do—viz., the truth. Whether it be by tracts or STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES—the latter, if possible—or the SCENARIOS, let each be diligent to the full extent of his or her ability. The SOCIETY especially recommends the presenting of the seventh volume to your neighbors—not to the ministers, because this would only arouse them to more bitter opposition—but to those who might have ears to hear. In presenting the seventh volume it is urged that the other six be mentioned also that, if possible, the whole seven may be secured. The SOCIETY will be glad to hear from friends everywhere as to their opportunities. "Go ye also into the vineyard"; "He that reapeth receiveth wages and gathereth fruit unto life eternal."

SOME TIMELY HINTS

It is urged that those having business with the Pilgrim Department, respecting meetings, conventions and funerals, should address the SOCIETY in care of the Pilgrim Dept., otherwise there is likely to be a delay.

The sending out of the seventh volume has raised the number of letters received during the last three weeks to 30,000. This has taxed the office force to the utmost. The SOCIETY would like to make individual acknowledgment of the thousands referring to this volume, but finds this impossible. We trust the dear friends will accept this as an acknowledgment of their letters and of the SOCIETY'S expression of their appreciation and love. Several hundred volumes have come back to us due to damaged labels en route. If you have not received a copy this may be the cause. All orders will receive prompt attention.

THE GOODNESS AND SEVERITY OF GOD

SEPTEMBER 30.—Daniel 9:3-19.

DIVINE JUSTICE MANIFESTED—THEN DIVINE LOVE—THE GOSPEL AGE A PARENTHESIS IN THE DIVINE PLAN—THE BLESSINGS COMING UPON MANKIND DURING THE INCOMING AGE—LOVE TRIUMPHANT OVER JUSTICE—GOD'S SEVERITY ILLUSTRATED IN HIS DEALINGS WITH ISRAEL—WHY THE LAND OF PALESTINE LAY DESOLATE FOR SEVENTY YEARS—DANIEL'S PRAYER FOR DIVINE MERCY UPON HIS PEOPLE—KEY TO TIME PROPHECIES.

"The Lord is merciful and gracious, slow to anger, and plenteous in mercy."—Psalm 103:8

God's severity consists in his insistence upon absolute righteousness—his refusal to approve sin in any degree or sense. The very first statement of the divine law is that death, destruction, must be the wage, or penalty, for transgression against his righteous regulations. For six thousand years the Lord has maintained his original position—has refused to sanction sin or to permit sinners to live. At first such an unchangeable attitude seems severe, especially when we consider that all mankind were born in sin and shapen in iniquity, infested with weakness and surrounded by evil influences. It seems severe on God's part to insist upon perfection when all our experiences teach us that it is impossible for fallen humanity to attain absolute righteousness in deed, word and thought. Indeed, the Scriptures confirm our experience; for the Apostle reminds us that "there is none righteous, no, not one."—Romans 3:10.

While the goodness of God is not seen in his severity, yet they stand side by side, although wholly separate. God's goodness—his generosity, his mercy, his kindness, his love—is not manifested in the sentence pronounced upon father Adam in Eden, nor in the execution of its penalties upon humanity, but in the great gift of his love—our Lord Jesus Christ and the redemption provided in him—a redemption coextensive with the fall of man and the condemnation incurred by our first parents. The Apostle expresses the thought pointedly in the words: "In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his Only Begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him." (1 John 4:9) God's love was not previously manifested. For more than four thousand years only the severity, the justice, of the divine character was seen, although to Abraham and subsequently through the prophets of Israel a hint was given that God had kindly sentiments toward the fallen race, which in due time would bring blessings to all the families of the earth.

THE GOSPEL AGE A PARENTHESIS

The period between our Lord's first and second advents is in some respects a parenthesis in the divine plan, during which the church is especially dealt with. The redemption of the world and its reconciliation with God, based upon divine goodness expressed in the death of the Redeemer, wait for further expression to the world until the end of the Gospel age and the opening of the Millennial age—"the world to come." When the morning of that new day shall dawn, the goodness of God will be seen by mankind more distinctly than ever before.

Indeed, it may be said that as yet the world has seen nothing of the goodness of God. It has seen merely his severity, his justice, executed against the entire human family for the last six thousand years. But a comparatively small proportion of mankind has even heard of the grace of God in Christ, the only "name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." (Acts 4:12) And even those who have heard to some extent have been measurably deceived by the great adversary in respect to the nature of the penalty for sin and the fullness and wideness of the mercy extended to men in the person of our Redeemer.

In that new dispensation the facts will all be made clear. The blessings then coming to the world will be those of peace, righteous government, helpful influences, restraint of evil, knowledge of the Lord, and understanding of his gracious arrangements and purposes. All these blessings will be most convincing proofs of God's sympathy with mankind and of his mercy in Christ. The adversary who now deceives mankind will then be bound, that he should deceive the nations no more until the thousand years are finished. The Word of God, which in general is now a sealed book to the world, will then be opened; and as a result the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the whole earth as the waters cover the sea.

Nevertheless, we are not to understand that this triumph of God's mercy and goodness then displayed will in any wise imply a change in his character or in his attitude towards sin. God never changes. (Malachi 3:6) Our Lord Jesus is "the same yesterday, today and forever." (Hebrews 13:8) When we come to understand the matter thoroughly, this unchangeableness on God's part is a guarantee that the blessings to be bestowed under his arrangements will be everlasting, unending.

Throughout the Millennial age the goodness and the severity of God will be displayed side by side to every creature. All must learn the lesson that God is kind, just, generous and full of blessing to all who are in harmony with him and with the principles of righteousness, but that he is and always will be like a consuming fire to all who are not in accord with his righteous arrangements for all his creatures.

QUARTERLY REVIEW

In the studies of the past quarter we have an exhibition of the severity of God's dealings with his covenant people when, notwithstanding his repeated expostulations, warnings and chastisements they wilfully pursued a course in violation of their national vows. Unlike any other nation in the world, Israel was brought into special relationship with God. He chose them to be his people, and favored them above all other nations by giving them his law, by raising up for them judges and prophets, and by especially guarding and directing them in so far as they submitted to his will, as well as by warning, counseling and chastising them when they became disobedient.

On the other hand, Israel as a nation entered into a solemn covenant with the Lord, saying, "All that the Lord hath spoken we will do." (Exodus 19:1-8) For the faithful keeping of this covenant God promised them all manner of earthly blessings and ample protection from all their national enemies. (Deuteronomy 28:1-14; Leviticus 26:1-13) But corresponding curses were pronounced, to go into effect if the people disregarded their covenant.

It was in fulfilment of this covenant on God's part that the downfall of Judah came to pass. Backsliding Israel, the ten-tribe kingdom, had previously been carried away captive. (2 Kings 17:1-24) Judah had not profited by this example of the Lord's displeasure nor by the warnings of his prophets, but had outrivaled her sister kingdom in corruption. When her cup of iniquity was full, the Lord poured upon her the merited punishment, due alike to king and people; for "neither Zedekiah nor his servants nor the people of the land did hearken unto the words of the Lord which he spake by the Prophet Jeremiah."—Jeremiah 37:2.

DANIEL'S PRAYER FOR HIS PEOPLE

The seventy years which followed the overthrow of Judah are frequently referred to as the seventy years of captivity; but the Scriptures designate them the seventy years of desolation of the land—a desolation which had been predicted by the Prophet Jeremiah. (Jeremiah 25:11, 12) The completeness of the desolation is shown in Jeremiah 39:8-10 and in 2 Chronicles 36:17-21. Although the king of Babylon permitted certain of the poor of the land to remain, and gave them vineyards and fields, yet it was the Lord's purpose that the land of Israel should be desolate for seventy years; and it was so. Later in the same year the governor whom the king of Babylon had appointed was slain, and the entire population speedily removed into Egypt for fear of the wrath of the king of Babylon.—2 Kings 25:21-26; Jeremiah 41:1-3; 43:5, 6.

The reason why the land must be desolate for exactly seventy years is a very interesting study; and the Scriptures clearly state it to be "to fulfil the word of the Lord by the mouth of Jeremiah, until the land had enjoyed her sabbaths; for as long as she lay desolate she kept sabbath to fulfil three score and ten years." (2 Chronicles 36:21) For a detailed explanation see STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES, Vol. 2, Study VI.

The Prophet Daniel was a close student of prophecy. Accordingly as the seventy years drew to a close he understood the matter. During this period he had been shown many visions, as recorded in Chapters 2, 4, 7 and 8 of his prophecy, all of which showed great prosperity and exaltation to heathen or Gentile kingdoms. But his special interest was in his own nation, and he had not been informed concerning Israel's future. Knowing, however, that the period of Judea's desolation was nearly complete, he prayed earnestly for the return of God's favor to his people, and for the fulfilment of the promise made to the fathers—the Abrahamic covenant of blessing to all the families of the earth.

Daniel saw not the scope of the divine plan as we may now behold it. Nevertheless his earnestness and his faith in the promise were pleasing to God, who therefore revealed to him something more concerning the vision related in Daniel 8, an increase or further elaboration of it, in the features which especially pertained to natural Israel. In this former vision a period of 2300 days had been mentioned. Daniel had misunderstood this period to mean a prolonging of the seventy years desolation, and was praying over the matter, as recorded in today's study.

THE KEY TO TIME PROPHECIES

While he was thus praying, the angel Gabriel was sent to explain further the misunderstood vision. This explanation (Daniel 9:20-27) is of great importance for two reasons: (1) it marks the date of our Lord's first advent; (2) it furnishes a key to some other prophecies which have been hidden in like manner—a day for a year. This prophecy was so worded that Daniel and other Jews might, if they chose, think it incredible and in due time forget it; or it might be remembered by those who "waited for the consolation of Israel," and who might infer the time to be symbolic. (Ezekiel 4:6) Certain it was that faithful Israelites knew to expect Messiah. It is even written that all men were in expectation of him (Luke 3:15), although they were not all able to receive him in the way he came.

The marked-off period of Jewish history was declared by Gabriel to be seventy weeks from the going forth of a decree to build Jerusalem—not the temple, but the city. During this period the city would be rebuilt under unfavorable circumstances in troublous times; sin would be finished by the making of a reconciliation for iniquity; and righteousness would be established—not like that justification accomplished year by year with the blood of bulls and goats, but the true and everlasting righteousness, brought about by the sacrifice of Christ. Daniel was also informed that he who would introduce the better sacrifices would thereby cause the typical sacrifices and oblations of the Law Covenant to cease.

During this period Messiah, the long-expected Savior of Israel, would come; and sixty-nine symbolic weeks are given as the measure of the time to his presence. After his coming there would remain one symbolic week, the last, the seventieth of this promised favor. In the midst of this week, it was foretold, he would cause the typical sacrifices to cease, by making "his soul an offering for sin." (Isaiah 53:10-12) These seventy weeks, or four hundred and ninety days, represented four hundred and ninety years, each symbolic day representing a year. And being so fulfilled in this, the only time-prophecy directly relating to the first advent, it furnishes a key to other prophecies which were also hidden in symbolic numbers—a day for a year—until their due time for solution.

It should be noticed that the sixty-nine symbolic weeks, or four hundred and eighty-three years, reach unto Messiah the Prince, and not to the birth of Jesus in Bethlehem. The Hebrew word Messiah, corresponding to the Greek word Christ, signifies the Anointed, and is a title rather than a name. Our Lord was not the Anointed, the Messiah, the Christ, until after his baptism. He was anointed with the holy Spirit immediately upon coming out of the water. This was when he attained manhood's estate, which under the law was at thirty years of age. Hence the sixty-nine weeks, or four hundred and eighty-three years, ended in the autumn of A. D. 29. Our Lord's ministry covered three and one-half years, ending with his crucifixion in the Spring of A. D. 33—"in the middle of the week." The remainder of the seventieth week extended to the Fall of A. D. 36, the date of the conversion of Cornelius, the first Gentile to receive the Gospel.

OUR LIGHT AFFLICTION

"We are troubled on every side yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair; persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed, always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus."—2 Corinthians 4:8-10.

In our text the Apostle Paul was evidently describing his own personal experiences, though in a broader sense he meant also those who were his particular companions. In a still broader sense, his words would include all followers of Jesus; for the Master warned us in advance that whoever would live godly should suffer persecution. The Apostle was finding that these very sufferings which Jesus had foretold were his own experiences.—John 16:2, 3; 2 Timothy 3:12.

All of the Lord's followers do not receive persecutions to the same extent. Some have more trouble, some have less. These variations seem to depend in some degree on our natural talents. For those who, like the Lord, are more prominent, the persecution will be greater. They will be the special targets at which the enemy will aim their darts. The Apostle expresses this thought in his Epistle to the Hebrews. There were some who suffered persecution in a more public way, and others who shared sympathetically with them, and who suffered also as their companions.—Hebrews 10:33, 34.

Some may be troubled who are not the open targets of the enemy. Some may be persecuted and cast out who are not in the forefront of the battle. They might have avoided this suffering by disassociating themselves from those who are prominent in the service, and who are the special objects of attack and calumny. Thus they might have escaped the ignominy and contempt which they have received through espousing the Lord's truth and his cause. In all these experiences mentioned by the Apostle the difference is seen between those who are the Lord's faithful followers and those who are not, between those who endure joyfully and those who count their sufferings grievous and undesirable.

For others not Christians to be thus troubled would mean great distress; for these have no hope beyond this present life. But for Christians to be troubled does not mean that they experience it to the extent of despair, or of being unreconciled; for they take their troubles to the Lord in prayer. Jesus is the great Yoke-fellow of each of his followers, and he bears the weight of the burden. He has said to them: "Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; . . . . for my yoke is easy and my burden is light." (Matthew 11:29, 30) And those who have thus come under the yoke of discipleship have proven the verity of the Master's words, and can sing with the spirit:

"His yoke is easy, his burden is light;
I've found it so, I've found it so;
He leadeth me by day and by night,
Where living waters flow!"

As in the case of the Apostle, we may be in great perplexity at times; for in some of our experiences the adverse conditions are severe. But the Apostle never got into that mental condition where he was hopeless. The Lord is the captain of our salvation; thus reasoned St. Paul. And the Lord had promised that the afflictions should work out for him far greater glory. So he concluded that if these things were to work out the greater glory, then he would rejoice, instead of despairing.

In our text St. Paul says, that, though sometimes cast down, he was not destroyed. He mentions in one of his Epistles (Romans 9:2) that he had great heaviness and continual sorrow in his heart for his kinsmen according to the flesh, the Jewish nation, because of their unfaithfulness to their covenant with God. He also tells us, in this same Epistle from which our text is taken, that out of much affliction and anguish of heart he wrote unto the church at Corinth, with many tears, because of his love for them, and because one of their number had by his wrong course caused grief to the Apostle. But when he thus sorrowed, it seemed to be because of his interest in and care for others, and not because of his own troubles. His was a brave, courageous heart, fully anchored in God.

"WHY HAST THOU FORSAKEN ME?"

The child of God may be persecuted, but he will not be forsaken, even though the outward experiences may seem for the time to indicate that he is forsaken. It might be asked, If Jesus was the Son of God, why would the Father permit his being beaten, his having enemies spit in his face, buffet and persecute him? We reply, The Master knew that there was a reason for all this, else the Father would have hindered it; and he submitted fully to his every experience. The Father's love for him, which he could not doubt, upheld him in all his trials and sore afflictions. In the Garden of Gethsemane the Master suffered very great sorrow and anguish of soul; but as soon as he had received from the Father the assurance of his continued favor, he was no more distressed. On the cross he was indeed forsaken for a very brief period, when he cried: "My God! My God! why hast thou forsaken me?" But this was a necessary experience of our Lord. It is not necessary for us, although some might have a similar feeling as death approaches.

Jesus was the perfect One, and experienced to the full the penalty of father Adam's sin. As God withdrew himself entirely from Adam the sinner, so it was necessary that this One should experience the complete cutting off from the Father, that he should be utterly forsaken by God, for a moment. And we see that this was just at the last moment of his life. Apparently it broke the Master's heart. He had not, perhaps, known that he would be utterly forsaken. To One who had been in such close and perfect fellowship with the Father, and was so dependent upon him, this was a most bitter experience, as his dying cry of anguish testified. We sometimes speak of heart-breaking experiences, yet we use this expression in a metaphorical sense. But in the case of Jesus, it seemed to be an actual breaking of the heart. When the soldier's spear was thrust into his side, water and blood came forth, thus indicating that the heart was literally ruptured.

SUFFERING WITH CHRIST A CAUSE FOR REJOICING

In many respects the Apostle's sufferings were along the same lines as those of our Lord. But like the Master he was of good courage. Summing up his experiences he says: "Always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus." The dying of Jesus was manifested in the Apostle's sufferings. Our Lord adopts the bodies of his disciples as part of his own; their flesh is counted as his flesh. Thus the sufferings of Jesus in the flesh have been going on for more than eighteen hundred years since he died. The thought that any of our experiences would be counted in as a part of the sufferings of the Master should enable us to rejoice in such tribulation, knowing that these sufferings will unitedly "work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."—2 Corinthians 4:17, 18.

If we joyfully endure afflictions for the sake of the Lord and his truth, if we gladly suffer shame, ignominy, persecution and trial, we shall thus have experiences most like our beloved Head and Exemplar; and we may be sure that in proportion to our patience, faithfulness and joy in these experiences will be our future reward when our place in the kingdom shall be assigned to us. "As star differeth from star in glory, so also is the resurrection of the dead."—1 Corinthians 15:41, 42.

When it is remembered that our severe troubles and sufferings, our chiselings and polishings, are but for a moment, as compared with the disciplines of those who will be dealt with in the incoming age, and especially in comparison with the ages of glory, blessing and unmingled joy of our eternal future if we are faithful—when it is remembered also that in proportion to our trials and difficulties we are granted more grace, according to the exceeding riches of our Lord's loving favor—then we can see that we, the Father's precious jewels, now being cut, ground and polished preparatory to mounting in his great diadem of glory, are truly highly favored above all men. Thus we may well take joyfully the spoiling of our goods—worldly reputation, etc.—knowing the glorious outcome when our God shall have fully made up his jewels, his loved and his own.

Let us note the fact that it is only the strong, the seasoned and developed ones, who are able to bear the severest testings, the sharpest blows. It is a mark of special favor if our faithfulness shall bring us trials, buffetings and adverse experiences. Remember that "rarest gems bear hardest grindings," and let this comfort and inspire us in every difficulty and trial. When the grinding and polishing process is over, the gem will shine the more resplendent because of the painful experiences endured in loving, patient submission and trust.

THE AURORA CONVENTION

This has been the best one yet, was the expression of many who attended the convention at Aurora, Ill., August 8 to 12. Surely, it was good to be there, for the spirit of the Lord was manifest every day and at each session! There seemed to be a spirit of sacred seriousness and devotion more deep than at any previous convention, so far as we know. We presume that this, to a large extent, was due to the fact that we are drawing close to the end of our journey, causing everyone to watch and pray; and also to a feeling of deep thankfulness, as foretold by our Lord: "When ye see these things, lift up your heads and look up, for your redemption draweth nigh." Surely, with such a hope as that held before the church, everyone whose eyes have been anointed with the eyesalve of truth can rejoice greatly. The discourses were all helpful and encouraging, and the benediction of the Lord seemed to rest upon the speakers as they gave forth words of cheer, encouragement and admonition. The program was carried out with but very little change, as follows:

Wednesday, the opening day, was designated "Fellowship Day," and the forenoon was devoted to an address of welcome and a response by the chairman, followed with praise and testimony. In the afternoon there were discourses by Brother Bohnet, Brother Reimer and Brother Zink—all in harmony with the topic of the day. The topic for Thursday was "Our Sacrifices." In the morning, after the usual opening services, there were discourses by Brother Saphore and Brother Crist. It being impossible for Brother Martin to be present, Brother Hazlett filled the vacancy. The afternoon was devoted to discourses by Brother Barber and Brother Burgess. Friday was known as "Victory Day," and in the morning there were discourses by Brother Batterson and Brother Hooper; in the afternoon by Brother Baeuerlein, Brother Robie and Brother Bowin. Saturday was "Harvesters' Day." Following the opening service was a praise and testimony meeting for the colporteurs and pastoral workers. It was refreshing to hear the many testimonies indicating the Lord's blessing and guidance. This was followed by a discourse on baptism by Brother Van Amburgh, after which about seventy symbolized their consecration by water immersion. The afternoon was devoted to discourses by Brother Hudgings, Brother Rutherford and Brother Woodworth. Sunday was known as "Kingdom Day." There were discourses in the morning by Brother Toole and Brother Graham and in the afternoon, for the public, by Brother Rutherford. It was estimated that about twenty-five hundred were present. At 6 in the evening was the love feast for the brethren, at which thirteen or fourteen hundred were present.

The zeal and earnestness evidenced on the part of the friends as they began to see their opportunities for heralding the coming of the kingdom by the distribution of the seventh volume was indicated by the disposal of nearly 1,000 in less than half an hour. Each seemed desirous of being found on the "firing line."

Not least among the pleasures of the convention were the beautiful grounds at Fox River Park, which is about three miles outside of the city of Aurora. The location was ideal, quiet, retired, the auditorium good and the surroundings very suitable for convention purposes. The weather was delightful. The service and love of the Aurora friends were evidenced on every hand by their care in selecting places of entertainment for the visiting brethren. The attendance was larger than anticipated, starting with about 1,000 and closing with about 2,000. May the blessing of the Lord rest richly upon the dear Aurora friends and those who cooperated with them in making the convention so pleasant along temporal lines!

LETTERS OF INTEREST

HELPED BY CRITICISM

DEAR BRETHREN:—

How I have awaited this opportunity to thank you for your service in passing upon my answers to V. D. M. Questions! I not only received a rich blessing in trying to answer the questions, but what a wonderful help your criticism has been! For instance, question No. 12, "What will be the fate of the finally incorrigible?" I answered, "Second death." The criticism on the answer was, "Indefinite." At first I wondered how that could be. But since, some one has given me one of Haldeman's pamphlets criticizing Pastor Russell. He says, "After the first death there is a resurrection both of the just and unjust. After the second death there is no resurrection. As the soul survives, but has no resurrection body, then those who take part in the second death continue to exist as disembodied souls." I surely see why question No. 12 needs a definite answer, for none but Bible Students know that death means complete destruction of being, which is everlasting in the case of the second death. "Christ dieth no more." I see, too, how answer to No. 4 was indefinite. In question 2 I failed to refer to STUDIES, the wonderful books that helped me out of gross darkness into marvelous light. I assure you that I shall study to give more clear-cut answers to all who ask for a reason for our glorious hope.

I was a Baptist Sunday School teacher once. I know well what they believed and taught. I have to laugh at Dr. Haldeman; he is so hopelessly mixed up trying to discover some way out of the ridiculous plight his doctrine places him in, since Pastor Russell has turned the light on. Again thanking you, I am,

Yours in his service, MRS. JAMES WRIGHT.—Ohio.

NEVER READ ANYTHING SO GOOD

DEAR BIBLE HOUSE BRETHREN:—

I won't bother you but for just a moment. I can't keep from saying a few words of appreciation. But let me thank you for sending the seventh volume. It is grand! I have read since receiving it Revelation and I have never had anything do me so much good. I wish I could help you. But you have my prayers. I have vowed to put forth greater zeal, and to strive harder for the mark. My love is too great to put in words for all of God's gifts. So I will close, hoping soon to see you all.

Through the merit of the dear Lord.

WM. BIGGERSTOFF.—Kan.

GRATITUDE FOR PASSING A SUCCESSFUL EXAMINATION

DEAR BRETHREN IN CHRIST:—

I have received your report on my answers to V. D. M. Questions. I cannot find words to express my joy to you when I noted I had received the required 85% or more. I thought the best I could do was to lift my heart in humble gratitude to God and to our Lord Jesus Christ, who is the Great Examiner of the V. D. M.'s I will very carefully search up the citations omitted and study the incomplete questions. Thanking you for your service and praying God's blessings on all your labors,

I am yours in the Anointed, J. J. LYNCH.

READ THE VOLUME IN SIX DAYS

DEAR BRETHREN:—

The volume reached me O. K. It was a most joyful surprise. I was only six days reading it through, and today, the seventh day, I began canvassing for it; have taken some orders.

It would be impossible to measure the worth of the seventh volume in dollars and cents; however if I were so fixed financially, I would take more pleasure in remitting $60 than 60c, which you will find inclosed in stamps.

Your brother in the service of the King of kings.

THOS. HOLDEN.—Mich.

THINKS IT A WONDERFUL BOOK

DEAR BRETHREN:—

I received the seventh volume a week or ten days ago, and it is a wonderful book, full of light as to how we should walk during the remainder of our pilgrimage. I cannot thank the Lord enough for this timely help. Find herewith sixty cents in payment for the book. I am hoping that the work will be issued in pocket size, as I have the other six volumes so, but if not I am going to send for ten or a dozen copies soon as I am able.

Yours in the Lord, D. D. DOWNING.—Kansas City, Mo.

7TH VOLUME THE TOPIC OF CONVERSATION

DEAR BRETHREN:—

Herewith enclosed please find Post Office Money Order, covering cost of the seventh volume, "The Finished Mystery." It was the sweetest surprise of my life. "The Seventh volume" is now the topic of the day among the friends here.

You evidently anticipated our anxiety to get this volume, and I want to thank you very kindly for your consideration in sending this wonderful book to me in the manner you did.

With much Christian love to you, dear brethren, I remain,

Your fellow servant, G. G. NYBECK.—Minn.

7TH VOLUME CAME AS SWEET SURPRISE

DEARLY BELOVED BRETHREN IN CHRIST:—

Not before, but just when we needed it, came the seventh volume. Praise ye the Lord! God bless the memory of "that servant!" How sweet to know that he has held high the banner of the Lord, faithful even unto death; and won an immortal crown of glory, and to be forever with the Lord, whom he loved and served so well! Find enclosed price of the volume. Thank you for sending it right along. Although I had been thinking incessantly of it the past few weeks, it came as a sweet surprise. I was sewing when it was laid in my lap, but when I looked in the end cover, I said with great joy: "Thank the Lord, for the FINISHED MYSTERY"! And now, dear ones in him, it remains for us to make our calling and election sure. He has provided the whole armor, in the use of which we may conquer by his grace. So let us strive to keep the weeds out of the garden of our heart, that the flowers of love may have room to enlarge. I am your isolated sister in that blessed hope,

MRS. K. M. REED.—Md.

VOL. XXXVIII BROOKLYN, N. Y., SEPTEMBER 15, 1917 No. 18

THE FINAL CONFLICT

"Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."—Eph. 6:11, 12.

Darkness hates the light. "Ye are the light of the world," said the great Master concerning his people. The church is near the end of its earthly pilgrimage and the hour of the final conflict is at hand. To be forewarned is to be forearmed. The words of St. John now seem appropriate: "Look to yourselves, that we lose not those things which we have wrought, but that we receive the full reward."—2 John 8.

For more than six thousand years a great battle has been waged between good and evil—light and darkness. The fight has involved the entire human family. God in his wisdom has permitted the forces of evil to prevail for a time, but the time is near at hand when the tide of battle shall turn. The conflict has resulted in great carnage, thousands of millions having succumbed to the agencies of darkness. It has been attended with untold sorrow. The fight had its beginning when our first parents were driven from Eden. It will end only at the end of the Millennial age.

When Jesus was on earth he fought the same good fight of faith, and for a time it seemed that the enemy had vanquished him, but shortly he proved that he had triumphed over death and the grave. His victory was complete—his reward the highest of all. Through him God brought life and immortality to light, and has made known his purposes to all who have imbibed his spirit and sought to follow in his footsteps.

Since Pentecost God has been selecting the church, the members of which are called to follow in the footsteps of the great Master, fighting as he fought, and they must gain the victory before receiving the "crown of life."

THE GREAT ARMIES

There are two great armies engaged in this conflict. On the side of evil is the army of darkness, marshaled by Satan, the prince of darkness. On the other side is the army of light with Jesus Christ as its Field-Marshal, leading his host on to certain victory.

Every man and woman on earth is doing service this day for one or the other of these armies. There is no middle ground; as St. Paul clearly puts it, "Know ye not that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom you obey; whether of sin unto death or of obedience unto righteousness?"—Romans 6:16.

The Lord's army on earth is composed of those who have turned away from the world of sin and darkness and are following the Master whithersoever he goeth because of their full consecration and love for him. All such manifest the spirit of Christ; all others are in the army of Satan. Who is on the Lord's side? On which side are you?

The church this side of the veil is the church militant, meaning the church at war. It is both an individual and a collective warfare. Each one must fight the good fight of faith and be victorious before he can attain to the position of joint-heirship with the Lord, and each one having the Master's spirit will fight together with all the other members of the body to maintain the spirit of unity in the body. All such must fight under the leadership of their Captain. The same admonition St. Paul gave to Timothy applies to each member of the body: "This charge I commit unto thee, son Timothy, according to the prophecies which went before on thee, that thou by them mightest war a good warfare." "Fight the good fight of faith; lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou wast called, and hast professed a good profession before many witnesses." (1 Timothy 1:18; 6:12) Again St. Paul said, "Only let the lives you live be worthy of the Gospel, that we may know who are standing fast in one spirit and one mind, fighting shoulder to shoulder for the faith and good news. Never for a moment quail before your enemies."—Phil. 1:27, 28. Weymouth.

To a soldier who engages in war it is of the greatest importance that he should know who his enemies are, their number and force. A good soldier will study to know what will be the method of attack by the enemy, and seek to strengthen his position of defense that he may repel every assault. In the Christian warfare this is even more vital. Before we can successfully engage in the great and final conflict, the battle that must be decisive with us, it is of the utmost importance that we carefully consider the number, force and strength of the enemy, and his method of attack.

ENEMIES FORESHADOWED

Goliath pictured Satan and his cohorts. None of the host of Israel would attempt to fight him until David came upon the scene. Satan found none willing and able to cope with him until the antitypical David—Christ Jesus—championed the cause of righteousness on behalf of mankind. David represents the entire Christ, Head and body. His experiences foreshadowed the fight in which they must engage.

In out text the Apostle Paul particularly warns the church concerning our enemies. Another translation renders it thus: "For ours is not a conflict with mere flesh and blood, but with spiritual beings in unseen places, despotisms, empires, the forces that control and govern this dark world, the spiritual host of evil [host of evil spirits] arrayed against us in the heavenly warfare." (Weymouth.) Our enemies or adversaries may be divided into four divisions, designated as the flesh, the world, the devil and the evil spirits.

HOW JESUS OVERCAME

That all the members of the new creation must fight these enemies is clearly shown from the fact that our Master was subjected to such trials, and further evidence thereof is the positive statements of the Apostle. It is important that we take heed to the Master's method of meeting these attacks.

After our Lord had been fasting for 40 days and nights and was weak and emaciated, Satan approached him, first suggesting that he change stones into bread for the gratification of his own flesh. Jesus met this attack with the sword of the spirit, saying, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." Then Satan suggested to him that while it was true he was to be the King, it would require a long time for him to convince the people, therefore he should go up on the Temple and jump into the valley, that Jehovah would save him and thus he would demonstrate to the people that he was more than an ordinary creature. In the same manner Jesus met this attack, "Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God." Then Satan made a direct attack upon the Master, suggesting that if Jesus would join him, he (Satan) would turn over to him all the kingdoms of earth, only Jesus must recognize and give proper honor to Satan. Yielding to either one of these temptations would have been a violation of his covenant. Jesus met this attack with the words, "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God and him only shalt thou serve."

PRINCIPLE VERSUS PASSION

God governs the entire universe by fixed principles, and everyone who is governed contrary thereto is governed by passion. This is clearly demonstrated in Jesus' method of defense against the adversary. Many seem not to be able to understand what is meant by "PRINCIPLE." Seemingly they think it is whatever they themselves may consider to be right when guided by their conscience, or by the argument of someone else. "Principle" means, a settled rule of action; the governing law of conduct. This rule of action, or governing law of conduct, is set forth in the Bible, God's Word, and all who are governed by the Word of God are governed by principle. "Passion" means the capacity of being affected by external agencies; to be controlled by outside influence; susceptible to control from external influences. The new creature must avoid passion and be governed always by principle. If we are influenced or swayed in our judgment, or conclusion about anything, by reason of what others may say or do, we are governed to that extent by passion. If we prayerfully and diligently seek to know what is the Lord's will and what his Word says on the matter, and are governed by that, then we are governed by principle.

Attack and temptation, within the meaning of the Scriptures, are one and the same thing. We have no power to turn stones into bread, but have received spiritual powers which may be used for selfish purposes contrary to God's will. For example, making merchandise of the Gospel; preaching for the applause of men or using our spiritual powers for any other selfish purpose. Concerning such, the Apostle Peter says, "Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking oversight thereof, not by constraint but willingly; not for filthy lucre's sake, but of a ready mind."—1 Peter 5:2.

The "spirit of the world" is to follow methods that make outward show of great piety to attract attention. Any attempt on the part of a Christian to attract attention to himself is a manifestation of the spirit of the world, and a violation of principle and out of harmony with God's methods.

All temptations are the effects of the adversary's influence. He employs various methods in order that he may deceive. He makes some believe that they are not receiving the proper consideration, notice, and honor to which they are entitled. This leads into a wrong course.

METHOD OF ATTACK

St. Paul emphasizes the fact that the conflict of the church in the end of the age will be particularly with the evil spirits. These evil spirits have been restrained since the great deluge, and their day of judgment is at hand. We therefore should expect that they would be able to exercise greater power over the human race now than at any time since their restraint. Many Scriptures clearly indicate that the real battle ground of the Christian is in the mind, therefore the attack of the evil spirit will be expected along this line. We learn from one who was long subject to the influence of these demons that their method of attack is as follows: First, by

"Suggestion": By this is meant that the demons intrude evil thoughts upon the mind. All Christians realize that they have a conflict in keeping out of the mind thoughts that are improper, and that it is a constant warfare to keep them out. But where one indulges in evil surmising, judging another, he is filling his mind with evil thoughts. Such are yielding to suggestions which, if persisted in, lead to the second stage, which is designated as

"Abbreviation": The word abbreviation means to cut short. It here means lack of continuity of thought, or lack of concentration of thought upon the Lord's Word. One who finds himself given over to evil surmising and evil thoughts will find great difficulty in concentration of mind upon the study of the Lord's Word, the "SCRIPTURE STUDIES," or in prayer. Attempting either study or prayer, the one finds his mind suddenly turned away from his subject and turned to or set upon evil things. Thus continuing he loses sight of principle, namely, the great truths of God's Word, and this leads to the third stage, designated as

"Impression," which means that one is moved to act from sources other than the Word of God. The word "Impression" means sensible result of influence exerted from without; in other words, to be controlled by passion, not by the Word of God. For instance, one says, "I am moved to take this course because of what I have heard, or what influence another has brought to bear upon me," at the same time entirely ignoring the Word of the Lord covering the subject. This persisted in leads to the fourth stage, namely

"Possession," whereby it is understood that the evil spirits take possession of the mind of the person and control his conduct.

The Apostle tells us, "God resisteth the proud but giveth grace to the humble-minded." From this we would understand that humility of mind and heart would be a special protection provided by the Lord; and that any one manifesting spiritual pride or ambition, the Lord would remove from such one this protection, and the evil spirits would have special power over him. Time and again through the columns of THE WATCH TOWER the Lord's servant to the Laodicean church gave warnings of these enemies. We quote here a few of his sayings:

WHAT WE MAY SHORTLY EXPECT

"The letting loose of these winds, or air powers (evil spirits), would seem to show that God will let go his hand of restraint; that he will have to do with the permission of the terrible trouble that will come. This outside influence will exercise a baneful effect upon men, when finally granted the liberty. These fallen spirits have been under restraint for these many centuries, but they have exercised their influence to whatever extent they have had permission. If they had had unlimited power they would have wrecked the world long ago; but they have been restrained. Apparently God will soon cease to restrain the fallen angels, and they will then proceed to vent their fury upon humanity, so that the whole earth will be full of violence, the same as in the days of Noah. The power manifested by the demons when loosed, will, we believe, be with a view to the injury of mankind. We do not know but that many of our readers will have a share in that injury. We have every reason to suppose that if these fallen angels shall get loose, they will vent their first anger upon the Lord's people.

"As soon as the power that is now controlling them shall be removed, we shall have a reign of evil all over the earth. The evil spirits will do all the evil that is in their power, and this will constitute the trial of all the fallen angels—the lifting of the restraints to see whether they will go contrary to the divine will. All who thus manifest their alliance with evil in any way will become subjects of the second death; while others who show their loyalty to God will mark themselves as worthy, presumably, of everlasting life. It may be something in connection with the saints that will constitute the test of these angels. This will be the key, the secret connected with the awful time of trouble which the Bible tells us will mark the conclusion of this age and which will constitute the forerunner or beginning of the new dispensation."

THE TEST IS NOW ON

"Symbolically, the earth represents organized society; the sea represents the disorganized masses (Daniel 7:2; Luke 21:25; Revelation 17:1, 5); and the trees represent the household of faith. The letting loose suddenly of the fallen angels will account well for the suddenness of the coming trouble, which is mentioned everywhere in the Scriptures as one of its particular features—'in one hour', 'suddenly, as travail upon a woman,' 'as in the days of Noah,' and 'as it was in the days of Lot.' There is only one way, so far as we can see, in which these fallen angels can have a trial, their trial consisting in having a fuller opportunity to sin, if they so desire, or in an opportunity to show, if they wish, that they are sick of sin and desire to return to harmony with God. We cannot think that God will allow this trial of the angels during the Millennial reign, for then nothing shall hurt, nothing shall destroy; Satan will be bound and all evil influences will be restrained. No; it cannot be then. And in order to be tried at all, these fallen angels must have certain liberties granted, to prove them. Otherwise, where would be their trial? Consequently, reasoning along this basis (2 Peter 3:7), we reach the conclusion that the trial of these fallen angels is in the near future—perhaps to some extent already begun. In what way? 'He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.'"

Another says: "It is evidently God's purpose soon to allow the minds of many of his little ones to become an open battle ground, upon which the fallen angels shall be judged, and the manner in which we meet the tests will prove our worthiness of crowns at the same time that it proves these disobedient spirits unworthy of life on any plane. This is something with which some, but not many, are yet familiar. Truly, we know the Apostle in writing of this evil day says, 'We wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in heavenly places.' Truly we know the Lord Jesus at the first advent began his ministry with forty days of conflict with the adversary, who all that time sought to sway his mind. Truly we have reason to believe he must have had other terrible battles when he spent all night in prayer, and especially when he was so depressed in the Garden of Gethsemane. But without actual experience it is quite impossible to conceive of the intensity of such struggles as are here indicated. (Eph. 6:12) The base of the brain is seized as in a vise. Interpretations of Scripture, ingenious but misleading beyond description, are projected into the mind as water might be projected through a hose. Visions may be tried, wonderful illuminations of the mind as by a soft but glorious greenish or yellowish haze. Seductive suggestions may be made, based on circumstances of the environment. Offers of inspiration may be made. The privilege of sleep may be taken away for days at a stretch. All this is with the object of forcing the unfortunate into at least temporary insanity so as to destroy his influence and, if possible, his faith in God. Failing in all other attempts, the mind may be flooded with thoughts that are vile beyond description. Then remember the Vow."—SCRIPTURE STUDIES. Vol. VII.

WICKED SPIRITS USE HUMAN AGENTS

The evil ones use human agencies to attack members of the body. We may reasonably expect that all of the Lord's servants who are actively engaged in the closing hours of the harvest will be attacked through human agencies by these evil spirits. Time and again the enemy assaulted the reputation of our dear Brother Russell. He was taken away, however before the evil spirits were permitted to exercise their full power. Now we may expect that all manner of charges and attacks will be made by them through human agencies against the reputation, character and standing of others who are engaged in the harvest work, which will constitute a test to all the brethren, as to whether they will be governed by "passion" [outside influence], or whether they will be governed by the "principle" of God's Word. The more prominent position occupied by one in the harvest work, the more venomous will be the attacks. Let each one examine his own heart carefully and see to it that his own conclusions are based upon right principles, namely, the Word of God, and not upon outside influences. No other course is safe.

As an example of the methods of the evil ones and as a warning to the brethren, we deem it proper to here call attention to the fact that we have just learned that a man living in Enterprise, Alabama, who was once actively engaged in the truth but now seems to be the victim of evil spirits, is organizing and vigorously conducting a definite campaign against the INTERNATIONAL BIBLE STUDENTS ASSOCIATION and its officers, particularly its president. We learn that he is publishing and proposes to send out a pamphlet charging many criminal things against the president of our SOCIETY, all of which are without foundation in truth. A brother in the truth who is firm and steadfast and who recently came in contact with the one who is now fomenting this trouble, writes us concerning him as follows:

"I judge from statements he himself has made to me, he has made the Bible House no end of trouble in the past. He is, by nature, a trouble-maker. He has made it his chief business for eight years to fight the ecclesia of Enterprise. Now he is engaged in circularizing the friends far and near, drawing as many as possible to his notions. He was once in harmony with present truth and very zealous and effective in its ministry, but has become sour because the friends did not endorse some of his unloveliness; and he has allowed this sourness to wreck his Christian character. He has practically abandoned his business and is putting in all of his time carrying on a voluminous, seditionary correspondence. He denounces the 7th volume as a humbug, both in the streets of his town and in his letters. He is shrewd enough to correspond with pilgrims, then to use their letters to his own advantage. When I first came South he wrote me that he felt called of the Lord to write the 7th volume himself (or words to that effect, and calculated to give that impression); but that because of his lack of education and ignorance, he felt that a smarter brother ought to do it, and he therefore welcomed my coming. He would give me the ideas and let me frame them into choice language. I held a service in his neighborhood one Sunday, under his direction, hoping to be able to influence him against the evil of his course; but soon I saw it was no use—that he was determined to influence my course rather than allow me in the slightest to influence him. So I called off all further intercourse, and he regards me as a hopeless child of the devil. He is in very poor health, almost a nervous wreck, and I think that in this unfortunate condition the evil spirits have obsessed his mind and are in full possession of him. He has avoided fellowship so long, constantly studying and meditating and brooding by himself, that he has become the most self-centered man I ever met. He seems to be unconscious of this and not guilty of deliberate selfishness, but irrationally so. He states in a letter I read last night, that he is organizing a definite rebellion against the I. B. S. A.; that thousands throughout the land are joining his cause, as he can prove by letters in hand, and that he will be the Moses of these poor, oppressed people."

The Lord Jesus laid down the only method of procedure against a brother who has done wrong. (Matt. 18:15-18) Any other course pursued against a brother is out of harmony with the fixed principles of God's Word. We deem it only necessary to call attention to these things that the dear brethren everywhere may be warned against the wily methods of attack by the adversary and his coadjutors against the work of the harvest and those who are engaged in it.

HOW TO REPEL ATTACKS

All the Scriptures bearing upon the point indicate that the conflict will be more severe as we near the end. Referring to this time St. Paul says, "Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord and in the power of his might"—Ephesians 6:10.

The clear inference here is that each soldier of the cross must have special strength in order to stand at this time, and to repel the combined attack of Satan and his coadjutors. If we look at it from one standpoint, we would become dismayed and despair of winning, but looking at it from another viewpoint, we know that he who is for us is greater than all who can be against us; and he being for us, none can prevail against us. We are now in the evil day. How then may we have the strength needed? The Apostle tells us of the armor of God provided for us, which will prove invulnerable to all attacks of the adversary. "Wherefore, take unto you the whole armor of God that ye may be able to withstand [resist] in the evil day, and having done all, to stand [remain a victor]." (Ephesians 6:13) The assurance here is that he who has this armor on, keeps it on and learns to use it properly, will be able to stand.

While the Apostle used as an illustration the human warrior, clothed in the proper and complete accoutrements of war, yet he did not mean that the Christian needs this kind of armor. The armor of the Lord is for the new creature because his warfare is not a carnal warfare, but a spiritual warfare.—2 Corinthians 10:4, 5.

WHAT IS THE ARMOR?

God is the maker of this armor through human instrumentalities. The armor consists of his Word, the message of truth, put into proper shape to be used for the benefit of the new creation. Describing this armor in detail, the Apostle says:

"Having your loins girt about with the truth." The girdle is a symbol of servitude, and suggests that no one is safe at this time unless he is a servant of the truth. Those engaged in evil surmising, faultfinding, backbiting, slander, libel or other works of darkness are not servants of the truth. On the contrary, let each one of us see to it that he guards himself against such wiles of the adversary, and that he possesses the zeal peculiar to the house of the Lord and earnestly and zealously follows in the Master's footsteps by serving his cause at this time.

"And having on the breastplate of righteousness." The breastplate was used to cover the vital organs of the body, particularly the heart. A proper condition of heart is vital to the new creature. A righteous heart indicates purity, righteous motives, righteousness of character. "Keep thine heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life." (Prov. 4:23) "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." (Matt. 5:8) "The eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth to show his strength in behalf of him whose heart is pure."—2 Chronicles 16:9.

"And your feet shod with the preparation of the Gospel of peace." The soldier who engages in warfare must keep well his feet. If they are not shod they become sore, and his attention is directed more to the soreness than to his duties. The new creature has now many rough roads to travel. Therefore the feet members should be clothed with the message of peace and see to it that all anger, malice, hatred and strife, ill will, backbiting, faultfinding, accusations of the brethren, be put aside. None other will be able to stand. "Follow peace with all, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." (Heb. 12:14) Those who hunt trouble now will surely find it; they will find little else. Those who avoid trouble find it necessary to be diligent in keeping themselves in the peace and love of God.

"Above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked." The enemy is constantly firing wicked darts at the soldiers of the cross. These darts are liable to stir up in your mind doubts, fears, skepticism. The shield of faith is the protection. Faith means the intellectual understanding and appreciation of the Word of God—true principles—and a confident reliance upon that Word. Without faith it is impossible to please God." "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even your faith."

"And take the helmet of salvation." The helmet is fitted over the head and represents the intellectual understanding and appreciation of the divine plan. This knowledge of God's Word, and his methods and his information concerning the methods of the adversary, is absolutely essential in order to protect ourselves against the evil ones of this day. If we had no knowledge of the demons and their methods of attack, we could not be forearmed against them.

"And the sword of the spirit, which is the Word of God." This is both an offensive and a defensive weapon. We must have it and know how to use it. Jesus wielded it successfully to each attack made upon him. He said, "It is written," and such must be our battle cry. We are not to use carnal weapons, nor such weapons as Satan uses. We are to use the truth and let the truth do the cutting.

It is noticed that the Apostle names only six parts of the armor, whereas the armor of the ancient soldier was in seven parts. Seven is also a symbol of perfection. The seventh part, the one not named by the Apostle, was the greaves, and was a metal shield fitting over the front part of the foot to protect it from the darts of the adversary. The feet members of the church are now engaged in the fight. The greaves, therefore, would properly and fittingly represent the Vow. When it was promulgated our attention was called to this Scripture: "When the enemy shall come in like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him."—Isaiah 59:19.

HOW TO PUT ON THE ARMOR

The words of the Apostle assume that the persons addressed have renounced the world and enlisted under the banner of the Lord by making a full surrender of their will to do God's will. Hence he says by illustration:—

(1.) Girdle—Servitude. Be a zealous and faithful servant of the truth. Let there be but one motive for service—love for God and his righteous cause. "By love serve."

(2.) Breastplate—Righteousness. Having on the robe of Christ's righteousness now, study to be approved of God. Learn the great and vital principles of his Word and apply them to daily living; be controlled by these and let them work out in you a righteous character. Keep a pure heart.

(3.) Sandals—Peace. Do not hunt trouble. Live in peace with all so long as God's law is not sacrificed. Accept your part of suffering with joy.

(4.) Shield—Faith. Maintain an abiding faith in God and in his sure Word of promise. Rely upon his Word and not upon the advice or influence of others. Stand, leaning only on the Lord.

(5.) Helmet—Salvation. Strive to increase in heart appreciation of God and the Lord Jesus. Continue in the study of the Word. Feed upon the food provided. Keep always before your mind the strong hope of salvation and the high position to which you have been called.

(6.) Sword—Word of God. Know God's Word, in letter and spirit. Be able to give a reason for the hope you have. Use it deftly in repelling the adversaries. Let your battle cry be, "It is written."

(7.) Vow. Daily put in practise the Vow in letter and spirit. Take the Lord Jesus with you in all things. Be filled with his Spirit.

If you do these things you shall be strong in the Lord and have the power which his supreme strength imparts and shall be a certain victor.

THE FINAL CONFLICT OF THE "EVIL DAY"

This is the evil day; the time when every man's work is being tried in the fiery furnace; these are perilous times of which we have been warned; it is the last battle, the great and final conflict. The enemy is advancing from every quarter. Shall we quail before our adversaries? No, thank God, for he has made ample provision for his people. The whole armor of God is now supplied. It was never so much needed as now. Those who have it on and keep it on will stand. Others will not.

Let us not be discouraged, dear soldiers of the cross; let us arise to the importance of the time and face the perils of the hour with confidence in our Commander and Lord. The history of ages is looking down upon us. The holy angels of heaven are beholding the final conflict. Jesus and the members of the bride who have passed beyond the veil are watching our course, how we are quitting ourselves. It is the greatest battle of the ages, and the enemy is making his final onslaught. God's little band of soldiers, now clothed with the complete armor of the Lord, are marshalled for the last time upon the battle field. We hear the encouraging words of our Captain, "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee the crown of life!" Soon this army will emerge from the smoke of battle, clothed in wreaths of victory. Soon it will be asked, "Who is she that looketh forth as the morning, fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners?" (Canticles 6:10) Soon the answer from heaven shall ring out, "This is triumphant Zion, whose great Leader has forever put to flight the army of darkness." She is pure, just, holy, good, and now stands in the glorious light of heaven with her glorious Captain. Terrible has been The Christ, and will continue to be, in the conquest of evil. The dawn of his glorious reign is here, the new government is now to be put in operation. Soon all men will have full opportunity to stand in the light of truth and be able by the grace of the Lord to free themselves from all the influences of evil and darkness. Be brave, be valiant soldiers, now!

"Hear the call, O gird your armor on,
Grasp the Spirit's mighty Sword.
Take the helmet of salvation,
Pressing on to battle for the Lord!"

BLESSING GOD AND CURSING MEN

PSALMS OF DELIVERANCE

OCTOBER 7.—Psalms 85, 126.

ISRAEL'S DELIVERANCE FROM CAPTIVITY TO LITERAL BABYLON—THE APPROACHING DELIVERANCE FROM MYSTIC BABYLON THE GREAT—CHRIST THE ANTITYPICAL CYRUS—WHY THE CHURCH CAN SING "SONGS IN THE NIGHT" OF EARTHLY SORROW—THE TRUE SOURCE OF THEIR REST OF HEART—THEIR JOY IN THE FULFILMENT OF THE ABRAHAMIC COVENANT—THE LONG-PROMISED BLESSING OF ALL THE FAMILIES OF THE EARTH.

"They that sow in tears shall reap in joy."—Psalm 126:5.

Psalm 85 may properly have several applications. The first of these would be to Israel's deliverance from the Babylonian captivity, when Cyrus, king of Persia, gave permission that all who desired to return to Palestine might do so. About fifty-three thousand availed themselves of this privilege and of his assistance. The Israelites rejoiced in this manifestation of the turning away of divine disfavor and the return to them of divine blessing. The pardon of their transgressions as a nation was evidenced in this privilege of returning to God's favor.

A secondary application of this song of deliverance is just before us. During the past eighteen centuries Israel has been in a far greater captivity to Christendom. She has the promise, nevertheless, of a mightier deliverance. The Cyrus who gave them permission to return from literal Babylon was a type of the great Messiah who is about to give full liberty for the return of God's ancient people to divine favor—to Palestine. In Romans 11:25-29 the Apostle Paul refers to this coming deliverance. The great Deliverer will do more than merely regather Israel. He will do that which is predicted in Psalm 85; for, as the Apostle says, "This is my covenant with them when I shall take away their sins." See also Jeremiah 31:31-34; Hebrews 8:8-11.

Israel's sins have not yet been taken away, even as the world's sins have not been taken away. The great Redeemer has indeed died for sin, and he is the sinner's friend. But as yet he has appeared in the presence of God only for the church—not for the world. (Hebrews 9:24) He is the Advocate for the church alone. He advocates for none except those who desire to approach to God; and these are the saintly only—those who love righteousness and hate iniquity.

The world is enslaved by Sin and Death, the twin monarchs which are now reigning and which are causing mankind to groan. The Adamic race was born in this enslaved condition, as the Scriptures declare. (Genesis 3:20; Psalm 51:5) Groaning under the weaknesses and imperfections thus inherited—mental, moral and physical—mankind long for the promised deliverance from the bondage of Sin and Death. Undoubtedly the majority of the race feel the gall of their slavery, and will rejoice to be set free.

"HE GIVETH SONGS IN THE NIGHT"

The great Deliverer of mankind is the antitypical Cyrus. Soon he will be victorious and will establish his kingdom under the whole heaven. (Daniel 7:27) Soon the church class, the saintly, the elect, will be glorified; and then the time will come for the blessing of the non-elect—for their restitution to human perfection and to a world-wide paradise, which Messiah's power will produce. "He must reign until he hath put all enemies under his feet; the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." (1 Corinthians 15:25-27) Death will be destroyed. Sheol, hades, the grave, will be destroyed, by the resurrection of the dead therefrom—"every man in his own order."

While the whole creation groans under its load of sin and sorrow, the saintly few may sing, may rejoice, even in the midst of all the sorrows of life, and even though they share the results of sin as fully or more fully than do others. The secret of their joy is twofold: (1) They have experienced reconciliation to God; (2) they have submitted their wills to his will. They obtained this new relationship by the way of faith in the Redeemer—faith in his blood of atonement. They entered by the "strait gate" and the "narrow way" of consecration to God—surrendering their own wills, and covenanting to do the divine will to the best of their ability. This submission to the divine will and the realization that all of their life's affairs are in God's keeping and under his supervision give rest to the heart. In this surrendered condition they have a rest and peace which they never knew when they sought to gratify self-will and ignored the right of their Creator to the homage of their hearts and the obedience of their lives.

Similarly, these have joy, peace and songs of thankfulness to God because to them he grants a knowledge of his divine purposes, and shows them things to come. These see, beyond the trials and tribulations of the present time, the glories which will follow the sufferings of the present. These see that the church, the saintly few of all denominations and of all nationalities, are prospective heirs of God—heirs of glory, honor, immortality and association with the Redeemer in his glorious kingdom. This prospect encourages them. They also see the outlines of the divine program for the blessing of all the families of the earth. When they thus perceive that God is interested in their dear ones who are not saintly and in the whole human family, very few of whom are saints, it causes them rejoicing. When they perceive that God has arranged that through Christ and the glorified church all the families of the earth shall be blessed, it makes them "joyful in the house of their pilgrimage"—while waiting for their own change from human to divine nature.

"YE SHALL GO FORTH WITH SINGING"

The second part of today's study is Psalm 126. This Psalm seems to picture the return of the Jewish exiles from the Babylonian captivity. A writer thus describes the scene of their departure from Babylon:

"Forth from the gates of Babylon they rode, to the sound of joyous music—a band of horsemen playing on flutes and tabrets, accompanied by their own two hundred minstrels and one hundred and twenty-eight singers of the Temple (Ezra 2:41-65), responding to the Prophet's voice as they quitted the shade of the gigantic walls and found themselves in the open desert beyond: 'Go ye out of Babylon, flee ye from the Chaldeans, with a voice of singing declare ye, tell this, utter it even unto the end of the earth; say ye, The Lord hath redeemed his servant Jacob.'"—Isaiah 48:20.

We are interested in this narrative sympathetically, and also because we realize that the Lord's providences control in respect to all the affairs of his chosen people, Israel. But we have a greater and more profound interest in the events here related now that our eyes have been opened to see that the seventy years of desolation of the promised land represent the seventy jubilee cycles appointed to them, in the time of the fulfilment of which we are now living. (Jeremiah 25:11, 12; 2 Chronicles 36:21; Leviticus 26:14-34) Our interest is still further awakened when we remember that during this long interim of "seven times more"—2520 years—God's favor was transferred from the Jewish house of servants to the Gospel house of sons; and that an antitypical Babylon has carried away captive the Lord's people and all the golden vessels of truth. See STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES, Vol. 2, Studies 4, 6.

Spiritual Israel in captivity to mystic Babylon has long waited for the glorious deliverance to be brought about by Immanuel, the Deliverer greater than Cyrus the Persian king. Since our Lord's return in 1874 the cry has gone forth, "Babylon the Great is fallen, is fallen!" and again, "Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." (Revelation 18:1-5) A comparatively small number of them have had such love for the Lord, such reverence for his promises, such desires to be inheritors of those promises as to lead them to sever the earthly ties and the bonds which hold them satisfied in Babylon. But some have heard, some have rejoiced, some have stepped out and some are still leaving. Our antitypical Cyrus, our present Lord, has permitted us to bring back the golden vessels, the golden truths which for so long have been misappropriated, misapplied, misunderstood, misused in Babylon.

RETURNING FROM CAPTIVITY

INTERESTING LETTERS

ENGLISH PRISON AS NEAR HEAVEN AS ANY OTHER PLACE

DEAR BRETHREN:—

Loving greetings in our dear Redeemer's name! You are aware that the younger brethren in Great Britain have been called upon to endure hardness as good soldiers of Jesus Christ.

The largest work center for the employment of Conscientious Objectors to military service in this country is at Princetown, S. Devon, where the Conscientious Objectors are housed in Dartmoor Convict Prison—the most famous of British Prisons—which was built more than 100 years ago for the accommodation of prisoners of war in the time of Napoleon. It is also interesting to recall that American prisoners taken during the War of Independence were confined here, and the cemetery where some of them were buried is still preserved.

At the present time there are between sixty and seventy brethren here. The number is constantly varying, as some are sent to work in other parts of the country, and others are arriving from Wormwood Scrubs Prison, London, where they have been serving terms of imprisonment for refusing to bear arms.

I am sure you will be glad to know that 51 of us met together on April 5 to celebrate the "Memorial." We assembled in the Nonconformist Chapel for the occasion. The Baptists, who had the use of the room for that evening, very kindly curtailed their meeting so that we were enabled to commence our service at 8 o'clock. The wine we obtained at a local store. The proprietress manifested some curiosity as to who we were, and the brother making the purchase apparently answered to her satisfaction; for she kindly loaned us cloths and vessels. In return, our brother gave her a copy of Volume I.

It seemed, dear brethren, as if the dear Lord had arranged everything to enable us to concentrate our minds on the purpose for which we had assembled. Over the head of the brother who conducted the meeting was the picture of our Lord on the cross. On his left were pictures of Jesus before Pilate and the Institution of the Memorial; and on his right were two pictures of the Lord's resurrection.

The meeting opened with Hymn 62, the Lord's blessing being then invoked upon us. We especially remembered our dear brethren who were still in prison, and unable to partake of the Memorial. Hymn 28 was then sung, followed by a short discourse based upon Luke 22:1-30. We then joined in singing Hymn No. 2, after which we partook of the emblems, a blessing being asked upon each; the service closing with Hymn 277. The service was very impressive. We felt keenly the fact that we were not able to meet with our loved ones in the classes from which we have been drawn; but we remembered that Dartmoor is as near heaven as London, or any other place of our earthly pilgrimage.

We are thankful that we have been accounted worthy to suffer for Christ's sake. It is a proof that our sacrifice is being consumed, and that we are making our calling and election sure. We realize that under these conditions it is very difficult indeed to maintain that high moral standard which is set before us, it being so easy to get loose in our ways and actions.

A thought which has been expressed, and which has proved very helpful to us, is that when St. Stephen was stoned for his fidelity to the truth, he cried with a loud voice, "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit"; or, as a footnote in the Diaglott expresses it, "Lord Jesus, assist me to suffer." How this is in harmony with the context, and the circumstances in which he was then placed! Stephen was the first martyr; it may be that we younger brethren will be some of the last, and we pray that we may always be in that condition of heart where we can call upon our Savior, and say, "Lord Jesus, assist us to suffer."

And now, dear brethren, I commend you to God, praying fervently to the Father for you, that you may have an abundant entrance into that glorious kingdom which we believe is very soon to be ours.

Your loving brother in the Beloved,

ROBERT EDWIN DARBY.—Eng.

REJOICING IN THE TRUTH AT 68

DEAR BRETHREN:—

I desire to express my joy and feeling to you for the unspeakable grace our heavenly Father has been pleased to bestow upon me. He pulled me out of that state of ignorance, darkness and superstition, in which I had been unfortunately plunged, first by having spent the first twenty years of my life as a Roman Catholic, afterward as a member of the Presbyterian church for some time, and finally as an unbeliever for a number of years.

The blessedness I have experienced since I came to the knowledge of God's wonderful present truth is due absolutely to the efforts of that "faithful servant" of our Lord, the late Pastor Russell. Blessed be his memory; for the "crown of life" promised to every overcomer on this side the veil must have been his reward.

By the grace of God, I have had the privilege and opportunity to read and study lately the six volumes of STUDIES from his pen, and also THE WATCH TOWER you have been kind enough to send me since November, 1916. Being willing to learn, I prayed the Almighty God to help me, and, blessed be the Lord, the result was that I was brought down to the feet of our Master and Savior Jesus Christ. Brother Nettleton, the elder of our Union Avenue ecclesia, always stood by me, assisting me in all my wants most generously.

I am an old man, 68 years of age, a widower without children. I am poor and afflicted with bodily pains and infirmities to such extent that, being unable to earn my living by ordinary work, I have been compelled, since a few years, to become an inmate of a benevolent institution. But although poor and afflicted in the flesh, I feel like singing God's praises constantly. Being a French-Canadian, I am thoroughly well educated in the French language, besides being familiar with the English and Italian languages.

Dear Brethren of the Editorial Committee, my prayers go up to the throne of grace for you, and may our heavenly Father help us all to carry on to the end the good work of spreading the glorious Gospel truth, "while it is yet day light, for the night will soon come when no man shall be able to work."

Your brother in Christ, JOSEPH DAOUST.—Can.

DOES SOCIETY SUPERVISE CONVENTION REPORTS?

MY DEARLY BELOVED BRETHREN IN CHRIST:—

Your very encouraging letter of the 20th received with great joy and I thank you for your words of comfort and counsel. Permit me, dear brethren, to ask you for a little information in regard to the Convention Reports published by Brother Jones in the past, and I notice that he is going to get them out this year also. Since a few things have happened this past year some of the friends would not order the Souvenirs until they hear from Headquarters. So please give us your opinion about it. Is it under the supervision of the SOCIETY? or will the SOCIETY publish these Souvenirs? Will the seventh volume be published in any other language?

Yours in Christian love, GEO. E. KAFOORY.—Pa.

Our Reply

With reference to the Convention Reports, or Souvenirs, we beg to say that the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY has nothing whatsoever to do with them. They are published by Brother Jones on his own volition and responsibility. It has never been the policy of the SOCIETY to publish the pilgrim brethren's discourses delivered at conventions. The SOCIETY has proceeded upon the theory that if anyone else desired to publish what was delivered at the conventions, the SOCIETY would not interfere, granting to everyone the liberty of doing what he thinks is best.

Our own opinion is that the Convention Reports, or Souvenirs, are not particularly helpful or beneficial. We believe the time could be better occupied by reading the volumes of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES and THE WATCH TOWER.

"LOST IN WONDER, LOVE AND PRAISE"

DEAR ONES IN CHRIST:—

Truly, we are "lost in wonder, love and praise"! Words are lacking in which to utter grateful thanks unto our dear loving Father and his dear Son for giving us the seventh volume. At first we were afraid to open it, lest some one not of our Lord's chosen channel had attempted to write it. But oh, how our hearts swell up with love and praise as we read it!

Your sister in Christ, MRS. ALICE A. DOBBINS.—Ark.

BELIEVES 7TH VOLUME SUFFICIENT TO OVERCOME

DEAR FRIENDS AND COLABORERS:—

Loving greetings! Such a wondrous gift was placed in my waiting, eager hands a few days ago, when the seventh volume came! My joy and gratitude seem boundless, for this which came in a time of direst need: when nothing else seemed to satisfy.

O! how adorable is our God to provide this just now, when the crucial test for the church is on! Trials and tests are rapidly increasing, but within the covers of this blessed book, I believe, is sufficient, by his grace, to overcome.

Please find payment inclosed.

Kindly thanking you for so graciously sending this, I remain with prayers and best wishes,

Yours in Christ, OPAL SARGENT.—Neb.

OVERWHELMED IN READING IT

DEAR FELLOW SERVANTS:—

I am sending you sixty cents for the seventh volume of SCRIPTURE STUDIES. Please pardon me for not sending it sooner. I have been so overwhelmed in reading it, and it has been so interesting, that I just could not spare the time to write you a little letter until now.

Your brother in Christ, J. A. HEUDSPETH.—Texas.

VOLUME VII IN GERMAN

We have been receiving many inquiries as to whether we shall bring forth Volume VII in the German language. The cost would be considerable and the time necessary for translation and printing would probably reach at least until January 1st. In order that we may know whether it will be feasible to undertake the work or not, we would like to hear from German friends who would care to have Volume VII in the German language. Do not order any but advise us by postcard how many volumes you would care for at the same price of the English Volume if it were published. An early reply from the German friends will be appreciated.

PASTOR RUSSELL'S SERMONS IN BOOK FORM

We are pleased to announce that arrangements are under way for the compilation of a book containing the principal sermons by Brother Russell.

This will meet a long felt want on the part of the friends. As many of his sermons were to some extent more or less repetitions of other sermons the arrangement will contain all of his principal sermons covering all points of the plan as outlined in the various volumes of the SCRIPTURE STUDIES. Our thought is to eliminate any duplication of statements in order that it may be as convenient and complete as possible. We are glad to announce, also, that the book will contain additionally some special matter arranged by Brother Russell and never before printed. He had in mind to publish it, but did not reach it before his death; and we feel sure the friends will take great delight in reading it. The binding will be uniform with the other volumes of the SCRIPTURE STUDIES and will contain from six to eight hundred pages. The price will be: Cloth, $1.00, postpaid; Leather Bound, $1.50, postpaid. We hope to have it ready by November 1st. Orders will be received at once, but we do not expect to make delivery before date named.

NEW VOLUNTEER MATTER

The output of volunteer matter this year so far has been something quite phenomenal. The friends have entered into the work with extraordinary zeal, and the result has been that in many cities work that has heretofore taken from four to eight months has been cleared up in from one month to six weeks. As the first number of volunteer matter, THE WORLD ON FIRE, was ready early in the year, the friends everywhere entered into the distribution with keen zest. Over seven and a half million were distributed within a short time, and the friends were ready for more. The second number, WHY DO THE NATIONS WAR? has already passed the six and a half million mark, and the orders are still coming in, although many of the classes have completed the work and are anxiously waiting for more. We are surely glad to know this.

The Lord has been so arranging to meet the increased cost of paper and other expenses through the means of the Tract Fund contributions that we are now arranging for a third number which we trust will be the best one yet, entitled THE FALL OF BABYLON.

We trust to have this Volunteer Edition ready by the 1st of October. Orders may be placed at any time and shipment will begin as soon as ready. This issue will contain a number of articles from Brother Russell, calling attention to the long-promised kingdom and the joys which shall result therefrom and of the fact that we are now at its very door. When ordering please specify B. S. M. No. 99.

We feel sure that the friends everywhere will be very much pleased with this forthcoming number, and suggest that all classes who have not finished distributing the last issue push the matter rapidly in order that the new work may be taken up at once and with full vigor.

The blessing of the Lord has rested richly upon the work during the year thus far, and indications are increasing that he has some great work for us in the near future. Let us all unite our prayers and our efforts to the end that he may grant us wisdom and strength to carry forward whatever he may open for us!

The orders for the seventh volume are also coming in by the hundreds, and the friends everywhere are greatly enthused and encouraged. We believe there is a great work in the near future for every earnest worker, and that the Lord has a rich blessing for everyone who will enter therein.

We are also glad to report that applications for territory from over one hundred new colporteurs have been received within the last few weeks, indicating a greatly increased activity on the part of the friends everywhere.

I. B. S. A. INCORPORATION

Many of our younger students and recent subscribers to THE WATCH TOWER seem not to have noticed statement on the second page setting forth the mission of the SOCIETY and the journal to the thousands of Bible Students. We suggest a careful re-reading of this entire second page. THE CONCLUDING WORK OF THE HARVEST

"And another angel came out from the altar, which had power over fire, and cried with a loud voice to him that had a sharp sickle, saying, Thrust in thy sickle and gather the clusters of the vine of the earth, for her grapes are fully ripe. And the angel thrust in his sickle upon the earth and gathered the vine of the earth and cast it into the great winepress of the wrath of God."—Rev. 14:18, 19.

It is the new creation that is gathered into the garner of the Lord. It is the vine of the earth, composed of the tare systems of the earth, that must be gathered for destruction. Such were the words of the Master.

For nineteen centuries God has been preparing the new creation. That work is now reaching a climax. Jehovah is a strict economist. He wastes neither time nor effort. The length of time and the expenditure of treasure is evidence all-sufficient of the great importance of the work of completing the new creation. This work has consisted of the purchasing, calling, begetting and transformation of poor, sad, dying human beings into perfect, joyful, spirit beings of superlative beauty and glory, possessing life immortal and powers for usefulness without limitation.

Long ago, at great cost to himself—yea, at the cost of the dearest treasure to his own heart—Jehovah provided for the purchase of the entire human race. The purchase-price has been used for those who will compose the new creation, and they have been brought to a knowledge of that fact and joyfully accepted the benefits thereof.

PICTURES FORESHADOWING DEVELOPMENT

Long, long before the beginning of the actual development of the new creation, God caused many wonderful pictures to be made, foreshadowing the preparation for and the process of bringing to completion the great work in behalf of the new creation. To Abraham he made a promise concerning the same, designating that class as "the seed" from which shall go forth the blessings to all humankind. Abraham offered up his son in the mountain and received him as from the dead, picturing the death and resurrection of the antitypical Isaac, the Lord Jesus. (Hebrews 11:17-19) For many centuries God's typical people offered yearly sacrifices foreshadowing the great sin-offering on behalf of the church and the world. David in his experiences typified the church at war, while Solomon pictured the new creation in glory.

The sin-offering on behalf of the church being finished, God issued a call for the election of the new creation. Mark, that this call began at Pentecost and not before; there the heavenly way was opened.

God designates this class as his elect, as distinguished from the non-elect. Selected from amongst men, favored with a knowledge of his great plan and furnished with the rules governing the election, the called ones have the assurance that if they conform themselves to these rules they will be elected judges and blessers of mankind, and thereafter forever be the recipients of Jehovah's favor.

Again, Jehovah likens this class unto a glorious temple, of which Solomon's Temple was a type or picture. The material for Solomon's Temple was prepared in advance, and when the time came it was put together without noise or confusion. (1 Kings 6:7) So the new creation has been long in the course of preparation. Now it is being put in order and the glorious temple is being erected, without noise or confusion, and without the knowledge of the world.

Long centuries ago God caused to be erected in Egypt a mighty pillar of stone, composed of many stones, all dressed and nicely shaped and fitted to the one chief corner stone. The entire structure constituted a grand building in the form of a pyramid, picturing the new creation in the likeness of God.

St. Peter speaks of the new creation as living stones built up into a spiritual house. (1 Peter 2:4-9) The Lord's Prophet refers to the same as the "jewel class," constituting the precious jewels of Jehovah. He divides the new creation into twelve tribes or companies, and then selects twelve of the most precious or rare jewels of all material creation to picture the respective tribes. (Rev. 21:19, 20) Another of his prophets speaks of this class as a crown of glory in the hand of Jehovah, a royal diadem in the hand of God. (Isaiah 62:3) Again, this class is pictured as a royal priesthood, meaning that they shall both reign with Christ and minister blessings unto the world. They were pictured by Melchisedec, whose priesthood had neither predecessor nor successor, signifying that the new creation will be in a class distinctive and alone in Jehovah's great realm.

Many centuries ago Jehovah made another picture by causing Abraham to send his servant into a distant country to select a wife for Isaac. When Rebecca was brought to Isaac, she became his wife, thus foreshadowing how Jehovah sent his Spirit into the earth to select from amongst men the antitypical Rebecca as the bride for the antitypical Isaac. The Lord has made the relationship of husband and wife picture the relationship between Jesus and his bride.—Ephesians 5:25-32.

It is a recognized rule that the antitype is greater than the sum total of all the types. The marriage of Jesus and his bride, which soon will be completed, will therefore, as the antitype, be far greater than all the marriages of earth. Call to mind all the happiness and joy manifested at all the weddings of all the ages that have occurred on earth, and then know that the sum total of these marriages is nothing as compared to the unspeakable joy that will pervade the universe on the festal day when Jesus and his bride shall be made one.

WHO WILL SHARE IN THIS FAVOR

The elaborate program arranged by Jehovah, and the time and the treasure consumed in carrying it out, enable us to grasp in a measure the great importance of this work and the marvelous blessings that shall follow its completion. With his heart fired with a burning desire to attain unto the position offered, the Apostle said, "That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, and be made conformable to his death: if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead. . . . This one thing I do, forgetting the things that are behind and reaching forth unto those things which are before I press forward along the mark for the prize." (Philippians 3:10-14) Those who attain to this exalted position will be they who love the Lord supremely, who keep his commandments with a joyful heart and with delight submit to his holy will. The special commandments to the new creation are, "That ye love one another, even as I have loved you"; "Thrust in the sickle and reap"; "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee the crown of life." To the faithful he says, "He that reapeth receiveth wages."—John 13:34, 35; Revelation 14:15; 2:10; John 4:36.

It follows that the harvest work is of the greatest importance. It may properly be divided into three parts: (1) the bride making herself ready for the marriage; (2) the bride class declaring the message of the kingdom to others, that they might be invited to the marriage feast; (3) the gathering of the grapes of "the vine of the earth." It is difficult to see how the bride could make herself ready if she failed or refused to declare the message to others; and particularly is this true if the opportunity to do the work of the harvest is granted and she fails to avail herself of such opportunity. Those who reap receive the wages. It follows that those who fail to reap in the manner prescribed could not expect to receive the wage.

PERIOD OF THE HARVEST

It is important for us to know when the harvest began and when it will end. We feel sure it is pleasing to the Lord that we make an effort to know. The Jewish and Gospel ages parallel each other, both in time and in events. Our thought once was that the Jewish harvest began with the consecration of our Lord, in A. D. 30, and ended with the destruction of Jerusalem, in A. D. 70—a period of forty years. But, as pointed out by Brother Russell in THE WATCH TOWER last year (page 264), this view does not seem to be supported by the Scriptures. Jesus was not one who was harvested; for he was always in harmony with Jehovah. During the three and a half years of his ministry he recognized the law arrangement in force (Matt 23:1-3)—that three and a half years was the period of preparation, the gathering of the loyal Jews together, and especially of preparing the apostles as his instruments for the work of harvest that was to follow. The heavenly garner could not possibly be opened until Jesus had provided the ransom-price, and had ascended on high and presented it to the Father.—2 Tim. 1:10.

It was at Pentecost that the apostles received the holy Spirit. Then it was that St. Peter stood up and spoke with authority to the Jews, and told them how that Jesus was the great Redeemer whom they had wickedly slain, but whom God raised up. "Now when they heard this, they were pricked in their hearts and said unto Peter and to the rest of the Apostles, Men and brethren, what shall we do? Then Peter said unto them, Repent and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the holy Spirit. For the promise is unto you and to your children and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call."—Acts 2:37-39.

Here, for the first time, the call went forth to enter the race for the prize of heavenly glory, and on that same day about three thousand responded to the call. Prior thereto there was no garner. Not even the Apostles could receive the holy Spirit until that day. This would seem to establish beyond question of doubt that the Jewish harvest began at Pentecost.

This conclusion in no wise interferes with our chronology, but instead confirms it. The year 1914 marked the end of the Gentile times, but did not mark the end of the harvest of the Gospel age. Many have consecrated and given evidence of spirit-begetting since 1914, which is the best evidence that the harvest is not yet closed.

END OF JEWISH HARVEST

Just before his crucifixion Jesus was asked by his disciples three questions in one, namely: (1) When shall the temple be destroyed? (2) What would be the proof of his presence and (3) of the end of the age? These questions he answered. (Matthew 24:3-35) The historical facts show: (1) the destruction of Jerusalem, A. D. 70; (2) the complete subjugation of Judea, A. D. 73, and (3) the depopulation of Palestine, A. D. 135. Thus it follows that there were three different endings relative to the Jewish polity. Which one of these did the Lord intend should be our guide in the harvest parallels?

Jesus declared, "The harvest is the end of the age." (Matthew 13:39) Therefore we must find that when the harvest ended, the age is ended. He could not have meant A. D. 70 and its parallel date, 1915, as marking the end of the harvest, because the harvest did not end there. It is still going on. He could not have meant A. D. 135 and the parallel date, 1980, for the reason that such a conclusion would entirely destroy the parallel with reference to the harvest.

In giving his answer with reference to the end of the age, Jesus said, "Let them which are in Judea flee to the mountains." Judea more particularly types Babylon. The date of the fall of Judea, therefore, is of great importance. In Volume 7, STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES, pages 23 and 24, we have collected seven historical authorities definitely establishing the fact that Judea's fall occurred on the first day of the Feast of the Passover (April 15) A. D. 73, which was exactly forty years after Pentecost, the beginning of the Jewish harvest, therefore marking the close of the Jewish harvest in A. D. 73.

GOSPEL AGE HARVEST

The proof heretofore published in STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES definitely establishes the second presence of our Lord since 1874. Correspondingly, the three and a half years following would be a period of preparation for the harvest of the Gospel age, exactly as such preparation was made for the harvest of the Jewish age, and would consequently mark the beginning of the harvest of the Gospel age in 1878.

Likewise, the proof heretofore published definitely establishes the resurrection of the sleeping saints in A. D. 1878. (See Rev. 14:13 comments in Vol. 7) St. Paul clearly establishes the fact that none could be gathered into the heavenly garner of the Lord in the harvest of the Gospel age until after the awakening of the saints, saying, "For this we say unto you by the Word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not precede them which are asleep; for the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout and with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first."—1 Thessalonians 4:15, 16.

Immediately following the announcement in Rev. 14:13, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth," we read (Verse 14) "and behold a white cloud, and upon the cloud I saw one sitting like unto the Son of Man, having on his head a golden crown and in his hand a sharp sickle." Thus is described the second presence of our Lord as the great Chief Reaper, at the beginning of the harvest in 1878. The 15th verse of that same chapter refers to the Great Pyramid, the measurements of which confirm the Bible teaching that 1878 marked the beginning of the harvest of the Gospel age. The parallel, therefore, would establish definitely that the harvest would close forty years thereafter; to wit, in the spring of A. D. 1918. If this be true, and the evidence is very conclusive that it is true, then we have only a few months in which to labor before the great night settles down when no man can work.

Now we have come to another step in the pathway of present truth; and the question that confronts the people of God is, Are we ready for it? In 1875, when Brother Russell learned of the presence of our Lord, he immediately saw from Revelation 14:14, 16 that the work which the Lord would have his people to do is to reap the harvest of ripened wheat. (Matt. 13:39) The Lord has been pleased to remove Brother Russell from the earthly stage of action; and now the great Shepherd of the sheep has called our attention in unmistakable terms to the fact that he has a work for the church yet in the flesh, following the harvesting of the wheat, a work which is described in detail in Rev. 14:17, 19, as the harvesting of the vine of the earth. This work is doubtless the same as that described in Matt. 13:40, 43. It is a work of exposing to all the world the unrighteousness of the ecclesiastical systems, their acts and their unholy alliances with the beastly governments of the present evil order of things. It also seems to relate to the gathering out from amongst God's professed consecrated people of all offending ones.—Matthew 13:41.

THE LAST WORK OF THE CHURCH

If any of us have come to this hour expecting that the last work of the church in the flesh would be one of quiet, pleasing, easy triumph, void of severe and fiery trials, then surely we have misread our Bibles and STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES and the pages of history. Never before were there so many indications as now that the church is in the great enemy's territory undergoing final and crucial testing, with still more in front of her. She must continue her fight to the end, amidst graver perils than any she has encountered for a long time.

To accomplish the work now at hand the Lord will use such instruments as he has provided. He has placed an instrument within the reach of every one of the Elijah class who desires to have a part in setting the nominal heavens on fire. The instrument is the Seventh Volume of SCRIPTURE STUDIES, and other kindred truths which the Lord has been providing for the church. In Revelation 22:10 he tells us, "Make no secret of the predictions contained in this book; for the time for their fulfilment is now close at hand."

The church is now in a time of severe trial and testing. Many things are arising that have a tendency to cause doubt. The church needs comfort and encouragement. There is nothing that will give her so much encouragement and comfort as to engage intelligently and enthusiastically in the harvest work, with the instruments which the Lord has provided for that work at this time. Concerning the Seventh Volume, Brother Russell said: "It will probably be given to the church in a time of direst need, for her comfort and encouragement." Again he said, "It will be for the purpose of enabling the church to stand after first having been developed." He pointed out that the book would be an explanation of Revelation and Ezekiel. Can we ever look for another explanation of Revelation such as we now possess, with 743 extracts from Brother Russell's pen and thousands of Scripture references confirming the same? Brother Russell replied to a question concerning the Seventh Volume, "If the Lord shows me the key, I will write the Seventh Volume; if he shows the key to someone else, he can write it." Brother Russell himself is the key, and his modesty and humility prevented him from seeing it. He is the prominent figure foreshadowed both in Revelation and Ezekiel.

THE PENNY

Explaining the parable of the Penny (Matthew 20:1-16), Brother Russell set forth in SCRIPTURE STUDIES, Vol. III, page 223, that the penny is "Kingdom honors." In Psalm 149:5-9 we read, "Let the saints be joyful in glory; let them sing aloud upon their beds; let the high praises of God be in their mouths and a two-edged sword in their hand; to execute vengeance upon the heathen and punishment upon the people; to bind their kings with chains and their nobles with fetters of iron; to execute upon them the judgment written; this honor have all the saints." Commenting upon this Psalm, Brother Russell stated that the "honor" here referred to would be conferred upon the saints on this side of the veil; that the sword, likewise, would be used by the saints on this side the veil. It is a great and wonderful honor to have part in wielding the sword now (the message of truth) that is binding the kings, rulers, nobles and systems of this world. Everyone who joyfully receives and uses the "point" of the sword, to wit, the Seventh Volume (Ezek. 21:14, 15), thus receives "Kingdom Honors"—The Penny.

For many years we have been promised the Seventh Volume. All have looked for it, expecting the last coming into the truth would be classed equally with the first in receiving it.

The parable shows that some would murmur and complain. In harmony with this parable we see some murmuring and rejecting Volume Seven. Hence they are not satisfied with the penny—the honor that the Lord has offered them of having part in this wonderful closing work of the harvest. Such are not engaged now in the harvest, but are more particularly engaged in murmuring, in finding fault and in trying to hinder the work.

THE ANGEL WITH THE SICKLE

"And another angel came out from the altar, which had power over fire, and cried with a loud voice to him that had the sharp sickle, saying, Thrust in thy sickle and gather the cluster of the vine of the earth, for her grapes are fully ripe." (Rev. 14:17, 18) Clearly, the angel here mentioned is the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY. The altar represents the place of sacrifice, and the SOCIETY is maintained by the sacrifices of saints. The Lord has used the SOCIETY since its organization, and is still using it. There would be no reason why he would change his channel, or chariot, or method of bearing the message to his people until the work is finished.

The sacrifice of the saints has wonderfully increased the work during the present year. The contributions for the year 1917 are already far in excess of the entire year 1916, and there are yet two months more of this year. The volunteer work for this year is much greater than in 1916. There has been a great increase in the pastoral work. It has been frequently remarked at the conventions this year that never has there been such a spirit of loving devotion to the Lord and his cause and to each other as is shown by the friends in general, with the firm determination to finish their course with joy by now grasping the sword and using the "point" of it—the Seventh Volume—to the glory and praise of the Master. Interest at public meetings is also wonderfully increasing.

"Which had power over fire," means the authority to publish and send out an explanation of the prophecies of Ezekiel and Revelation, which are destructive to the present erroneous systems by turning the flood of light upon them. This is exactly the work now being done by the SOCIETY. "And the angel [SOCIETY] thrust in his sickle [message of truth] into the earth, and gathered the vine of the earth and cast it into the great winepress of the wrath of God"—by distributing far and wide amongst order-loving people the good news that the Babylonish systems of error are doomed, and a better time is near at hand. Will you have a part in this good work? Are you doing your part, and receiving the blessing?

THE GREAT DRIVE BEGINNING

Many are signifying their keen interest in this work by entering the colporteur service. The demand for colporteur territory is every day increasing. Several new pilgrims are entering the service. The extension work is reviving; the pastoral work is increasing; volunteers are doing much more than heretofore; others are doing sharp-shooting; while still others are giving chart talks, and thus the army of the Lord, the little band of Gideon throughout the world, is now holding forth the light, proclaiming the message that the work may be finished in the Lord's appointed time, Babylon put to complete rout, and the Lord's little ones gathered home.

Many classes are adopting the following method for a quick accomplishment of colporteuring of their respective districts, namely: the territory of a city or a county is assigned by the SOCIETY upon request, to a district committee, consisting of two or three energetic members (who may be regular colporteurs or otherwise) appointed by the class. This district committee deals exclusively with the home office in the way of ordering books, making reports, etc. This committee, whose assignment supercedes all others, will co-operate with any regular colporteurs who may be in the county, but the understanding being that the territory will be divided by the committee into small districts, and that every member in the local class who has the desire, time and ability will participate in the rapid colporteuring of that territory, by taking a small district and working it quickly. Many of the classes are ordering books in large quantities for this work, the SOCIETY granting them special colporteur rates. Our thought is that the canvassing of the colporteurs should be done for the entire seven volumes, but the colporteur should specialize on the Seventh Volume. To this end we suggest the following as a method, or canvass:

"Good morning! I have here something that you will want, and I will take only a moment to call it to your attention. As we know, for more than three years the world has been involved in the greatest war of all times. The people everywhere are asking 'Why should we have such a war? What will be the result?' Those who read the Bible have wondered if this is the great war therein foretold. For a long time order-loving people, Bible readers and Christians have desired to understand the prophecies of Revelation and Ezekiel.

"I have here a work recently published by the BIBLE SOCIETY of Brooklyn, New York, which is the first and only book that makes clear every part of Revelation and Ezekiel. It takes up these prophecies verse by verse, and explains them. It throws more light on the present war, the real causes, and what will be the result, than does anything yet written. It shows what part the Catholics, Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians and other church denominations have played in the world's history, and what part they are yet to perform. It treats the subject from the political, scientific, historical and prophetic viewpoints. Of course you will want it. You can't afford to be without it. The publishers have placed it at such a low figure that it is now within the reach of every one.

[Pause a moment for them to ask price of book.]

"The price is only 60 cents, less than half the usual price of a book that size. While this book is complete within itself, yet it is the last in a series of seven volumes. When you have these volumes you have a complete library, making clear every difficult Bible and prophetic question which you have heretofore been unable to understand. The house also publishes twice each month a journal which keeps abreast with current events in the light of the Scriptures. No matter what church you belong to, you need these books, and particularly the Seventh Volume. The entire set together with the journal is only $4.50. Shall I bring them to you?"

Do the colporteur work first, then let pastoral workers follow, loaning books to those who do not purchase.

The SOCIETY has been compelled to order another large edition of the Seventh Volume, that the demand may be supplied. The friends are greatly encouraged at the outlook; and those who love the Lord supremely are forgetting all differences and have in mind but one thought, as did St. Paul: "This one thing I do"—I am determined to win the prize.

NEW VOLUNTEER MATTER

The SOCIETY is preparing and will shortly issue another number of volunteer matter for this year. In 1916 we had only one main issue. This year we have already published two, and the distribution has far exceeded that of 1916. The third number is now being prepared and will contain strong, pointed, compact truths in line with the message set forth in the Seventh Volume, the leading article being entitled THE FALL OF BABYLON. We suggest that the friends order immediately the quantity they will be able to use. Specify B. S. M. No. 99.

"And I saw an angel standing in the sun, and he cried with a loud voice, saying to all the fowls that fly in the midst of heaven, Come, gather yourselves together unto the supper of the great God." (Revelation 19:17) The angel standing in the sun clearly represents the the Elijah class yet on earth —those, we believe, who have joyfully accepted the Seventh Volume of SCRIPTURE STUDIES. Greater light has come to such and they are serene and happy in divine favor. Resplendent in the light that they have received in the closing hours of the age, these are eagerly spreading far and near to order-loving people the enlightening prophecies of Revelation and Ezekiel. They are not fearful; they are not complainers; they are not shrinking from duty, but are fearlessly and plainly declaring the message of truth, calling to the eagles (God's consecrated people) to come and join in the feast of the Lord. This might suggest that those who reject the Seventh Volume would not be of the Elijah class, but would be separated from the Elijah class by the fiery chariot.

Truly, we are living in a fearful and wonderful time, a time fraught with great danger, great responsibility and marvelous opportunities. Let each one who loves the Lord and his cause joyfully participate in using the instrument that shall reap "the vine of the earth." Seeing these things, let us look up and lift up our heads, for our deliverance draweth nigh. Your time, your love, your energy and strength, your means and your influence—your all—may now be used to the glory of the Lord and to your everlasting benefit and happiness. Will you thus employ your talents? Soon our journey will be ended, and we shall be gathered to our glory home. Let us be faithful!

"Come, all ye saints, to Pisgah's mountain,
Come view our home beyond the tide;
Millennial Canaan is before us;
Soon we'll sing on the other side."

THE TEMPLE REBUILT AND DEDICATED

[This article was a reprint of that entitled "Rebuilding the Temple," published in issue of October 15, 1905, which please see.]

EZRA'S RETURN FROM BABYLON

[This article, with the exception of the first paragraph (printed below) was reprinted from article entitled "Gathering and Winnowing," published in issue of November 1, 1905, which please see.]

The prophecies of Haggai were delivered to Israel about the time of their return from the Babylonian captivity, and therefore at the time of the founding of the Temple, the Prophet being advanced in years. Then the Prophet Zechariah, a younger man, was raised up by the Lord; and other messages were sent to the discouraged Israelites to show them that they must not expect great national prosperity at that time, but that nevertheless the Lord was with them, and that by faithfully continuing in an apparently small, insignificant matter they would be accomplishing his purposes. In some degree this corresponds with the messages which have come to the Lord's people since the time of Wycliffe, and which have led to the Reformation movement in its various aspects, and incidentally to the preparation of the "living stones" of the glorious antitypical Temple.

SEVENTH VOLUME TRULY APPRECIATED

It would be impossible for us to print the thousands of letters being received expressive of the joy and assistance received through careful and prayerful reading of the Seventh Volume, THE FINISHED MYSTERY.

Surely the blessing of the Lord has rested upon this volume in no measured terms! Hundreds have stated that they have renewed their consecration to the Lord, and have appreciated his protecting care from the evil spirits more and more as they see more clearly how these evil ones are operating. However, we are glad to make a few quotations from some of the letters, all of which we are sure will be read with interest:

"We desire to tell you of the joy and comfort Volume Seven has brought to us. We appreciate it as the gift of the Lord and consider it invaluable. Bringing to us the Sinaitic version of Revelation alone would be worth the money, to say nothing of the labor of love in bringing together our Pastor's comments and the harmonizing of the other portions. I also deeply appreciate the comments on the book of Ezekiel. I consider that the whole book is wonderful. As I think over our Pastor's words that Volume Seven would be given to the church in her hour of direst need, my heart is comforted as respects the members of the little flock this side the veil, and I am amazed at the gracious provision of our heavenly Father on behalf of the great company class, to be reached through the same volume. What a glorious assistance it will be in helping them to come quickly to a knowledge of the truth, present truth!" —C. H. S., Pa.

"The more I study, looking up references to SCRIPTURE STUDIES, TOWERS and Scriptures, the more fully I am convinced that it is indeed the promised Seventh Volume or 'penny'—THE message now DUE. Words fail me to express the JOY and strength that fills my soul. The words of our Pastor have been culled from his writings of forty years, and brought together in one compact form, and supplemented by certain facts that he himself could not so well state as another. Surely it will be a POWER to accomplish the Lord's purpose at this momentous time! I pray that I may use this chariot to mount to the skies."—E. M., Mass.

"The most of us are rejoicing in the Seventh Volume. To my mind the volume came at the appointed time. I myself have been greatly oppressed of late with mental suggestions of a more or less lewd nature, and in talking to several of the friends I find this is true of both male and female. 'Know ye not that we shall judge angels?' No doubt, the TEST IS NOW ON; and our dear Lord has provided us, through that wise servant, the vow, for our help and protection at this time. It seems to me very plain how those fallen ones are being judged, and at the same time we as well. Let us REMEMBER THE VOW."—G. M. K., Va.

"I feel as though the 'penny' is hundreds, yea, more than hundreds, of times beyond what I deserve. It has given me so much encouragement and so much blessing. I am only fourteen years old, so that I do not mingle with the world at all, and my only friends are the dear truth people; and this makes me shy in giving tracts to strangers, but I am trying to overcome and hope to be counted worthy of being of the Elijah class in this momentous hour."—O. F. D., N. Y.

"Our hearts are overflowing with love and gratitude to our loving Heavenly Father and our present Bridegroom and Chief Reaper for the wonderful message received through Volume Seven. We are overwhelmed at the goodness of our God. Surely we are not worthy of his wonderful favors, to be among those who have hearing ears and seeing eyes!"—A Brother and Sister (the two oldest successful colporteurs in the field.)

"All of the class are interested in the Father's plan as it is now being revealed in this last hour, and they have read and are studying the Seventh Volume as having been sent at just the time Pastor Russell said it would come—in a time of great distress prevailing in the church. All rejoice at the marked indications of the fulfilment of what we are to expect in the perilous times which the church must see before the glorification comes."—C. B., Ill.

"I can never tell you what joy was mine when the long-looked-for Seventh Volume was handed to me. It certainly has been my Gethsemane comforter, renewing my zeal and courage with the reading of each page. How I long to be one of the three hundred (class) of the antitypical Gideon's band! and I am determined TO BE, by the Lord's help. Each day since receiving the volume I have thanked my dear heavenly Father for so great a favor."—B. T. M., Minn.

"I am rejoicing in the Seventh Volume. It is a call to look to our armor, fasten it carefully, to sharpen (our knowledge of) the Sword of the Spirit, and to lose no time in preparing to meet the foe. Before I had opened the parcel I felt it was the last message from our Head before we started for home. It is also a message for the false church, but how few will heed it till we are gone!"—MARY T. F. H., Ohio.

"The enlightenment which I have received from Volume Seven, especially Rev. 7:1-3, has been a great help to me; for I have had corroborative experiences along this very line. It comes to me now as re-enforcement in the time of need, giving me new strength for battle against the unseen forces and a deeper love and sympathy for others. Praise the Lord."—H. C. H., Conn.

"How great and rich a blessing has come to me through the Seventh Volume words cannot tell, but daily from its pages flows deeply and richly the Spirit of the Lord. How evident it is that God's hand is guiding and helping Brother Rutherford! How evidently the Lord guided in regard to Volume Seven!"—J. A. M., Pilgrim.

"Am much pleased with the Seventh Volume and deeply impressed with the many facts pointing to the Passover of 1918. My continued prayer is that we all may be found faithful to our covenant of sacrifice and found possessed of the Spirit of the Master, as illustrated in the first martyr, Stephen —'Lord, lay not this sin to their charge.' "—G. F. E., Conn.

"I cannot tell you how much I am enjoying the Seventh Volume. Am in the 14th chapter of Revelation, and it is getting more intensely interesting every minute. I am so anxious to get through with it to find out what the Lord's will has in store for us on this side of the veil, both of sorrows and joys."—R. B. J., Mich.

"The wonderful Seventh Volume! We could hardly believe it was at last published. We are feasting on it, and are thankful we are accounted worthy to read it and understand it. We have been greatly encouraged by reading it and want to be of those who will use it to mount to the skies."—H. N., Ohio.

"Oh, what a blessing the Seventh Volume has been to the church! Such encouragement we find while reading it! It causes us to be more diligent, and not let an opportunity slip that would help some poor struggling soul. I cannot find words to near tell my sentiments of this precious book."—E. T., Mont.

"We are rejoicing in the Seventh Volume; and we accept it as from the blessed Lord in this hour of temptation, and how thankful we are that we have lived to receive the penny. What a wonderful time we are living in, and what a Savior!" —O. R., Okla.

"How rich we all are with the wealth of his truth, and now additionally with his latest gift,-'the penny!' My heart is full of gratitude to him, and I praise him for his keeping power and the deep peace which passeth understanding."—J. G. H., N. Y.

"I am proceeding to put in shape my affairs in order to engage in this latest Lord's work as the way may open to me. I shall truly be very sorry and ashamed if I miss the chariot when it ascends."—Sr. S., N. J.

"The testimony meeting last Sunday afternoon was about 75% Seventh Volume testimony. If any one present then could not see it is the Seventh Volume, he was dumb as well as blind."—E. H. T., D. C.

INTERESTING LETTERS

CONVINCED THE LORD MADE NO MISTAKE

Sept. 9th, 1917.

DEAR BRETHREN:—

Greetings in our dear Lord! Just a few lines to tell you of my full heart sympathy and loyal support in these times of stress upon the church in general, and particularly upon our dear President, who is so nobly and faithfully standing for truth and right. The kindly way in which he has spoken of the opposing brethren during each and all of the series of conventions this year has been a grand inspiration to me and a wonderful lesson in brotherly love. Of him I can now truthfully say in the words of St. Paul to the Philippian church, "I thank my God upon every remembrance of you."

I was so glad to receive HARVEST SIFTINGS and to know exactly how conditions are. One little thing was cleared up which has been rather a mystery to me for over a year. I wondered why, when one of the now opposing brethren was in Vancouver on a pilgrim visit in 1916, he should have spoken so strangely about Brother Rutherford and Brother Van Amburgh. He stated at my table that whenever Brother Russell was away for any length of time, he invariably, upon his return, would be called upon to straighten out tangles at Bethel, doctrinally or otherwise, caused by Brothers Rutherford and Van Amburgh. I believed it then, coming as it did from one of the SOCIETY'S officers. How could I reasonably doubt it? But now, with HARVEST SIFTINGS in my hand, I see plainly the motive behind these remarks. It appears the brother was here doing what he had been engaged in doing all through Canada—commonly known by the world as "knocking." Of course when the election took place last January I was greatly surprised that without any effort on Brother Rutherford's part he was placed in the position of honor and trust which he now holds under the Lord—that of President of the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY, which the Lord loves as the apple of his eye. I now see the wisdom of the Lord in the whole matter, and am convinced that He made no mistake.

I notice in the new pamphlet gotten out by the opposition they charge that the Bethel Family and Pilgrims are staying by our President because they have been bribed. What an insult to the dear faithful friends at Bethel whom these brethren pretended to love! As one of the traveling brethren I positively deny being bought or bribed. I should think it a very dangerous position to take—to freely charge any of God's elect with such a crime!

Dear Brother Rutherford is personally the target for Satan's darts at this time, but he has the prayers of all true saints that he may "be strong and very courageous." By divine favor, I am,

Your brother in the truth, C. E. HEARD, Pilgrim.

SOME WORDS OF ENCOURAGEMENT

DEAR BRETHREN IN CHRIST:—

THE TOWERS continue to be beautiful and inspiring; they seem just as stimulating and helpful as when our beloved Brother Russell was with us. There is one thing which has impressed me, one thing which marks this periodical as being of the Lord, namely, the absence of the ego, that personal element which is likely to engender sectarianism and pride.

The dear Lord will surely continue this "meat in due season" till the spiritual Israel are sealed and made meet for the glorious inheritance. Much love and best wishes.

Yours in our dear Redeemer's name.

FREDERICK LARDENT.—England.

VOL. XXXVIII BROOKLYN, N. Y., OCTOBER 15, 1917 No. 20

PROPER AND IMPROPER JUDGMENT OF OURSELVES AND OTHERS

"If we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged. But when we are judged, we are chastened of the Lord, that we should not be condemned with the world."—1 Corinthians 11:31, 32.

In this text the Apostle seems to be saying that if we as Christians would properly criticise, examine and correct ourselves, it would not be necessary for the Lord to take us in hand and give us disciplinary judgments, or criticisms. But if we fail to do this judging of ourselves, then the heavenly Father must do it; for he has taken us into his family, under his parental care. The object of this chastening would not be to injure us, however, but to prevent our being condemned with the world.

We judge ourselves when we criticise our own conduct, our own words, our own actions, and try them by the principles which are found in the Bible—justice, mercy, and truth. As our Lord has taught us, if we find that we have done wrong to another, we should leave our sacrifice on the altar, and first go to make apologies to our brother. (Matthew 5:23) Thus we would be judging ourselves, obligating ourselves to do the right thing. When we have done wrong, it is not enough to say, "Yes I am wrong; but then, no one is perfect." To do so would not be to act in harmony with the spirit of our text. That spirit is that if we find ourselves to be in the wrong, then we have a sacred duty to perform—we must make the matter right, to the best of our ability.

If the wrong has been along the lines of uncharitable thoughts toward anybody, it is not necessary that we go to that person and tell him about the matter. But we should remind ourselves of all the circumstances, and then judge ourselves, give ourselves a good setting-down. We are obligated to give ourselves a lesson along this line. Thus we should manifest that our heart's intentions are right, and that we are, therefore, right at heart.

We understand that the will of God concerning us is, that we should judge ourselves. If we find that we have injured another with our tongue, or in any other way, we should go to that person and make proper apologies, thus setting matters right. Then we should put upon ourselves a penalty that we shall not easily forget. If the paying of that penalty requires considerable humility, so much the better. But if we neglect to punish ourselves, we would thus demonstrate that we are not in proper heart condition; and in that case the best thing that could happen to us would be for the Lord to give us a severe chastisement. This might not come on the same day or week or month, however, as the wrong-doing. But we may be sure that if we fail to do right in the matter, the Lord will take us in hand and give us some kind of trying experience which will teach us the needed lesson. He may permit somebody to do something to us or to say something about us that will show us wherein we have failed to do right. Or he may permit us to come into such a position that it will bring upon us some kind of disciplinary suffering.

The object of this arrangement—that if we do not judge or criticise ourselves, the Lord will do so—is that we shall not come into condemnation with the world. During the next age the race of mankind will be on trial, on judgment. (Acts 17:31) If we were of the world, our judgment would come then instead of now. But we are not of the world; for the Lord has called us out of it. We are new creatures in Christ, begotten of the holy Spirit of God. In our case it may be the same now that it will be with the world in the future; that is, we might be making marks upon our character which must be removed. If this is true, the Lord will discipline us for their removal, unless we come to realize the situation and remove the marks ourselves. Otherwise we should not be fit for the kingdom. In other words, if we belong to the church of Christ, we must receive our judgments and punishments now, during the present age. If we fail thus to chastise ourselves, then the Lord will do so for our growth in holiness.

JUDGMENT NOT NECESSARILY CONDEMNATION

We very frequently use the words judgment and opinion as synonyms, as expressing the same sentiment. A man's opinion of a matter is his judgment upon the subject. Whether he expresses it to another or whether he keeps it to himself, his judgment is his opinion. There may be times when it would be proper for us to have an opinion, or judgment, that we would not think it wise to express. For instance, our Lord said to his disciples, "I have many things to tell you, but ye cannot bear them now." (John 16:12) There were certain reasons why he withheld knowledge from them. So it might be with us.

In the Scriptures the word judgment is sometimes used, in a special sense; namely in the sense of condemnation. This judging, however, the Lord forbids his people to do. We may say that certain lines of conduct and certain words or acts are, in our judgment, out of accord with the Lord's standards of righteousness. This is our privilege. When a matter is known to be a fact, we ought to have an opinion. Whoever has no opinion, no judgment, of his own is unstable in character. Every intelligent person should have an opinion upon every subject which comes up for criticism. How much of his mind he might tell others or might reserve to himself would be for him to determine, according to his own best judgment in the matter.

"JUDGE NOTHING BEFORE THE TIME"

Another Scripture says, "Judge nothing before the time." (1 Corinthians 4:3-5) This does not relate to the judging of ourselves, however, but to our judging of others. It is not for us to judge heart-intentions. We should not denounce people and declare them guilty of evil intentions. While we might think that certain conduct is wrong or that certain teachings are wrong, yet it is not for us to say that the individual is willingly wrong; for we are not able to read the heart of any one. God is the only one who knows to what extent people are willing sinners, wilful wrong-doers. In some cases it may be that they are under delusion, ignorance, superstition. In other cases it may be that their environment gives things a different color from that which we would see. At the proper time and as may be convenient, we are to do all in our power to show such people the error of their course; but, having done so, we are not to attempt to harm them or to punish them for those things which we esteem to be wrong.

This principle applies to the punishments which are inflicted by society, such as imprisonment, capital punishment, etc. The civilized people of the world have reached the conclusion that mankind cannot read the heart. Therefore the governments assign different degrees of punishment for different crimes, not as an offset for the crime, but in order to restrain evil-doers. As a result, the doer of wrong deeds is often put into prison for a term of years and sometimes for life, that he may be restrained from further wrong-doing and perhaps reformed in character. Even in capital punishment the thought is not that the punisment is proportionate to the heinousness of the crime, but that the taking away of life is for the restraint of wrong-doing. Thus various methods of capital punishment have been invented in order that it may be done in as painless a manner as possible. Some claim that the breaking of the neck in hanging does not keep the criminal in suffering. Others declare that the electric chair is so constructed that the person will have no consciousness whatever after the electric current has reached him. So we see that the endeavor has been merely to curtail the wrong-doer from the privileges and liberties of life, according to the decision of those sitting as legislators and law-makers as to what would be the proper restraint for evil-doing.

PROPER AND IMPROPER JUDGING

Reverting to what the Scriptures say of the people of God, we may not judge in the sense of determining the degree of guilt resting upon evil-doers. Love always hopes for the best, and is not given to evil-speaking or to an expression of evil judgment. Love ever seeks to think no evil, but rather to think something favorable, kind, rather to put away anything in the way of bias, prejudice. Love is rather given to suppose that the individual whose doings are under criticism did not discern the right, did not see it clearly, or for some reason was led into error.

The Master said, "By their fruits ye shall know them." (Matthew 7:18-20) This means that we are to notice the fruitage of life in ourselves, in the brethren and in our neighbors. In our own minds we are to judge and disapprove of what is evil. We should continually judge whether various acts and words are right or wrong. Every day we see and hear many things in life which would not be pleasing to the Lord. Therefore we can exercise our judgment in respect to all of these things and get the lesson out of them. This would not mean, however, that we would judge the people who do and say these reprehensible things. It would be highly improper for us to relegate them to the second death. While we may appreciate our Lord's statement that a good tree will bring forth good fruit, and while we may see that there is something wrong in the conduct of another, yet we must not forget that we are not competent to judge as to what degree of punishment his wrong conduct would deserve. Therefore we might make a great mistake in endeavoring to judge others and to decide what punishment they should receive.

The Scriptures state that by and by there will be a time when judgments will come upon all those who do wrong. Until that time comes, we are not to judge others either in our minds or in our words. All that we may be able to do is to judge of conduct—whether it is proper or improper; but we should keep our conclusions to ourselves and not express them to others. If we are to go through life telling what we think of this one and of that one, we shall certainly have a hard time of it. Let us, therefore, recognize the fact that we cannot judge the heart of any one, just as no human being can know our hearts as well as we know them ourselves.

But in judging even ourselves we should use a certain amount of leniency, as the Apostle suggests. (1 Corinthians 4:3, 4) His thought seems to be that when we come to recognize how high the divine standard is, we might be too apt to judge ourselves too severely and not take into account the fact that the Adamic race is shapen in sin and born in iniquity. (Genesis 3:20; Psalm 51:5) Instead of condemning ourselves too harshly, we should rather think: "I feel greatly condemned for what I have done. But while I cannot make any good excuse for myself, I hope that God will be able to make some allowance for me in this matter. Perhaps he will see some extenuating circumstance which I do not see." Thus, as the Apostle suggests, we would not judge even ourselves.

Those who have the organ of self-esteem small and that of conscientiousness large are prone to see clearly all of their recognized imperfections and to suffer much from self-condemnation. Such persons should endeavor to see matters as they really are and to judge themselves justly. In fact, all judgment should be just; for justice is the very foundation of the divine throne. Therefore we should endeavor to be just in our judgments to the very best of our ability. All of the Lord's people will find it profitable to ascertain their own gains and losses as new creatures, and to perceive how, when and where these experiences came to them in the constant battle with the world, the flesh and the adversary. Let them note the weaknesses and filthiness of their own fallen fleshly nature, and seek to cleanse themselves of these blemishes, in order that more and more the new mind will be given full control, and that every thought will be brought into captivity to the will of God as expressed by Christ and illustrated by his example.

GOD'S PEOPLE RESPONSIBLE NOW

Those who are children of God expect shortly to be made judges of the world. (1 Corinthians 6:2, 3) Moreover, God is now seeking to develop in our hearts and lives, in our character, those principles of righteousness which he desires and which will be preparatory to our future work of judging mankind. Therefore unless we are just in our very hearts, unless we appreciate the principles of righteousness and rejoice to practise them, we shall not be fit for the kingdom. We should not be unjust even to an animal. Every creature has its rights; and we should give them those rights, leaving the results with God. Thus doing, we shall be preparing our own minds and hearts for the glorious conditions in reservation for those who love God supremely.

CROWNS APPORTIONED ACCORDING TO JUSTICE

The prize of our high calling will not be given to anyone on the basis of mercy or of favor. God shows mercy in connection with the weaknesses and blemishes against which we are striving; but he will not permit even one individual to enter the kingdom class whose character is not suitable for that high position. Those whom he approves for joint-heirship with our Lord Jesus must represent the principles of righteousness and must know how to apply these principles now. Whoever is not disposed to justice to such an extent as to be willing to suffer loss rather than to be unjust will not have a share in the Messianic kingdom.

Let us ever remember that if we are true, loyal children of God, all our unwilling blemishes are covered by the robe of our Redeemer's righteousness; and that if we are doing with our might what our hands find to do in this great matter of judging, criticising, ourselves with a view to improvement of character, and are dealing with all others along the line of the Golden Rule, we are thus demonstrating to the heavenly Father that we appreciate highly the principle which is the foundation of his government. If, moreover, we build upon this sure foundation a superstructure of love, we shall thus be blessed and made ready for the kingdom of his dear Son, our Lord Jesus Christ.

Very few have been fully awake to the importance of the Golden Rule. Very few have been careful to practise it in all the details of everyday life. Let us remember that there is comparatively little time left for character-building, that even now the great Judge is at the door, and that the final testings are upon us. If we hope to be of the kingdom class we must make haste. This is a very solemn thought. Therefore we should make the effort to learn what it is that God requires of those who are to be kings, priests and judges in the Messianic kingdom, in order that we may be amongst those who will make their calling and election sure.

DEFEAT THROUGH DRUNKENNESS

[This article with the exception of the paragraphs below was a reprint of that entitled "Elijah's Work Before Ascension," published in issue of September 1, 1915, which please see.]

THE CURSE OF INTEMPERANCE

Intemperance is one of the most dreadful curses afflicting humanity, and even those who are its slaves will admit the truth of this statement. Apparently every one who comes under the baneful influence of strong drink becomes more or less its slave—the more so in proportion as he has become weak through the Adamic fall and the six thousand years of increasing loss of physical and mental strength and vigor. Only those who realize that inherited weakness has much to do with drunkenness can sympathize with a fallen one, or rightly appreciate why intoxicants have so much stronger influence over some than over others. But while pity and sympathy are properly called for, yet these qualities must be exercised in moderation, if we would benefit the fallen and weak. None are so weak, so degraded, as to be without some base of character; and our aim should be to strengthen and build up character, encouraging and stimulating resistance to these weaknesses, rather than condoning them too freely.

The weak and degraded should be encouraged to know that they have a will-power which will greatly assist them in the cultivation of character if they will use it. But all should know that the greatest strength and stimulus to character comes from above; and that the weakest, as respects depravity of the flesh, may obtain such help of heart and of intellect from the promises, exhortations, admonitions and encouragements of God's Word as will make them strong in the Lord and in the power of his might. We need power and strength of our own wills daily in overcoming the weaknesses of our fallen flesh. More than this, we need "grace to help in every time of need"; and we need to learn whence it is obtained, and how to approach the throne of heavenly grace with confidence, so as to obtain the needed blessing.

Here comes in the necessity for an appreciation of the doctrines of Christ, to assure us that our weaknesses are understood and sympathized with by our heavenly Father in every proper sense, and that his provision in Christ is such that he can be just and yet justify believers in Jesus—that he can be just, and yet forgive us our sins and grant us needed strength and help in overcoming.

To those who have friends or neighbors addicted to intemperance, over whom they desire to exercise a helpful influence, we advise that they appeal to the will, to the self-respect, and to the rewards of temperance and intemperance, viewed from a worldly and social standpoint. We also advise that they go further, and urge that in view of their weakness of will manifested by the intemperate the latter should recognize that while all men need the Savior and the help which he alone can give, yet the weaker the will, the greater the need. When we are weak in the matter of self-reliance, and are thereby led to make a covenant with the Lord and to lean upon his strength, then we are strong.—2 Corinthians 12:9, 10.

SPECIAL LESSON TO THE CONSECRATED

We have no reason to think that any of our readers are slaves to intemperance; for we know that whom the Son makes free is free indeed. Therefore we urge upon all that the greater freedom which we receive in Christ, through a clear knowledge of the divine plan, should lead us more diligently to bring every talent and every power of mind and of body into full subjection to the divine will and into the service of the divine purposes. Those who are imbued with this thought will surely realize that they have neither mental nor physical powers to dissipate—that they belong to the Lord and are to glorify him in their bodies and their spirits, which are his. (1 Corinthians 6:20) They will perceive that they are merely stewards; and that any misuse of talents, either through intoxication or otherwise, would be a misuse of their stewardship, and would surely lead on to that condition in which the Lord could not say unto them, "Well done, good and faithful servant."

But while disposed to discourage intemperance in respect to intoxicants of every kind, we feel that the special lesson needed by the Lord's people is in respect to the intoxicating influences of the world, as these come to us and affect us as new creatures in Christ. There is an intoxication in wealth, in luxury, in ease, which tends to say to the soul, "Take thine ease; forget thy covenant of sacrifice—to walk in the footsteps of Jesus and be dead with him to the world and its aims." There is an intoxication of pleasure, of fashion, of pride and fond desire, which appeals to the new creature very strongly through various avenues of the mortal body, and which seeks to intoxicate, to stupefy, the new mind, to make us dull of hearing as respects spiritual things, to make us lax as respects our zeal for the Lord, for the truth and for the brethren, and to make us covet the things that would be approved by the world and pleasurable to our own flesh, as well as harmonious to the wishes and exhortations of our friends. To all of these intoxicating allurements the answer must be, "No! We have covenanted our lives that henceforth we shall be dead to earthly interests and alive toward God. Our joys, our pleasures, our exhilarations, must be of the spiritual kind." We must become so enthused, so enraptured, with the heavenly things, with the joy and peace and blessing which accompany the eating and drinking at the Lord's table, and so filled with his spirit, that the intoxications of earthly joys will have less and less attraction for us.—Ephesians 5:18.

DIVINE TRUTH

"All truth is calm,
Refuge and rock and tower.
The more of truth the more of calm,
Its calmness is its power.
Truth is not strife,
Nor is to strife allied,
It is the error that is bred
Of storm, by rage and pride.
Calmness is truth
And truth is calmness still;
Truth lifts its forehead to the storm
Like some eternal hill." —H. BONAR.

NEHEMIAH'S PRAYER

[This article was a reprint of that published in issue of November 15, 1905, which please see.]

CONCERTED VOLUNTEER PLAN

Although we have announced that we would begin making shipments of the new Volunteer issue "The Fall of Babylon" early in October, it has since been suggested by some that all orders for the entire country be first listed, and then shipped so as to reach all classes about the same time; then the SOCIETY designate some particular Sunday as a VOLUNTEER DAY, on which date the friends all over the country will distribute this very important number. We think the plan a good one, and therefore suggest that all classes, including isolated friends, who have not yet sent in their order for this new Volunteer matter, do so at once that we may have same printed up and shipped in accordance with the foregoing program. We will then designate the date on which all the brethren, in every city, town, village and country district, may engage in this stupendous concerted distribution of "THE FALL OF BABYLON."

CHARGES ANSWERED

The Board of Directors have requested Brother Rutherford to prepare a reply to the paper recently issued under the title, "Light After Darkness." This reply is not for general distribution, but will be sent to any of the friends on request.

INTERESTING QUESTIONS

THE THINGS WE ARE TO FORGET

Question.—"Forgetting those things which are behind." (Philippians 3:13) To what things "which are behind" does the Apostle refer in this text, and why should we forget them?

Answer.—St. Paul could not have meant by this that we should not have the things of our previous experiences in memory at all, that we should forget them all absolutely; for his writings show that he held his own past in memory. In our context he tells us of the things he had lost and the things he had gained; and these things of his past have been remembered to the extent that they have come down to the church for eighteen hundred years. The Apostle declared that he had suffered the loss of many things for the sake of the truth. He recounted the many persecutions and sufferings which he had endured, but said that he had borne all this willingly, gladly. He had relinquished all his worldly advantages because, as he said, these things had no particular value. They were as dross compared to his opportunity of becoming a member of the body of Christ, of the church in glory.

He was forgetting all these in the sense of renouncing them and casting them behind his back. He was forgetting—in the sense of not dwelling upon them, being hindered by them—his previous failures to keep the law, his futile endeavors and inability to live up to its requirements. He was giving up all his earthly ambitions, and was not mourning the opportunities in life that had gone from him because of his consecration to the Lord. He was doubtless seeking to forget his own personal weaknesses and failures in that he would not allow the memory of them to discourage him. But this did not mean that he so completely forgot them as to lose the benefit of the lessons which these weaknesses and failures had taught him.

Our lives would amount to very little if we forgot all the past. What profit would it be to ourselves to have lived in the world if we forgot it all? The Apostle uses the word "forgetting" with somewhat the thought that it sometimes has now, when used in a sort of slang phrase. A man may say to his friend, "You did me a great kindness, and I would like to do what I can to repay it" And the friend replies, "Oh, forget it!"—that is, forget it in the sense of feeling under an obligation. And so in the proper sense the Apostle was seeking to forget the things of the past. If he had made mistakes in the past, he was now seeking that all of his powers might be enlisted on the side of righteousness. He might well forget these things in the sense of thinking of their being remembered against him, for they were all covered by the merit of Christ.

So we have made our peace with God. Having Christ as our Advocate and Master, we know that God has blotted out our failures from his book of remembrance. He no longer holds them against us. Therefore we should not lose time and strength in useless grieving over them. But we are to let them teach us lessons for the future. We are to forget the ambitions of the past, in the sense that we will not be controlled or influenced by them; for we have new hopes. We have the hope of association with Christ, of membership in his glorious body. We are to forget the worldly opportunities of the past that we sacrificed, even as St. Paul forgot the things which he sacrificed; as he no longer craved them nor sought them.

There are some of the Lord's professed people who have difficulty along this line. They say, "Oh, I sacrificed so much to become a child of God—I sacrificed so much!" And what they sacrificed is in their eyes too much. But it was not very much, whatever it was. The more we know of ourselves the more we realize how insignificant we are in ourselves, and how little of real value we could accomplish in our own strength. And the more we know of the world and the things of the world the more we realize their emptiness and unsatisfactoriness. So we decide that we will not think of some grains of sand that we dropped in order to take hold of the hand of the Lord; for we have glory, honor and immortality in view.

St. Paul said he was glad that he could suffer something for Christ. And he was urging others to likewise rejoice in this great privilege, and inspiring his hearers with the courage to lay aside every weight and sin, and to run with patience the heavenly race. So all these glorious things God has promised are before us as Christians. Everything we had in the way of earthly ambitions or prospects or fame—these things are all behind us, and are nothing in comparison to the things we have already received and those we are hoping for, by the grace of God.

TRESPASSES, NOT ORIGINAL SIN, BLOTTED OUT

Question.—When the Apostle speaks of the sins that are past by the forbearance of God, we understand him to mean the sins that were forgiven when we accepted Christ and were begotten as new creatures. Suppose, then, that one so forgiven subsequently returns to wallow in the mire, would the sins that were past be revived against him, or not?

Answer.—It is our understanding that in accepting the church the Lord accepts all of that number desirous of coming to the Father through him, and that he makes an imputation of his merit sufficient to offset all their Adamic sin and weaknesses, in order that they may be made the righteousness of God through him. Being thus justified through faith they may have full peace with God, and realize that old things have passed away and that all things have become new. We would think, therefore, that nothing in the past would be revived, even if they should commit the sin unto death; for all former sins were settled for. It would be the sin as a new creature that would bring his death—it would not be necessary to go back to the past, when he was an old creature, to find something corroborating this.

This blotting out of sins at the glorification of the church does not refer to the blotting out of original sin, but more particularly to the blotting out of those elements of sin that are in the flesh, those trespasses for which we need to go continually to God day by day and pray: "Forgive us our trespasses!" All these are blotted out when the flesh itself shall have been relinquished and we shall have experienced the "change" to spirit nature.

KNOWLEDGE PROPORTIONATE TO OBEDIENCE

Question.—Is there any text of Scripture, or are there several texts—and if so, which?—that teach that we must act upon truth when we receive it, before we may receive more truth?

Answer.—"He that is faithful in that which is least, is faithful also in much."—Luke 16:10.

"Whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deed."—James 1:25. See also verses 22-24.

"Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."—2 Timothy 2:15.

"The path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day."—Prov. 4:18.

"If any man will to do his will, he shall know of the doctrine [the truth], whether it be of God."—John 7:17.

"If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you."—John 15:7.

Again Jesus said, "He that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life."—John 8:12.

All the Word of God indicates the necessity of continuance, of growing in grace and in knowledge—growing up into him who in all things is the Head of the body, even Christ.—Ephesians 4:15.

PRESENT BLESSINGS INCREASING DISCONTENT

The question has been asked us, Has the Millennium any relationship to present-day strikes, etc.? We answer that the grandfathers of those men and women who are now rising up against the present order, received very much smaller compensation, worked much longer hours and were much more contented and happy, than is the present generation. Something has come in which has changed this attitude of mind and has brought great blessing, great riches, and increasing discontent. That thing, we believe, is the dawn of the Millennial day, with the light that it brings—the enlightenment, the knowledge and realization of power on the part of the masses.

Some, of course, will be willing to use their knowledge righteously. We hope that all Bible Students feel so. Others will be inclined to use their knowledge selfishly. Seeing that things are wrong they may lack patience, lack love, be unwilling to endeavor to adjust the wrong in reasonable and proper ways, as should be the case with those guided by the wisdom from above. Hence the world is getting more and more bitter; this dissatisfied condition of mind is increasing. Men are truce-breakers, breakers of agreements—anything to further their selfish interests.—2 Timothy 3:1-5.

We do not know the merits of each particular case, but we think that what we have said would be applicable anywhere. We think it safe to assume that the men who strike at present would average $3.00 per day for about nine hours' work, and the nine hours' work would not be as laborious as labor was formerly; for now it can nearly all be done by machinery. But many laboring men, working for the Standard Oil Company, the railroads, coal corporations, etc., see that in spite of paying good wages, these corporations are making much money. They read about the millions being paid in dividends. They feel in their own pockets. Not a million do they touch; and they wish there was a million there, and are envious and unhappy because it is not there.

OMNIPOTENT POWER THE ONLY HELP

The Bible points out this increase of knowledge of our day: "Many shall run to and fro"; "Knowledge shall be increased"; "The wise shall understand"—the rest shall not understand, and "there shall be a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation." (Daniel 12:4, 10, 1) This is the prophetic view of the matter in advance. God permits the Millennial age to come in this way, in a measure, to demonstrate that it will not be rightly received and that selfishness would have gone on to even worse lengths if all the blessings of the Millennial age had been here before. The world would have been in a worse condition, more discontented. Jesus said that the discontent would go on to such a degree that "unless those days should be shortened there would be no flesh saved." (Matthew 24:22) Everywhere that spirit would go; and it is going everywhere. The Lord's Word seems to imply that this will be so until men shall learn that their happiness will come, not by might nor by power, but by the Lord's Spirit. (Zechariah 4:6) As they learn this, they will see the great Ruler and his power rectifying things along the line of justice. Every evil of life shall thus be opened up to view, to correction; everything will be straightened out; and the world will begin to see the reign of holiness, of righteousness, harmony with God, justice, equity. Then the knowledge will do them good.

RELATION OF EUROPEAN WAR TO ISRAEL'S HOPES

We have been expecting great things for the Jewish people, and believe that these are on the way. Undoubtedly the war has a very important part to work out under divine supervision, something that will be advantageous to the Jew, to Palestine, and eventually to everybody. We would not know how to forecast the future so as to say what effect the war will have; for if the Germans should win, then Palestine would remain under Turkish or German influence; and if the Allies should win, Palestine would come under the influence of the Allies, whose fraternal feeling for each other would lead them to protect each others' interests.

We know the feeling of many of these countries towards Palestine. The Russians, for instance, treat the Jews very courteously when people of Russia go to Palestine—not, however, with any feeling of friendship for the Jew. We know that the same is the general feeling throughout the world. Each nation would like to possess Palestine. It is not that Palestine is such a wonderful country, not that it will be greatly to the advantage of any of them to possess that little country; for it has not even one valuable port; but somehow all have an anxious desire for what is termed "the Holy Land." Russians, Germans, British and French—all are represented there; and they would not be willing to give up their hold on it unless there was some very special compensation.

As to the Jews themselves, we believe that they have more confidence in the Mohammedans, the Turks, who are their cousins by birth, than they have in any Christian nation. This is probably because they have been under the Turkish rule in Palestine, where Jews have had a better time than they are having in any other country. But we are not wise enough to do any guessing on this question. We simply know some of the facts as they stand today, and the great fact of the future as the Bible points it out, that Israel will again come fully into possession of their own land.

We think that there are many Jews now in Russia, Poland, Germany, etc., who would be very glad had they gone over to Palestine when they had the chance. We understand that some of them are going over now, notwithstanding the war conditions. We had not so understood previously, but information has reached us that there is now a land immigration which is taking many Jews to Palestine. We are not, in any event, to expect that all the Jews will go there; no more than when God, through the Prophet, declared that Israel would be brought again from the captivity of Babylon. We remember that many of them went into captivity to Babylon; and that after being there, some of them for several centuries, the whole number that came out under Cyrus' decree was about 50,000, leaving the great mass of the nation "scattered abroad," as we read in the New Testament—scattered amongst the heathen nations, preferring to live where they had become attached to the soil or land rather than to go back to Palestine. So we expect that the going back to Palestine will not include all the Jews now living, but merely representatives of the Jews, of the hopes of Israel.

Without doubt great changes are just ahead, great favors and blessings, for the devout of the Jewish people who cling faithfully to the divine promises respecting them. However we are not to expect their full establishment as a nation through which the Lord will operate, until after wars, revolutions and anarchy of the time of trouble have ceased, and the ancient worthies have been brought back from the dead in human perfection. On this point we here append a contribution from one of our readers, which agrees well with the presentations of SCRIPTURE STUDIES, Vol. 7, concerning the resurrection of the ancient worthies and their inheritance of the land:

WHEN WILL ABRAHAM INHERIT THE LAND?

I am basing my suggestions (a) on the statement of TABERNACLE SHADOWS, page 34, Par. 1, as follows: "So, then, after the body of Christ completes the spiritual 'Seed,' that additional promise to Abraham respecting an earthly seed must have fulfillment." (Italics mine.) (b) Also on the fact that this additional promise is part and parcel of the great oath-bound Abrahamic Covenant; (c) on the reasonable inference that Hagar was a type of this additional promise, as was Sarah of the first promise to the spiritual seed; (d) on the belief that the 3960 years derived from Genesis 15:9 are creditably established as a chronological period; (e) and on the seeming discovery that the additional promise, of the earthly seed, was confirmed to Abraham ten years after the giving of the first or chief promise.

Before Abraham moved into the Land of Canaan there was the promise of a blessing. The ratification of the promise was contingent on his obedience to the divine injunction. When he began his sojourn in the land the promise came into being as a covenant exactly four hundred and thirty (430) years before the exodus. (Exodus 12:40, 41.) At the same time, Sarah came into existence as a type of the promise, or covenant, then made and pertaining exclusively to the spiritual seed.—Romans 4:13; Galatians 3:16, 17; 4:28.

After the departure of Lot for Sodom, God made a certain promise respecting the land to Abraham—"All the land which thou seeest, to thee will I give it and to thy seed forever." (Genesis 13:15) A certain command was annexed to the promise: "Arise, walk through the land, in the length of it and in the breadth of it." (v. 17) Abraham began at once to carry out this injunction.—V. 18.

Subsequently, his faith having been satisfactorily demonstrated, God ratified and confirmed to Abraham the promise of the land, apparently greatly increasing its scope, and made a covenant with Abraham concerning it. (Genesis 15:18) The date of the giving of this covenant is of great interest to Bible students. When was the promise of the land, pertaining exclusively to Abraham and his fleshly seed, ratified and confirmed as a covenant obligation, absolutely unconditional, by Jehovah?

"In the same day, God made a covenant with Abraham, saying, Unto thy seed have I given this land from the River of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates." (Genesis 15:18) Here, it seems to me, we have the second part or instalment of the great Abrahamic Covenant, afterwards confirmed by oath and called The Promise, although embodying distinct promises to different classes. (Rom. 4:16) St. Paul has shown distinctly that the first part of the covenant, ratified when Abraham became a sojourner in the land, pertained only to the spiritual seed, which seed is Christ. (Galatians 3:16) The Abrahamic Covenant here came into existence, but not as a whole—only as to its first section. The second section of the covenant, or second covenant, afterwards merged with the first into the one great unconditional oath-bound "promise," came into existence "in the same day" mentioned in Genesis 15:18.

Now if we can find the date of this covenant respecting the land we shall, with reasonable certainty, be able to fix the date on which Abraham will inherit the land. God instructed Abraham to perform a certain strange ceremony of symbolic significance at the time that he ratified the promise of the land and entered into a covenant regarding it. This ceremony by which it was customary to ratify covenant engagements or contracts at that time was in order to strengthen Abraham's faith, in answer to his question, "Whereby shall I know that I shall inherit it?"

JEHOVAH'S SIGNIFICANT ANSWER TO ABRAHAM

We need not suppose that Abraham perceived any symbolic meaning hidden away in the ages of the victims selected. This is one of the things "hidden from ages and generations," but now made known unto us by the Spirit. The three beasts were each three years of age; the two birds were young birds. We quote the Biblical comment on Genesis 15:9—"A bird is usually considered young up to one year old. Figuring thus, the ages of the animals represent 11 years. Eleven prophetic years of 360 literal years each equal 3,960 years, the time from the giving of this covenant to Abraham till the year 1915, when he will inherit the land." The method here used in obtaining the period elapsing from the giving of this covenant till Abraham should inherit the land is sound and in accord with other symbolisms under which God hid or covered information until due time for it to be known. The period of 3,960 years seems a well fixed chronological period. However, we are absolutely certain that Abraham did not inherit the land in 1915. It may not seem improper, therefore, for the Bible student to carefully analyze the above comment, seeking an explanation. In doing this we can find no fault with the assertion that the 3,960 years begin to count "from the giving of this covenant"; yet, if the year 1915 is wrong as the date of the end of the 3,960 years, certainly the date fixed on in the comment as the date from which the 3,960 years begin to count is also erroneous. Evidently the comment begins the 3,960 years with Abraham's entrance into the land, 430 years before the exodus, or the year 2045 B. C. That is the date of the giving of the covenant, or the first feature of the covenant, meant for the spiritual seed only. It seems reasonable, however, that the period intervening until Abraham should inherit the land would begin with the giving of the covenant respecting the land. This is the covenant of Genesis 15:18. Regarding this as the second instalment of the great oath-bound promise (Genesis 22:16, 17; 26:3, 4), we are perfectly correct in saying that the 3,960 years begin with the giving of the covenant.

The points in regard to the covenant which were not noted in the comment are these:

1. Its two specific parts were given at different times.

2. The natural and logical date for beginning the 3,960 years would be the giving of the second part of the oath-bound compact. This was "in the same day" on which the ceremony attending the slaughter of the victims recorded in Chapter 15 took place. There and then God established his covenant with Abraham respectinng the land.—Genesis 15:18.

WHEN "SECOND PART" OF COVENANT WAS RATIFIED

Has God left us a clue to this date? We answer, that we believe he has and it is found in Genesis 16:3. It is a reasonable inference that the event herein recorded followed immediately upon those recorded in Chapter 15. It seems a plain deduction that Hagar was a type of the covenant or promise to the fleshly seed, typified by her son Ishmael. We are not speaking here of the Law Covenant, of which she was a type, but of the specific promise to the fleshly seed, included in and forming a part of the oath-bound covenant. The law was added 430 years after the promise to the spiritual seed of Genesis 12:3, and 420 years after Abraham took Hagar to wife.

The promise, so firmly ratified respecting the land and his earthly seed, greatly stimulated Abraham's desire for a son, and moved Sarah. (Chapter 16:1, 2) So Sarah, anxious to help, offered Hagar to Abraham. "And Sarai, Abraham's wife, took Hagar, her maid, the Egyptian, after Abraham had dwelt ten years in the land of Canaan and gave her to her husband Abraham to be his wife." (V. 3) Here at this point Hagar came into existence as a type of that portion of the Abrahamic Covenant which exclusively pertains to the fleshly seed. Sarah became a type at the same time that the portion of the Abrahamic Covenant pertaining to the spiritual seed was ratified, when Abraham entered the land. Hagar became a type at the same time that the portion of the covenant respecting the fleshly seed's inheritance of the land was confirmed. This was ten years after Abraham entered the land.

Hagar was, of course, a type of the Law Covenant and Keturah of the New. But these facts do not concern especially the present inquiry. It is true that the fleshly seed came under the law, but it is not true that Abraham or his seed will inherit the promise through (by keeping) the law. Abraham will inherit the land under the Abrahamic Covenant—that portion of it pertaining exclusively to him personally and his fleshly seed after him.—Genesis 15:7, 18; Acts 7:5.

There will be no slip-up. Abraham inherits the land by faith (as its reward); God's oath makes it certain. "The gifts and calling of God are without repentance." (Romans 11:29) The promise respecting the land is as absolute and unconditional as the promise respecting the spiritual seed. "To the end that the promise might be sure to all the seed." —Romans 4:16.

It seems a reasonable deduction from the foregoing that the date of the giving of the covenant respecting the land was coincident with the union of Abraham and Hagar. Here the 3,960 years begin to count. This union took place ten years after he entered the land. As he began his sojourn in the land in the year 2,045 B. C., it follows that the 3,960 years begin to count from 2,035 B. C. 2,035 plus 1,925 equals 3,960. Accordingly Abraham should enter upon the actual possession of his promised inheritance in the year 1925 A. D.

REPORT OF THE WESTERN CONVENTIONS

Leaving Aurora, Illinois, our journey was westward, the first stop being at Spokane, Washington. Here about three hundred of the friends had assembled from nearby classes for a one-day convention. The morning was spent in praise, prayer and testimony, which was very edifying and profitable to all. In the afternoon the friends were addressed by Brother Rutherford on "The Bond of Completeness," text being taken from Col. 3:14. The speaker pointed out the necssity of putting on this bond of completeness as we near the end of our course.

In the evening, a public lecture was given by Brother Rutherford at the Spokane Theater, the subject being, "Are We at the End of the World?" Fully two thousand people were present, many being turned away. This being a midweek meeting, it was considered unusually well attended. Interest was splendid and we hope much good may result.

The next evening, the 16th of August, a public meeting was addressed by Brother Rutherford at the Everett Opera House, Everett, Washington, about twelve hundred being present. Just one year to the day prior thereto, the speaker had addressed an audience in the same Opera House with reference to the War, at which time he stated that the United States would be drawn into the war before another year. The public press at Everett commented on this fact and the fulfillment of this statement, which probably had much to do with bringing out many of Everett's most substantial citizens. The interest at the evening lecture was unusually good, many leaving cards signifying a desire for further information.

TACOMA CONVENTION

Tacoma, Washington, was a four-days convention, August 16th to 19th, inclusive. The discourses were all listened to eagerly by the friends at each session of the convention, about fifteen hundred being present. The PHOTO DRAMA OF CREATION was exhibited in the evening at the theater where the convention was held, it being packed to overflowing at each session. Seventy symbolized their consecration to the Lord.

Several months previous, the Mayor and Board of Trade of Tacoma had invited our ASSOCIATION to hold a convention at Tacoma, offering the use of the Stadium, which was accepted. The Stadium is a magnificent structure built on the very banks of Puget Sound, with a seating capacity of more than thirty thousand, and the accoustics are so nearly perfect that when filled, everyone can hear a speaker addressing the audience in an ordinary voice. Some weeks after the invitation had been accepted, some of the ministers of the city of Tacoma objected to our using the Stadium unless it was agreed that nothing would be said derogatory to the clergy, and the Stadium Board asked that this limitation be put upon the use of the place. We declined to accept it on these terms and had no idea of using the Stadium at all. The public meeting was advertised to be held at the Tacoma Theater, but it was evident that the Theater would not accomodate the people. The Mayor and Board of Trade then influenced the Stadium Board to withdraw all conditions on the Stadium and placed it at our disposal without restrictions. Only two days remained for advertising the meeting. The attendance Sunday afternoon was fully five thousand. The Mayor of the City presided and introduced the speaker, the subject being, "Are We at the End of the World?" During the course of the lecture, Dr. Dyer, said to be the leading clergyman of Tacoma, took exception to some things the speaker said, came to the platform and demanded that the Mayor suppress the meeting, which the Mayor refused to do; then, time and again he interrupted the meeting, going to the extent of standing on the platform and calling the speaker a liar three times. It was evident that the audience was against him, and when the meeting was over, the minister left the auditorium amidst jeers and many of his own congregation were heard to say that never again would they go to hear him. A great number of the audience left their address cards, signifying their desire to hear more. The interuption proved a splendid opportunity for a public witness to the truth, and again the Lord caused the wrath of man to result to his praise.

On Monday evening, the 20th of August, a public meeting at Portland, Oregon, was addressed by Brother Rutherford, fully 1,200 being present. The interest manifested was very marked and many left their address cards. The day following there was a gathering of the friends at Salem, Oregon, being addressed by Brother Rutherford.

From the 22nd to the 26th, inclusive, the convention was held at Oakland, California, Brother Wisdom being the chairman. The other speakers of the convention were Brothers Anderson, Hadley, Heard, Talifaerro and Rutherford, about six hundred of the friends attended this convention, forty symbolizing their consecration. Sunday afternoon at Oakland, a public meeting was addressed by Brother Rutherford, about two thousand being present. The same evening another public meeting was addressed at San Francisco, about one thousand being present. The attendance here was small, probably due to the fact that a street car strike rendered it difficult for the people to get to and fro in the city. This was a very blessed convention and everybody remarked that many blessings were received there.

On August 31st to Sept 2nd, a convention of the I. B. S. A. was held at Los Angeles, California. It was not expected that more than four or five hundred would attend this convention, but the attendance was fully eight hundred. Brother Heard was chairman here. The other speakers were Brothers Anderson, Wisdom, Hadley, Sexton, Lee, Sherman and Rutherford. No public meeting was attempted at Los Angeles because it was the beginning of the Billy Sunday campaign and it was thought inadvisable to attempt a public meeting at this time, we preferring to wait a more opportune season. Fifty-six symbolized their consecration here.

NOTICEABLE FEATURES OF THE CONVENTION

At each one of the conventions above named, the spirit manifested was unusual. It has long been a custom at our conventions to have a committee to whom complaints would be referred. At these conventions there were no complaints, hence the trouble committee was without employment. There was a total absence at these conventions of gossip. The friends refused to discuss past troubles or disturbances. They seemed bent on doing but one thing, striving with earnestness and zeal to prepare for an abundant entrance of the church into the kingdom of our Lord. The Spirit of the Lord was everywhere manifest to a marked degree. All seemed to realize that the end of the harvest is very near, and the necessity of greater zeal and earnestness on the part of all the harvest workers. At each one of these conventions, at the conclusion of "Harvesters' Day," the enthusiasm and zeal to enter some branch of the work in these closing days of the harvest was everywhere marked. Many who had heretofore been in the colporteur work and required to stop, signified their determination to immediately return to it. Others who had never been colporteurs expressed a desire to immediately take up the work. Quite a number of brethren with ability offered themselves for the pilgrim service, some of whom have been selected and will shortly enter the work.

The Seventh Volume was enthusiastically received by most all who attended the various conventions, only here and there being an exception. At every convention resolutions were adopted by almost a unanimous vote approving the present management of the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY and its officers, pledging unreserved loyalty to the SOCIETY. As an old soldier expressed it, "A good soldier always follows his regimental flag. The WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY is our flag. The Lord has used it all these years and continues to use it, and where he directs the work through it, we rejoice to follow."

At every one of these conventions the friends could be heard enthusiastically saying, "This is the best convention I ever attended." The sweet spirit of love for the Lord and the brethren and loyalty to him and to his cause and to the channel he continues to use for the harvest was everywhere manifest. It was indeed good to be there, and reminded us that we are drawing nearer to the general convention of the church of the first-born where there will be fulness of joy in the presence of our King.

GREETINGS FROM AN ENGLISH PRISON

DEAR BRETHREN IN THE LORD:—

Greetings in the precious name of our dear Redeemer.

Seeing that so many of our dear brethren in America are being affected by the new military measure, we are desirous of extending to them our warmest sympathy.

We rejoice to know that so many of the dear saints of God are standing thus firmly by the principles of righteousness in this hour of trial. Our prayer on their behalf is that they may have the necessary grace sufficient in every time of need and that wisdom which cometh from above, so that they may be enabled to "witness a good confession" and copy the noble example of our dear Redeemer, following in his footsteps.

We are realizing, perhaps more than ever, that here we have no continuing city, that in the world we must have tribulation, and that the child of God must suffer persecution, for it is only "if we suffer with him" that "we shall reign with him." Nevertheless we are learning from our illustrious Example the power of the joy that is set before us, and we are seeking to cheerfully endure all things that God in his providence sees fit to bring upon us.

Daily do our prayers ascend at the throne of heavenly grace for all the dear brethren throughout the whole habitable who are affected by the military, and we sincerely trust that the dear American brethren may continue firm and steadfast, rejoicing in tribulation, and faithful unto the end, in all things seeking to glorify the name of our Father in heaven. We know not what awaits us, but then again we do know that faith can firmly trust him, come what may.

Under divine providence we have been before tribunals—in the hands of the military—and also in prison, but God has blessed and kept us in all of our experiences. Our temperaments are varied, our experiences have varied, but we have all felt the power of a deeper and sweeter communion with our heavenly Father and the Lord Jesus. We all testify to the fact of our being drawn nearer to our dear Father in heaven as a result of these experiences.

Now, however, we are enjoying a measure of freedom, not being fully subject to either military or prison discipline. We are rejoicing to be accounted worthy to suffer on account of the name of Christ, and we hasten to send these few words of sympathy and encouragement to all the dear ones who will be affected by the Military Service Act.

We also pray the heavenly father's richest blessing upon the Bethel Family and send our fervent Christian Love.

Your brethren and fellow-servants in the Lord,

(Signed by 37 Brethren.)

LEARNING TO KNOW HERSELF

MY DEAR BRETHREN:—

Greetings in the name of the King of kings! I feel so very grateful to the Lord that I have a deeper sense of appreciation for him and for the results of our deceased Pastor's faithful service in his name. And while my heart is lauding, magnifying, and praising him, I impose on your valuable time and with a few pen words make my thanks known.

Especially good and valued are THE WATCH TOWERS. Each subject seems to be addressed to me. Some bring much comfort and are as apples of gold in pictures of silver; while others bring rebukes and corrections to Self. Yes, where I once thought I was "some one," now I am learning to know myself; and I find much dross, not to be desired. How anxious I am to have this purged out of my life, and to be transformed into his likeness, from one degree of radiant holiness to another, as derived from the Lord!

In order to help me remember I am an ambassador for Christ, I have taken this way as a helper: Each morning after worship I inscribe with ink on the palm of my hand, or on the arm, the Scripture citation for the morning, and also the Bethel hymn, so that when Satan would overtake me I see the citation. In what a wonderful way the Lord speaks! This simple method recalls the text. I find that I can have the music of God's great plan ring through my heart and life every day and hour.

I pray earnestly for you, and surely the Lord will recompense your work and a full reward be given you of him under whose wings you are come to trust.—Ruth 2:12.

Your sister, striving for the kingdom, R. E. LAWRENCE.

"The Seventh Volume grows better to me every page I read. The Lord has blessed us greatly. It has drawn me closer to him."—L. T. V., N. Y.

"Thank the dear Lord for 'The Finished Mystery!' I have read it twice, the last time very carefully. I surely appreciate what is there written concerning the fallen angels. I have been beset by them, owing to my own weakness and my not keeping the vow strictly enough, and have only been saved from discouragement by the Lord's favor through the Resolve and the TOWERS and prayer. I was not fully confident, however, that I had not lost my crown until I read the blessed Seventh Volume. I now understand why my experiences have been permitted. It (the Volume) has been like the angel of Gethsemane to me, the assurance that I am still in our Father's favor. I can go forward with renewed energy because more joyous zeal. We have already sold twenty-five. Please remember us in prayer."—E. B. A., Conn.

A TRIBUTE TO THE SEVENTH MESSENGER

"The mystery of the seven stars which thou sawest in my right hand . . . the seven stars are the angels [messengers] of the seven churches."—Rev. 1:20.

Since the days of the Apostles of Jesus no man on earth has held a dearer place in the hearts of consecrated Christians than has PASTOR CHARLES T. RUSSELL. He was known the world around, and loved most by those who knew him best. For thirty-six years he was the sole editor of THE WATCH TOWER. It seems fitting, therefore, that we should in these columns at this time take notice of the first anniversary of his glorification, which occurred on the last day of October, 1916.

Pastor Russell was a great man. This fact is more fully recognized today than it was a year ago. Appreciation of him by the people will necessarily increase as they come to a fuller realization of the position he occupied as a servant of the Lord. Some men are born great, while others attain greatness by reason of their faithfulness to duty. Pastor Russell was a great man from both of these viewpoints. The Scriptures indicate that he was chosen of the Lord from his birth. His mother was a consecrated Christian. She taught her son in the way of the Lord, and he early gave evidence of his loving devotion to the great Master.

God used the Prophet Ezekiel to foretell the events that were to come to pass upon Christendom. He used Pastor Russell as an antitype of Ezekiel to make clear to Bible students the real meaning of these events as they came to pass. The great Master, speaking to the church through John the Revelator, foretold that the church would be developed during a time of stress, and that the entire Gospel age would be divided into seven distinct epochs or periods of time. He also clearly indicated that each of these periods or epochs of time would be blessed by a special messenger representing him. The great drama of the Gospel age opened with the Apostle Paul as the chief messenger, or angel, to the church. It closes with Pastor Russell as the seventh, and last, messenger to the church militant. For the other five epochs of the church the Lord provided messengers in the order named: St. John, Arius, Waldo, Wycliffe and Luther. Each in his turn bore the message due to be understood during the epoch he represented. The two most prominent messengers, however, are the first and last—St. Paul and Pastor Russell.

"THAT WISE AND FAITHFUL SERVANT"

The Lord Jesus, in his great prophetic statement in Matthew 24:45-47, made known the fact that at the end of the age he would be present and would have a special servant whom he would "make ruler over all his house to give meat in due season to the household." For many years Christian people of all denominations have been looking for the manifestation of that promised servant. For several years some have recognized, and now many more are recognizing, that Pastor Russell is that servant. Forty years ago he noted that the Scriptures held forth the undoubted testimony that the age would end with a great time of trouble, which would begin with international war; that the war would be followed by revolution; and that revolution would in turn be followed by anarchy, which would wreck all the ecclesiastical and civil institutions of the world, and thus make way for the establishment of Messiah's kingdom of righteousness, for which Christians have long hoped and prayed. He proved by Bible chronology the presence of the Lord from 1874 on, and demonstrated that 1914 would mark the end of the Gentile period and the beginning of the great international conflict. Time and events have proven the correctness of his deductions from the Scriptures, showing he possessed heavenly wisdom.

Contrary to the rule of ecclesiasticism, Pastor Russell never lifted a collection. He spent his own private fortune in making known the "glad tidings." His writings and publications have reached a larger circulation than those of any man or class of men on earth, the Bible alone excepted. He long ago showed from the Scriptures that there would be a federation of churches nominal and a departure by them from the "faith once delivered to the saints," and that the true saints would be gathered together into the garner of the Lord. All of these things are practically accomplished facts, all of which testify that Pastor Russell is the servant promised to the church in the closing days of its earthly pilgrimage. Many are perceiving more and more each day that he was chosen of the Lord to perform a great work.

HIS ORDINATION

There are two ordinations of the servants of God. One is the divine ordination; the other, an ordination by the church. Ordination means authority to act as a representative of another. Ordination of a minister of the Gospel means authority to preach the Gospel. Comparatively few ministers of our day have the real ordination. Pastor Russell had both the divine ordination and the ordination from the church. The ordination that comes from Jehovah is received by all who are begotten and anointed of the holy Spirit, as set forth in Isaiah 61:1-3. The ordination that comes from the church is authority granted by an assembly of Christian people to a certain one to represent them in delivering the Gospel of the kingdom. When quite a young man Charles Taze Russell received the divine ordination. Shortly thereafter he received the ordination from the church by being authorized to preach the Gospel. A faithful representative of the Lord he was. For many years he proclaimed the sweet message of the kingdom. The gracious words which the Lord poured upon his lips and caused his pen to write have thrilled the hearts of many Christian people for years past, and in the years to come thousands will feed upon these words with gladness of heart.

The great Master, through the Revelator, foretold that his voice should be heard through his messenger instructing his people to prepare the way of the Lord. He used Pastor Russell to be that voice, and a beautiful and faithful voice it was. Another has well said of him:

"Beautiful voice of the Lord: strong, humble, wise, loving, gentle, just, merciful, faithful, self-sacrificing; one of the noblest, grandest characters of all history."

Although he has passed forever from activities in the flesh, yet his voice is still heard in Zion, both theoretically and actually—theoretically in the printed message he has left as a heritage to the Israel of God, and actually in the phonographic records of his speeches, which are yet spoken for the encouragement of those who love the Lord and his cause of righteousness.

Shortly after the Apostles fell asleep there began a period of great injustice to the people. Ambitious men entered the sacred precincts of the church, and human theories were substituted for the faith of Jesus and the apostles. The clergy as a class now came into existence, and by their actions indicated, and have since indicated, that their chief prerogative was and is to look after self, to fleece the poor sheep; and to accomplish this they have kept the people in ignorance. The result is that darkness prevailed on the earth, and gross darkness was upon the people. This continued for more than 1200 years; and then the great Reformation movement began, which has progressed amidst adverse conditions even to this day.

HIS MISSION

Pastor Russell, as we have observed, is the messenger to the Laodicean epoch of the church. The word Laodicea literally means "Justice to the people." Well does the record of Pastor Russell show that he was a man chosen of the Lord for this period of the church, his work being always unselfishly in the interests of the people. With malice toward none and love for all, he kindly removed the garb of deception that covered the self-constituted, arrogant clergy, and exposed them and their fallacious doctrines to the gaze of mankind. He turned on the great searchlight of divine truth and drove error away from the minds of many. He showed that for centuries the clergy, and the systems they represent, have defamed God's holy name by teaching that he is a fiend who takes pleasure in the torture eternally, in a hell of fire and brimstone, of the masses of his creatures; that they had used such God-defamatory doctrines to deceive the people and keep them in subjection. His voice was heard throughout the earth proclaiming, "The doctrine of eternal torture is a foul stain upon the name of Jehovah, driving from his loving care innumerable companies of people who would otherwise have gladly sought his face."

In the interests of the people Pastor Russell tore down the false and fraudulent walls of the doctrines that have held multitudes in Babylon; and many poor, emaciated saints have escaped therefrom, giving glory to God for their deliverance. He made clear to the Christian peoples of the earth the philosophy of the great ransom-sacrifice. The doctrinal walls of predestination and foreordination—the salvation of the few in heaven, and the eternal-torture of all others in the lake of fire and brimstone—fell with a great crash before the onslaught of this man of God, who earnestly and faithfully smote them with the mighty slaughter-weapon with which God armed him for the fight. As a result, many have been able to see that "Jesus Christ, by the grace of God, tasted death for every man," and that in God's due time every man shall be brought to an accurate knowledge of the truth; for "there is one God and one Mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus, who gave his life a ransom for all, to be testified in due time."—1 Timothy 2:5, 6.

It was the fight of this Laodicean messenger in behalf of the people that enabled students of the Lord's Word to see that the mystery of God is THE CHRIST, Head and body; that The Messiah or mystery class is developed during the Gospel age; and that thereafter "times of refreshing shall come," when the great restitution blessing for mankind will be put in operation. What a glorious message of comfort is restitution for the groaning creatures of earth! As Christian people have been delivered from the captivity of nominal Zion (Babylonish systems), and have learned of the coming blessings of restitution to all of mankind that would be obedient, their hearts have found expression in the words of the Psalmist:

"Then was our mouth filled with laughter and our tongue with singing, . . . the Lord has done great things for the people."—Psalm 126:2.

God caused certain plagues to come upon Egypt, which illustrated and foretold the plagues coming upon Babylonish Christendom in the end of the Gospel age. Pastor Russell was, and is, "the great voice [instrument of the Lord] out of the temple saying, Go your ways and pour out of the seven vials of the wrath of God upon the earth." (Revelation 16:1) The seven vials of wrath represent the seven volumes of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES, which the Lord used Pastor Russell to prepare and publish to the world, six of which were published while he was with us, the seventh being a posthumous publication. And thus, "Though he be dead, he yet speaketh." The message contained in these seven volumes of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES, sets forth the great loving plan of Jehovah for the false, fraudulent and God-dishonoring systems that encumber the earth, and shows how that the wrath of God coming upon them shall destroy them all. These are indeed plagues upon Christendom. Many years ago Pastor Russell pointed out from the Scriptures that such would come; and now, beholding the fulfilment of these prophetic statements, Christian people who understand what they mean, are looking up and lifting up their heads because, as Jesus testified, such would be evidence that the deliverance of the last of the saints is at hand.

Years ago the Pastor published far and wide the evidence that the Reign of the Lord would begin with a great woe or trouble upon the unrighteous systems of the earth, and that such is necessary to prepare the way for the full establishment of the kingdom of righteousness. Such woe is visited, as he foretold, upon those interested in maintaining indefinitely the present oppressive order of society to the personal advantage of a few. Pastor Russell said concerning such woe that "The battle of this great day of God Almighty will be the greatest revolution the world has ever seen. Behold how even now the searchlight of general intelligence is discovering the secret springs of political intrigue, financial policies, religious claims, etc.; and how all are brought to the bar of judgment, and by man as well as by God declared right or wrong, as judged by the teachings of the Word of God!"

THE WORK ENDURES

Only a year ago Pastor Russell passed from the earth. Those who felt keenly the lash of truth as he laid it on, and who preferred darkness to light, exultantly said. "Now the work that Russell began will soon die, and his name will be forgotten." But not so! Millions of people today find themselves free from the burden of fear, imposed upon them by the teachings of hell fire and other false doctrines, and are therefore supporting Brother Russell, in some measure, even though they take little or no active part in spreading the glad tidings of great joy which soon shall come to all. The tide of truth, which began more than forty years ago, is still steadily rising and will continue to rise until it fills the whole earth; and its opponents might as well try to sweep back with an ordinary broom the waves of a mighty ocean as to prevent the truth from spreading throughout the earth. Zealous Christians are greatly rejoicing as their privileges of service and suffering continue. God promised to turn his hand upon his little ones; and indeed the proof shows that he has done so. During the past year every branch of the work of the harvest has increased. This work is conducted by the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY, a corporation organized for that purpose by Pastor Russell years ago, and which, without doubt, was organized under the Lord's direction, and which was managed and directed by Pastor Russell until his death.

A comparison of the work of 1916 with that of 1917 discloses the fact that the amount of volunteer literature distributed during 1917 is far in excess of 1916. At this time there are over 200 more colporteurs in the field than there were ten months ago. More pilgrims are upon the road today than there were in 1916, bearing the message to those who have hearing ears. The voluntary contributions to the funds of the SOCIETY for carrying on this work are, for the first ten months of 1917, far in excess of what they were during the entire year of 1916. Today 954 classes are pushing vigorously the pastoral work, which work has more than doubled during the past six months.

The year 1917 chronicles the publication of the Seventh Volume of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES, the last of a series produced by Pastor Russell. The first edition of 75,000 in cloth and 10,000 in karatol is fully exhausted. The second edition of 100,000 is going rapidly, as orders are daily being received at the office in large numbers. Letters from hundreds of the friends throughout the country show an increasing zeal for and activity in the work. Thus we see that in many ways the Lord is manifesting his blessing upon the work of the harvest, greatly to the joy of those who are able to participate therein, either by actual labor or otherwise.

JESUS THE GREAT CHIEF REAPER

Why, we are asked, is the work still progressing? We answer, Because it is the Lord's work and not man's! Brother Russell always recognized that the work of the harvest is directed by the great Master of the harvest—Christ Jesus; and that all of those who labor therein are greatly privileged above all other creatures on earth. Furthermore, the Scriptures show that those who died since 1878 have been changed instantly, "in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye," and have entered into their eternal reward. The Scriptures declare that while such have ceased from their laborious efforts, their works do follow them. (Revelation 14:13) Hence our dear Pastor, now in glory, is without doubt, manifesting a keen interest in the harvest work, and is permitted by the Lord to exercise some strong influence thereupon. (Revelation 14:17) It is not unreasonable to conclude that he has been privileged to do, in connection with the harvest work, things which he could not do while with us. Although we recognize that the Lord is the great Master and Director of the harvest, yet we recognize that he would privilege the saints beyond the veil to have a part in the work on this side; and thus all the saints, both in heaven and upon earth, are now given the honor of concluding the work on this side, preparatory to the full establishment of the kingdom of glory.

"SCATTERING COALS OF FIRE"

Pastor Russell organized the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY, under the Lord's direction, to carry on this work. This corporate body clearly seems to be designated in Revelation 14:18. It is the only organization on earth that is maintained by the sacrifice of the saints—the little voluntary sacrifices of the Lord's dear people throughout the world, who love him and his cause better than this life, and who joyfully make sacrifices in order that they may have a part in the work of setting the ecclesiastical heavens on fire, and announcing "the kingdom of heaven is at hand!" Thus the SOCIETY is granted power and authority to scatter coals of fire (truths destructive of error), particularly as contained in Volumes IV. and VII. of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES.

Pastor Russell was a prodigious worker. He labored early and late to make known the precious message of the kingdom. The welfare of the church was always dear to his heart. Like the great Apostle Paul, he ceased not day and night to warn the flock of God, if not with literal tears, yet often with weariness of body and sadness of heart. One of the last messages which he delivered to the church was that after his departure great trials would come upon the Lord's flock; and we witness the fulfilment of this prophetic statement. While fiery experiences bring sadness for the time, yet all who are properly exercised thereby rejoice to be partakers of these sufferings as a further evidence of discipline from the Lord.

For years he was the head of the Bethel family and director of a large corps of workers, both in America and abroad. Notwithstandng his arduous duties, he was never too busy to hear the troubles of others; and like a loving father and shepherd he sympathized with, comforted and directed the Lord's dear children. At the weekly meetings addressed by him, and at the many conventions which he attended, he always devoted a portion of the time to private counsel and aid to the Lord's dear flock, over whch the Chief Reaper and Shepherd had made him overseer. Truly he was a Barnabas to the consecrated scattered throughout the earth.

When the great adversary came in like a flood, threatening to overwhelm the saints, Pastor Russell, the Lord's chosen servant, raised up a standard against him (Isa. 59:19), bringing forth the "vow" of faithfulness, which has proved a protection and blessing to many in these evil days. The "Morning Resolve", another product of his fertile brain, has been a great comfort and help to many in time of need.

HIS DEVOTION TO THE LORD

His firmness was a distinct part of his character. Once sure that he had the mind of the Lord upon a subject, he permitted nothing to stand in his way or to prevent him from carrying out what he considered to be the Lord's will. Indeed, the Lord foretold that his servant would possess this attribute of character, saying through his prototype:

> "Behold, I have made thy face strong against their faces, and thy forehead strong against their foreheads. As an adamant, harder than flint, have I made thy forehead."—Ezekiel 3:8, 9.

Whatever trying situation Pastor Russell faced, the Lord made him equal to it, and gave him the strength to prevail according to God's holy will. His life motto, in fact the very keynote of his wonderful career, was, "God first"; and this motto he kept faithfully, at whatever cost to himself or others dear to his heart. His loving devotion to Jehovah and to the Lord Jesus was an inspiration to all with whom he came in contact and served. Though firm, yet he possessed a gentleness like unto that of a woman. Benevolence was a marked attitude of Pastor Russell, which manifested itself in his liberality of sentiment and his untiring efforts to bring the "glad tidings" of the kingdom of peace to those who sit in darkness. He suffered much, yet was able to steel his mind against difficulty and attack, and by the Lord's grace was enabled to stand firm and steadfast while others would grow weary and discouraged. He was endowed with keen perceptive powers, thereby rendering his range of observation extraordinary; while his memory and ability to analyze, and to reach rapid and accurate conclusions, continued to be a marvel to all who were associated with him closely. He had an exalted sense of duty as a servant of the Lord, and the conviction that each moment is precious and must be utilized to the Master's praise seemed to pervade his entire being. This was a source of inspiration to the brethren generally. He faithfully and untiringly administered the affairs of the church, the members of which he loved devotedly. It was said of the Apostle John that when he was too old and feeble to walk to the meeting of the early Church, he was carried into the house and placed upon a couch, where he delivered his exhortation and message of love to the flock of God, always admonishing them to love one another. With a like loving spirit Pastor Russell faithfully looked after the interests of the Lord's little ones, until his dying hour. When almost too feeble to walk and too feeble to stand for any length of time, he was assisted to the platform of the hall where the church at Los Angeles, California, was assembled; and there sitting with bowed head, he delivered to them the last loving message that he ever spoke. When he had finished this last message he quoted and asked the congregation to sing:

> "Abide, sweet Spirit, heavenly Dove,
> With light and comfort from above,
> Be thou our guardian, thou our guide;
> O'er every thought and step preside.
> "Teach us in watchfulness and prayer
> To wait for thine appointed hour,
> And fit us by thy grace to share
> The triumphs of thy conquering power."

Great men are not fully appreciated while they are among us. Such is true with reference to Pastor Russell. Like the great Master whom he devotedly loved and faithfully served, he was misunderstood and persecuted, all of which he bore in patience. He finished the work given him here to do, and is now forever with the Lord, where there is fulness of joy and pleasures for ever more.

THE HISTORY AND OPERATIONS OF OUR SOCIETY

NOTICE OF ANNUAL MEETING

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the annual meeting of the Shareholders of the WATCH TOWER BIBLE & TRACT SOCIETY will be held at Carnegie Hall, in the City of Pittsburgh (North Side), County of Allegheny and State of Pennsylvania, on the 5th day of January, 1918, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, for the purpose of electing Directors and Officers and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

W. E. VAN AMBURGH, Secretary.

Because of the unusual interest in the ensuing Annual Meeting of the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY, as per the foregoing notice, it is deemed proper that we here give THE WATCH TOWER readers a brief resume of the organization and operations of the SOCIETY.

As is well known, Pastor Russell began his religious activities about 1875. In 1884, together with six others, he formed a corporation under the name and style of ZION'S WATCH TOWER TRACT SOCIETY, incorporating it under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania. In the Lord's providence a body corporate is essential to the work of the harvest until it is completed. We have no doubt that the Lord directed the organization of this Corporation for the purpose of carrying on his harvest work. Brother Russell was the Servant of the Laodicean period of the church, and organized the work under the Lord's direction. In 1896 a petition was presented to the Court of Common Pleas, at Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, and the corporate name was changed to WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY, by which name it has ever since been known. The Articles of Incorporation are as follows:

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION

"Be it known that the subscribers, having associated themselves together for the purpose of the dissemination of Bible Truths in various languages, and being desirous of becoming incorporated agreeably to the provisions of the Act of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, entitled 'An Act to provide for the Incorporation and Regulations of certain Corporations,' approved the twenty-ninth day of April, Anno Domini, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventy Four, and its supplements, do hereby declare, set forth and certify that the following are the purposes, objects, articles and conditions of their said association for and upon which they desire to be incorporated:

Certificates of membership so acquired shall be issued by the Secretary, countersigned by the President, to the persons entitled thereto.

"VI. The Corporation is to be managed by a Board of Directors consisting of seven members, and the names of those already chosen Directors are as follows:—

"VIII. The said Corporation shall have as officers a President, who shall preside at the meetings of the Board of Directors; a Vice-President, who shall preside in the absence of the President; and a Secretary, who shall also be Treasurer; and these officers shall be chosen from among the members of the Board of Directors annually, on the first Saturday of each year, by an election by ballot, to be held at the principal office of the Corporation in Allegheny City, Pennsylvania.

"The members of the Board of Directors shall hold their respective offices for life, unless removed by a two-thirds vote of the Shareholders; and vacancies in the Board occasioned by death, resignation or removal, shall be filled by vote of a majority of the remaining members of the Board, who shall meet for the purpose within twenty days from the time when such vacancy or vacancies shall occur, and in the event of failure to fill such vanacy or vacancies in the manner aforesaid within thirty days from the time when such vacancy or vacancies shall occur, then the said vacancy or vacancies shall be filled by the appointment of the President, and the person or persons so appointed shall hold his or their office or offices until the next annual election of officers of the Corporation, when such vacancy or vacancies shall be filled by election, in the same manner as the President, Vice-President and Secretary and Treasurer are elected. OTHER CORPORATIONS LEGALLY NECESSARY

In 1909, the chief point of activity in the Harvest work was removed from Allegheny, Pa., to Brooklyn, New York. It became necessary to have a New York corporation to carry on the work in a legal manner in the State of New York; hence the PEOPLES PULPIT ASSOCIATION was organized under the Membership Corporation Law of New York State.

For a number of years the work has been generally known as the INTERNATIONAL BIBLE STUDENTS ASSOCIATION, and in 1914, the same identical work was incorporated under the laws of Great Britain, under the name and style of INTERNATIONAL BIBLE STUDENTS ASSOCIATION. All three of these Corporations were organized for purposes identical, and work together harmoniously.

The officers of the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY must be elected annually. At present the officers are as follows:—

President, J. F. Rutherford.
Vice-President, A. N. Pierson,
Secy. and Treas., W. E. Van Amburgh.

The officers of the PEOPLES PULPIT ASSOCIATION are as follows:—

President, J. F. Rutherford,
Vice-President, A. H. Macmillan,
Secretary, W. F. Hudgings,
Treasurer, W. E. Van Amburgh.

The President of this Corporation, according to the terms of the Charter, holds his office for life, the other officers being elected by the Board of Directors annually.

The officers of the INTERNATIONAL BIBLE STUDENTS ASSOCIATION, are

President, J. F. Rutherford,
Vice-President, J. Hemery,
Secretary, H. J. Shearn.
Treasurer, Wm. Crawford.

Each one of these Corporations has a separate and distinct Board of Directors. The Board of Directors of the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY, is, at present, as follows:—

J. F. Rutherford, A. H. Macmillan
A. N. Pierson, W. E. Spill,
W. E. Van Amburgh, J. A. Bohnet,
George H. Fisher.

The law requires that the Board of Directors be elected annually at the Shareholders' meeting.

The Board of Directors of the PEOPLES PULPIT ASSOCIATION, as at present constituted, are:—

J. F. Rutherford, W. F. Hudgings,
A. H. Macmillan, A. E. Burgess,
W. E. Van Amburgh, J. A. Baeuerlein,
R. J. Martin.

Members of this Board are elected at the annual meeting of the members of the Corporation, held in Brooklyn, New York.

The controlling body of the INTERNATIONAL BIBLE STUDENTS ASSOCIATION is designated as a Council. The original Council was composed of Charles T. Russell, J. F. Rutherford, J. Hemery, H. J. Shearn, W. Crawford. This Council, by the terms of the Act of Incorporation, elect their successors as well as the officers of the Corporation.

All three of these Corporations are religious associations or institutions, incorporated, as provided by the terms of their respective Charters, for the purpose of dissemination of Bible Truths. The creed or belief of each, is the same; namely, the teachings of Jesus and the Apostles.

SOCIETY'S CHARTER ANALYZED

There seemingly has been some misunderstanding about the Charter of the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY; hence we here give a brief analysis thereof.

The purpose of the corporation is set forth in plain terms in paragraph II. The domicile of the corporation is designated in paragraph III as Allegheny County, Pennsylvania. It is strictly a Pennsylvania corporation. Paragraph V of the Charter expressly provides that the SOCIETY has no capital stock. It has, however, voting shares which grant merely a personal right to each person to cast one vote for every ten dollars contributed at any one time by such person.

Paragraph VI states that the corporation is to be managed by a Board of Directors consisting of seven members, and specifically names the first Board of Directors as follows, to wit:

President, Charles T. Russell, Wm. C. MacMillan,
Vice-President, Wm. I. Mann, Simon O. Blunden,
Secy. and Treas., Maria F. Russell, J. B. Adamson,
Joseph F. Smith.

Thus it will be seen that the persons elected to the respective offices of President, Vice-President, Secretary and Treasurer, were, and are, by virtue of the terms of the Charter and their election, members of the Board of Directors, and any person elected as successor to such offices, would thereby become members of the Board of Directors. Instead of the shareholders first electing Brother Russell each year as a Director and then electing him as President, they voted for him but once, and his election as President constituted him a member of the Board of Directors. And so it would be with his successor in office or with the other officers. There would seem to be no necessity for taking the two votes, although technically that would be the proper course.

Strictly speaking, there has never been a legal election of a complete Board of Directors since 1885, for the reason that the law requires the Directors to be elected annually. At each annual election only the three officers were elected; hence they alone constituted the legal members of the Board of Directors.

Paragraph VIII of the Charter provides that the Board of Directors shall hold their respective offices for life, unless removed by a two-thirds vote of the Shareholders. This provision of the Charter, however, is directly contrary to the law of the State of Pennsylvania under which the SOCIETY was incorporated and hence that provision of the Charter is null and void. The law provides that the Board of Directors shall be elected annually by the shareholders. The Charter of a corporation cannot grant greater powers than the law under which it is created; hence this provision of the Charter must yield to the provision of the law. Where a vacancy occurs in the Board of Directors, the Charter provides that such vacancy may be filled by the remaining members of the Board of Directors, provided such vacancy is filled within thirty days; and if not so filled within that time then the President shall appoint a proper person, or persons to fill such vacancy or vacancies. (Art. VIII.) The Charter expressly provides that those selected or appointed to fill such vacancies shall hold office only until the next annual election of officers of the corporation, at which time a full and complete Board must be elected by the shareholders. This provision of the Charter, however, was never complied with in the selection of the successors of any of the original seven Directors, except in the case of the three officers, who have been elected annually. Hence, according to the terms of the Charter itself, as well as the laws of Pennsylvania, four vacancies have existed in the Board of Directors until in July of this year, at which time the President appointed four members to hold office until January, 1918, in harmony with Paragraph VIII of the Charter.

The persons named in the Charter as the original Board of Directors would hold office until their successors were elected. This rule applied to Brother Russell, and he was therefore always a legal member of the Board for this reason, and for the additional reason that he was elected annually to the office of President. The six others named in the Charter as members of the Board of Directors severed their connection with the Society by resignation or otherwise, at the dates named below:—

W. I. Mann	—	April 11, 1892
J. F. Smith	—	April 11, 1892
J. B. Adamson	—	Jan. 5, 1895
W. C. MacMillan	—	May 13, 1898
Mrs. M. F. Russell	—	Feb. 12, 1900
S. O. Blunden	—	Jan. 6, 1908

Successors to these six original Directors were never elected by the shareholders, as the law expressly requires; hence for more than twenty years there was not a full and complete legal Board of Directors. Since Brother Russell, as President, and two others as Vice-President and Secretary-Treasurer, were legal Directors by virtue of their annual election as officers, and since Brother Russell controlled the SOCIETY by reason of having a majority of the voting shares, the fact that there was not a complete and legal Board worked no injury to the SOCIETY.

Prior to 1908 Brother Russell held a majority of the voting shares by reason of the fact that he had contributed the major portion of the money to the Tract Fund. Thereafter the donations increased until within a short time Brother Russell held approximately one-third, and by 1916 he held only about one-fifth of the voting shares. The law requires the annual election to be held in Pennsylvania, hence after 1908, when the headquarters were located in Brooklyn, most of the voting was done at Pittsburgh by proxy. Brother Russell always received all the votes that were cast. For the years 1914 to 1916 inclusive, his shares were not voted at all. For the election of January, 1917, the proxies were sent out according to the custom that had been in vogue since 1909; hence most of the voting at the 1917 election was done at Pittsburgh by proxy.

The provision of the law requiring the Directors to be elected annually by the shareholders is a wise one. If the Directors were permitted to hold office for life and to elect their successors, then it would be possible for seven men to absolutely and perpetually control the affairs of the SOCIETY in utter disregard of the wishes of the shareholders. This the law will not permit.

WHO ARE ENTITLED TO VOTE

The shareholders, in fact, constitute the corporation, or the constituent body. The shareholders are those who have contributed money to carry on the work of the SOCIETY. Every ten dollars contributed at one time, counts for one vote. Paragraph V of the Charter provides for issuing certificates of membership covering such contributions. This certificate of membership is purely a personal right to vote and cannot be transferred. When a person holding a certificate dies, the value of such certificates likewise dies. No one else could vote such certificates of shares. Many of the brethren have donated money to the Society, and have never received any certificates and are wondering why this is so. In 1894 Brother Russell issued this statement concerning these certificates:—

"We have regularly printed certificates which for a time were sent out to those who contributed $10.00 or multiples thereof; but they made trouble and extra letter-writing because many of the Lord's sheep have little knowledge of business. Some supposed that the certificates were appeals for money; others could not tell what to make of them, and wrote for full particulars as to how they should vote, etc.; others feared that the owning of the certificates brought them into liability for any debts which the SOCIETY might contract. It required patience and took time from more important work to answer scores of such letters; and we concluded that we had made a mistake, as far as the certificates were concerned. However, a full record is kept of all donations and of voting-shares."

It has been difficult to keep track of the contributors because of the frequent change of address and many times change of name, as where a sister, having donated money, subsequently marries. At annual elections the SOCIETY has faithfully endeavored to locate more than a majority of the Shareholders, and send them notice by mail of such meeting. This year, the notice of election being published in THE WATCH TOWER, all who have contributed will have the opportunity of taking advantage of the voting privilege. The By-law of the SOCIETY now in force governing certificates of voting shares and the voting of same, is as follows, to wit:

"1. Certificates of membership may be issued to any one entitled thereto, and shall be signed by the President and the Secretary and sealed with the corporate seal. Every person contributing ten dollars or more at any one time to the funds of the said SOCIETY shall be entitled to one vote, at any annual or special election held by the corporation, for every ten dollars so contributed. And the following words endorsed upon the Proxy when signed and sealed by the Secretary shall constitute a certificate of authority to vote the number of shares named therein, to wit:

"I hereby certify that.....of..... is entitled to cast ..... votes at the annual election of the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY, to be held on the ..... day of January, A. D., 191...

"2. Certificates of stock are not subject to transfer, the right to vote being a personal right, which ceases with the death of the party having such right, or when such person becomes opposed to the work or policy of this SOCIETY. Any person making contributions to the funds of the Society may at the time of making such contribution request that the voting share be granted to some other person or persons named at the time."

Pursuant to the above notice the next annual election will be held at Pittsburgh, January 5th, 1918, in Carnegie Hall, at which time and place any shareholder may appear in person and cast his vote, or he may appoint some one else as his proxy to vote in his place and stead.

The legal form of proxy for such an election is as follows:

FORM OF PROXY

I, ..., of (Your name)
....., do hereby make,
(Your address) constitute and appoint..... of (Name of proxy)
.....my lawful proxy and at-(Address)
torney for me and in my name, place and stead to appear at the meeting of the Shareholders of the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY to be held at Pittsburgh, Allegheny County, State of Pennsylvania, on the 5th day of January, 1918, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, and at any adjourned or subsequent session of said annual meeting, and then and there to cast the number of votes to which I shall be entitled, in the election of Directors and Officers of said SOCIETY, and for the transaction of any other business that may require the votes of Shareholders; and my proxy shall have and exercise all the powers that I have or could exercise if personally present.

WITNESS MY HAND AND SEAL this.....day of ..... 191..

(Sign Here) .....

ENDORSEMENT:

I hereby certify that .....of .....is entitled to cast..... votes at the annual election of the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY to be held on the 5th day of January, A. D. 1918.

(SIGNED) .....
[Seal.] Secretary.

The foregoing endorsement is a form of certificate. When the proxy is duly signed and presented to the Secretary, he will ascertain from the books the number of votes the person signing the proxy is entitled to vote and will endorse the authority of the shareholder or his proxy to cast such number of votes at the election.

Every proxy with the certificate endorsed thereon must be presented to the Secretary and signed and sealed by him before it will constitute an authority to vote at the election.

A proxy is a general power of attorney, whereby the shareholder delegates to another the power and authority to vote in his name, place and stead. Hence, it is not proper to write on the proxy the name of the person or persons for whom votes shall be cast. However, the one holding the proxy would desire to respect the wish of the shareholder; and that he might know that wish, it would be proper that the shareholder attach to his proxy a letter of instruction, advising his proxy or substitute as to the person or persons for whom he may desire such votes cast—provided, of course, such person or persons are nominated. It would not be reasonable to expect that every one who holds such instruction would be required to nominate any such person named—for this reason: Brother A may hold proxies from a dozen different persons, each of whom instructs him to vote those proxies for as many different persons, and it would be inconsistent for him to nominate opposing candidates. The obligation of the one holding a proxy is to vote for those who are placed before the convention.

We are inserting a loose leaf, which is an exact replica of the above proxy, and which each person may use to fill out, sign and return to Brother W. E. Van Amburgh, Secretary, 13-17 Hicks Street, Brooklyn, New York. He will place the proper endorsement thereon and deliver the same either to the shareholder or to his proxy in ample time to vote at the election.

ORDER OF ELECTION

At the ensuing annual election, a Board of Directors of seven members will first be elected. The present members of the Board are:—

J. F. Rutherford, A. H. Macmillan,
A. N. Pierson, W. E. Spill,
W. E. Van Amburgh, J. A. Bohnet,
Geo. H. Fisher.

The following persons also claim to be members of the Board:—

A. I. Ritchie, I. F. Hoskins,
R. H. Hirsh, J. D. Wright.

The shareholders may vote for any of these or none of them, as they choose; they may vote for any shareholder they desire. After the Board of Directors is elected, then from amongst their number the officers of the corporation will be elected.

It is the desire that all shareholders attend in person it possible; but since many of them live at a long distance, it will probably be necessary for many to send their proxies to other persons. Proxies, of course, should be given only to those who are fully consecrated, who are in harmony with the SOCIETY, and who also hold voting shares and have the best interests of the work at heart. A shareholder can give his or her proxy to any person who possesses the above qualifications. (A proxy should be given only to one who is expected to attend the meeting in person.) In addition to the officers and members of the Board of Directors of the SOCIETY who will be personally present at the annual meeting, we are advised of the following persons who expect to be there, to wit: C. H. Anderson, Baltimore, Md., C. H. Ward, Cumberland, Md., A. M. Zimmerman, Lancaster, Pa., B. C. Rutledge, New Brighton, Pa., and E. O. Chambers, Butler, Pa. We merely name these for the convenience of any who might not know to whom they could give a proxy.

It is desirable that all of these proxies be in the hands of the Secretary on or before the tenth day of December, in order to afford ample time for him to ascertain from the books the number of votes each person is entitled to cast, and to endorse the same upon the certificate attached to the proxy, and thus to have it ready for the annual election.

VOICE OF THE CHURCH—THE WILL OF GOD

It has been suggested that only a small portion of the consecrated of the INTERNATIONAL BIBLE STUDENTS ASSOCIATION are in fact shareholders of the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY. Many of the Lord's dear children are poor in this world's goods, yet they have given all their time for several years to faithful service in the harvest field. Unless one is a contributor to the Tract Fund he is not entitled to a vote. The following letter very well expresses the situation:

"DEAR BRETHREN IN CHRIST:—

"Pardon me if I am obtruding, but I feel constrained to offer the following thoughts and suggestions which have been upon my mind of late:

"Don't you think that, with the present mode of electing officers and servants of our SOCIETY, there is a possibility of a few of the large shareholders controlling the election and the SOCIETY against the approval of the large majority of its members? Would this not be Lucre speaking for the Lord? Might it not be the manifested will of the adversary instead of the manifested will of God? In my opinion, some change should be made, throwing the election of officers in the hands of all its members as it now prevails in our ecclesias, giving each one an equal voice, and imposing equal responsibility upon all. As it now is, some brother possessing the money talent could have 5,000 votes, while many others have none. While it was right for THAT SERVANT, who was the largest contributor, organizer, and charterer, to control in his lifetime, it doesn't seem right for any one, or for a minority, to control after his death. And again, we must remember that his votes were always on the side of the majority.

"As our dear Brother Russell advocated that the largest MAJORITY should be accepted as the expressed will of the Lord, I would suggest your advocacy of all the classes throughout the land indicating their choice for officers and servants of the SOCIETY by vote, and the result be sent to some designated brother, and a committee be appointed to act with him to carefully canvass the votes and make a report to the annual meeting, thereby showing the sentiment of the friends throughout the land.

"Surely all faithful, voting children of God would wish all other members of the body to have an equal voice in the selection of its official members, and would be thankful for just such an opportunity to properly use their money talent in casting their votes for the majority's preference; thereby relieving themselves of the great responsibility that now rests upon them. The spirit of the faithful is an acquiescing one to the majority's opinion, a submission of personal preference, will, judgment, etc., to the manifested choice of the Lord; while the refusing to do so indicates a self-opinionated, self-filled, self-judgment condition.

"I make these suggestions because I recognize the majority rule to be the expressed will of the Lord in such matters, and think that we should be submissive to the results even though the Lord may see fit to permit the adversary to control for the time, which would evidently be for the purpose of testing and trying our hearts and wills, to see whether or not our hearts are right, and our wills submissive. It does seem that our final trials will NOT be along doctrinal lines as in the past, but will be along the line of the WILL, the foundation of our consecration.

"Hoping you will not think me presumptuous in expressing the above thoughts, and assuring you of my heartiest co-operation, I remain,

"Yours in the love and service of our Redeemer."

"A. B. DABNEY."

A SUGGESTED METHOD

The Board of Directors and officers of the SOCIETY desire to have a full and fair expression of the church as to who shall constitute their servants in an official capacity. The sentiment expressed in the above letter seems to be very just. We therefore make the following suggestions: that every Ecclesia of the INTERNATIONAL BIBLE STUDENTS ASSOCIATION to whom this notice goes, hold a general congregational meeting for the purpose of voting upon their choice for members of the Board of Directors and Officers of the SOCIETY. In order that this might be carried out in a uniform manner, we outline the following method of procedure, to wit:

That on Wednesday, November 21st, at 7:30 p. m., all the ecclesias assemble at their usual meeting place; that every member of the class that is known to be fully consecrated be permitted to cast one vote in the class, of which he or she is a member; that the vote be first taken as to who shall constitute the members of the Board of Directors for the ensuing year, and then that another vote be taken as to who should constitute the officers; and that full report of the result of this vote be made to a person designated to receive the same. That such person may be entirely removed from the influence of the officers of the SOCIETY, we name Brother Eliot H. Thomson, 1357 Oak Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., as the one to whom all reports or results of class votes shall be made, and Brothers General W. P. Hall and J. T. D. Pyles, of Washington, D. C., as two other members of a committee who, together with Brother Thomson, shall carefully canvass the vote and report the result to the Secretary of the SOCIETY, which report shall be read by the Secretary before the annual meeting for the information of the shareholders prior to the casting of the legal vote.

Of course, we all understand that this vote taken by the classes will not constitute a legal election, but may be considered as advisory, or in the nature of instructions to the Shareholders as to what is the will of the church at large. We believe that this would be the better way of ascertaining the Lord's will; and since all the Shareholders will desire to do the Lord's will, they would doubtless desire to be governed by the expressed wish of a majority of the members of the Ecclesias. We cannot see that any one could have an objection to this method of ascertaining the Lord's will and it would be entirely fair to all.

We submit the following form of report which can be made out and signed by the Chairman and the Secretary of each congregation and mailed to Brother Thomson, Washington, D. C., as above suggested, to wit:

CHURCH'S REPORT

At a meeting of the Ecclesia at ..... held on the 21st day of November, 1917, at 7:30 p. m., at the usual meeting place, for the purpose of ascertaining and expressing the will of the members as to who shall constitute the officers and servants of the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY, we report the following result:

We first voted upon who shall constitute members of the Board of Directors, and the vote stood as follows:

Name .....Votes received.....

.....

.....

.....

.....

.....

.....

.....

.....

.....

The vote for Officers was as follows:

For President .....Votes received.....

.....

Vice-President .....

.....

Secy. & Treas. .....

.....

We hereby certify that the above and foregoing is a true and accurate record of the vote of said ecclesia as taken at the time and place above mentioned:

SIGNED.....

Chairman of meeting.

.....

Secretary of meeting.

EXPLANATORY

The purpose of the above arrangement is that every consecrated Bible Student may have an opportunity to express his or her choice for members of the Board of Directors and also for the officers. Therefore at each meeting each and every one should be privileged to vote for whomsoever they desire and the record should be made; for instance, if John Doe receives one vote, his name should be put down and his vote recorded, and if Richard Roe receives 100 votes, his name should be recorded and the number of votes he received. The names of the present Board of Directors, also four who claim to be Directors, and the names of the present officers of the SOCIETY are given above. No one is bound to vote for either of the persons named; he may vote for whom he desires, the purpose of this arrangement being to ascertain the will of the Lord through the expression of his people.

At each ecclesia it should be well noted that no one is permitted to participate in the voting unless he is both fully consecrated and a member or regular attendant of that particular ecclesia. It is therefore decidedly important that each ecclesia meet and cast their votes the same day; hence, we have named Wednesday, November 21st, at 7:30 p. m.

The Secretary of the ecclesia should mail the report to Brother E. H. Thomson, 1357 Oak St., N. W., Washington, D. C. immediately after the vote is taken.

NEHEMIAH'S PRAYER ANSWERED

[The first and ninth paragraphs of this article were reprinted from article entitled "Colaborers with God," published in issue of November 1, 1911. In our experience in character building, the same lesson of turning everything to good account may be profitably applied. For instance, if by nature we are quick and impulsive, let us seek not only to restrain such impulsiveness from speaking evil and wrong, but to exercise it in the speaking of that which is good and profitable for edifying, gradually accustoming ourselves to use this talent in a favorable manner, not in an unfavorable one. Have we large combativeness, let us, while seeking to restrain this quality of our being as respects evil doing and injury to others, learn to exercise it kindly, lovingly, in opposing wrong, in "earnestly contending for the faith once delivered to the saints." And so with all the so-called baser organs of our fallen, unbalanced humanity. They may all be turned to usefulness and helpfulness if but rightly directed by our wills and by the spirit of a sound mind—"the mind of the Lord."

A PSALM OF THANKSGIVING

[Excepting the paragraph below, this article was a reprint of that entitled "Praise Ye the Lord," published in issue of May 1, 1892, which please see.]

Gratitude is one of the divinely implanted instincts of a soul bearing the image of God, and one which therefore should be carefully cultivated. It is this element of character in man which makes fellowship and communion with God possible. If the goodness of God could awaken in us no sense of grateful appreciation, if we were wholly dead to such sentiments, there could be no pleasure on God's part in manifesting his goodness to us, and there would be nothing in us to call out his love or to inspire love in us. But since it is for the divine pleasure that we are and were created, God has endowed his intelligent creatures with this element of character which, being responsive to his own goodness, institutes a lively and delightful fellowship with himself; and this fellowship is the chief end of existence, both on the side of the creature and on that of the Creator.—Revelation 4:11.

Viewed from this standpoint, thankfulness of heart is a very sure sign of the character which God is seeking, especially in matters pertaining to our great salvation. Yet amongst all those who have been justified by faith—cleansed from their iniquities and covered with the robe of Christ's righteousness—how few, comparatively, there are who carry out in full their consecration of themselves to God—their reasonable service. Only the truly thankful are constrained to do so—only the truly appreciative. Let us each and all seek to cultivate more and more the spirit of thankfulness, the "reasonable" spirit or disposition. Thankfulness will make every trial and sacrifice on our part seem small and proportionately easy to be offered; and it will make all of God's mercies and favors toward us proportionately grand, great and inspiring.

Today's study expresses the heart sentiment of every truly consecrated child of God. The more we come into possession of the spiritual blessings which the Lord has promised us, and which we have accepted by faith, the more need shall we have of humility; and our humility will be proportionate to our appreciation of divine goodness and our thankfulness therefor. The grateful, thankful heart may go on from grace to grace, from strength to strength, from knowledge to knowledge, from attainment to attainment; but if gratitude begins to wane and if our advantages are accepted either as matters of our own attainment or of good luck, in that same proportion we shall find ourselves growing cold spiritually. Moreover, with unthankfulness will come unholiness, spiritual pride and self-conceit; and all of this will lead to spiritual dearth and, if persisted in, to spiritual death.

PRICE DEPOSITED WITH DIVINE JUSTICE

Ever since Jesus died, the ransom-price has been in the hands of divine Justice—in the Father's hands, where our Lord placed it at the time of his death. But it is there only as a deposit; for the time has not yet come for it to be paid over officially for Adam and his posterity. If the divine plan had been for Jesus to take possession of the world and to set up his kingdom at Pentecost, then it wouuld have been proper for him to pay over to the Father the ransom-price fully and completely—appropriating it as the offset to father Adam's sin and sentence on behalf of all his race. If that Price had been formally paid over, the proper and logical thing would have been for the Father to put the whole world immediately into the hands of our Lord Jesus, and for the Millennial age to begin.

God did not wish, however, to turn the kingdom over to our Lord until the great seventh day, the Millennium; for he had another feature of his plan to be worked out first. He purposed that during the intervening more than eighteen centuries a church class should be called out from amongst mankind, to be the bride and joint-heir of his Son in the kingdom. Hence the ransom-price for the sins of the whole world was merely left unappropriated, while he dealt with the church. And since the Father's plan for the church was that they should sacrifice or surrender their earthly interests and receive instead heavenly interests and the divine nature, therefore it was not necessary to give the church restitution—the thing which the ransom-price will secure for the world of mankind. Hence, instead of giving the church a share in the ransom blessings, which would mean restitution, the divine provision for them is different: namely, an imputation of merit covering their blemishes, so that they might present their bodies a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable to God.

All, therefore, that our Lord Jesus has done with the ransom-price is to impute the value arising therefrom to cover the shortcomings of those who desire to become his disciples and joint-heirs. The benefit to them is the same as though they had full restitution, for they are fully justified from all sin, and are thus permitted to be accepted of the Father as members of the house of sons, by the begetting of the holy Spirit. Shortly the church shall be completed, and later presented before the Father blameless and unreprovable, without any of our present mental, moral and physical diseases and weaknesses, and in the full possession of the new life and the new resurrection bodies.

BEREAN STUDIES IN VOLUME VII, STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES

[As these questions are to be had in book form we do not reproduce them here.]

IF THEY ONLY KNEW

Jerusalem, Jerusalem, hadst thou but known
Thy day of visitation, hadst thou recognized
Messiah in thy midst, would not thy Pharisees,
With scoffing priests and populace, have vied to do
Him homage! Dost thou think the Master e'er had been Footsore and weary! Would there not have stood by day,
By night, full threescore chariots ready at his call!
Ah, me! If they had only known, dost think the feast
At Simon's house had been the only one thus spread;
Or would He e'er have need to say, "The birds have nests,
The foxes of the earth have holes, but I, the Son
Of Man, no place to lay my head!" Jerusalem,
Would not thy palace gates have opened wide to him,
The Alpha and Omega, Prophet, Priest and King!
Ah me! Had they but known, in all the centuries since,
The chosen few who bravely followed in his steps,
Dost think earth's great ones would have left them lonely, poor,
Despised? Would they have driven proudly by in state,
The while "his feet" pressed wearily the wayside dust?
All ye who often long, like Mary, to have poured
The precious ointment on his head, remember this:
His words are true today as then, that, "Inasmuch
As ye have done it unto one of these, the least Of mine, it hath been done to me!" Ah, yes! and e'en
A cup of water shall not fail of its reward,
Because 'twas given in the name of Christ, the Lord.
Then, let us ever seek to find and humbly serve
His "little ones"; for thus we do it unto him."

THE PRICE OF EXALTATION

"Be clothed with humility; for God resisteth the proud and giveth grace to the humble. Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time."—1 Peter 5:5, 6.

Who would dare, without divine authorization, to entertain a hope of membership in the royal family of heaven! Yet not only is this hope held out to some, but such is the positive promise of Jehovah to those who, having been called to that high position and begotten of the holy Spirit of God, meet the requirements, continuing faithful unto death. The nearer we come to the time of exaltation, the greater is the thrill in contemplating the marvelous change.

The Gospel age is closing with the greatest events of all time. The grave import of this hour will never be fully realized and appreciated until it is passed; indeed, it cannot be. For nearly nineteen hundred years the school of Christ has been in operation; and during this time God has been inviting some to enter this school, with the promise of full graduation and exaltation to those who truly learn the lessons that are therein taught. In times past some faithful ones have made progress in this school, have finished their course, have been approved, graduated, and set aside to await the coming of the great King. Now He has come, and the kingdom is being inaugurated. Many have already been exalted, while others are patiently waiting the day of their glorification. The latter must shortly finish their course. The time of the exaltation of the last members of the body of Christ is drawing nigh; hence the importance of the words of St. Peter in our text. All truly consecrated desire exaltation; therefore the importance of learning well the rules that pertain to the heavenly way.

THE MAJESTY OF JEHOVAH GOD

True humility is that condition of mind or heart which causes one to have a proper appreciation of his own worth and the worth of others, and to realize the value to himself of the robe of Christ's righteousness. It is that condition of mind which impels one always to keep the Lord in view and himself out of sight. All who have the robe of Christ's righteousness received it only after a full consecration to give up self-will and to do the will of God. To continue in such position of favor, one must continue to be submissive to the will of the heavenly Father.

False humility is that condition of mind or heart which causes one to make an outward show of humility to the world, whereas in reality there is pride in his heart. Some deceive themselves in this very respect.

The hand is a symbol of power. In this text, the "Hand of God" symbolizes the mighty power of God, lovingly exercised in behalf of his children.

But why should any one humble himself? Is not every intelligent creature endowed with free moral agency, with the privilege of doing according to his own will? Even so! Is not the creature's will his chief asset? To this we also agree. Why, then, should we be asked to humble ourselves under the mighty hand of God? Who is God that we should surrender our wills to him? The correct answer to this question shows why it is for the best interests of each one to submit his will to the will of God, and walk humbly before him.

The Scriptures answer that God is the great "First Cause" of all things, the "Eternal One," the "Immortal One." "Justice and Judgment are the habitation of his throne." (Psalm 89:14) He changes not; for he is "the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." (James 1:17) He never fails in any of his good promises. All of his promises are good. All of his works are perfect.

His wisdom is perfect. He made the planets, the moon, the sun, the stars, and has so nicely balanced each one of these myriads of heavenly bodies that they move through space without noise or hindrance. Of him the Prophet declares that he "measures the waters of the deep in his hand and metes out the heavens with the span; he comprehends the dust of the earth in a measure, and weighs the mountains in scales, and the hills in a balance; he takes counsel with no one, and no one instructs him or shows him what is understanding." (Isaiah 40:12-14) When King David caught a slight glimpse of the creation of God, in worshipful adoration he exclaimed, "O Lord, how manifold are thy works; in wisdom hast thou made them all; the earth is full of thy riches!" (Psalm 104:24) Jehovah God is so wise that he never makes a mistake. He cannot err. His will is always right and perfect.

The power of Jehovah is without limitation. We behold a mighty ship tossed by the raging waves of the sea, as though it were a little shell; and we marvel at the power exhibited. Then we are reminded that it was God who made the seas and shut the doors thereof, until in his own due time he was pleased to have the waters break forth from the heavens. "Thou rulest the raging of the sea; when the waves thereof arise, Thou stillest them. . . . Thou hast a mighty arm; strong is thy hand, and high is thy right hand." (Psalm 89:9, 13) "Behold, the nations are as a drop of a bucket, and are counted as the small dust of the balance: behold, he taketh up the isles as a very little thing. . . . All nations before him are as nothing: and they are counted to him less than nothing, and vanity."—Isaiah 40:15, 17.

In the exercise of his power, according to his own good pleasure and in his own due time, God created the earth as a place for the habitation of his intelligent human creature, man. The angelic hosts of heaven watched the progressive acts of the great Creator; and when he laid the foundations of the earth, a thrill of ecstasy pervaded heaven, the morning stars sang together and all the sons of God (angels, cherubim and seraphim) shouted for joy.—Job 38:4-7.

Love finds a perfect expression in Jehovah! God is love. His loving kindness goes out to all his creatures. Love is an unselfish desire to do good to others. The greatest expression of love is the putting of this desire in operation at great cost or sacrifice, for the benefit of others. The holy angels have experienced God's loving kindness. At great cost he manifested his love to man. He sacrificed the dearest treasure of his heart in providing for mankind redemption and an opportunity for everlasting life with abundant blessings to those who gladly humble themselves under his mighty hand.

Too wise to err, too good to be unkind, his power always put to a righteous use, his promises sure, without possibility of deviation therefrom, his will could be exercised only for the good of all his creatures. Why, then, should any intelligent creature in heaven or in earth have any hesitancy in humbling himself under the mighty hand of God?

The answer to this question discloses two opposing forces which have always existed; namely, good and evil. Good has always been active, while evil became active only after the creation of man. The course of evil leads to debasement, degradation and death; while the course of good leads to life everlasting, exaltation and pleasures forevermore. Such are the fixed laws of Jehovah. All of God's intelligent creatures have been, or will be, given an opportunity to appreciate the outworkings of those laws.

CONTENDING FORCES OPERATING IN THE EARTH

Behold a great drama opens with the earth as the stage of action! All the intelligent creatures of heaven and earth, either as players or as observers, are being offered an opportunity to learn the lessons inculcated. The first act is staged in Eden, the garden of God, the home of a perfect man and woman, the happy, joyful pair.—Enter Lucifer.

The Prophet Ezekiel tells us that Lucifer was a beautiful creature; that every good fruit of character was his adornment; that he held a high position amongst God's holy angels, and that he was appointed as the care-taker of the innocent pair in Eden. He was highly honored, but not the most highly honored.—Ezekiel 28:12-15.

When Lucifer beheld Adam and Eve, he marked that they had the power of propagating their kind—a thing unknown to the angels of heaven. Pride and ambition soon began to operate. He lost confidence in God. He meditated in his heart that if he could capture these perfect creatures, who had the power to multiply their own species, in the course of time the earth would be inhabitated by a perfect race of people, and he could have a kingdom of his own, with all mankind under his control. He had not been sent to earth to carry out his own ambitions, but to do God's will. But he was not willing to humble himself under the mighty hand of God and tender faithful service in the place where he had been put. On the contrary, he said in his heart, "I will ascend into heaven; I will exalt my throne above the stars [spiritual hosts of God]; I will sit upon the mount of the congregation [have a kingdom of my own], in the sides of the north [next unto Jehovah]; I will ascend above the heights of the clouds; I will be like the Most High."—Isaiah 14:13, 14.

To accomplish his purpose he resorted to fraud and deceit. He destroyed Eve's confidence in God by telling her that she had certain rights; that she should stand for principle, and not permit God to deprive her of such rights; that God knew that the very day when she would eat of the fruit she would become as wise as himself; and that to prevent her from coming into her own rights God was deceiving her. Eve was deceived by Lucifer, and Adam afterwards joined in the transgression.

Satan's ambitious desire for exaltation resulted in his own downfall, and brought the curse of God upon man, entailing great sorrow, suffering and death upon humanity. Lucifer then became the wicked creature since known as "that old serpent, Satan, the devil," who God has decreed shall suffer everlasting destruction.—Ezek. 28:18; Hebrews 2:14.

ANGELS OF HEAVEN DEBASED

The angelic hosts of heaven had watched the development of the great drama, and beheld the suffering, sorrow and death that came to the earth. Later, by Jehovah's permission, some of them took upon themselves the forms of men, with the avowed purpose of uplifting mankind. But they soon forgot to be obedient to Jehovah, failing to humble themselves under his mighty hand. They pursued a course contrary to his will, by taking unto themselves wives from amongst the human race and debauching the human family until the earth was filled with violence. The course of these materialized angels became wicked in the superlative degree; and so vile were the off-spring of this unholy union that God declared his purpose of destroying all flesh from the earth.—Genesis 6:1-8.

Noah, however, found favor in God's sight, humbling himself under Jehovah's mighty hand; and Noah's family joined him in the course of righteousness. God instructed Noah to prepare for the coming deluge which would destroy everything on the earth. He attempted to proclaim to the people the coming end of the then existing order. They heeded him not. The great deluge fell upon the earth, and all fleshly creatures were destroyed, except those saved with Noah in the ark. The angels who had materialized in human form had also the power of dematerialization, and therefore were not destroyed. Instead, they were incarcerated in darkness, restrained from further mingling with the human-kind, cast down into earth's atmosphere, there to await their great day of judgment. (2 Peter 2:4; Jude 6) They had chosen the course of pride and self-will, and the result was their degradation and loss of favor with God.

THE LOGOS

After the Flood, Satan continued his opposition to God. To further his ambitious desire, he blinded the minds of the human race by deceiving them and leading them to believe that God is a great fiend, who would cause them to be tortured throughout the endless ages. He taught mankind that they had immortal souls which can never die, and cited himself as an example. The whole human race fell under his control, only a few exceptions here and there who, breaking away from him, exercised faith in God. Satan gradually became the chief or head over all the hosts of demons, and continued his deceptive and nefarious work amongst the human family.

The first and only-begotten creation of Jehovah was the Logos. After his creation he became the active agent of God in the creation of all things, Lucifer and all the holy angels of heaven included. (Revelation 3:14; Col. 1:15; John 1:1-3) All his works of creation were perfect. Observing the progress of the great drama, the Logos witnessed the result of the ambitious course of Lucifer and noted how it had dragged down from heaven many of the holy angels and had transformed the pure, beautiful human pair, Adam and Eve, into suffering, imperfect, dying creatures. He marked how this wrongful course had plunged the entire human-kind into the depths of sorrow, sin and death.

For four thousand years the Logos beheld this course working injury to mankind. But he was willing to abide Jehovah's own good time to take some step to undo the great wrong that Satan had done. The Logos was always in harmony with the Father's will. It was the will of God that mankind should be redeemed from sin and death, and that everyone be given a full, fair trial for life. Furthermore, before the foundation of the world was laid God had willed that there should be a new creation, which should possess the divine nature as a great reward for faithfulness; and that it should consist of one Head, or Mighty One, and 144,000 associates. The One who would accomplish this purpose of Jehovah must be entirely submissive to his will, must humble himself under the mighty hand of God. The Logos, being advised by Jehovah of his purposes, undertook to carry out God's great plan.

Although occupying a position of great honor and glory with the Father in heaven, and possessing the riches of the spiritual realm, as an honored representative of Jehovah, the Logos left the heavenly courts, and was changed from spirit to human nature. His humility and full obedience are shown by the course he took: "Who though being in God's form, yet did not mediate a usurpation to be like God, but divested himself [of heavenly glory and power], took a bondsman's form, having been made in the likeness of man." (Philippians 2:6, 7 —Diaglott) How unlike the course of Lucifer! The contrast could not be more striking. "We see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels, for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor, that he, by the grace of God, should taste death for every man"—Jesus, who being in condition as a man, humbled himself, becoming "obedient unto death, even the death of the cross."—Hebrews 2:9; Philippians 2:8—Diaglott.

OUR LORD'S GLORIOUS EXAMPLE

As a man our Lord was perfect in every respect, at the age of thirty years. He possessed a perfect human will, which he might have exercised to his own glory and honor. He had the power to produce a perfect race of people, filling the earth and ultimately receiving from them all the honor, plaudits, homage and glory that a perfect race could bestow upon a perfect man. He might have accomplished the very thing that Lucifer ambitiously desired. But it was the will of God concerning Jesus that he should die upon the cross, being made a sin-offering in behalf of man, to the intent that man might be restored to life if he would render himself in full obedience to God's will. We hear Jesus saying, "Lo, I come, as in the volume of the Book written of me, to do thy will, O my God." (Hebrews 10:7) "For I came down from heaven not to do Mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." (John 6:38) "I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent me."—John 5:30.

Jesus deviated not one jot or tittle from the will of his Father. For three and one-half years he was subjected to all kinds of indignities. He was denounced as the chief of devils, as a drunkard, as a liar, as a blasphemer—all of which he bore patiently in obedience to the Father's will. Thus the mighty hand of God pressed down upon him in order that he might be made a sympathetic high priest and be perfected for the further carrying forth of his Father's plan. "He was oppressed and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth; he was brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he opened not his mouth."—Isaiah 53:7; Acts 8:32-35.

Betrayed by one whom he had especially blessed, he was taken before the constituted authorities, wrongfully accused of crime, illegally put through a trial which was a farce, subjected to every manner of insult, condemned without a cause and cruelly crucified upon the cross—the most ignominious death recognized by Jehovah and known to man. Yet he patiently submitted to it, because it was the Father's will. "Wherefore, God also hath highly exalted him and given him a name which is above every name, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven and things in earth." —Phil. 2:10.

Why hath Jehovah drawn such a sharp contrast between the two creatures—Lucifer and Jesus? For the evident purpose of teaching to all of his intelligent creatures his fixed and unchangeable law that "whosoever shall exalt himself shall be abased, and whosoever shall humble himself shall be exalted." (Matthew 23:12) Thus Jesus magnified the divine law, and proved that Jehovah is true. Thus he demonstrates to everyone the great value resulting to those who learn to humble themselves under God's mighty hand.

NEW CREATION TESTED BY THE SAME RULE

Before the foundation of the world God ordained that Christ Jesus should have associated with him 144,000 joint-heirs as his bride, all composing the "new creation." Each member of the new creation will be like the Lord, its Head. This side the veil such are called to be footstep followers, to suffer as he suffered and to be tested as he was tested. (1 Peter 2:21; Romans 8:29; Hebrews 2:18) The great Master said, "Whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother."—Matt. 12:50.

One who is called to be the brother and joint-heir of Jesus is greatly honored. Now he is put on trial and must be judged according to the fixed rule of God. God's rules change not. If one is proud in heart, the Lord will bring him low. If he properly appreciates the honor granted to him and honestly desires to humble himself, and does humble himself under the mighty hand of God, the position of honor which he has received from the Lord really upholds him. "A man's pride shall bring him low, but honor shall uphold the humble in spirit." (Proverbs 29:23) A striking example of this is shown in the seventh messenger to the church. He was greatly honored of the Lord and his full appreciation of this honor made him more humble; and this humility of mind and spirit upheld him and made him strong.

Many ask, Why has not God destroyed the devil long ago? The fact that he permits Satan to live and pursue his nefarious work is proof that God has some good and sufficient reason for so doing. Jehovah desires his intelligent creatures to learn the lesson that pride and ambition lead to suffering, sorrow and death, and that humility of mind and obedience to the Lord lead to life and exaltation. The church, following in the footsteps of Christ Jesus, the Head, must be subjected to this great test in order to prove her loyalty and to demonstrate that Jehovah can trust her in the ages to come. To none other could he give the divine nature.

Early in the drama, Jehovah announced that the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head. (Gen. 3:15) From then until now Satan has sought to destroy the seed, beginning with the murder of Abel. Since Satan is the prince of devils, it follows that all the evil spirits are likewise bent on destroying the seed, if possible. Revelation 7:1, 2 describes these evil ones as the "four winds of the earth," which the Lord Jesus declared should not blow until his saints are sealed in their foreheads. It follows, then, that as soon as the sealing work is completed—that is to say, when all those of the saintly class remaining on this side the veil shall have been given an intellectual understanding and appreciation of the plan of God—then the evil spirits will get loose. The Scriptures show that they must have their judgment day; and they could not be fully judged until they are loosed.

> "The storm is held in check until the faithful servants of God are sealed in their foreheads; that is, until such are given an intellectual appreciation of the time, presence, etc., which will not only comfort them and shield them, but also be a mark, seal, or evidence of their sonship, as indicated by our Lord when he promised that the holy Spirit should show them things to come."—SCRIPTURE STUDIES, Volume 2, Page 169.

A CRUCIAL TEST AT HAND

That there will then be a great conflict between the members of the new creation this side the veil and the fallen angels, there can be little doubt. To know the will of God and to be submissive thereto is an absolutely certain protection; hence the importance of seeing what the test will involve. Where will be the battleground? Surely not in the hands, or feet, or ears! The Scriptures answer that the battleground is in the mind. "Let this mind be in you which was in Christ Jesus." (Philippians 2:5) The mind of Jesus was to be fully submissive to the Father's will, humbling himself under God's mighty hand. "Be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind." (Romans 12:2) Thus the new creature is developed.

Impressing upon the new creation the importance of the prize and what to do to win it, St. Paul admonishes all, saying, "Forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, press forward along the mark for the prize." (Philippians 3:13, 14) Surely the forgetting is with the mind, and likewise the contemplation of the glories before. Lucifer's sin was not what he did with his hands, but in the meditations of his heart. Undoubtedly the mind is the battleground. An open battleground is one where all obstructions are removed, that the contending forces may have free access. All along there have been obstructions which have prevented the evil spirits from attacking the new creation; but it must be apparent that when they are loosed they will have more power than ever before.

It was the servant of the Laodicean church who wrote:—

"The letting loose of these winds, or air powers, would seem to show that God would let go his hand of restraint, that he will have to do with the permission of the terrible trouble that will come. This outside influence will exercise a baneful effect upon men, when finally granted the liberty. These fallen spirits have been under restraint for these many centuries, but they have exercised their influence to whatever extent they have had permission. If they had possessed unlimited power they would have wrecked the world long ago; but they have been restrained. Apparently God will soon cease to restrain the fallen angels; and they will then proceed to vent their fury upon humanity, so that the whole earth will be full of violence, the same as in the days of Noah. The power manifested by the demons when loosed, will, we believe, be with a view to the injury of mankind. We do not know but that many of our readers will have a share in that injury. We have every reason to suppose that if these fallen angels shall get loose, they will vent their first anger upon the Lord's people. We are not to fear this, however, but to take whatever the Lord's providence permits to come, knowing that everything shall work for our good."—Z '14-166.

PRIDE REMOVES ALL PROTECTION

Pride is an inordinate self-sufficiency or self-esteem, causing one to feel his own greatness and importance, and to lose sight of the greatness of Jehovah and of the Lord Jesus. The humble-minded one looks at himself soberly and realizes that whatever position he has the Lord placed him there; for "God hath set the members every one of them in the body as it pleaseth him." (1 Cor. 12:18) He realizes that within himself there is no perfect thing; that God does not need him; and that the Lord Jesus would not continue to use him unless he walks humbly and looks unto Jesus, and not unto himself.

While it is true that the fallen angels will have greater freedom to attack the new creature as we come nearer the end of the way, yet those who humbly obey the Lord will be granted a sufficient armor of protection that as valiant soldiers of the cross they may fight a victorious battle against their enemies. (Ephesians 6:10-18; Psalm 91:1-7) But suppose one who has been long in the narrow way becomes proud of mind and heart. Could he hope for such continued protection? The Apostle answers, "God resisteth the proud [pushes them away from him], and shows his favor to the humble." Thus we see that when one takes his mind off from the Lord, fills it with criticism and fault-finding of others, magnifies his own greatness and importance, and fails to humble himself under the mighty hand of God, he deprives himself of the protection the Lord has provided for his faithful ones. It was pride that caused Lucifer to fall. It was pride, or lack of humility, that caused the angels to fall. It is pride, or lack of humility, that causes others to fall. Plainly is God's will expressed concerning pride and ambition thus:—"but he giveth more grace. Wherefore he saith, God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace unto the humble." "The fear of the Lord is to hate evil; pride, and arrogancy, and the evil way, and the forward mouth do I hate." "Pride goeth before destruction and an haughty spirit before a fall."—James 4:6; Proverbs 8:13; 16:18.

DANGER TO THE NEW CREATION

Commenting upon the enemies of the new creation, Brother Russell wrote (Z '05-215): "God's people should beware of pride as they would avoid the most deadly plague. This rule, always good and well backed by Scripture, seems doubly needful to those who are blessed with the light of present truth. This may seem strange. It may be reasoned that the receiving of so much grander views of God's character and plan would make his people feel the more insignificant and humble, the more dependent upon divine guidance, the more trustful of God and the less trustful of themselves. And this should be the effect always and ever; but, alas, with very many this is not so. Many get to feel that the knowledge of the plan of the ages proves them especially wise or great or good. They seem to forget that God hides the truth from the wise and great, that no flesh should glory in his sight. . . . Beware of all such people! Sooner or later, unless they reform, they will fly the track entirely and injure more than they ever helped. God does not wish such people to serve his cause, and will surely permit their vanity to stumble them—however much their natural ability; and it is generally the people of real or fancied ability who are thus afflicted with the spirit of pride or vanity. 'God opposeth the proud, but showeth his favor to the humble.'"

Seeing, then, danger lurking in the pathway, and knowing that the enemy is on the alert to trip us up, what shall we do if we find that we are thinking too highly of self, if we have some ambition or pride in our heart, if we are not walking humbly before the Lord? The Apostle answers the question, "Humble yourselves under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time." St. James states the same thing, saying, "Submit yourselves, therefore, to God. Resist the devil, and he will flee from you. Draw nigh to God and he will draw nigh unto you." (James 4:7, 8) Everyone in the narrow way needs the strength of the Lord manifested in his behalf. The proud or haughty or self-willed cannot hope for this favor; "For the eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the earth to show himself strong in behalf of them whose heart is perfect toward him."—2 Chron. 16:9.

HOW WE ASCERTAIN GOD'S WILL

There are two general ways or modes by which the Lord's will toward us may be ascertained: (a) By his Word. (b) By his manner of dealing with us. To humble one's self under God's mighty hand means to know his will and to do it. God has expressed in his Word his will toward his children, saying, "Study to show thyself approved unto God." (2 Timothy 2:15) This means to study his Word and study his providences toward us, or his manner of dealing with us. Our Head set us the example. Immediately after his consecration, Jesus went into the wilderness and there remained forty days, studying the plan of Jehovah, in order to know the divine will. We should spend much time in study and in meditation upon the precious promises of the Lord, that we may know his will We need not expect to find in the Bible specific statements of everything we must do. God does not tell us just how much to eat and when to eat it, or what kind of clothing to wear; but he does lay down in his Word fixed rules or laws by which his creatures must be governed in order to receive the reward of exaltation which is in store for those that love him.

THE DUTY OF THE HOUR

Those who have diligently sought to know the will of the Lord may see that now we are in the close of the harvest period. Probably only a few more months remain in which to prove our loving loyalty to the Lord. Thus the time is fully ripe for all the truly consecrated to declare the day of God's vengeance upon the unrighteous systems of the world, in harmony with his expressed will. (Isaiah 61:1-3) To humble ourselves now would mean to be obedient to his commands, doing not in our strength, but in the strength of the Lord, what our hands find to do, realizing we are in the last hours of the harvest of the Gospel age.

Clearly, then, the command from our Captain comes to us, "Thrust in the sharp sickle and gather the clusters of the vine of the earth; for her grapes are fully ripe." (Rev. 14:18) If we believe that this is a command from the Lord, then we must believe that this is the Lord's will; and to humble ourselves under his mighty hand would mean that we would be obedient to his will to the extent of our opportunity and ability. Since the beginning of the harvest the Lord has been pleased to place the instrument for reaping in the hands of his people through his wise and faithful servant. He has finished his course as the Lord's servant this side the veil; and now the Lord promises to turn his hand upon the "little ones." (Zech. 13:7) God is faithful to all of his good promises.

The sickle of the harvest is the message of truth. It is also called the sword. It is our opinion that the Seventh Volume of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES contains the message which is the instrument now to be used with which to reap the vine of the earth.

SOME REASONS WHY

Some, as we learn, are having difficulty in determining whether or not "The Finished Mystery" is the Seventh Volume of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES. Probably they have been disturbed in their minds by the argument of some who have been developing pride and ambition. With sobriety of mind and a prayerful attitude, let us consider some of the reasons why we have the Seventh Volume.

Revelation 16:1-17 has been understood by the consecrated for some time as indicating that there would be seven volumes of SCRIPTURE STUDIES. Pastor Russell, as the seventh messenger, many times stated that there would be a seventh volume prepared and delivered to the harvest workers; that he would prepare it himself if the Lord showed him the key; but that if the Lord did not show him the key someone else would prepare it. He stated that the Seventh Volume would contain an explanation of the books of Ezekiel and Revelation.

The WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY is that agency referred to in the words: "Another angel came out from the altar, which had power over fire." (Rev. 14:18) The altar is the place of sacrifice. The SOCIETY is maintained by the sacrifice of the Lord's saints. It has power (authority) over the publication and distribution of the prophecies that are destructive to Babylon.

John the Baptist rebuked King Herod because of his unlawful relationship with a woman. (Matt. 14:1-12) The seventh messenger to the church pointed out that Herod was a type of the civil powers; that Herodias, the woman, was a type of the ecclesiastical systems composing Babylon; that John the Baptist typed the last members of the church this side the veil; and that the John class would deliver a message which would rebuke the unholy relationship existing between church and state. This message must be delivered before the church finishes its course in the flesh. In Revelation and Ezekiel Mystical Babylon, as typed by the woman, is clearly pointed out. The explanation of these two books as contained in the Seventh Volume is the message that will rebuke Babylon. If it is not, then one must yet be written; and it cannot be written without quotation from what Pastor Russell has written on these two books, which is already set forth in the Seventh Volume.

Some have said, If the Seventh Volume contains the message representing the "penny", then why should it go to the world at all? The Prophet of the Lord, Jeremiah, "wrote in a book of the evil that should come upon Babylon, even all these words that are written against Babylon. And it shall be when thou hast made an end of reading this book that thou shalt bind a stone to it and cast it in the midst of the Euphrates [amongst the peoples]." (Jeremiah 51:60-63) Surely the Seventh Volume contains an explanation of the evils which Babylon has practiced, and shows God's condemnation of her and how she shall fall! In the type the Euphrates River was turned away from ancient Babylon, and the city fell. Is it not reasonable to conclude that when the people receive the message of truth concerning Mystic Babylon they will turn away from her, and she will fall?

THOUGHTS FOR CAREFUL MEDITATION

The Seventh Volume was prepared and published by and under the direction of the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY, the messenger having power to send out truths destructive to Babylon. (G 6; Rev. 14:18) Pastor Russell is the real author, and the compilers give all the credit to him and to the great Lord of the harvest. From what he had written the compilers were enabled to understand the prophecies of Ezekiel and Revelation.

It came to the church for her encouragement at a time of great need, as Pastor Russell had promised it should come.

It names the seven messengers to the seven respective epochs of the church, giving the proof as to the correctness thereof.

It proves that the key to the Seventh Volume is the Seventh Messenger to the church, and that for that reason he did not publish it. For the same reason Moses did not write his own eulogy.—Deut. 34:10-12.

It names the beginning and ending of each epoch of church history, with the proof in support of same.

It identifies the ancient jasper, and shows its perfect adaptation to the description of the heavenly Father. It shows how the sard represents the beauties of his character.—G-74.

It identifies clearly the twenty-four elders.—G-76.

It identifies the four beasts.—G-78-79.

It shows clearly why the breaking of the seals makes prophecy easy to be understood, and identifies the strong angel inquiring who was worthy to do so.—G-97-98.

It identifies the white horse, his rider and his weapon, and shows where he got his crown. It identifies the red horse, his rider, and his butcher-knife.—G-106, 107.

The souls under the altar are identified, and the time of their waiting is proven to be correct.—G-117.

It explains and amplifies the work of the four angels holding the winds of the earth and the effect their blowing will have.—G-123-126.

The great symbolic earthquake cannot occur until the Seventh Volume of SCRIPTURE STUDIES is published. All signs indicate that this earthquake is near. The Seventh Volume has been published.

It shows that the Prophet Ezekiel was the prototype of the seventh messenger, and that the experiences of Ezekiel have been marvelously parallelled and fulfilled in the experiences of Pastor Russell. Ezekiel's prophecy, heretofore a sealed book, is now made clear in the closing hours of the harvest. It confirms the Lord's promise of the "faithful and wise servant," and identifies him.

It proves that Pastor Russell's seven volumes of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES were foreknown and foretold as the "thrice-doubled sword and its point," and shows how it should be sent forth.—Ezekiel 21; Rev. 8.

It shows that the clergy themselves have sown the seed of anarchy, and clearly outlines the reason why ecclesiasticism must perish.—G-519, 520.

It contains the message that will set the ecclesiastical heavens on fire.

The above are only a few reasons why "The Finished Mystery" is the long-looked-for Seventh Volume. If we believe that it contains the message which is the "point of the sword," and that we are nearing the end of the harvest, then surely it is the Lord's will concerning his people that they should use it by giving it a wide circulation. Two editions are practically exhausted, and the third one hundred thousand is on the press.

WHAT SHALL WE DO?

Some are saying, "I sincerely desire to know the Lord's will; but how may I know it?" "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart, and lean not to thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy path!"—Proverbs 3:5, 6.

Repeatedly the Lord promises to guide us with his counsel, and afterwards to receive us into glory. (Psalm 73:23, 24; 32:8) We must not only trust him in our hearts, but acknowledge him and confess him before others. We must have full confidence that since we are his, he has the deepest interest in our welfare. Such as are careful to ackowledge him may be sure that he will direct their paths in all things. He will not direct the path of any to the satisfying of their own selfish desires or wills, however; nor do we wish him thus to do. But he will direct according to his perfect wisdom and for the good of those who love him supremely.

"Could it be the Lord's will that I should colporteur the Seventh Volume?" someone asks. We answer, "If the message it contains is from the Lord, there could be no doubt about what his children should do. Of course they would want to put it out, and get the message to others." "But," says another, "I have declined to accept it as the Seventh Volume. Now if I would take a different course, I would be putting myself in a false light." We answer, "Is it not pride that causes one to take this position? Put aside pride now, and humble yourself under the mighty hand of the Lord. If you have taken the wrong course about anything for a time, and the Lord discloses to you that wrongful course, such a disclosure is a reproof to you; and he says, 'Turn you at my reproof; behold, I will pour out my Spirit upon you and I will make known my ways unto you.'"—Proverbs 1:23.

FULL OBEDIENCE OF VITAL IMPORTANCE

The greatest work for us all to do is the conquering of self. "This is the will of God concerning you, even your sanctification." (1 Thessalonians 4:3) Sanctification does not mean human perfection. It does not mean the changing of our appearance, nor the removing of blemishes from our bodies miraculously. On the contrary, it is a devotion or consecration of the will, which through Christ is accepted as perfect. It is the consecration of the body unto death, which is counted acceptable through Christ. This will must bring every power and talent into harmony with Christ, and seek to exercise an influence in harmony therewith over others.

Loyalty of heart to God's will, and hence a submission to his will, means a continued effort to bring all the conduct of our lives, even our thoughts and intentions, into subjection, or full submission to the will of God. Absolute holiness must be the standard maintained in our mind; and we must strive to live up to it. True submission or obedience to his will would mean for us that we would carefully consider the life and course of our High Priest, Jesus; that we would be diligent in his service and diligent in telling the truth to others, diligent in building each other up in the most holy faith and in doing good unto all as we have opportunity and diligent in laying down our lives for the brethren, and particularly in perfecting ourselves in the love of God.

THE TESTS FOR THE CHURCH ARE GREATER THAN FOR THE ANGELS

The angels were put to a great test, and many of them failed. The church is being put to a far greater test; for God purposes to give the members thereof a greater reward. Such test of necessity entails much suffering. Important, then, is the question, How are we receiving these trials or tests? If we permit the fiery trials to stir up in our hearts malice, hatred, envy, ill-will, fault-finding, criticism and strife, this means that we are not humbling ourselves under the mighty hand of God and learning the lessons as he would have us do. (Proverbs 28:25) On the contrary, if these fiery trials are burning away the dross and working out in us the sweetness of character like unto our Master—namely, gentleness, kindness, patience, long-suffering, tender-heartedness and love—this shows that we are humbling ourselves under the mighty hand of God and profiting by it. Let each remember that since we are sons of God nothing can happen to us except by his permission, and that these trials are evidences of our sonship. (Hebrews 12:5, 8) Willingness to suffer special trials because of our loyalty to God, to the cause of righteousness and to the principles of his government is evidence of exceptionally fine character. God is dealing with the new creation with a view to perfecting their characters to the very highest mark.

If some of his children find themselves imprisoned or otherwise deprived of their liberty because of loyalty to him and his kingdom, let them rejoice, remembering the faithful men of old mentioned with honor by St. Paul. (Hebrews 11) God's mighty hand may press down hard upon us at times; and if so, we may be sure that we have need of this very experience. We may know that it is permitted that we may be prepared and made fit for the Master's use. We should watch for his providences and joyfully submit to whatsoever he sees well to bring to us. For us the prophet wrote, "Behold, as the eyes of servants look unto the hand of their master, and as the eyes of a maiden unto the hand of her mistress, so our eyes wait upon the Lord, our God, until that he have mercy upon us." (Psalm 123:2) And thus we are to watch his mighty hand, that we might see what is his will concerning us.

It is to be noted that Jesus voluntarily submitted himself to the will of God, saying, "The cup that my Father hath poured for me, shall I not drink it?" (John 18:11) Likewise his followers should say: "If these trying experiences are necessary for me in order that I may be exalted to the position of joint-heir with Christ Jesus, then with joy I receive them."

EXALTATION IN DUE TIME

The exaltation of each one of the Lord's "little ones" will take place in his due time. It will be impossible for any one to be exalted prior to God's due time, or in any manner except that which the Father provides. Through his prophet he said, "Lift not up your horn [power] on high; speak not with a stiff neck; for promotion cometh neither from the East nor from the West nor from the South: but God is the judge; he putteth down one and setteth up another." (Psalm 75:5-7) It is quite clear that the prophet here refers, not to those who have passed beyond the veil, but to those of the church who are still on the earth. We would not expect any one to have a stiff neck—a stubborn, wilful disposition—after he had been exalted to glory. Clearly, then, this admonition was given for the benefit of those who hope for exaltation because of the precious promises given by the Father. When James and John asked the Master for a position of honor in his kingdom he said to them, "To sit on my right hand and on my left hand is not mine to give; but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared." (Mark 10:40) Clearly, then, exaltation comes only to those who willingly humble themselves under the mighty hand of God, that they may be shaped and prepared for his use.

Again, the Psalmist makes the matter clear when he asks the question: "Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord, and who shall stand in his holy place? He that hath clean hands and a pure heart; who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity nor sworn deceitfully. He shall receive the blessing of the Lord and righteousness from the God of his salvation."—Psalm 24:3-5.

The temple standing on Mount Moriah was typical of the glorious temple of God. The Psalmist has here asked who will be accounted worthy to be exalted to the high position of membership in that great temple—who will be permitted to reign with Christ in his kingdom. Then he answers, "He that hath clean hands, [meaning clean actions and conduct] and a pure heart [meaning purity of will, intention or purpose—a pure heart, loving righteousness and truth but hating iniquity]; who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity [another evidence that pride is an abomination to the Lord and to all who partake of his spirit], nor sworn deceitfully [meaning those who have made a covenant with the Lord and who have earnestly tried to keep it]." These shall receive the blessing that the Lord promised in his Word. Soon the exaltation of the church will be completed; and then The Christ, Head and body, will begin the great work of reconstruction. In a thousand years The Christ will undo all that Satan and his associate evil ones have done during the past six thousand years; and at the conclusion of that righteous reign Satan himself shall be destroyed, together with all of his wicked messengers. "All the proud, yea, all that do wickedly shall be as stubble." (Malachi 4:1) Every creature will then have had ample opportunity to learn the lesson that there is one mighty God who divideth his honor with none; and that all who render themselves in loving obedience to him shall be granted life everlasting with happiness and pleasures forevermore.

SAME BEAUTIFUL SPIRIT IN THE TOWER

DEAR BRETHREN:—

It has been a source of wonder, as well as a great pleasure, to me to note the continued purity of THE WATCH TOWER articles, as well as that of their beautiful spirit. No one could tell by reading THE WATCH TOWER that Brother Russell was not editing it as of yore.

In October 1st issue the leading article—"The Closing Work of Harvest"—is most timely, stirring, and pointed. I believe every word of it; and it deserves the most careful and honest study.

We are studying the Seventh Volume here to great profit. How we do thank the Lord for this further proof of His watch-care and love for us! Nothing will arouse us except the TRUTH, and nothing does arouse us like this blessed "point of the sword."

HARVEST SIFTINGS, Part II, has just fallen into my hands, and I am now glad it was gotten out, though it was my thought that "Light after Darkness" needed no reply. The spirit breathed by every line of the latter was its own condemnation. It is the very spirit we have been trying to get away from for forty years.

I am, your fellow-servant, O. L. SULLIVAN, N. J.

ENCOURAGEMENT FOR VOUNTEERS

GENTLEMEN:—

In brief, I am a salesman; and walking into the Post Office of Chariton, Iowa, recently, I noticed a rack containing literature, about which was inscribed "Take One." Of course, in this day such a sign is about extinct. But I allowed my curiosity to be reasoned with, and took one. This sheet was Vol. IX, No. 5, of THE BIBLE STUDENTS MONTHLY, treating the subject "Why Do the Nations War," etc. Greater articles than those contained therein are not to be found. It is convincing to the core, not on account of highly manufactured phrases of a rhetorical nature, but honest, pure, and cross-examined truth. Its equal cannot be found; and that I may be more familiar, and understand the real ways, causes, and effects of present conditions, do I wish to make purchase of the works therein mentioned.

Wishing your organization the success of divine power, and knowing that it shall be a beacon light to all when the people come to understand,

I am a faithful convert, F. G. B., Iowa.

WOULD NOT MURMUR AGAINST GOD

DEAR BRETHREN IN CHRIST:—

I feel that I have a greater appreciation of divine arrangement after considering our prayer meeting text last night—"Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God"—I first thought it was a hard text to consider, but after thinking upon the subject, I see what a wonderful illustration there is in it for all of us, especially at this time under present conditions. The words of our text you will recall are quoted by our Lord from Deuteronomy, and the context shows that the children of Israel "tempted God" through lack of appreciation of divine blessings. God had led them for forty years; He had fed them with Manna during this time and at the close of the forty years they should have appreciated divine favor. Since they were about to enter Canaan, the fruition of their hope, they were found to be murmuring against Moses and divine arrangement, and thus they were "tempting God."

The result was they were bitten by that old serpent and died. This is where our appreciation comes in that we should have this text now for consideration realizing that it had been placed there by divine arrangement. In 1 Corinthians 10:1-11, the great Apostle Paul delineates this question. He warns against idolaters, fornicators and murmurers. Connecting this up with the type, we note that Pastor Russell in his comments has pointed out that idolatry refers to "self, wealth, pride, ambition, ease, gluttony, drunkenness, denominationalism, etc.," while fornication is "fellowship in spirit with those who love not the Spirit of the Lord, but the spirit of the world." The Apostle adds, "Neither let us tempt Christ." The comparison is clear. Now as we draw nigh the end of our forty years of great blessing, having been fed with the true heavenly manna all this time, are we going back on our consecration vow, becoming idolatrous, fornicators and murmurers against divine arrangement? If so the outcome is just as certain and the judgment just as sure as in the case of the children of Israel; they were "stung," and the result was death. Shall we after enjoying these blessings for so many years, lose our appreciation of divine blessing and favor by allowing ourselves to murmur, that which we are so strongly warned against in this text, and which if we do, we tempt God? If so, the sting of death will be our portion; the second death in our case. "Wherefore, let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." I rejoice because I still have this appreciation of divine favor and pray for myself and all the dear "household of faith" that the Lord's Spirit shall prevail everywhere in the hearts of his children.

I am enclosing herewith draft for Good Hopes from myself and family.

Yours in the one hope, H. B. M., Minn.

TRANSFORMING POWER OF THE TRUTH

DEARLY BELOVED BRETHREN:—

We greet you in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, the great and faithful Shepherd of the flock. We wish to assure you of our fervent love for you and our confidence in you. As the night draws on apace we are trying to do what we can to point the many, many sad hearts to the silver lining in the clouds; and we rejoice to see that the dear Heavenly Father is able to use even us in a little way to rekindle the light of hope that is burning very low in the hearts of some. We shall relate a little circumstance that has recently come under our observation.

A man whom the writer knew to be a desperate character had been furnished some tracts and Volume I, STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES. Immediately he became interested, and has made several inquiries about certain features of the plan of salvation. Recently he made us a visit, and seemed very restless. I knew there was something he wished to tell me, but of course did not know what it was. Suddenly he turned to me, and said he had something he desired to tell me. Then he related one of the most daring plots he and three other men had planned to carry out. Everything had been systematically arranged to rob a bank. He had bought a heavy revolver, had paid twenty-one dollars for it, had been in the bank many times and had outlined the whole scheme. He had also told his wife about it. He said that she had clung to his neck in tears, and had tried to talk him out of his desperate intentions, but had not succeeded. He had worked hard all his life to care for his family, but had not been able to do so in a satisfactory way; and he had in his heart a burning hatred against the capitalist system. But with tears in his eyes he said that the truth had changed the whole course of his life, and he had sent word to his pals that there would be no robbery. He also sent them some literature; and they are also reading with much interest.

His wife has recently called and asked us to come and tell them more about the coming kingdom of Christ. Truly, dear brethren, there is no other God that can deliver after this sort. (Daniel 3:29) Pray for us, dear ones, even as we do for you, that we may all be able to stand in this evil hour.

Faithfully yours in the one bright hope, H. E. P., Okla.

APPRECIATES THE LORD'S CONTINUED BLESSINGS

DEAR BRETHREN IN CHRIST:—

Remembering the channel through which the knowledge of present truth by our Father's favor was given to us, and the fact that though that "faithful and wise servant" has gone to his reward the work entrusted to him by the Lord of the harvest is being faithfully and efficiently continued by the dear brethren appointed as overseers in his stead, we unitedly desire to express to you, and through you to all the faithful in the Lord everywhere, our continued and increasing appreciation of our multiplied favors from our heavenly Father and his royal Son in connection with the knowledge of the divine purposes, the illumination and transformation of our minds through an understanding of Jehovah's glorious attributes and our privilege of cooperation with you in the work of the harvest.

In a blessed season of refreshment and fellowship at a recent testimony meeting we individually reaffirmed our vow of full consecration to the will of the Lord even unto death, at the same time reading and expressing our gratitude for the Morning Resolve and the Vow as being invaluable helps in the daily carrying out of our covenant.

By hearty unanimous vote we collectively renewed our allegiance to the SOCIETY and its representatives, desiring to be in full harmony with the channel of blessing and its direction by the Lord's own choosing, and it is as an expression of this decision that this letter is written. Our humble prayers will continue to be that the God of all grace will make you perfect in every good work to do his will and that you may continue to be strong in the Lord and in the power of his might. We request, dear brethren, your prayers.

Your brethren in Christ,

NIAGARA FALLS (N. Y.) ECCLESIA.

PROFITING BY TIMELY ADMONITIONS

DEAR FRIENDS:—

I received THE WATCH TOWER of August 1st, and I was very much interested and benefited by the article entitled, "Walk Circumspectly Because the Days Are Evil." I have read and reread it very carefully and I think it is just what I need at this time, i. e., I need to watch and scrutinize every act, seeing that I give offense to no man. The tongue is a little member, but if it is not guarded carefully and kept within bounds, what mischief it will lead you into!

The article in question is one that can be read with much profit by every true believer in the wonderful truth. While reading it I could almost imagine I was having one of those wonderful heart to heart talks with our late dear Brother Russell. In the fall of 1902, when I obtained my first knowledge of the wonderful truth, I called on Brother Russell and told him how marvelous was the First Volume, which I had just finished reading. He smiled and said (and I will ever cherish in my memory the smile and the words), "Brother B——, there is not money enough in the world to buy this wonderful knowledge of the 'Lord's plan of salvation' which he has graciously permitted you to see, is there?" I answered "There is not!" He said, "Brother, are many of your friends in the truth?" and I told him there were not, then he quickly replied, "Brother, I caution you to be wise as a serpent and harmless as a dove. Do not talk; and again I say DO NOT TALK, but rather live, live, LIVE!" These wonderful words of advice given to me years ago by our beloved Pastor have been a great source of inspiration to me; but alas! much to my own hurt, I did not always follow them; and wherein I failed thus to do, I have always suffered a great many trials, which have been largely brought about by my own wilful conduct.

I am thankful for the many words of consolation which come through THE WATCH TOWER so often, and asking an interest in your daily supplications at the throne of grace.

Yours in the blessed hope, J. H. B., Pa.

THE BLESSED WATCH TOWER

MY BELOVED BRETHREN:—

Greetings in the glorious name of our Bridegroom and King, and favor from his gracious hand! Ever since our dear Pastor, of precious memory, left us, for a place with our Lord, I have watched with keenest interest the course of those whom he left in charge of THE WATCH TOWER. It rejoices my heart unspeakably to express to you, my brethren, something of the deep appreciation I feel for the loyal humble spirit you have always manifested in this work.

Knowing some of you personally impresses me with a fuller appreciation of your service. The blessed WATCH TOWER brings exactly the same kind of food to the "Household" as our Lord sent by the hand of "that faithful and wise servant." We know where it comes from, my brethren, for no other being in the universe ever served his hungry sheep such food! Truly he is still leading us "in green pastures and beside still waters." Praises throughout the ages of eternity to our "Good Shepherd"!

Have just read the leading article in July 1st TOWER and couldn't repress my earnest desire to say, Thank you!

God bless and keep you, protecting you from the spirit of evil that is now king throughout the earth and which as a mighty giant is seeking to hurl his poisonous darts into the hearts and minds of God's dear saints.

Holding you up before the great white throne every day is one of my most appreciated privileges. Be strong and of good courage, my brethren, for the church will surely need help from the strong and courageous in the very near future. What a privilege is yours to give the needed help from our Lord!

Rejoicing with you in this privilege and earnestly asking an interest in your prayers, I am,

Your sister by his grace, MRS. C. E. K., Texas.

EXPRESSES HEARTY CO-OPERATION

DEAR FRIENDS:—

Perhaps we have been slow in writing you an assurance of our continued support of the SOCIETY, and of those who are in full harmony and cooperation therewith; but we now do so, and that most heartily. We have good reason to believe that much of the matter appearing in all the late issues of THE TOWER is from the pen of our beloved President and from those in harmony with him. These messages of hope, love, comfort and good cheer are pure, enobling and elevating, and cannot be the product of one blinded to righteousness.

Before the recent Pittsburgh convention (Sept. 29-Oct. 2), the secretary was instructed by the class here to make known to you their decision regarding the controversy about the SOCIETY'S management, which was reached by earnest prayer and careful consideration. They recognize the Lord's favor and blessing abiding with Brother Rutherford. Even if there were any misgivings at all, the lovely and memorable experiences at the convention entirely dispelled them. While the writer was compelled to be absent from the love feast on account of a sick brother, he felt, from the description given of it by the dear brethren present, that the Lord's presence and Spirit were never more clearly shown.

Therefore, dear brethren, be assured of our love for and devotion to you and the Lord.

Sincerely yours in him,

NEW KENSINGTON (Pa.) ECCLESIA.

WATCH TOWER A "TOWER OF STRENGTH"

DEAR BRETHREN:—

We, the Peru Associated Bible Students, do hereby extend to the dear brethren in the Bethel Home and all connected therewith our love and best wishes; and furthermore wish to pledge our hearty cooperation in the dear Lord's service in whatever capacity we may be called upon to serve. We wish to especially thank the management of THE WATCH TOWER publication—surely it is a "tower of strength," doing a grand work for the Master.

In conclusion we pray that the dear Lord will give you the needed strength to carry on the grand work still to be done.

Yours in the Master's service, PERU, (Ind.) ECCLESIA.

MOST HELPFUL CONTRIBUTION TO THE HARVEST MESSAGE

DEAR BROTHER RUTHERFORD:—

Just a line assuring you of my appreciation of this important privilege of again engaging in the pilgrim service, in these closing hours of the harvest. I am deeply grateful to you as his special representative at this time for an opportunity to do my "bit" toward comforting the brethren and, incidentally, demolishing "Babylon."

The brethren as a whole are abiding the tests and trials of the past few months remarkably well. With few exceptions they have concluded to let the Lord work out these difficulties in his own good time and way; wisely concluding the frantic efforts of certain "stewards" to tie your hands as the SOCIETY'S President and reduce their efficiency is the last desperate attempt of the adversary to prevent the "smiting of Jordan." Would that all were humble enough to "wait on the Lord" and watch for his leadings! Suggestions of our own importance; abbreviation of our memory of the Lord's past dealings; impressions of personal responsibilities exaggerated out of all proportion; with final possession by the spirit of envy, malice, slander, hatred, is truly the devil's favorite method in making shipwreck of one's faith. Thanks to Volume Seven, we are not ignorant of his devices.

The explanation of Revelation 7 and the exposition of Ezekiel's Temple in the last chapter of Volume Seven are in my judgment the most helpful contributions to the harvest message, apart from the work of our Pastor.

May the Lord continue to bless you, dear Brother, in your labors of love on behalf of his children.

Yours in the Master's service,

WM. A. BAKER, Pilgrim.

CONVENTION REPORTS DISCONTINUED

Brother (Dr.) L. W. Jones, of Chicago, writes us, under date of October 15th, as follows:

"Pertaining to the publication of the Souvenir Convention Reports of the conventions of 1917, I have reached the conclusion that it will be for the best interests of all the friends for me to forego the privilege I have enjoyed in this connection during the past thirteen years.

"I have also decided to abandon the publication of Pastor Russell's sermons in book form, as I understand the SOCIETY purposes a similar publication.

"It is my sincere hope that the brethren throughout the world will not misconstrue this as indicating a loss of interest and zeal in the Lord's service and in the truth. Money already paid by the friends on orders is being refunded as rapidly as the clerical work can be done.

"It will be much appreciated if an announcement to this effect is published in THE WATCH TOWER."

PASTOR RUSSELL'S SERMONS—TWO STYLES ONLY

The book of sermons by Brother Russell will not be ready for shipment until early in December. No acknowledgement will be made of your order until the books are ready for shipment, so please do not be disturbed that you receive no acknowledgment sooner.

It has been thought advisable to specialize on the cloth-bound edition of the Sermon Book, and we will, therefore, not publish it in the Karatol or India at this time. We will, however, have some of our regular cloth edition put into Morocco covers for those who prefer a more expensive volume. The cloth edition, however, will be handsomely bound in dark green cloth, gold embossed, with gilt edges; a beautiful book. Price $1.00 postpaid. The stiff leather binding will be $1.50. Orders thus far received for the Karatol edition will be filled with the cloth volume, and orders for the flexible leather will be filled with the stiff Morocco-bound book, unless otherwise instructed.

QUESTIONS RELATING TO VOTING

The following questions have been asked, and we publish the answers for the benefit of others:

Q. Am I entitled to votes for donations made several years ago?

A. Yes.

Q. I expect to attend the election. Shall I send my proxy to the Secretary, and what name shall I write in it?

A. All proxies should be sent to the Secretary that he may insert the number of votes and certify to the same. Leave blank the space provided for appointment of proxy, if you expect to attend the election in person, but sign your name at the bottom of the proxy.

Q. Does writing on the back of the proxy invalidate it?

A. No. It was suggested to write on the back of the proxy for convenience and the saving of paper.

Q. Does the By-law, Section 2, published in the November 1st TOWER, page 329, relate to the recent disagreement as to who constitutes the legal Board of Directors?

A. No. It particularly relates to those who oppose the message of the kingdom, as set forth in STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES, who deny Brother Russell as "that servant" and who are out of harmony with the purposes and work of the SOCIETY. The substance of this By-law was suggested by Brother Russell in 1911. A by-law intending to cover the point was passed at Pittsburgh on January 6th last, and approved by the Board of Directors, January 19th, and was since slightly amended, as published.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF THE LORD'S FAVOR

The SOCIETY'S fiscal year closes with October 31st. We take pleasure in acknowledging the Lord's great blessing upon the harvest work for the year, evidenced by an increase in every branch of the service. Our trial balance shows that 1917 exceeds every other year of the harvest work except the phenominal years of 1913 and 1914. We feel sure the friends will rejoice over this further evidence of the Lord's guidance and favor and that he is still at the helm.

VOL. XXXVIII BROOKLYN, N. Y., DECEMBER 1, 1917 No. 23

THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD

"The night is far spent, the day is at hand; let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light."
"Ye are the light of the world."—Romans 13:12; Matthew 5:14.

There is a depth of meaning in these words that the human mind cannot comprehend. This was especially true with reference to the statement of the Master when the disciples heard him say, "Ye are the light of the world." They could not grasp the meaning of his words; for the holy Spirit was not then given. Only the new creature in Christ can have an appreciation of the meaning thereof, and the extent of appreciation is in proportion to his spiritual development.

In all the languages of the earth, light is a symbol of truth and life. The sun is the great light of the earth, and sustains a relationship to the earth and its products designedly analogous to that of God to the universe. As all light of the earth emanates from the sun, so all truth and life proceed from God. As light is adapted to the eye, so truth is adapted to the mind; and in proportion as we perceive and receive the truth, the light increases in our lives. Beginning with the sun and tracing out the analogy we find that all nature is really symbolic. This does not come by accident, but designedly so. It is not an accident that the sun and moon are symbols; for we read, "God said . . . Let them be for signs."—Gen. 1:14.

The antithesis of light is darkness. It symbolizes evil, wickedness, error, sin, death and everything that is undesirable. Light, therefore, is a symbol of righteousness, truth, life, and the blessings incident thereto.

RIGHT TO LIVE LIMITED

One of the principles of God's arrangement is that all righteous beings have the right to live. Truth is the expression of righteousness. Hence it follows that all must have the truth before they can know the way to life. As an illustration: The sun is a great light which gives light to the earth and life to the vegetation of the earth. The sun is requisite to the growth and development of plant life. Plants will not grow and flourish in darkness, but will sicken and die. So it is with all who have life—they must have the light from the Great Light. The Scriptures describe Jehovah as a "sun" (Psalm 84:11), as "a consuming fire" (Hebrews 12:29), and a great "light, in whom is no darkness at all." (1 John 1:5) God is the origin of light, and is therefore the origin of life. Where the sun shines, darkness flees before its rays. Where the countenance of Jehovah is made to appear, darkness and unrighteousness flee away. To this the Apostle referred when he said, "Times of refreshing shall come from the presence [face] of the Lord."—Acts 3:19.

THE GREAT LIGHT

In the Genesis account of creation we read that "God made two great lights; the greater light to rule the day and the lesser light to rule the night: he made the stars also." (Gen. 1:16) The stars here symbolize that class to which Abraham belonged. Abraham had little light, but great faith. The moon symbolizes the Mosaic law given the Jews, to the exclusion of all others. Since the time of Adam, disobedience and darkness prevail over the earth, and gross darkness over the people. To the Jews God gave some light through the terms of the Law Covenant, which is symbolized by the moon. As we know, the moon does not give forth her own light, but reflects the light received from the sun. And so it is with the Law Covenant. It could not be appreciated by those living prior to the opening of the Gospel age. The law reflects the light from the Gospel of Messiah's kingdom, which Gospel was first preached to Abraham. (Galatians 3:8) Only those who have received and accepted the light of the message of Messiah's kingdom can now appreciate the light coming from the Law Covenant, which foreshadows better things to come.—Hebrews 10:1.

GREATER LIGHT

At the close of the Jewish age there came into the world Jesus, the Son of God. Although born under the Law Covenant, he was greater than the law. Being a perfect man, he could comply with the terms of the law. This he did, and went beyond its requirements in the fulfilment of God's great plan. From Adam to Jesus there had been no true light in the world whatsoever. When Jesus came he declared, "I am the Light of the world." Again the Scriptures record of him: "He was . . . the true Light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world." (John 1:9) The Light then was local; only a few saw it; for it shone in a dark place; and to those who did see it the Master declared, "Blessed are your eyes, for they see."—Matthew 13:16.

In proof that light is a symbol of life we quote the words of the Master: "Then spake Jesus unto them, saying, I am the Light of the world; he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." (John 8:12) It follows then that all who have the right to life must have the light. Those who have no light have no right to life. All those who will ever have the right to life must have the light; and since it is God's purpose that every man shall have a chance to accept life the time must come that every man will see the light. Hence we read, "It is the will of God that all men shall be saved and brought to an accurate knowledge of the truth."—1 Timothy 2:3, 4.

HOW WE GET THE LIGHT

If Jesus was the Light of the world, why did he say to his disciples, "Ye are the light of the world"?

In answering this question we recall the words of the Master (John 9:5): "As long as I am in the world I am the Light of the world." When Jesus said, "Ye are the light of the world," he spoke prophetically; for it was not then true, except in the sense that they reflected his Spirit. In the fuller sense it was true after his crucifixion and resurrection, and after the giving of the holy Spirit to the consecrated at Pentecost. He spake, however, of things that were to be as though they were. In one sense the disciples, as his representatives acting under his authority, were then the light of the world; for they reflected the light. But the time was to come, and did come, when they constituted the light of the world because they were in him as members of his body. This has been true with reference to every Christian who has abode in Christ and has had the words of Christ abiding in him.

The ransom-price provided by the death and resurrection of Jesus was, at the time of his ascension into heaven, made available for the use of those who throughout the Gospel age should offer themselves to God in full consecration. The disciples were consecrated prior to Pentecost, but not justified. Hence their spirit-begetting could not take place until Pentecost. Those of the church receive the light only at the time of consecration and of the receipt of the merit of the Master's sacrifice; and when they have been accepted by the Father and begotten of the holy Spirit, the illumination follows. These who are in Christ are members of his body. It is proper then to say that from the Jordan till now, The Christ is the light of the world, for the reason that The Christ includes all those who have the Spirit of Jesus and who are walking in accord with the terms of their covenant.

This is very beautifully pictured by the golden candlestick in the Holy of the Tabernacle. The candle-stick was all of one piece, composed of gold, and represents those begotten to the divine nature, the centre-burner representing Jesus and the other burners representing the body members. The oil therein pictures the holy Spirit, and the light coming from the burning of the oil represents the illumination possessed by those who are in Christ, possessing his Spirit. This illumination constitutes such the light of the world.

WHAT WE SHALL DO

Behold what a favored position the body members occupy! God is the great Light from whom cometh all light and life. Jesus is the express image of the Father; and through him the fully consecrated are privileged to be a reflection of Jehovah's light in the earth. When we realize this fact we can better understand why the Apostle refers to the Christian as an ambassador of Christ's kingdom, and can better appreciate the responsibilities that rest upon us because of this light and privilege.

Seeing the favored position which the members of the body this side the veil occupy with relation to Jehovah and to the great Master, St. Paul was evidently desirous of impressing this thought upon all Christians when he wrote: "The night is far spent, the day is at hand; let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light."—Romans 13:12.

The Apostle Paul had more information then than had any one else—more information than it was lawful for him to tell. (2 Cor. 12:1-5) Two things he states positively; namely, "The night is far spent" and "The day is at hand." The "night" here refers to the long period of sin and death prevailing from the fall to the establishment of the Messianic kingdom. At the time the Apostle wrote, 4182 years of that great dark night had passed; and since he wrote these words, more than 1800 years additional have passed away. So the Christian today has the privilege of standing in the very dawn of the morning, when the light of the kingdom is breaking upon the earth and soon will shine forth in its resplendent glory. "The day" that "is at hand" is the thousand-year day of Christ, during which the Sun of Righteousness shall shine with healing in his beams, bringing light and life to all of the groaning creation who will accept the blessing upon the terms offered. Therefore because of this wonderful position which the people of God occupy, the Apostle admonishes them that they should cast off all works of darkness and put on the whole armor of light.

WORKS OF DARKNESS

"Works of darkness" are those deeds that will not bear the fullest light of the new dispensation—any and all things that are out of harmony with truth and righteousness. The Apostle Paul enumerates some of these specifically, as follows: "Fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, and covetousness, which is idolatry: for which things' sake the wrath of God cometh on the children of disobedience: in the which ye also walked some time, when ye lived in them. But now ye also put off all these; anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth. Lie not one to another, seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds." "Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these: adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like."—Colossians 3:5-9; Galatians 5:19-21.

These works of darkness also include self-esteem in a superlative degree, selfishness and injustice. The light-bearers cannot have any fellowship with these. Anything that has a tendency to bring darkness into the life and to exclude light should therefore be cast off, as works of the flesh and the devil.

THE ARMOR OF LIGHT

Then says the Apostle, "Put on the armor of light." This means the armor of God; for "God is light." In Ephesians 6:10-17 the Apostle describes the armor of light, specifying the parts. He admonishes the Christian to have his loins girded with the truth. The girdle is a symbol of servitude, thus testifying that every light-bearer should be a servant of the truth. We are also to have on the breast-plate of righteousness. The breast-plate fitted over the vital organs—heart, etc. This signifies that the light-bearer should always have a righteous, pure heart. To have the "feet shod with the preparation of the Gospel of peace" means that we should see to it that the fiery trials that come upon us should not make us resentful, but rather that we should cultivate peace under all circumstances, that our feet may not be burned with these fiery trials. "Above all things taking the shield of faith," means to know the Word of God and to rely upon it; and to "take the helmet of salvation," symbolical of an intellectual understanding and appreciation of the Word of God, and "the Sword of the Spirit" means to have the Word of the Lord and be trained, as a good soldier, in its skilful use.

It will be observed that the Apostle enumerates six parts of the armor; whereas the panoply of a Roman soldier consisted of seven parts. That part not named is the greaves, which fitted over the front part of the leg. This very beautifully symbolizes the Vow which the feet members are permitted to have; and as their face is always toward the enemy, they should be protected with this part of the armor. The Christian's protection is light, whose beams search every nook and corner of earth's impurities, and enable him to dispel such from his own life.

Continuing, the Apostle admonishes, "Walk honestly as in the day"; that is to say, as though we were living in the full light of that day of Christ—the day of the reign of Messiah in righteousness. While we are not fully in that day, yet the new creation should live as nearly up to the perfect standard as possible. "Honestly" means to be honest in business matters, honest with the Lord, honest with his message, honest with the brethren, and honest in everything in connection with his service. Honesty is the result of light.

Furthermore, the Apostle says, "Not in rioting and drunkenness." Evidently he does not refer here to the grosser sins which these words imply, but to the more refined from the world's standpoint—things which we would term indulgence in time-killing, intoxication with money-making, or with any earthly thing that would draw our attention away from the Lord and his service. Then he concludes his argument with the strongest and most important exhortation, saying, "Avoid strife and envying."

One who indulges in the things previously mentioned by the Apostle would injure himself particularly. But one who indulges in strife and envy shows a bad condition of heart which might bar him from the kingdom, and which might result in great injury to others and hinder their development. These are fruits of the flesh; and in proportion as we yield to such improper desires, in that proportion will the flesh prosper and the new creature languish and draw near unto death. On the contrary, the sons of God are to seek more and more to put on the Lord Jesus Christ; that is to say, to put on the qualities of meekness, forbearance, long suffering, patient endurance, gentleness, kindness and love. Each should have the disposition to serve by love, being humble and submissive to the Lord's will. Make no provision for the flesh, but let it die from neglect.

THE CHRISTIAN'S ADVANTAGES

Those who have the light are greatly advantaged above those that have not the light. Since Jesus was crucified 1884 years have passed. Down through the age of sacrifice, along the narrow valley of trials and tears, the light-bearers of God, as members of the body of Christ, have walked—waiting, hoping, and praying for the return of the great Light, the Bridegroom. Many of these faithful ones have ceased from their labors and slept, awaiting the coming of the King. As this little band of lightbearers have passed along through the world, others noting their manner of living and devotion to truth and righteousness, have turned aside to walk with them awhile.

In this connection we are reminded of the parable of the wheat and tares. The wheat have been the lightbearers, while the tares have been mingling with them, aided somewhat by the light which has been shed forth by the true Christians. In the harvest a separation is now taking place. Of necessity the light reproves the darkness; and the breach widens between the merely nominal and the true Christians. All those who are striving to keep their covenant are in the light. Hence the Apostle says to such, "Ye are not in darkness"; while all those are still in darkness who call themselves Christians but who persecute those who have the light.

THE LIGHT-BEARERS

In the context the Apostle contrasts those who have the Light with others who have not. The light-bearers have ever looked for the return of the great Light, Christ Jesus. He did not say at what hour and day he would come, but stated in such clear phrase what might be expected that the true light-bearers can appreciate the times in which they are living. To them St. Paul says, "Of the times and seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you." (1 Thess. 5:1-6) This was true because, having the light, they would be able to discern the presence of the greater Light, the Bridegroom. Then adds the Apostle, "For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night." A thief comes in time of darkness, and of course would not be observed by those who are asleep or in the dark. At the second coming of our Lord all who were awake and had the light would be able to discern Jesus. The Apostle states that those who have the light will recognize the presence of the great King. Then he proceeds to tell us what is our duty, saying, "But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief. Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkness. Therefore let us not sleep as do others; but let us watch and be sober." See also Matthew 24:42-44.

As these faithful followers of the Lord waited in the early dawn of the new dispensation, their hearts were made glad by the knowledge of the presence of the Bridegroom; and as this knowledge came to them they joined in the cry, "Behold the Bridegroom!" Since then every one who has come to a knowledge of the Lord's presence has involuntarily said, "Behold the Bridegroom!"

SCOFFERS AND OPPOSERS

On the other hand, nominal Christians, being in darkness, have become offended at the exuberance manifested by the true light-bearers. Their time is devoted to social uplift and and various other things that are popular with the world; and they understand not why the true light-bearer does not participate with them. Therefore nominal Christians have become scoffers, as the Apostle Peter foretold they would: "Where is the evidence of his presence? . . . all things continue as they were from the beginning."—2 Peter 3:4.

At this moment we see the whole world in a state of war.

The nations are growing weaker; and soon the various factions will see the necessity of stopping the war before all are entirely destroyed. Doubtless then the various elements—the financial, political and ecclesiastical—will be saying, "Peace!", and temporary peace will be established by the united action of the Papacy and the Protestant churches and the kingdom of this world. Referring to this time, the Apostle says, "For when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape."—1 Thessalonians 5:3.

THE GREAT COMPANY

The Scriptures point out that there is another class of Christians who love the Lord, who love to be associated with the true light-bearers, and yet who are fearful of holding forth the light lest it should bring persecution upon them. These are consecrated to the Lord, but have only a small measure of his Spirit. They are described by the Master as those whose lamps are almost empty of oil, or whose supply of oil is running low. This means that their supply of the spirit of truth is nearly exhausted. They do not fully appreciate the value of the whole armor of light. They do not possess the zeal peculiar to the Lord's house (Psalm 69:9); but being overcharged by the cares of this life and fearing persecution and suffering, these believe that they can best pursue a more moderate course and refrain from actively testifying for the Master and his cause. These may be said, therefore, to be not walking in the full light, not appreciating their privileges.

Doubtless some of this class are in present truth, and some amongst the Babylonish systems. The Psalmist describes them thus: "Such as sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, being bound in affliction and iron: because they rebelled against the words of God and contemned the counsel of the most High." (Psalm 107:10, 11) The Lord Jesus describes them as the "foolish virgin" class, who are aroused to their privileges too late to have their vessels filled in time to enter into the kingdom.—Matthew 25:1-13.

THE LESSON FOR THE CHURCH

Thus we see that the worldly do not understand the Christian because they never had the light, and that the great company do not see and appreciate present truth because their light is burning low. The lesson then that we should gather is to keep our lamps trimmed and burning. Or, to use another figure, we are to profit thereby. We are to give close attention to the words of life contained in God's Word, that we may come to an exact knowledge of the truth. Whether the error be one of doctrine or conduct, it must be purged away, so that the pure light of divine truth may shine out as clearly as possible through our daily lives. This evidently is what Jesus had in mind when he said, "Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid. Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."—Matthew 5:14, 16.

The light cannot shine out brightly to the glory of God unless our lamps are cleaned, trimmed and brightly burning. Some of the Lord's dear children seem very indifferent to the matter of trimming their lamps and letting their light shine. They get some truth and some error, and hold them both together. As a result, their light does not shine brightly; for the vessel is darkened by the error. Again, some may have the light, but fail to let the truth have the proper place or effect upon their characters; and so the light in them is very dim, because of the uncleanness of the medium through which it passes. The admonition of the Scriptures should be kept in mind: "Light is sown for the righteous." (Psalm 97:11) The Apostle referred to the proper condition of the light-bearer when he said, "Ye are our epistles . . . known and read of all men." The world cannot read and understand the Bible; but they can read and understand one's daily life. Again, the Apostle said, "We are made a spectacle [literally, a show or theatre] for men and angels." Therefore the eyes of all are upon the light-bearers; and they should see to it that they avoid everything which has a tendency to shut out the light and preclude it from shining.—2 Corinthians 3:2; 1 Corinthians 4:9.

As far as we permit prejudice, pride, selfishness, self-esteem, combativeness, crookedness, injustice or unrighteousness to interrupt the freedom with which we receive and hold forth the light of truth, in that same proportion will the light rapidly decline or retrograde, and such a course persisted in will ultimately lead such a one into utter darkness. Hence Jesus said, "If thine eye be evil, thy whole body shall be full of darkness. If therefore the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness! The light of the body is the eye; if therefore thine eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of light."—Matthew 6:22, 23.

DARKNESS SETTLING DOWN ON THE EARTH

The Scriptures indicate that when the last member of the little flock is gone all the light left in the earth will be that possessed by the great company class. Since every spirit-begotten one must finish his course before the resurrection of the ancient worthies, it follows that between the time of the change of those who compose the great company and the resurrection of the ancient worthies there will be a brief period during which darkness will completely cover the earth and gross darkness the people. This day is rapidly approaching.

"The path of the just is as a shining light that shineth more and more unto the day of perfection." (Proverbs 4:18) We are coming near to the end of our earthly journey—therefore, near to the day of perfection. Should we not, then, expect the light to shine brighter and brighter upon our pathway? Surely the Lord will fulfil this promise to his people, and is fulfilling it to them. If that light is shining brighter, shall we be stumbled and blinded by it? Or shall we appreciate what the Lord is doing for us and permit the manifestation of his loving kindness to stimulate us to greater love and zeal for him, his cause and his people?

PRIVILEGES NOW GREAT

When first we read the STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES and rejoiced in the light there found, we learned through their author that there would be seven volumes. We have looked forward with joyful expectancy to the coming of that time when we would have the Seventh Volume. The laborers in the harvest field realize that we are drawing nearer and nearer to the end of the harvest. Now the Seventh Volume has come to us; and it throws a great flood of light upon Revelation and Ezekiel, in harmony with what is contained in the other six volumes of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES and the Bible. Shall we not take this as a favor from the Lord, and as the fulfilment to us of his promise?

How are we receiving that light and responding to it? "Well," answers one, "I have not yet been able to fully receive THE FINISHED MYSTERY as the long promised Seventh Volume." Others are openly opposing it, notwithstanding the Lord's manifested favor upon its publication and distribution. We might wonder if all are appreciating fully the light that is shining upon the pathway. We recall that there were some who did not appreciate the other volumes for a time, and that some did not appreciate the Vow when it was given to the church. Indeed, some good, conscientious, fully consecrated brethren at first opposed it. When the Vow was first published by Brother Russell a certain sister found many objections to it; but being desirous of doing the Lord's will she called upon a brother to point out to her where it is advantageous for one to take the Vow. There followed a conversation between them, about as follows:

"Sister, do you see anything in that vow that is out of harmony with your consecration to the Lord?" "No," she answered, "I do not." "Do you see anything in it to which the Lord would object?" "No, I do not." "Do you see anything in the Vew to which the devil would object?" "Ah, yes!" she exclaimed, "I see many things in it to which the devil would object." "Then," replied the brother, "if you oppose the Vow would you not be agreeing with the devil and disagreeing with the Lord?" She at once saw the point.

Now suppose we apply the same rule to "The Finished Mystery," Volume VII of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES. Let us ask ourselves, Is there anything in it contrary to the message of Messiah's kingdom and the great doctrine of the ransom? To this we must answer, No! Is there anything in it to which the heavenly Father or the Lord Jesus would object because out of harmony with his Spirit? To this we must also answer, No. Is there anything in it to which Satan would object or be opposed? Ah yes, certainly! for it pulls off the mask and exposes a system which Satan has builded up by blinding good Christian people. It shows that the great Papal system is Satan's counterfeit of Messiah's kingdom. It shows that the Romish system is the "mother" described as a "harlot"; and that nominal Protestantism constitutes the "daughters." It shows how these together constitute "Babylon" and how they have made "drunk" the kings and rulers of the earth. It shows how the evil spirits have operated and will continue to operate under the chief of devils—Satan. It shows that "great Babylon" must fall, how Satan himself will be destroyed, and pictures the glories of the kingdom class in the "temple" condition beyond the veil.

"THIS HONOR HAVE ALL HIS SAINTS"

Has not this light that has fallen upon our pathway thrilled our hearts with joy in proportion as we have appreciated it? Surely, then, great are our privileges now, not only to feed upon this additional food, that the Lord has given us, but to pass it on to others in "Babylon" and get the attention of those who have a hearing ear, that they may hear and flee therefrom; and even to tell the world that the present unrighteous systems soon must pass away, to be supplanted with the glorious kingdom of Christ Jesus. All the true light-bearers will therefore appreciate the privileges now given to them of having the light and of giving it out to others. Who is on the Lord's side? "Know ye not that to whom ye yield yourselves to obey, his servants ye are whom ye obey?"—Romans 6:16; Exod. 32:26.

For nearly nineteen centuries this little band of light-bearers have been shining forth in the world, reproving the darkness. For a long time it seemed that darkness might triumph; for the bearers of light have been suffering at the hands of the children of darkness. But now we are approaching the end of the reign of sin and death. The Prince of Darkness is marshalling all of his forces for the final crucial conflict. The storm is raging in every quarter, and the waves of human passion are lashing against the thrones of earthly institutions. This great time of trouble is striking terror to the hearts of many. But the true light-bearer takes courage in this hour of great trial; for, knowing that it is evidence that the kingdom is at hand he hears the words of his Captain saying, "Behold I come quickly; hold that fast which thou hast; let no man take thy crown." (Revelation 3:11) And again says the Apostle, "Cast not away your confidence which hath great recompense of reward; for ye have need of patience [endurance] that after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise."—Hebrews 10:35, 36.

THE BLESSINGS OF THE KINGDOM

Down into the depths of the great storm that is now upon the world, the light-bearers may soon go; but beyond its blackness and terror, these faithful ones will rise triumphant over death and be ushered into the glorious light of the sons of God. The Lord Jesus, speaking to the faithful with reference to this time, says, "Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father"—Matthew 13:43.

As St. Paul states, the whole creation is groaning and travailing in pain, waiting for the full manifestation of the Sons of Light. (Rom. 8:19-23) What a glorious day it will be for the poor world when the light has completely driven away the darkness, and when the sunlight of God's love with healing and blessing will shine into the hearts and minds of all! Through the mouth of his Prophet Jehovah gave a wonderful and beautiful picture of the blessings that shall come to the world at that time. He said, "And his feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east; and the Mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof toward the east and toward the west and there shall be a very great valley; and half of the mountain shall remove toward the north, and half of it toward the south. And ye shall flee to the valley of the mountains, . . . and the Lord my God shall come and all the saints with thee."—Zech. 14:4, 5.

The olive is a symbol of light, peace and divine blessings through the holy Spirit. A mountain is a symbol of a kingdom of light, peace and divine blessings through the holy Spirit of God. The Prophet Joel states that during the Gospel age the Spirit of the Lord is made manifest to his servants and hand-maidens—to those who have made a full consecration to follow in the footsteps of Jesus. The Prophet then adds that after these days—namely, at the conclusion of the Gospel age when all the light-bearers of the kingdom class are developed—then God will pour out his Spirit upon all flesh. Then the light will begin to shine and increase in the hearts and minds of the people.

VALLEY OF BLESSINGS

In the above prophecy the phrase, "his feet" has reference to Jehovah, and signifies the divine law established on the earth through Messiah's kingdom of righteousness, the earth being referred to as Jehovah's foot-stool, which he will make glorious. The Prophet states that "the mount shall cleave in the midst thereof, toward the east and toward the west." The east is the position of the rising sun. The cleaving of a mountain in the midst thereof from east to west would cause the formation of a valley between the two portions, a part of the mountain being on the north and a part on the south. The north is the position of the Pleiades, and represents the throne of Jehovah, and therefore in the picture would represent the heavenly phase of God's kingdom. The south would represent the position or condition of the earthly phase of that kingdom. The sun rising in the east would shine clear through the valley, which extends east and west between the two parts of the mountain; that is to say, between the heavenly and earthly phases of God's kingdom.

This pictures how the "Sun of Righteousness" with healing in his beams shall shine from the beginning to the ending of the Millennial reign of Christ. The valley filled with light represents the valley of blessings and life; and during the Millennial reign the people who come into this valley or condition of blessing will be healed, uplifted and blessed. The glorious and life-giving light will drive out all darkness, ignorance, superstition and death, and bring everlasting blessings to all who will receive it. Let us picture to our minds the millions returning from the tomb and entering this valley of blessings, there to receive the balm of Gilead which the Lord has so graciously provided for the binding up of broken hearts and comforting of them that mourn. Millions who have been torn from their loved ones by the great enemy death will be brought again together; families long separated will be reunited. They shall "come with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads; they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away."—Isaiah 35:10.

The glorious reign of Christ completed, all the human race tried and tested, all wickedness and unrighteousness destroyed from the earth, no longer will there exist any necessity for the Gospel light, represented by the sun, nor the law, represented by the moon. "And the city [the holy government] had no need of the sun, neither of the moon to shine in it; for the glory of God did lighten it and the Lamb is the light thereof. And the nations [peoples fully restored] shall walk by the light thereof, and the kings [perfect men] of the earth do bring their glory into it, and the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day; for there shall be no night there."—Revelation 21:23-25.

The bringing of such blessings to the poor groaning creation will be the great privilege of the sons of God. "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God!" (1 John 3:2) Behold, what a wonderful prospect is set before those who are privileged to be counted as light-bearers in the earth during the age of sacrifice and suffering, to those who are faithful unto death! What an inspiration to faithfulness and loyalty to the Lord!

"For soon astonished men shall see
The laurels of thy victory;
And thou with grace and glory crowned,
Mayst lavish blessings all around."

MY REDEEMER

"When first I heard of Jesus, so marred upon the tree,
I felt no glad emotion as though he died for me;
I saw no kingly beauty majestic, grand or brave;
I turned away, despising his proffered aid to save.

"But when I came to know him his precious name grew sweet,
And like the tinted rainbow love arched the Mercy-Seat.
And when through beams of glory the light shone from his face,
All other objects faded before his matchless grace.

"When first I heard the tidings how God's beloved Son
Designs to bless the fallen since Adam's race begun,
What could I do but praise him—make vault of heaven ring!
And own him as my choicest—Redeemer, Lord and King!

"O Rose of rarest odor! O Lily white and pure!
O Chiefest of ten thousand, whose glory must endure!
The more I see thy beauty, the more I know thy grace,
The more I long unhindered to gaze upon thy face!"

DIVINE PROTECTION AND DELIVERANCE

DECEMBER 30.—Quarterly Review

NATURAL ISRAEL TYPICAL OF SPIRITUAL ISRAEL—GOD'S CARE AND PROTECTION OF THE NATURAL ISRAELITES ILLUSTRATIVE OF SPIRITUAL BLESSINGS TO THE CHURCH—PERILOUS TIMES OF THE EVIL DAY—COMFORTING WORDS OF LIFE—WARNING VOICES AND WHOLESOME COUNSEL NECESSARY.

"With Jehovah there is loving kindness, and with him is plenteous redemption."—Psa. 130:7.

This lesson is intended for a review of the history of the children of Israel during the period covered by the last quarter's lessons, namely, about two hundred and seventy years. We realize that natural Israel was typical of spiritual Israel, and the experiences which came to them illustrated the experiences of the church. The spiritual Israelite therefore, receives much instruction by carefully noting the history of the natural Israelite, and can enter more heartily into their experiences and rejoice with them in their songs of deliverance. It is suggested by those who arranged the lessons that we read the 123rd and 124th Psalms. These psalms are indeed beautiful, and suggest the loving kindness and protecting power of Jehovah over his faithful children. We, as spiritual Israelites, realize that we are still in the land of the enemy, and we know of no more fitting promises to apply to the present time than those contained in the 91st Psalm which have been an inspiration to the church throughout the many centuries of its existence.

In the midst of the "perilous times" of this "evil day," and of the warning voices of prophets and apostles pointing out snares and pestilences and subtle dangers on every hand—and in the midst, too, of a realizing sense of the actual existence of such evil besetments and perils—how precious to the saints are the assurances of divine protection and care and personal love!

We call to mind the gracious promises of our Lord—"The Father himself loveth you;" "Fear not, little flock; it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom;" and "He that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him and will manifest myself to him; . . . and My Father will love him, and we will come unto him and make Our abode with him. . . . Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid."—John 16:27; 14:21, 23, 27; Luke 12:32.

TIMELY WARNINGS—WHOLESOME COUNSEL

But warning voices and wholesome counsel are also necessary; and he is not wise who turns a deaf ear to them, and takes cognizance alone of the comforting assurances which are designed only for those who faithfully "watch and pray lest they enter into temptation." Every soldier of the cross needs to heed the Apostle's warnings—"Take unto you the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand;" and again, "Let us fear lest, a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it;" and fear also "lest, as the serpent [Satan] beguiled Eve, through his subtlety, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ;" "for grievous wolves shall enter in among you, not sparing the flock. Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things to draw away disciples after them." "Behold," said our Lord, "I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves: be ye therefore wise as serpents and harmless as doves."—Eph. 6:13; Heb. 4:1; 2 Cor. 11:3; Acts 20:29, 30; Matt. 10:16.

INCREASED OPPORTUNITIES FOR SERVICE

Many years ago Brother Russell proved from the Scriptures that a federation would be formed between the various nominal church systems, and that this federation would cooperate with the civil powers in the exercise of control over the people. This federation is now practically an accomplished fact. Only a short time ago at a great mass meeting in Carnegie Hall, New York City, Protestant and Catholic ministers and Jewish Rabbis united in an effort for Bible study, ignoring the name of Jesus Christ. That ecclesiasticism is now cooperating with the civil powers is patent to every thinking mind. Pastor Russell foresaw this coming federation and repeatedly called the attention of THE WATCH TOWER readers thereto. As far back as 1895, in an issue of THE WATCH TOWER he set forth that John the Baptist and his experiences were typical; that in the antitype it would probably be the privilege of the consecrated, before the close of the harvest, to call attention to the tacit union and concurrent action of the church systems and civil powers of the land; that this would be displeasing to those in authority, especially to the ecclesiastics; that the proclamation by the truly consecrated, calling attention to this unholy alliance, would probably bring upon them certain trying experiences and would be a great honor to everyone joyfully participating in this work.

It is apparent that the nations of earth are hopelessly divided on political and military issues, and that their only hope of establishing peace is by the intervention of ecclesiastical powers. The head of the Papal system has already made overtures to the civil powers, looking to the establishment of peace. It may be expected that he will make further representations to this end, and that the "nobles" of the Protestant systems will join with him, and that as a consequence these ecclesiastics will be given more prominence by the civil powers. The Scriptures in many places describe this unholy alliance as Babylon, and likewise show that the evils concerning Babylon should be made known.

"The Finished Mystery"—Volume VII of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES—without question contains an exposition—such as never before published—of the evils committed by Babylon, of the unrighteous relationship between ecclesiasticism and civil powers, the effect that a knowledge of these facts will have upon the people, and how Babylon's fall will be accomplished. THE WATCH TOWER subscribers are familiar with the further fact that Brother Russell as the Laodicean messenger repeatedly emphasized the fact that there should be a strong, vigorous witness of the truth to the world in the last days of the church's experiences this side the veil, and that the giving of this witness to the truth would probably result in the restraint of the antitypical "John" class; for the message when given will constitute a rebuke to Babylon.

In harmony with this conclusion the Scriptures also show that the "vine of the earth" must be gathered, and the juice must be squeezed out of the grapes, constituting this "vine of the earth." Since the Lord has shown that this message must be given to the church nominal, and since this message is contained in the Seventh Volume—"the point of the sword"—the question now is, Who of the consecrated will join in using that point? Everything leads to the conclusion that the dark night referred to in the Scriptures, in which no man can work, is rapidly approaching and whatever work is done with reference to harvesting the vine of the earth must be done quickly. To this fact the brethren throughout the country are awake. Many are very anxious to enter the field and to spread far and wide the message contained in Volume VII.

We realize that many of the colporteur brethren were compelled to leave the service in 1914 because they had used all their worldly substance in the great work accomplished that year. The Master of the harvest may be always relied upon to provide the means to accomplish his work, and now he has put it in the heart of a dear brother to come forward with a contribution to be used especially for the smiting of Babylon. This fund can be used to aid those colporteurs to enter the work, who have heretofore been hindered because of their financial condition. The SOCIETY has adopted what is believed to be the most economical plan, one which will enable the greatest number with this small means to again engage in the corporteur work. The plan is that one hundred copies of Volume VII will be billed to each colporteur who needs assistance to get started in the work, free of charge, and that the sale of this number will give to such colporteur a working capital on which he or she may go ahead in the work and continue in it until the finish. By this method we believe that fully a half million copies of THE FINISHED MYSTERY may be placed in the hands of the people by the end of the year. We therefore suggest that everyone who desires to engage in the colporteur service, but who cannot do so because of their financial condition, and who by reason of the aid above suggested could do so, write us immediately for territory and for further instructions. The time seems opportune for the great drive that will divert the symbolic waters from Mystic Babylon, and thus hasten her downfall, preceding the full establishment of the kingdom of peace. The Psalmist declares that God will grant to his saints the privilege and honor of declaring these judgments written.—Psalm 149:5-9.

Surely the saints beyond the veil have a keen interest in the conclusion of the work, and every saint this side the veil will have a keen interest in that work. We believe that all the consecrated will appreciate the privilege of now participating with gladness of heart in this laboring. The time is short. Our responsibility is great. Let us then do with our might what our hands find to do, laboring diligently while it is called day. A little while and we shall finish our course and by his grace be permitted to have the Lord's approving smile and be forever with him.

THANKFUL FOR CONTINUATION OF HARVEST WORK

DEAR BRETHREN:—

We believe we would be remiss in our duty and obligation to you and to our dear Lord, if we did not make known to you our determination of continued steadfastness.

We take this time and manner to assure you of our sympathy and cooperation in your "labor of love." "Daily will we remember at the throne of heavenly grace the general interests of the harvest work," "trusting that the Chief Reaper will make all things work together for good."

We are so thankful for the provision made for the continuation of the work, and we are sure our dear Lord's blessing will be on all who share in this service.

With much Christian love, WINFIELD ECCLESIA.—Kans.

VETOES THE SUGGESTION

Editorial Committee, THE WATCH TOWER,
Brooklyn, New York.

DEAR BRETHREN:—

My attention is just directed to the suggestion in "Harvest Siftings Reviewed" reading as follows: "Would not Brother Walter Page, a former vice president, make a much better President than Brother Rutherford?"

As I am the only Brother Page who ever served as a vice president of the SOCIETY I presume I am the one referred to, although my name is not Walter but William. Under existing conditions I must emphatically veto the suggestion, and among other reasons are the following vital ones:

The President of the SOCIETY must needs be of tested, proven financial ability to handle its various important business transactions.

He should be an able public speaker to properly present the object and work of the SOCIETY in its public meetings.

I do not possess these essential qualifications and Brother Rutherford does; and in addition our dear Brother has a rounded, developed Christian character (the most essential factor); and understanding the work of the SOCIETY and having it well in hand, he is in my judgment the Lord's best qualified agent to continue in charge of the interests and work of our SOCIETY.

Yours in our dear Redeemer, W. E. PAGE.—Iowa.

GOD'S ARMOR THE ONLY PROTECTION

DEAR BRETHREN:—

Since reading in Volume VII, page 126, the paragraph that states God may soon allow the minds of many of his little ones to become an open battleground upon which the fallen angels shall be judged, I have felt prompted to tell you that I have been tried along this line. For some time before I knew anything of the Seventh Volume I had several attacks, the memory of which makes me shudder. It seemed as if something gripped my forehead and forced me to doubt God. I struggled against the malignant influence. God did not seem to be anywhere at all. In awful fear and anguish I went to the Word of God and pleaded for his promised help. If it had not been for divine aid I would have lost my mental balance, but God did not fail me in my time of need. Each attack proved less severe than the former. Still the tight feeling about my head remained. It was very harassing and had a depressing effect and I struggled to get rid of it. At last I came to the conclusion God must be allowing it for a purpose and that I had better count it a "light affliction which is but for a moment." After submission to the will of God, I read the aforesaid paragraph in Volume Seven. It came to me with strange force and almost scared me, but the peace of God through faith in the Father's power came to me and now I am no longer troubled with the gripping feeling in my head. When I cried to God for guidance he brought clearly to my notice the armor of God for the mind, mentioned in Ephesians 6:17. Day by day, I put on these different pieces, and the result is wonderful. Please pray that I may continue to do so. This is my only safe-guard. I may not have been as faithful in the past as I ought to have been, and perhaps that is why the adversary came so close. "Now thanks to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ" "He will not suffer us to be tempted above that we are able, but will with the temptation also make a way of escape that we may be able to bear it." The Morning Resolve, the Vow and the Manna are a great help daily.

Your sincere sister in Christ, J. M.

LOVE AND ZEAL NEVER MORE MANIFEST

DEAR BRETHREN IN THE LORD:—

During the twenty-three years I have enjoyed the "present truth" it was my blessed privilege to visit the Bible House in Allegheny from time to time, remaining three months during the summer of 1902; and after the headquarters were removed to Brooklyn, I came to the "Bethel" several times a year, and while living in Philadelphia, during 1910, 1911, I spent the first Sunday in each month at Brooklyn. During the past four years, and especially since our dear Brother Russell's death, I have been almost daily at the Bethel Home. In view of the foregoing I believe I am in a position to say for your encouragement that never in all these twenty-three years have I witnessed more harmony, more love, more fervent zeal, more joyful service, and in fact more of the Lord's Spirit, than is manifested among the dear friends in the "Bethel" at the present time. This seems to be a very strong evidence of the Lord's favor and blessing upon the management and upon the faithful co-laborers at the Tabernacle and in the Home.

After considerable thought upon the matter, I am firmly convinced that the opposition to the present management is but a subtle effort of the adversary to "throw dust" into the eyes of the Lord's people, and thus to thwart the further publication and circulation of the Seventh Volume, if possible.

And why should there be any objection to the Seventh Volume on the part of any one? Who is most interested in its suppression? Is there anything in this volume which the Lord would disapprove? Surely not! It speaks for itself. Is there anything in it which Satan would wish to oppose? Yea, verily! For does it not lay bare the evils of his government; and will it not cause the complete overthrow of his kingdom, when once the truths of Revelation and Ezekiel are fully comprehended by the people, after "a stone has been bound to the book and it has been cast into Euphrates?"—Jeremiah 51:60-64.

A similar ruse was employed by the great adversary in 1908. Ostensibly, the opposition was directed against the Vow, and our beloved Pastor was made the target of every manner of vilification at that time; but the real issue was the truth about "The Covenants!"

In re the Seventh Volume: it was my privilege some years ago to suggest to Brother Russell the title, "The Finished Mystery," which he then approved as "very good." And the fact that this very title was selected and used by the SOCIETY is strongly convincing to my mind that our beloved Pastor beyond the veil has supervised the writing and publication of this work. So much for external evidence.

And what is the internal evidence? Let each one read for himself and ask the question, "Could anyone have so clearly and harmoniously revealed the hidden things of God except the hand of the Lord had been upon him?" Nay, verily! It would have been impossible! THE FINISHED MYSTERY is indeed the "seventh plague," and IT WILL DO ITS WORK! As for myself, I want to have a little share in bringing about the "Fall of Babylon."

Pray for me, that I may be faithful even unto death.

With Christian love, Yours in "that blessed hope,"

GERTRUDE W. SEIBERT.—N. Y.

THINKS THE SUGGESTION A GOOD ONE

DEAR BRETHREN:—

I was glad to see your recommendation that all the brethren give a copy of Volume Seven to their relatives and friends this Christmas, and thus have a share in accomplishing THE FALL OF BABYLON. If THE WATCH TOWER subscribers would each give away on an average of 10 copies of Vol. VII (which are offered at half price, 30c each, plus expressage, in lots of 10), that would mean at least 300,000 copies of THE FINISHED MYSTERY distributed this Christmas time! Some can give away more than ten copies.

Am now boarding with a Catholic family, and they ask me many questions. They seem to have hearing ears.

With Christian love, yours in his service,

ANNA J. GILLESPIE.—Iowa.

"How can I keep from singing? I feel as did the ruler of the marriage feast in Cana when he said: 'Thou has kept the good wine until now.' Surely, surely, Volume Seven is from the Master. I fully agree with every thought presented therein thus far. Just to think that our dear Master revealed to me last fall the significance of the living creatures of Ezekiel and the four beasts of Rev. 4:6, which has proven to be the KEY to Ezekiel and Revelation. My heart falls prone before Him in praise and thanksgiving for his wonderful manifestation of grace and love. The chariot mentioned on page 63 is wonderful. Of course, the little flock are bound to have a chariot to ride in before they could go to heaven. And who would desire BETTER horsemen than Ezekiel and John? And if it be the Lord's will that we go in a whirlwind of anarchy we need not fear, for our horsemen are perfectly trained and our chariot was made by the Lord himself. What a privilege! 'The cup which my Father hath given me shall I not drink it?' 'This is the victory that overcometh the world EVEN OUR FAITH.' 'Have faith in God.' Have faith in the truth. Have faith in the Seventh volume." J. P. W., Ky.

"What a rich legacy our dear Pastor has left behind him! And I wish to express my thankfulness and appreciation to each one of those who had any part in getting this volume out, and more than this, I pray that each one may be granted a special blessing from the heavenly father as a reward for their labor of love for the dear saints everywhere."

"Have read with deep interest and profit the illuminations of Revelation and Ezekiel. How wise and so wonderful that God should thus hide these things until these great institutions should have served his purpose and demonstrated to an astonished world the subtle and deceptive power of the adversary! How glad we are that his end and complete binding is so near at hand! May this fact and the glorious era of peace and good will to follow, stimulate us all to greater zeal and faithfulness until our change come."

R. I., Ont.

"My heart burned (glowed) with love as I eagerly read from 'To the King of kings and Lord of lords,' then the publishers' preface which I have reread, heartily endorsing it as given by the 'Chief Reaper' who fills our hearts with love for God and for his people, causing me to rejoice and give praise to the Lord for this further evidence of His blessed favor. I was graciously permitted the opportunity to finish its contents in a little over one week."

Mrs. L. E. M., Mo.

"I have read enough of Volume Seven to impress me with the certainty that its individual title 'The Finished Mystery' well applies. It is indeed a wonderful interpretation of the two books of the Bible which the clergy have declared for centuries contained no message for mankind. Some of the able expositors of present truth in giving to the world the above named volume have made easy reading matter of Revelation and Ezekiel. It will surely be blessed of God in conveying a better understanding of the symbolic language of Scripture. It is indeed a fitting apex to the pyramid of Biblical interpretation by that 'faithful servant,' Pastor Russell, who though dead, yet speaketh." S. W. M., Mich.

"In my early childhood my mother had impressed upon my mind that, in time, Revelation would be understood. I used to ponder over the plagues, angels, etc. I knew the beast was the Roman Catholic church but I could not understand the plagues. In due time I learned. Volume Seven came as a complete surprise, and is proving a great pleasure."

M. H. D., Tenn.

"When Volume Seven was handed to me, the surprise made me almost gasp for breath. I am deeply thankful to God for this book and for the loving labors of every hand that has helped produce it." G. K., Okla.

"Imagine my very happy surprise when on opening my P. O. Box I found Volume Seven! Oh, how delighted I was! I am wholly unable to express any appreciation to you for so kindly remembering me. Truly our heavenly Father knoweth what things we have need of and 'is supplying all our needs according to his riches in Christ Jesus.'"

H. R., Texas.

"We cannot tell you how much we are anticipating enjoying Volume Seven nor of the hearts full of thankfulness and love to God and to you, as we read it. We surely realize that the Lord is using the same channel in dispensing meat in due season. We assure you of our loyal support now and to the end and recognize that our dear Brother Rutherford was surely chosen of the Lord to lead the church to the end of her journey." A. E. W. W., Ohio.

"I am eighty-two years old and have often wondered, 'Would I live to see the Seventh Volume of the world's most wonderful series of God's mysteries unfolded?' 'Praise the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me bless his holy name.'" G. H., W. Va.

"We accept Volume Seven heartily and fully as the last and final serving at our heavenly Father's table, what has been so sumptuously spread with delicious viands of truth from Jehovah, by His dear Son through that 'Faithful Servant' our dear Pastor. We also perceive it to be the fiery chariot that will separate the Elijah and Elisha classes."

E. A. S. W., R. I.

"I feel that my cup of joy overflows. I rejoice that it is due time for this solemn message, and I desire to use Volume Seven as the 'chariot' that shall help me mount to the skies." MRS. E. B., Mass.

"The arrangement of Volume Seven, of chapter and verses with comments, is most satisfying. It makes the Sword of the Spirit shine brighter and renders its use more facile and effective. There is much in it to incite heart-searching as to faith, loyalty and love; much to arouse us to watchfulness, and to admonish 'My soul, be on thy guard'; much to cause thanksgiving and praise. To all who in any measure had any share in compiling the Seventh Volume I send my thanks and assure them of my prayers ascending to our heavenly Father in their behalf. Theirs has been a labor of love and of sacrifice. It may bring them persecution and suffering. If so, let ours be the privilege of building around them a wall of prayer to help comfort and sustain them." I. M. F., Pa.

"The way Volume Seven came to me was a great surprise—without any notice of its being off the press! I assure you it brings us much rejoicing and blessing of heart, and this is only a beginning of what we will receive by our further studies of this volume." E. L. M., Ind.

"Volume Seven is precious beyond any dollar value—I would be glad if the payment were a thousand times more, I've only had time to taste a little of this 'meat in due season' and oh! it's so good. Oh, how good God is! His ways are past understanding." MRS. I. W. L., Neb.

"The Lord has indeed multiplied my blessings this day by the safe and unexpected arrival of the Seventh Volume. My joy was so evident when the post woman delivered it that she had to know about it and was glad to get Volume One for herself. 'My cup runneth over.'

"At our Praise meeting tonight the testimonies were full of thanksgiving for this very precious completing volume. The immediate effect of the short time already given to Volume Seven is a heart full of gratitude to God and a reiteration of my consecration to him; also deep thankfulness to our Lord Jesus, who has girded himself during this harvest period and is serving us with so rich a feast culminating in Volume Seven, through that 'faithful servant,' our beloved Brother Russell (who seems very near to us though parted from us for a brief while). The preceding six volumes are made still more precious by the possession of the Seventh. Truly we are thoroughly furnished." F. H. W., Scotland.

"Brethren, I cannot fully express my appreciation and joy in the Truth, and especially for Volume Seven."

"Volume Seven has brought a rich blessing to me. How thankful we are that we can trust all things to our blessed Master, knowing of a truth that his storehouse is full of rich blessings for those that love him, and are called according to his purpose!" O. W. H., Ohio.

"One of the grandest things in Volume Seven appealing to me is that it is thought that 1918 may be the year that the church will be taken from the world. That is the greatest desire I have." MRS. L. E. B., Miss.

"Thanks for having confidence to believe that the dear Volume would be appreciated. Yes I want to say may the dear Lord bless the compilers, publishers, editors, mailers, and the brethren for their zeal for him. The book is indeed a feast to the children of God." J. D. G., Ga.

"In reading Volume Seven, 'my soul shall be satisfied as with marrow and fatness and my mouth shall praise Thee with joyful lips.' I greet my WATCH TOWER with eager hands and thrilling heart; for to me it is the blest tie that binds us all in him and brings sweet fellowship." M. M., Kan.

DATE OF DISTRIBUTION—SUNDAY, DEC. 30

The B. S. M. Volunteer Matter bearing the title THE FALL OF BABYLON, is being shipped to the various classes ordering the same. It is expected that the classes will have these papers by the latter part of December. Sunday, December 30th, is the date set for the distribution of this B. S. M. Where the territory is large and cannot be covered in one day, then we suggest that the work be continued on the 31st and on January 1st, the latter being a holiday. Please distribute none of these papers before December 30th. It will be well to neatly fold each paper and place under the door or in private letter boxes. Previous to the date set the territory should be systematically divided and each one desiring to work assigned to his or her territory, that the work may be done thoroughly and quickly.

IN RE MILITARY SERVICE

A number of the brethren throughout the country are asking us with reference to non-combatant service. The Selective Draft Act passed by Congress May 18th, this year, provides that no one is exempt from service which the President may declare is non-combatant. The President, up to the present time, has not defined what is non-combatant service, and, as we are advised by a high official, it is his intention not to do so. When Congress convenes again it is our understanding that the matter will be taken up and that body asked to define what is non-combatant service. Thus it is seen that at this time there is no such thing as non-combatant service that is officially defined.

As the law now stands, nobody aside from the President has any authority to define what is non-combatant service, so then if the Local Board of Exemption announces to any one that they will be given non-combatant service, such a statement is very indefinite and uncertain. In all probability no non-combatant service will be defined for several months in the future.

We have been asked how many adherents to the INTERNATIONAL BIBLE STUDENTS ASSOCIATION there are in the United States. From the names on our WATCH TOWER list we would answer, there are approximately 75,000 adherents. How many of these are fully consecrated we do not know. There are millions who support much of the doctrine taught by Pastor Russell and the I. B. S. A.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

Few realize the amount of work necessary to bring up all the Good Hopes accounts for the year, and to credit individually the thousands of monthly remittances and carry them forward to the voting-share record. Last year it was necessary to use an extra force of assistants for over six weeks. This year we adopted the method of sending out the proxy blanks first, so that each one who had voting shares could fill out quickly and return. It has been found necessary to close all records on November 30th, in order that there may be time to have the individual records listed, checked, verified and signed in time for the election, Jan. 5th.

Proxies, to be valid for voting, must be dated and signed by the shareholder. Have the signature witnessed. Additionally all proxies must be certified by the Secretary and President of the SOCIETY. Such proxies are then Voting Certificates. Even though you expect to be personally present at the Annual Meetings, you must sign and send your proxy to the Secretary so that it may be properly certified and returned to you. Do not wait until the convention convenes. Such delay would cause confusion and would probably be too late. All proxies should be in the hands of the Secretary no later than Dec. 10th. After being certified they will be returned to you by mail, or delivered to you or to your proxy in person at the convention. Write nothing on the back of the proxy blank except your instructions to the party who holds your shares. Use a separate sheet for orders or letters.

We shall make no reply to any further papers sent out by the opposition. We realize it is only a desperate attempt on the part of the adversary to hinder the harvest work which is shaking the very foundations of his kingdom. We prefer above everything else the approval of our Lord; and the evidence of his blessing upon the work of the past year, and especially during the last few months is, to our mind, abundant evidence of his approval, and we therefore leave the matter in his hands, knowing that he is well able to care for his own, and bring the full truth to light in his own time. We have nothing to hide and nothing to fear, but a great and glorious work to do quickly.—Nehemiah 6:3.

When the earnest laborers in the Lord's harvest field have carefully considered this report, we believe it will bring them joy and encouragement. It has been truly said that "Nothing succeeds like success." To succeed in the Lord's work means to have the blessing of the Lord; and "The blessing of the Lord, it maketh rich, and he addeth no sorrow with it." (Proverbs 10:22) Therefore the trials which he permits to come to us, if properly received, bring a blessing; and hence we rejoice in tribulation, thankful in our hearts for all the way he leads us.

The year 1917 has been a strenuous one. The nations of earth are in great distress and perplexity as to what course shall be taken, and the hearts of men are failing them for what they see must be the inevitable result. Those who have no faith in prophecy cannot see the rapid weakening of the governments. Revolution merging into anarchy is now the order in Russia, a condition which is certain to follow in the other European nations. The public press quotes Mr. Gerard as saying, "When the revolution starts in Germany it will be so terrible that it will make the French Revolution look like a picnic." Earthquakes, disasters, famine, pestilence, etc., are all taking their place in the time of trouble, in fulfilment of the prophetic words of the Lord Jesus. Such great sorrow, suffering and distress in the world would discourage even the Christian, were it not for the assuring words of the Master, saying, "When these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh."—Luke 21:28.

THE MASTER THE CHIEF REAPER

It is the tendency of almost everyone to lean upon some other person. Recognizing Brother Russell as the Lord's messenger to the Laodicean church and as the Lord's chosen servant for the period of the harvest, coupled with his strong personality, his kind and loving manner, all of the Lord's people of the present time who knew him were led to more or less lean upon him. He was a wonderful man, and wonderfully used of the Lord. It pleased the Lord to take him away from the field of earthly activities, and his passing was a great shock to others in the harvest field. It was the thought of many that his entering the kingdom marked the end of the work.

The year 1917 opened with rather a discouraging outlook. Necessarily there were some misgivings, some doubts and fears. The trials came thick and fast; but with each trial came increased blessing as a further evidence that the Lord is still the Chief Reaper, and that the harvest is not the work of man, but the Lord's work. True to his promise, he "turned his hand upon his little ones," and has "opened the windows of heaven and poured out a blessing" upon his people beyond their greatest expectations or hopes. More and more his people began to realize that the work of the harvest does not depend upon any person or persons, but that the Lord is amply capable of performing his own sovereign will and accomplishing his purposes in his own due time.

THE WORK AT BROOKLYN

Shortly before the death of Brother Russell he had determined upon a reorganization of the office force; and to this end he made several changes and gave directions concerning others. These were carried out; and the Lord's guiding hand and overruling providences in this behalf are plainly to be seen. The reorganization of the office force upon a strictly business and economic basis was completed and is now moving with a smoothness and efficiency that should characterize any well-managed institution, accomplishing more work with less effort. The members of the office force realize that it is a privilege and not a right to be in the office; and each one vies with the other to do his or her part of the work in an efficient manner and to the glory of the Lord. The same may be said of the management of the Bethel Home. Everyone in both the home and the office is happy; and "the peace of God which passeth all human understanding" is enjoyed by all.

It took some time, of course, to become accustomed to the home and the office without the presence of Brother Russell, but those having and manifesting the spirit of the Lord have learned to lean more and more upon the Lord and to strive to be a blessing to others. That Brother Russell on the other side the veil has had much to do with the management of the office, the home and the work of the harvest on this side the veil, we verily believe. These things were dearest to his heart of all things on earth. He had devoted his life to this special work. He had established the Bethel Home and the office arrangement. Who would be more interested in having these used to the glory of the Lord than Brother Russell? It was his interpretation of Revelation 14:13 that the saints in glory beyond the veil still participate in the work this side the veil during the period of the harvest. Commenting upon that Scripture, he said:

"One by one the 'feet' class will pass from the present condition, in which, though often weary and wounded, they are always rejoicing, to the other side of the veil—'changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye,' from mortality to immortality, from weakness to power, from dishonor to glory, from human to heavenly conditions, from animal to spirit bodies. Instead of the kingdom waiting for the living members to finish their course, the kingdom work began at once; and the living ones on this side the veil are privileged to know 'the mysteries of the kingdom' and to engage in kingdom work before their 'change'; and as they die will not fall 'asleep,' but will be 'changed' in the moment of death, resurrected as part of the blessed and holy first resurrection.

"Their work will not cease with this change; for all those who will be counted worthy of that change to glory will be already enlisted in the service of the kingdom on this side the veil: only the weariness, the labor feature, will cease with the change. We may not be able to judge accurately as to what features of the great work are now being carried on by the Lord and his glorified saints beyond the veil; but we may be sure that they are active participants in the work assigned to the members of the same kingdom class whose course and service are not yet ended on this side the veil—the harvest work."

THE FINISHED MYSTERY

For years Brother Russell held and taught that the church nominal, Catholic and Protestant, would federate; that they would be recognized more or less by the civil powers; that the church nominal constitutes "Babylon"; that the association of the ecclesiastical with the civil powers is an abomination in the sight of the Lord; that the members of the church this side the veil, particularly during the latter part of the harvest, were typed by John the Baptist; that the "John" class would probably give a strong rebuke to "Babylon"; that the rebuke would consist of a plain proclamation of the truth, exposing the error; and that this work would just precede the settling down of the "dark night when no man can work" in the harvest field; and that "Babylon" must fall. He was fully convinced that such work must be done. At a question meeting held at one of the conventions in 1916 by Brother Russell, in answering a question concerning the judgment and the binding of kings and nobles, he said:

"The two-edged sword means the Word of God. That must mean here [this side the veil], for no one will be smiting anything with a two-edged sword over there. This two-edged sword in the hands of the saints means that while they are resting in their faith, they have the Word of God, sharp and powerful, and with it are able to oppose everything opposed to the truth. All this belongs to this side of the veil. These are the saints who are to execute the judgments written. How? I cannot give all the details. Undoubtedly there will be a great many details when we reach that time. We should be ready to take any part which the Lord may give us. He will give all of his people a share. We shall see what this judging may mean a little later on. The river Jordan means a judgment, and the smiting of this judgment may mean to put the truth in such a way as to do the judging. The Elijah will handle this sword."

Up to the very day of his change Brother Russell was bending every effort to prepare for the smiting of "Babylon." It should be carefully marked that the message of truth in due time constitutes the sharp, two-edged sword; and that the antitypical Elijah class, otherwise designated as the antitypical "John" class, would be used of the Lord to send forth this message of truth far and wide, that it might accomplish the divine purposes.

Following Brother Russell's "change," an Executive Committee, composed of Brothers Ritchie, Van Amburgh and Rutherford, was appointed to manage the affairs of the SOCIETY until the annual election in January, 1917. Within a short time after the creation of this committee, it was brought to the attention of its members that Brothers Woodworth and Fisher had some understanding and interpretations of Revelation and Ezekiel that might be helpful; and since Brother Russell had stated that some one else would write the Seventh Volume, and since he had stated that the Seventh Volume would come to the church, and since the Scriptures clearly set forth that there must be seven volumes of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES, the Committee carefully considered the matter and decided to have the two brethren named write manuscript and compile what had been written by Brother Russell upon the prophecies of Ezekiel and Revelation. No promise whatsoever was made by the committee to these brethren as to whether the manuscript would be used.

Early in the summer of 1917 the manuscript was completed; and after a careful and prayerful consideration, it was believed to be the Lord's will that it should be published and given out to the church. The readers of THE WATCH TOWER are familiar with the fact that it was published, and about the middle of July was sent to all WATCH TOWER subscribers, and on the 17th of July was delivered to the Bethel family. It was prepared under the direction of the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY, as will be seen by reference to the preface. The name of the SOCIETY likewise appears on the outside of the cover. Upon the title page appears the name of the INTERNATIONAL BIBLE STUDENTS ASSOCIATION, which has likewise appeared on the title pages of the other volumes for several years; and the copyright was put in the name of the PEOPLES PULPIT ASSOCIATION. Thus it is seen that all three of the corporations, which jointly are used to carry on the harvest work, participated in the putting out of the book; and its publication was fully accomplished by "the messenger" of Revelation 14:18—the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY, which is maintained by the sacrifice of the saints of God.

In harmony with the expectation of the Lord's "little ones," who had been engaged in the harvest work, this, THE FINISHED MYSTERY, the seventh of the series of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES, contains a clear exposition of the prophecies of Ezekiel and Revelation. Never has there been any publication which so clearly defines "Babylon," outlines her wrongful course, and exposes her fraudulent practices, as the Seventh Volume. This book is designated "the Point of the Sword," which is set against the Babylonish systems, and which, cutting away the mask, exposes the true nature and foretells the imminent fall of Babylon. (Ezekiel 21:15) The "Point of the Sword" is sharp on both sides. It truly represents the testimony of the two great prophetic books of the Bible—Revelation and Ezekiel. Can there be a reasonable doubt that the message of the Seventh Volume is the instrument in the hands of the Lord's consecrated, the antitypical Elijah class, with which the smiting is to be done? And since Brother Russell stated, "The Elijah class will handle this sword; he will give all of his people a share," is it at all unreasonable to expect that in due time the truly consecrated and earnest workers in the harvest field will grasp the sword, and go forth with joyful hearts to the performance of the duties and privileges placed in their hands by the Lord?

ITS PHENOMENAL SUCCESS

When the book was first published, it was thought that less than 100,000 volumes would be required, and a contract was made by the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY with the printers for the manufacture of less than 100,000 volumes. This number was soon exhausted, and more were ordered. Near the close of our fiscal year the demand became so great—colporteurs everywhere reporting so much interest manifested by the public, the orders coming in with such rapidity—that up to this time we have found it necessary to give orders for the 850,000 edition. Many of the classes, following the suggestions of THE WATCH TOWER of October 1st, have organized for the sale of the Seventh Volume; and hundreds of the friends who have heretofore had no active part in the colporteur service are now placing many volumes in the hands of the people. Many order-loving people, heretofore entire strangers to the harvest message, are receiving the message of Volume Seven with gladness of heart. If space would permit we could insert many statements similar to the following:

"It is the most wonderful book I have ever read. It has shown me clearly what is wrong with the churches and the clergy; and I don't want to go there any more."

Another said, "It has cleared all the mists away. No wonder I could get no satisfaction from the churches!"

Another wrote, "I always realized there was something wrong with the systems, but never could define the trouble until I got this book. I want to get out of Babylon while the getting is good."

The sale of the Seventh Volume is unparallelled by the sale of any other book known, in the same length of time, excepting the Bible. The classes that are using it as a Berean study report wonderful blessings. It is not claimed that the book is perfect, nor was this claim made for the preceding six volumes. No imperfect creature could produce any perfect thing. A number of typographical errors have been corrected in the second edition. Others will be corrected as found. It is not claimed that all interpretations are perfect, nor would such claim be made for any of the series of the seven volumes; but that the hand of the Lord has supervised its publication and distribution must be evident to all who have been watching the Lord's direction of the harvest, and who have joyfully participated in that portion that has come to them.

We are pleased to announce that the translation of the Seventh Volume into Swedish and French has already been accomplished, and both are to be off the press this month, in Europe. As soon as we can fill orders in these or other languages, announcement will be made in these columns. It is being translated and published by instalments in the German, Polish and Greek WATCH TOWERS. It is being translated into four other foreign languages, and doubtless will be translated into many more soon.

"THIS HONOR HAVE ALL HIS SAINTS"

Brother Russell long ago stated in THE WATCH TOWER that the "penny" of Matthew 20:2-17 constitutes "kingdom honors." From the quotation above made, he mentions the honor that will come to the kingdom class in binding the kings and nobles and in executing the judgments by the sword. He further stated that the giving of the "penny" surely means something that will occur in this present life this side the veil, and that it would take place at the end of the age; that those coming into the harvest field recently have an equal opportunity with those who have been long in the service in wielding the sword according to the Lord's appointed purposes. Further commenting upon the "penny," Brother Russell said:

> "We can think of only one way, and that is to apply the parable entirely to present life experiences of the kingdom class, especially those who will be living at the close of the Gospel age, and as greater knowledge of present truth is now coming as a reward to all who will labor at all in the vineyard of the Lord, let us not be surprised if this should be equally distributed to those who have come in recently with those who have been a long time in the Master's service."—Z '14, 171-172.

It is with sincere joy that we are privileged to report that amongst the activities of the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY for 1917 the Seventh Volume of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES has been published, and is now going forth. We count this as another one of the strong proofs that the harvest is nearing the end, and that in all probability the Spring of 1918 will mark the beginning of the closing up of all activities of the kingdom class on this side the veil. Truly the message of Volume Seven has caused a great light to shine upon the pathway of the Elijah class, and with joy they can sing:

"And heaven shines clearer
And rest comes nearer
At each step of the way."

CONVENTIONS OF HIS PEOPLE

For a number of years it has been the custom of the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY to hold one or more general conventions, at which all believers in the ransom sacrifice are welcome. It has always been recognized that these conventions are stimulating, building up those who attend in the "most holy faith" and keeping their minds fixed upon that great convention of the "general assembly of the church of the first borns" to which we have all been looking forward. Having in mind that we were nearing the end of the way, and desiring to heed the words of the Apostle, "Not forsaking the assembling of yourselves together, as the manner of some is, but exhorting one another, and so much the more as ye see the day approaching" (Hebrews 10:25), we felt that it would be especially pleasing to the Lord that his people assemble in convention in 1917.

The SOCIETY put forth a strenuous effort to have one general convention at a central point in the United States, with a view to having all the friends assemble there who could possibly come. So many things interfered with arrangements for the holding of such a convention that we came to the conclusion that it was not the Lord's will to attempt to have it. We wondered if we could have a convention at all without Brother Russell being present in the flesh, and yet we felt sure it would be pleasing to the Lord that his people come together. About the time our efforts for this general convention failed, requests began to pour into the office from all parts of the country, asking for conventions to be held. Arrangements were made to hold a few conventions. These were attended with such manifest approval of the Lord, and such a wonderful blessing to his people, that it was determined to respond to the call of the church in so far as possible; and consequently the SOCIETY responded, arranging the routes of the traveling pilgrim brethren and others of the office force so that small conventions might be held in various parts of the United States.

Since August the first up to this time, twenty-one of these conventions have been held, not one of which was held except upon the earnest request of the local classes. Those who have attended can testify to the wonderful blessings coming to them. Everywhere the spirit of the Lord has been manifest, and it is our belief that Brother Russell beyond the veil has been permitted to have some part in these conventions. Those who are privileged to manage the work of the SOCIETY claim no credit whatsoever, but humbly and joyfully acknowledge the Lord's favor in having any part in these assemblies which have strengthened his people in the hour of greatest stress that has yet come upon the world or upon the church. These conventions have not only strengthened the faith of the many attending, but have enthused many to lay aside earthly weights and joyfully enter the harvest field. The requests for such conventions continue to pour in, and we take this as an indication from the Lord that it is his will that the SOCIETY continue to arrange for them.

THE PRIGRIM SERVICE

It has always pleased the Lord to have the message of the kingdom proclaimed by word of mouth. The pilgrim service has been greatly blessed by the Lord since the SOCIETY inaugurated it. The meetings held by the various pilgrim brethren have brought many blessings to the consecrated and to the public. The greatest number of pilgrims engaged in the work in 1916 was 69. Conditions became such that some of these are no longer engaged in the pilgrim service, but the Lord seemingly has been pleased to raise up others to perform this part of his work. At this time there is a total of 93 brethren engaged in this branch of the service, which we believe has not been exceeded during any year of the harvest. Below is a brief summary of the pilgrim work for this year:

Engaged in pilgrim service	93
Miles traveled	617,186
Towns visited	6,672
Public meetings	1,956
Semi-public meetings	3,287
Total attendance	850,734

VOLUNTEER SERVICE

The army of the Lord has done a great volunteer service in this country during the year. By this we mean the publication and free distribution of the BIBLE STUDENTS MONTHLY. Two editions have been published and distributed, aggregating 28,665,000 copies. The third edition of approximately 10,000,000 is now enroute to the classes to be distributed on December 30th of this year, and the first of January of next year. We have had many responses to these papers, testifying that they have brought blessings to many hearts.

OTHER BRANCHES OF THE WORK

The PHOTO-DRAMA OF CREATION has been shown during the year at various places, and interest in it still continues, the total attendance for the year being 292,338. The number of productions was 678. The Eureka Drama productions were 901 and the total attendance 62,483.

Since it is contrary to the terms of the Charter of our Association for the SOCIETY to engage in the manufacture and sale of Angelophone machines, it became necessary to put this branch of work in other hands, and it is still continuing. It being entirely in harmony, however, for the SOCIETY to still manufacture and sell the records for the Angelophone, arrangements were made with the brother who took over the Angelophone Company, whereby the SOCIETY finances the reproduction of the records. These new records have proven very satisfactory, and furnish another means that the Lord is using to give the message of glad tidings to those having hearing ears.

The pastoral work has been greatly blessed during the year. For the year 1916 there were 350 classes engaged in the pastoral work. During the first part of the year 1917 there was a slight increase, but later in the year more classes engaged in it, and the total number engaged in pastoral work for 1917 was 924. The results have been very gratifying, many hearing the truth and making full consecration and symbolizing this consecration; a number of new Berean Bible classes have been established.

THE COLPORTEUR WORK

Many of the dear brethren who heretofore have been engaged in the colporteur work were compelled to engage in secular business in order to provide themselves with the necessities of life. Consequently during the year 1916 there were only 372 colporteurs. During the year 1917 this number has been increased to 461, regularly engaged in colporteur service. Added to this, 355 classes have duly organized and are carrying on the special colporteur work. By this means the county where the class is located is divided into smaller sections, and everyone of the consecrated who desires to have a part in this work is assigned to a small district until he has finished, and then assigned to another district until the territory is entirely covered. Some of the classes have as many as 100 engaged in the colporteur work, many of whom have never before had any experience; but they report some very splendid results and many blessings of the Lord. If we count 10 members as the average of a class doing the colporteur work, we have 3550 special colporteurs and 461 regular colporteurs, which at this time would aggregate 4011 engaged in the colporteur work; and from the daily reports coming to the office we anticipate this number will more than double very shortly. We give below a comparative summary of the output of the various publications for the years 1915, 1916 and 1917:

	1915	1916	1917
STUDIES (English and foreign)	362,344	265,495	574,838
Drama Scenarios (bound books)	55,630	70,000	87,567
Mannas and other books	53,355	42,000	95,898
Booklets (English and foreign)	88,447	110,000	191,719
THE WATCH TOWER (24 issues)	1,272,000	1,128,000	1,211,000
German WATCH TOWER (12 issues)	24,000	24,000	25,000
Polish WATCH TOWER (12 issues)	24,000	17,000	19,000

Our correspondence for this year has been unusually heavy. We have endeavored with the well-organized office force to handle this as rapidly as possible.

AUDITORS' REPORT

At various times heretofore the books of the SOCIETY have been audited by a committee selected by Brother Russell for that purpose. At a recent meeting of the Board of Directors an auditing committee was selected and notified to come to the office and make thorough examination and audit of the books and accounts of the SOCIETY. The report of this auditing committee appears below and speaks for itself:

The undersigned committee, upon request of the President and the Secretary-Treasurer of the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY, submit the following report:

On the 8th day of December, 1917, an examination of the books of the SOCIETY was made at the office in the Brooklyn Tabernacle, 13-17 Hicks Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., said examination covering the period of the fiscal year, Nov. 1, 1916 to the close of business, Oct. 31, 1917.

The books were found in excellent condition, accurately kept, with the accounts stated fully and clearly.

The SOCIETY'S cash was found to be properly deposited in banks, trust companies and safety deposit vaults.

The system of accounting used in the office seems admirably adapted for the purpose of the SOCIETY. The office has been organized on an excellent efficiency basis, the space, material and personnel being used in a manner that commands our highest commendation.

With our knowledge of corporations doing large business, we doubt whether it would be possible to find elsewhere the same amount of business transacted with the same number of employes.

Every feature of the office work, the forms used, and the methods employed, bespeak the utmost economy in time and money.

The committee finds the stock of books and other literature kept in an orderly manner, and that the amount of stock is kept at the lowest point consistent with good management, and that the movement of the stock is expedited by every known means.

The transportation of large shipments to various parts of the country is made expeditious and economical, whereever possible, by forwarding direct from the factory.

The record of voting shares kept by the Secretary-Treasurer we find to be complete and accurate.

FINANCIAL CONDITION

Never during the harvest has the Lord's approval and loving kindness been made more manifest in his provision for the carrying on of his work than during this year. At the beginning of the fiscal year the contributions came rather slowly. For the first four months they were about like the first part of 1915; but in the latter part of the fiscal year, particularly from August until the close of the year on October 31st, 1917, contributions to the Tract Fund greatly increased, and by comparing this with the previous reports published in THE WATCH TOWER it will be seen that for the fiscal year 1917 the contributions exceeded any yet in the history of the SOCIETY, with the exception of the two phenomenal years of 1913 and 1914. The zeal and earnestness manifested by the friends in sending in their sacrifices has been an inspiration to those who have read their communications. We append hereto a copy of the financial statement issued by the auditing committee, which is self-explanatory:

The audit of the books of the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY for the fiscal year ending October 31, 1917, is in detail as follows:

Receipts
Good Hopes and Tract Fund Donations		$219,545.41
Expenditures
Pilgrim Service	$27,700.63
Free Literature, Books, etc.	54,544.20
Sent to Foreign Fields	24,512.20
Pastoral Work	282.24
Various Conventions	2,866.00
Repayment of advances made in 1915 (See Z. '15-373 and '16-389. $100,713.09 minus $20,000.00)	80,713.09
Balance on hand	28,927.05
		$219,545.41

It is proper that we mention the fact that by reference to the report for 1915 it will be seen that the SOCIETY borrowed a large sum. It will be observed on the financial sheet of 1917 that after repaying this amount there is still a balance of the approximate sum of $28,000 to the credit of the Good Hopes fund. It should be observed, however, that the needs of the foreign branches are such that it has been necessary for us to remit to them a goodly amount since the close of the fiscal year. It is also necessary for us to carry a large stock of paper in order that we may have our books and tracts promptly manufactured. During the month of November alone it was necessary for us to order 18 carloads of paper at an average cost of $2,000.00 per car. Paper this year is much higher than it has been in previous years. It will thus be seen by reference to the financial report that the SOCIETY is in a healthy financial condition, but as it has always been the policy of the SOCIETY to use the money as it came in, the preparation for the work in the near future will quickly absorb the balance to the credit of the Good Hopes fund. Our future operations will be governed as the Lord may indicate by providing the means.

We are pleased to announce that the Brooklyn Tabernacle and the Bethel Home are free from all debt or encumbrance, and since the disposition of the New York City Temple, which was heavily mortgaged, the SOCIETY has no debts upon which it is required to pay interest.

For all the Lord's leadings and blessings in this behalf we are indeed grateful, and to him we give all the credit and praise for every feature of the service.

REFERENDUM VOTE

As heretofore announced in THE WATCH TOWER, upon the suggestion of others the classes were asked to meet at their respective places of assembly on the 21st day of November, and cast a referendum vote as to who should constitute the servants of the SOCIETY in the capacity of Directors and officers for the ensuing year. The following well known brethren; namely, E. H. Thomson, Gen. W. P. Hall, and J. T. D. Pyles, of Washington, D. C., consented to act as a committee to receive and tabulate the vote, and report. Some of the classes laboring under a misapprehension, as we are advised, neglected to take that vote; but the classes voting and thus far reported to the committee, show returns as given below:

FOREIGN WORK

The harvest work in the foreign field still has the Lord's blessing, notwithstanding the great stress. In Germany the pilgrim service, colporteur work and the harvest work in general are still progressing. The Bible House is maintained, but its management from the headquarters is conducted through a representative of the SOCIETY in a neutral country. The work in general is in very good condition, we are pleased to report.

The first public meeting held in Holland was in the summer of 1913. Considerable interest was then manifested, and now we have two representatives in Holland and much interest in the Lord's cause is being aroused.

The condition of the work in other foreign fields will appear from the reports, some of which are published below, and others will be published in subsequent issues.

REPORT OF BRITISH BRANCH

DEAR BROTHER RUTHERFORD:—

I have pleasure in enclosing a summary of the output of books and tracts in the British Harvest Field during the year which ended with us on October 31st last, the memorial to us of our dear Brother Russell's death. I have also the pleasure of giving you herewith a brief review of the year's work. The year has been in some ways the strangest of years for us. We have had our trials and difficulties; and these have come in unexpected ways, and from unexpected quarters. But the year has been one of the best that we have had in the whole of our experience in the harvest work, and we have very much for which to thank the Lord. Looking at the figures which we are enabled to report, we are surprised that during the third year of the great European war we are able to show so good a report. The pressure of the Military Service Act began to be felt at the opening of our financial year, and it has continued. Our young men, those who made in almost every ecclesia the dynamic force of the class, have been taken away from us. The Chief Reaper has seen fit to take them out of the harvest field, and he has placed them in strange situations. Many of them are together in various settlements in the country, and they are enabled to look back over their experiences, and in many cases they are enabled to "try" one another. Also they have the privilege of gladly helping each other toward that rounding out of the character which the Master desires to have. It seems as if the general experience of the harvest work this year has emphasized this latter feature: probably the harvesters have more than at any time felt that the benefit of the work was for themselves rather than those for whom they seemed to labor.

I will now give you a brief account of the various branches of the work, beginning with the

Pilgrim Service

In this branch of the work we report with pleasure, and with thankfulness of heart to our heavenly Father, a considerable increase of activity. We were, by the favour of the Lord, able to use the time and talents of good, loyal brethren who had, if not the whole time, at least a considerable portion of their time free for this service. The result is that there has been more visitation of the British classes than at any time in the history of the harvest work. The letters from all the classes are full of gratitude and appreciation of the labour and ministry of our pilgrim brethren; and it is abundantly evident that the blessing of the Lord has been with us in this branch of the service. There is a very close bond of union between the brethren in this country at this time; and we believe the Lord will bless us even more abundantly.

Colporteur Work

The colporteur work has not been so brisk as last year, nor indeed as brisk, we think, as it might have been. We give all honour to the dear brethren who have continued in that work, and who have wrought so hard and so well. Our output of books is 62,685, which is only 9,000 less than last year. Most of these books have, of course, been put out by the colporteurs, and a fair proportion of them have been sold in the Drama follow-up work.

Volunteer Work

Our output of volunteer literature has fallen considerably. There are two main factors in this decline: the fact that our workers are depleted—many active young men who engaged in this work having been taken away from us—and the shortage of paper. In the early part of the year it was almost impossible to buy paper, and the price asked was very heavy. Then we did not receive our copy from America for quite a while, and thus we thought it might not be the Lord's will for us to force open a door. However, as soon as the Lord gave liberty, we hurried the work forward; and our brethren speedily got out a good edition of the "World on Fire," B. S. M. No. 91. Altogether a total of 3,300,000 has been distributed during the year. Our output of tracts, including those to advertise the Drama, is 4,100,000, which may be said to be about one-third of a late average good year.

PHOTO-DRAMA

The Drama has done well, though we must use that word in a comparative sense. It seemed as if its days here were numbered. There was nothing doing. But in late Spring, the Lord opened the way. One of our dear brethren who had conditional exemption from the Military Service wrought hard and long, and we have been able, by his and other willing service, to run one exhibition, as might be said, almost continuously; that is, we have taken one exhibition to a town, evening only, for four days, concluding with the finale on Sundays. The results have been very gratifying, almost as good as if we had had an eight days show with two exhibitions per day. Even in this limited way we have had over 9,000 names for colporteur calls; and very good results have, on the whole, been obtained. It seems as if the Lord were about to open the Drama door a little wider, and there is a possibility of a good witness yet being given by this means. The Photo-Drama is very acceptable everywhere. Any town would take it regularly; and it would be a continuous attraction, though of course we seek to do that which is best in the general interests of the harvest field.

Pastoral Work

The pastoral work is new to us this year, and we on this side were late in starting. For several reasons it seemed impossible to begin until the year was well advanced. The number of classes which have taken up this work is seventy-eight; and though our reports are not all that we can desire in showing results, yet we know that the Lord has blessed the work very much. There are many today who are fully consecrated to the Lord but who, before they were visited by the pastoral workers, did not know the way of consecration, even though their hearts were leaning towards the Lord, and who did not know the joy of his glorious plan. Our hearts are made glad as we think of the blessings which have come through this work. The sisters are rejoicing in their opportunities of service, and the Lord is blessing them very much.

Finance

The financial side of the work has been easy; for there has been no difficulty whatever here. The contributions of the Lord's people to the work have not stopped; and the brethren generally have expressed their confidence that the office still represented the Lord's work, and that the Lord would take care of that which was committed to him. This has been shown by an increase of over £1000 compared with last year, and we have been very thankful for these indications of the Lord's good pleasure.

Seventh Volume

There is one feature of the work which remains to be mentioned—the Seventh Volume. We should have been very pleased if we could have reported to you that the brethren had this in hand, and that its message was being spread. As you know we could not get this circulated here because of lack of the necessary plates. At the time of writing the plates are not yet in hand, and it may be that there will be difficulties in getting them through the importation burrage. However, this matter is in the Lord's hands, and we quite understand that it is of his providence that the plates are on this side and so near to us. Paper also is a difficulty. We ordered paper many months ago, but we have not yet got a delivery of it. However, no doubt the paper will be ready just about the time when the plates are ready; and then when we are through with the printing and other litle difficulties—and the printers and binders are very busy with the trashy books which fill our book-stalls—we shall hope to put the Seventh Volume in circulation in time to get it into the hearts of the brethren and into the hands of those to whom the Lord would send it.

We would urge the dear British brethren who read this report, and who have ability to serve in the colporteur work, to consider very specially in the sight of the Lord the privilege of this work before the hours of service are ended. Those who cannot enter into that work directly may still do so by praying the Lord of the harvest to send laborers into his service; for still it is true the harvest is great, but the laborers are few.

The general condition of the country is one of prosperity; and certainly it is true that there are weary hearts to comfort, hungry souls to be fed as never before. The devastating effects of this terrible war are making many long for something they feel ought to be there, but which they do not get. They have asked for bread; they got a stone. We are thankful for signs of a movement towards an increase of work in the colporteur field, and we believe that there will yet be a good work done.

THE WATCH TOWER continues to be welcomed as always; and the brethren receive it as they have been accustomed to do, as the channel conveying to them the Lord's blessing. We regularly pray that the Lord will bless this channel to His people, that they may be fed and led. The spiritual health of the brethren continues good. The Tabernacle congregation continues with one heart and mind, waiting upon the Lord; and the congregations in the larger centres—Glasgow, Edinburgh, Liverpool, Birmingham, Manchester, Oldham and Bristol—are continuing in the way of the Lord in faith and patient labor. The many other classes are laboring as faithfully and patiently, and we should be glad to mention them all to you. It is a pleasure to us to think that you know so many of the British friends, and that you are familiar with British conditions.

It has been a pleasure to me as I have visited the British friends to find them loyal to the SOCIETY and to yourself as its President elected by the brethren to that high privilege of service. Whenever you can find in the Lord's providence an opportunity of coming over here, you will be heartily welcomed by us all. The London Bethel family send warm love to you, and to their brethren in the Brooklyn Bethel; so would all the British friends if they had the opportunity.

Believing that the Lord has much work to be done, I count it a great privilege from the Lord to be enabled to report thus to you, and with warm love and loyalty, I am,

Yours in the Master's grace and service, J. HEMERY.

REPORT OF FRENCH AND SWISS BRANCH

DEAR BROTHER RUTHERFORD:—

It is a blessed privilege to give here a full report of the French work—Nov. 1, 1916, to Oct. 31, 1917. Not only have the ecclesias increased in number during this year, but the dear friends understand better than ever before the deep things of consecration to the Lord. It is our endeavor to keep the Lord's people busy in the harvest field, so that all their spare time is devoted to this work. Whenever a new B. S. M. is issued, the friends hold special prayer meetings, and then on the same day they distribute the good tidings in every part of the French harvest field. Thus the work is supported by the continued prayers of the saints, and the blessing has been much greater than ever before. We do the same for Photo-Drama showings and for public lectures.

During the year the French work has made much progress, especially in the unity of spirit amongst the brethren. The distribution of free literature is much larger than that of last year—the output this year having been 210,000 tracts more than last year. The attendance at public lectures has been excellent—about 5,000 more than last year. The increase in the number of volumes sold was 1,300. This year we are publishing Vol. 3, and Vol. 7 is now on the press. Early in the incoming year we hope to publish Vol. 4. We shall then have all the STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES in French. For this great blessing we are very thankful to the Lord.

With much Christian love, I am,

AUSTRALASIAN BRANCH REPORT

DEAR BRETHREN IN CHRIST:—

Just one year has passed since we became bereft of our dear Brother Russell; and while we still have his beautiful words of comfort, revealment of the Scripture and guidance, yet even though so far away from the centre of the work, how greatly have we missed his influence! Yet we realize that the Lord has been with us and that while we have not put out so many volumes as previously, yet there has really been more interest discovered through the various methods of work in vogue.

We have lost some colporteurs through sickness, death and other circumstances. This accounts for the small output; for some of the workers have done better this year than ever before. At times local conditions have made it difficult to place the volumes in the homes. But generally the people have more money now than ever, and it is usually easier to get a hearing and stir interest. We are glad that there is still a prospect of more laborers entering the field, and trust that much may yet be done in sending out the Truth.

The shipping difficulties which interfered with the colporteur work also interfered with the volunteer work, so that we have fallen below the million mark. What has been done, however, has been done well. Our work of sending through the post to all out-lying towns and districts has resulted in interest being found in parts which could never have been reached by hand distribution or by colporteurs.

Classes have been gradually increasing and numbers attending the old established classes have also been added to. The great distances make it very difficult to operate any frequent pilgrim service, but we have done what we could. The main classes have been visited; and this has meant the traveling by land and sea of several thousands of miles. We hope, however, that this service may be extended if the Lord wills, as classes are now gathering up a little better to make calls en route to the distant ones.

Our experience seems to have been in line with yours in regard to the increase in donations to the Tract Fund, so that you will notice we have been enabled to substantially reduce our debt to Brooklyn. This we are sure will be pleasing for many of our friends to know, as there is a general feeling that we should be able to not only pay our own way but to reimburse Brooklyn for first expenditure, if possible.

The pastoral work progresses. So far away, we are some months behind in anything started at Brooklyn; and even yet all the classes have not organized for this work. Melbourne and Adelaide are the only ones that have sent a general report, though Brisbane is active in the work and Sydney has just commenced. The reports of Adelaide and Melbourne indicate that though the work needs great patience and plodding-perseverance on the part of the sisters, yet in the long run the results are good and well worth the efforts of weary feet and patience-tried hearts.

The Adelaide Friends called on about 1,100 names and had 16 chart talks, with average attendance of about 20. Four new classes have been started with an average weekly attendance of about 35. They had about 29 workers. Many of these workers could only give very little time. The Melbourne figures are very similar:—1,200 visited, 18 talks with average attendance of about 32. In both cases there are many who are now reading the volumes though not able to attend the classes.

The Photo-Drama of Creation has been fairly operative in S. A. and Victoria, having been shown at 16 places to about 116 audiences, with total attendance of about 37,640. We find that some good comes wherever it goes. We have been short-handed since Brother Lea left us; but Brother Michelmore has managed the whole thing in a most creditable manner. The Eureka Drama has also been operated very successfully in New Zealand by Brother and Sister Nelson in co-operation with the New Zealand classes, who jointly own the outfit. Then Brisbane, as well as West Australia, South Australia, and Tasmania, have all done good work in the way. I have not particulars from all, and time and space prevent going into too much detail.

Up to now we have not received our shipment of the Seventh Volume and all are anxiously awaiting its arrival.

Yours in the service of Christ, AUSTRALIAN BRANCH.

WALKING TO THE LORD UPON THE WAVES

"O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt?"—Matt. 14:31.

Jesus and his apostles had been across the Sea of Galilee. A multitude had gathered there; and Jesus was loth to send them to their homes; for it was toward evening and they had had no food for some time. Therefore he performed a great miracle and fed all the people. After this Jesus bade his disciples to get into a ship and cross again to the other side of the sea. But he himself remained to go into the mountain alone to pray. That night the sea became very boisterous and stormy. While the boat was rolling about upon the troubled sea, the apostles saw Jesus coming toward them, walking upon the billows. Some of them cried out in fear, thinking that they saw a phantom. But St. Peter recognized that it was the Lord. Suddenly the thought came to him that he might also walk upon the water and go to meet the Master. He called to Jesus, asking permission. Jesus answered, "Come"; and St. Peter stepped out boldly upon the great heaving billows.

This was a sudden spurt of faith, apparently, on the part of St. Peter—a wonderful faith it would seem. We wonder whether any of us would have thought of venturing out upon those waters! If Jesus had said to any of us that we might come to him walking upon the sea, would we have done so? When St. Peter had gone a little distance from the boat, he looked at the boisterous billows and his faith wavered. Immediately he began to sink. But he did the right thing to call, "Lord, save, or I perish!" It must have been quite a severe storm, as the context indicates. Poor Peter was helped by the Master, and then he and the Lord were received into the ship.

The disciples had been out for some time tossing about, and doubtless were some distance from the shore. But immediately they were at the land, as St. John tells us. (John 6:21) Perhaps the Master worked a miracle in the boat's coming so quickly to land—but no matter.

Why should the Lord speak of St. Peter as having little faith? He showed far more faith than most Christians would exercise. We are inclined to think of the Master's words as encouraging the Apostle—"You had a little faith; why did you not hold to it? Why did you doubt? If you had continued to exercise the faith with which you started out, it would have carried you safely over to me."

Our admiration for St. Peter is greatly augmented by the narration of this incident on the Sea of Galilee. He was ever impulsive, but his faith was genuine, and the Lord loved him therefor. The Apostle did not sit on the side of the boat and wonder if the Lord really meant it when he had invited him to come. On the contrary we find that he immediately believed the Master's voice and straightway be climbed over the ship's side and placed his feet upon the water. He did not question; he did not hesitate nor falter. The Master had beckoned to him, and it was for him to obey. And he did! Truly he possessed faith, real faith, great faith—though "little" in comparison to the faith of Jesus himself. Had St. Peter, after recognizing the Lord's presence, hesitated or refused to heed his invitation, preferring to remain with his companions in the sinking ship, the results might have been disastrous.

We think that we may learn a lesson from this incident. More than eighteen centuries ago the Lord left his church. Then she started out upon the stormy sea of her experiences and has toiled on throughout the night of this Gospel age. And now we have about reached the dawning of the Millennial morning; and we perceive the presence of Jesus. We see him walking on the billows of the world's stormy sea. It is no phantom. Our Lord is really with us, and has bidden us to come to him over the boisterous waves. It is a time for the exercise of faith; it is a time of special testing.

The storm is now greater than it has been for many years. But he calls his faithful to come out to meet him, and thus be separated from the majority of people—from the majority of those who have named his name, many of whom are merely nominal Christians. He has called us to come out of Babylon. We are to manifest our faith in him by prompt obedience. We would surely get into trouble if we should lose our faith! we might sink in the storm. The Lord appreciates even the little faith we have. He does not reprove us for not having greater faith, but would encourage it and cheer us on to an increase and strengthening of it. So we have stepped out upon the billows and have met our Lord; we are to be received into the ship. The vessel will soon be at the shore. The Master is here with us; and we shall soon reach the glorious kingdom —very soon!

FULFILLED BEFORE OUR EYES

By God's favor to the living members of the church, the time is past when the prophecies of Jehovah have had to wait for centuries or millenniums for fulfilment. No longer can there be delay, as spake the Lord through the Prophet concerning "that proverb that ye have in the land of Israel [the whole world], saying, The days are prolonged."—Ezekiel 12:22.

Now by his grace, it is not a time for waiting, but for fruition, and for the divine utterance; "Thus saith Jehovah God: I will make this proverb to cease, and they shall no more use it as a proverb in Israel [throughout the world]; but say unto them, The days are at hand, and the effect [fulfilment], of every vision. For I am Jehovah; I will speak, and the word that I shall speak shall come to pass; it shall be no more prolonged; for in your days will I say the word, and will perform it, saith Jehovah God. There shall none of my words be prolonged any more, but the word which I have spoken shall be done, saith Jehovah God."—Ezekiel 12:23, 25, 28.

It is something marvelous to us, and a mighty confirmation of faith to see the God-given interpretation of Revelation and Ezekiel in the Seventh Volume of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES already in process of fulfilment before our very eyes.

Concerning the world war, just as the conflict began in July, 1914, with only two nations at war, and progressed in August and later with many nations involved, so did our heavenly Father evidently purpose that the titanic conflict should close—not miraculously, all nations at once, but in the natural way that Almighty God almost invariably does or permits things.

In Volume Seven, page 268, paragraph 3, is written, "The close of the war about October 1st, 1917."

To be fighting is war; to stop fighting is peace. The fighting actually ceased with the largest nation, Russia, in October, 1917; for since October 21st Russia has had peace along her entire western front. So far as international conflict is concerned Russia ceased her war and passed into peace, and now we see the state of peace legally progressing by official armistice or treaty. Simultaneously, and overlapping the ending of her war, Russia passes into the second divinely appointed stage of her trouble—revolution.

As to other nations, the end of war is not yet. For them there is and will be much heavy fighting; but just as some were late in getting into the war, some will be late in getting into peace. However, peace, the ending of war, began on time, according to the divine Word—in the very month indicated by our heavenly Father.

Still another divinely appointed prophecy in Volume Seven has seen its fulfilment already. On page 530, in connection with Ezekiel 33:21-22, it was written three-quarters of a year ago that Ezekiel's dumbness for a year, five months and twenty-six days, might be a time feature, to be fulfilled in the dumbness of Pastor Russell in death. It was only reasonable to make this application, because the Prophet in so many respects pictured God's great messenger to the closing age of the church. Pastor Russell died October 31, 1916, and the period indicated will end about April 27, 1918. From the language of Ezekiel this is designated as the time of the coming of the dread tidings that "the city is smitten"; that is, that Christendom, or ecclesiasticism, is seen to be in desperate danger from revolution, if the existing forms of government shall not by then already have begun to change to such a revolutionary, socialistic, or laborite status as is so unhappily exemplified in stricken, suffering Russia.

In Ezekiel 33:22 it is written: "Now the hand of the Lord was upon me in the morning, afore he that was escaped came to me in the morning; and my mouth was opened, and I was no more dumb." In other words Ezekiel's dumbness was removed in the evening before the morning when the tidings arrived. "It was," says the Seventh Volume, "on the same day, for the evening began the day." This signifies that perhaps half a year prior to the general realization of Christendom's downfall, Pastor Russell, though dead, shall again speak through this, the Seventh Volume of his STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES. Half a year before April 27, 1918, was about November 1st, 1917. It was about then, as divinely indicated, that the sale of the Seventh Volume began to attain the enormous proportions it has reached—over 100,000 copies having been distributed during that month alone! Thus Pastor Russell began to speak again to Christendom.

It is for our encouragement and to lift up our hearts to the utmost fullness of confidence in the Word of God, that our beloved Father in heaven is giving us a strong witness, in the interpretations of both Revelation and Ezekiel, of the divine guidance of the church in connection with the Seventh Volume of SCRIPTURE STUDIES.

JESUS BEGINS HIS WORK

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM

As we saw in our last Study, John the Baptist and his disciples had preached and baptized under the announcement that the Kingdom of God was at hand, and that all desirous of participating in its great blessings should come into full harmony with the Mosaic Law, and thus be prepared to be transferred from typical Israel to antitypical Israel—from membership in Moses the type, to membership in Christ the Antitype—the long-promised Seed of Blessing.

In due time the preaching of John the Baptist was brought to a close—when Herod cast him into prison. From that time onward Jesus and his disciples became more prominent. Their message, however, was the same as John's for we read that "Jesus came to Galilee preaching the Kingdom of God and saying, The time is fulfilled, and the Kingdom of God is at hand. Repent ye, and believe the Gospel." (Verses 14, 15.) Whoever believed this Message recognized Jesus as the Sent of God, the Messiah, who in God's due time will be the King of Israel and the Monarch of all the earth. "The time is fulfilled" meant that the foreordained time had arrived when the offer of the Kingdom would be made to the Jewish nation.

God foreknew, however, that Israel would not be ready, that only a few would be prepared to become Messiah's bride, his associate in the Kingdom work, and that it would require eighteen centuries to select the remainder from amongst the Gentiles. Hence in Romans 9. 10 and 11 St. Paul points out that the Prophets foretold the stumbling of Natural Israel, their temporary rejection as a nation, and the fact that a remnant of them would form the nucleus of the bride class, the remainder of which would be made up of Gentiles. He also shows that the remainder of the Jewish nation would be blinded "until the fulness of the Gentiles has come in" and the "elect" class is completed.

ENTIRE SUBMISSION

"God's ways are not as our ways, his thoughts are not as ours;
He wounds us sore with cruel thorns, where we have stooped for flowers.
But oh! 'tis from the oft-pierced heart those precious drops distil
That many a life, else all unblest, with healing balm shall fill.
Then give, oh, give the flower to those who pray it so may be;
But I would choose to have the thorns with thee, dear Lord, with thee!

"Man judgeth man in ignorance; he seeth but in part,
Our trust is in our Maker, God, who searcheth every heart;
And every wrong and every woe, when put beneath our feet,
As stepping-stones may help us on to his high mercy-seat.
Then teach us still to smile, O Lord, though sharp the stones may be, Remembering that they bring us near to thee, dear Lord, to thee!"

Upon the earth distress of nations with perplexity; the sea and the waves (the restless, discontented) roaring: men's hearts failing them for fear and for looking forward to the things coming upon the earth (society): for the powers of the heavens (ecclesiasticism) shall be shaken. . . . . When ye see these things come to pass, then know that the Kingdom of God is nigh at hand. Look up, lift up your heads, rejoice, for your redemption draweth nigh.—Luke 21:25-28-31.

THIS JOURNAL AND ITS SACRED MISSION

This Journal is one of the prime factors or instruments in the system of Bible Instruction, or "Seminary Extension," now being presented in all parts of the civilized world by the WATCH TOWER BIBLE & TRACT SOCIETY, chartered A. D. 1881, "For the Promotion of Christian Knowledge." It not only serves as a class room where Bible Students may meet in the study of the Divine Word, but also as a channel of communication through which they may be reached with announcements of the Society's Conventions and of the coming of its traveling representatives styled "Pilgrims," and refreshed with reports of its Conventions.

Our "Berean Lessons" are topical rehearsals or reviews of our Society's published STUDIES, most entertainingly arranged, and very helpful to all who would merit the only honorary degree which the Society accords, viz., Verbi Dei Minister (V.D.M.), which, translated into English, is Minister of the Divine Word. Our treatment of the International S. S. Lessons is specially for the older Bible Students and Teachers. By some this feature is considered indispensable.

This Journal stands firmly for the defense of the only true foundation of the Christian's hope now being so generally repudiated—Redemption through the precious blood of "the Man Christ Jesus, who gave himself a Ransom [a corresponding price, a substitute] for all." (1 Pet. 1:19; 1 Tim. 2:6) Building up on this sure foundation the gold, silver and precious stones (1 Cor. 3:11-15; 2 Pet. 1:5-11) of the Word of God, its further mission is to—"Make all see what is the fellowship of the Mystery which . . . . has been hid in God, ... to the intent that now might be made known by the Church the manifold wisdom of God"—which in other Ages was not made known unto the sons of men as it is now revealed."—Eph. 3:5-9, 10.

It stands free from all parties, sects and creeds of men, while it seeks more and more to bring its every utterance into fullest subjection to the will of God in Christ, as expressed in the Holy Scriptures. It is thus free to declare boldly whatsoever the Lord hath spoken—according to the Divine wisdom granted unto us, to understand. Its attitude is not dogmatical, but confident; for we know whereof we affirm, treading with implicit faith upon the sure promises of God. It is held as a trust, to be used only in His service; hence our decisions relative to what may and what may not appear in its columns must be according to our judgment of His good pleasure, the teaching of His Word, for the upbuilding of His people in grace and knowledge. And we not only invite but urge our readers to prove all its utterances by the infallible Word to which reference is constantly made, to facilitate such testing.

TO US THE SCRIPTURES CLEARLY TEACH

That the Church is "the Temple of the Living God"—peculiarly 'His workmanship;" that its construction has been in progress throughout the Gospel Age—ever since Christ became the world's Redeemer and the Chief Corner Stone of His Temple, through which, when finished, God's blessing shall come 'to all people," and they find access to Him.—1 Cor. 3:16, 17; Eph. 2:20-22; Gen. 28:14; Gal. 3:29.

That meantime the chiseling, shaping and polishing of consecrated believers in Christ's Atonement for sin, progresses; and when the last of these "living stones," "Elect and precious," shall have been made ready, the great Master Workman will bring all together in the First Resurrection; and the Temple shall be filled with His glory, and be the meeting place between God and men throughout the Millennium.—Rev. 15:5-8.

That the Basis of Hope, for the Church of the World, lies in the fact that "Jesus Christ, by the grace of God, tasted death for every man," "a Ransom for all," and will be "the true Light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world," "in due time."—Heb. 2:9; John 1:9; 1 Tim. 2:5, 6.

That the Hope of the Church is that she may be like her Lord, "see Him as He is," be "partaker of the Divine nature," and share His glory as His joint-heir.—1 John 3:2; John 17:24; Rom. 8:17; 2 Pet. 1:4.

That the present mission of the Church is the perfecting of the saints for the future work of service; to develop in herself every grace; to be God's witness to the world; and to prepare to be kings and priests in the next Age.—Eph. 4:12; Matt. 24:14; Rev. 1:6; 20:6.

That the hope for the World lies in the blessings of knowledge and opportunity to be brought to all by Christ's Millennial Kingdom—the Restitution of all that was lost in Adam, to all the willing and obedient, at the hands of their Redeemer and His glorified Church—when all the wilfully wicked will be destroyed.—Acts 3:19-23; Isa. 35.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 2-6: This five day convention will be served by many Pilgrim brethren. A good attendance is expected. Election of the SOCIETY'S officers for the ensuing year will be held on Saturday, Jan. 5th. Brother Rutherford will address the public in Princess Theatre at 3 p. m., Sunday, Jan. 6th, on "The Fall of Babylon." Address R. H. Bricker, 1323 Goebel St., N. S., Pittsburgh, Pa.

CANADIAN BRANCH

In view of the disturbed conditions and the difficulty of reaching the various classes and serving them throughout the Provinces of Canada, we have decided to open a branch office of the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY at Winnipeg, Manitoba. Competent brethren will be placed in charge to manage the work. All Canadian correspondence, orders, subscriptions to THE WATCH TOWER, etc., will be cared for by that office. A more detailed statement will be given later.

IN RE THE FALL OF BABYLON

Due to the congestion in both freight and express shipping, it is possible that some of the friends may not receive their shipment of B. S. M. No. 99 in time for the Dec. 30th distribution. Without doubt, however, most classes will receive the papers on time. In event your shipment is delayed, we suggest that you arrange to make distribution on the following Sunday after its arrival, making the witness as general and far-reaching as possible in one day.

PASTOR RUSSELL'S SERMONS

These are now in stock at our printers, in cloth and leather, and a large shipment is now en route to Brooklyn. We are sure the friends will greatly appreciate this volume. Many of the sermons have never before been published, but were dictated by Brother Russell for personal use on various occasions. The book contains several full-page halftones. Cloth $1; leather, $1.50 postpaid.

VEST POCKET MANNAS

These seem to have supplied a long-felt want on the part of the friends. They are only 2¾x5¼ in size, and bound in flexible covers, round corners. Cloth, red edges, 30c; leather, gilt edges, 75c postpaid.

TO FRIENDS OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES

Foreign stamps of all kinds are not usable in the United States and must be sold at large discounts, if salable at all. Therefore do not send us foreign stamps for remittances.

British Postal Notes are not payable in the United States and must be returned to London for collection. Private cheques are not collectible and drafts on London banks are subject to heavy discounts. Remittances by regular Government postal money orders are payable at face value.

British friends are requested to send their renewals for THE WATCH TOWER direct to London office. This saves expense and liability of loss in forwarding to Brooklyn and having to be returned again to London. Reports of all subscriptions are forwarded to us promptly from London; hence there will be but very slight delay in our recording your subscriptions.

IN RE PUBLIC MEETINGS

We strongly recommend the classes everywhere to arrange for one public meeting when a Pilgrim visits your class. Secure a well-located hall and announce an up-to-date subject, such as, "THE WORLD HAS ENDED—Millions now Living may never die!" and give a good public witness to the Truth. Local brethren who are able to give lectures should be used to address public meetings on Sundays. Let us give as wide a public witness as possible. Evidences are increasing rapidly that the dark night is fast approaching when no man can work. Let each and every one bestir himself, doing with his might what his hands find to do while it is yet called day.

The WATCH TOWER
AND HERALD OF CHRIST'S PRESENCE

VOL. XXXIX BROOKLYN, N. Y., JANUARY 1, 1918 No. 1

VIEWS FROM THE WATCH TOWER

"The end of all things is at hand; be ye therefore sober, and watch unto prayer, and above all things have fervent love amongst yourselves."—1 Peter 4:7, 8.

What will the year 1918 bring forth? This question is upon the lips of every class of men. The world looks and hopes for those things which constitute its highest ideals—peace, plenty, health and happiness. The Christian looks for the year to bring the full consummation of the church's hopes. The world says, "How may we attain to our ideals of earthly blessing?" The Christian asks, "When shall we enter the Temple of our God, and see our Lord face to face and be assured of his everlasting approval? And when shall we be permitted by his grace to participate in reconstruction and blessing the human race?" For that blessed time, St. Paul tells us, the whole creation groans and travails in pain; yet the creatures know not how their deliverance shall come. Only the children of the Lord know by faith in his Word.

History is making at such break-neck speed that men of the world go breathless in pursuit. They behold the current events, but understand not why they are so. Christians, watching the transpiring of these events, by the Lord's grace understand them and rejoice to see their hopes about to be realized. The truths of the present day, earthly and spiritual, stimulate the child of God to greater activity in the Master's service.

THE COAL FAMINE

During the severest winter weather the world's metropolis and many other cities face a coal famine. For many days, coal has not been obtainable regardless of the price. Even the wealthy have found their money of no avail. Many such have driven in their expensive limousines to the coal-distributing points and begged the deliverers to load their fine cars with coal, that they might have some comfort in their homes; but they fail to get it. The public press announces that 300,000 families in Greater New York were without fire to warm by for several days. The worldly-minded wonder why such conditions are permitted to exist. The students of God's Word see why and know that these conditions will grow worse as we near the end. Twenty-five hundred years ago, God through his Prophet, referring to the time in which we now are, said, "There shall not be a coal to warm at, nor a fire to sit before." (Isaiah 47:14) Conditions leading up to the fulfilment of this prophecy are mentioned by Dr. Bromley in "The New York Times," October 17, as follows:

"There is plenty of coal in the ground, yet most of Europe is dark and cold. Both Americas are much alarmed over the situation as it confronts them. The present fuel crisis is here because we did not realize soon enough how vital a factor is fuel, when whole nations and not armies alone must become war weapons.

"The cry that there is no coal shortage is dangerous deception. True 509,098,175 tons in 1916 as against 531,619,487 tons in 1915 was the production. But these figures are misleading if one forgets that the world's consumption of coal is greater than ever before."

Thousands of producers have been removed from channels of production and put into channels of destruction. Such conditions will grow worse.

THE THICKENING TURMOIL

Asked what would be proof of the end of the world, the great Master said: "Upon the earth, distress of nations with perplexity; men's hearts failing them for fear." (Luke 21:24, 26) Today we see the fulfilment of this prophecy. "The Commercial and Financial Chronicle," one of the most conservative amongst financial and business journals, in a recent editorial says:

"A retrospect of the week discloses a series of events, a status of conditions, more momentous and depressing perhaps than any other week of this agonizing war. The grey skies of February grow dark with gloom; and hoping almost against hope, one tries to see some signs of the coming of the end. But a wall of murky, steely cloud, in which pale glimmers of peace flame, only to fade, shuts down upon the world, lighted by the terrible fires of battle, and seething with the turmoil of man's perverted endeavor. And for that phrase bandied about in a sort of light-hearted contempt, 'Whither are we drifting?' the serious-minded must substitute another, 'To what further and final cataclysm are we drifting?'

"As the search-light of all-seeing Press sweeps the world what do we behold? A new revolution in Russia—sinister with socialism and eloquent of the anarchy which must prevail over wide stretches of that unhappy land far removed from its populace centers—civil blood in the streets of Moscow and Petrograd, the fate of the new attempt to rule hanging in the balance—it may be a matter of days, mayhap presage other feuds to come—a Russia practically out of the war as far as early aid to the Allies is concerned, a fact which may yet prove of gigantic proportions.

"And in our own country, a week of remarkable events and of growing apprehension. Stocks reaching their lowest point in ten years, recording billions of dollars of losses in market values since the beginning of the conflict, showing few signs of any permanent recuperation. Strikes, arbitrations and compromises by and between employes and employers throughout the country in numbers and for demands never before approached in the history of the country. Looming up suddenly is an impending demand and a possible strike for its enforcement, having an estimated 109 million dollars increase in wages, to meet an alleged increase in the cost of living by certain bodies of railway employes in the face of the showing of net losses by the roads upon an increased business or in spite of it.

"Yet, again, a meeting of the National Foundries Association in New York City, which sends a telegram to the President in which it is unanimously declared that:

'Autocracy of labor is fully as disturbing to the welfare of mankind as an autocracy of government.'

"These are a few of the leading events and conditions confronting our people. The insupportable pressure of war is at work, and the turmoil thickens. The time calls for serious thought, closer devotion to every task in hand, and solemn study. Our hope is that we may now be in that darkness which almost precedes dawn."

LABOR SEEKS CONTROL

"The sea and the waves roaring." (Luke 21:25) In every land of earth is observed the fulfilment of this prophetic statement. The discontented, restless element of humanity is fomenting more trouble. Organized labor is roaring out its discontent, and seeking to put its grip upon the reins of power. And the time draws closer when the warring classes feel that they must have it out with the growing aggression of the workers. The annual report of the AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR says:

"Working people have never been properly represented in diplomatic affairs. We insist that this Government provide adequate and direct representation of wage earners among the plenipotentiaries sent to the Peace Congress."

The Chronicle, the spokesman of finance and business, on the above statement comments:

"Here it is again; labor arrogantly setting itself up as a separate factor, an entity to be dealt with; as a class, physically within, but not of the country; as a sort of power which can make terms and conditions on which it will stand more or less distantly behind the Government in the great struggle for national life.

"We have yielded and yielded to organized labor, until the final clinch cannot be longer delayed. We cannot avoid or divert that clinch by the Government undertaking to take over the roads and operate them as military instruments. Such they have been for three years, and the men owning them are virtually soldiers in the ranks. The country must now, in an emergency which brooks no delay and no feebleness, undertake and accomplish the subverting of any organization within it, or else surrender to this one which defies it the more boldly because of having been suffered to grow by a long series of compromises."

A DEFERRED HOPE ABOUT REALIZED

The Gentile times have ended, and the kings of earth have had their day. The autocratic kingdoms are destroying each other, and their existence is but a matter of days merely. Concerning the Jews, Christ Jesus said: "They shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." (Luke 21:24) Zionism, organized in 1896, has all along had for its prime objective the establishment of a home government in Palestine for the Jews. Through his prophets, God promised to restore Palestine to the Jew; and the great Master said that the beginning of such restoration would be proof that we are at the end of the world. The English have wrested from the hand of the Turk the city of Jerusalem. Commenting editorially, the New York American says:

"The conquest of Jerusalem is the final triumph of Zionism. For the first time in nearly two thousand years, not only one, but three great powers stand ready to publicly recognize the Jewish nationality and its right to a land and a home. Zionism means the rebuilding of Palestine by the Jews. Millions of Jews in every land are organized, active and intense in their enthusiasm for the rebuilding of Zion. It is an age-long dream. It is also a practical business movement of today. The English Rothschilds are leading it in London. The French Rothschilds are a part of it in Paris. In New York Nathan Straus, Jacob Schiff, Henry Morgenthau, Max Nordau and Schullman are in its ranks. Justice Brandeis is its apostle in Boston, and in Chicago the large influence and the mighty fortune of Julius Rosenwald is generously behind the movement. Fortunately for the new home-land of the Jews, the people behind them include the greatest financiers in the world and there will be no difficulties in this line which will not be smoothly weathered for the Jewish state."

Max Nordau, scientist and leader of Zionism, says:

"We are at the turning point of the world's history. The gigantic war which is dissoluting humanity has inflicted more tortures on us than on any other people. We know our losses, our sufferings and our tears; but we are sustained in the trials of these disasters by the certainty that we are approaching the culmination of our national destiny."

The London Christian World published a manifesto issued by some of the English clergymen to the effect that the return of the Jews to Palestine indicates the near establishment of the Lord's kingdom. The Chicago Herald interviewed a number of American clergymen upon this question who generally scoff at the nearness of Christ's kingdom. The consensus of opinion by them is expressed in the words of the Rev. Oscar C. Helming:

"My personal impression is that the historical interpretation of the Apocalypse is a mistaken interpretation, of Jewish origin. I feel that the present war condition has no more bearing on the second coming of Christ than other wars and revolutions have had."

"THAT INTERNATIONAL NUISANCE"

The Lord's Word shows his disapproval of the alliance between the church systems, which claim to represent him on earth, and the civil and political powers. Such an unholy union he designates in his Word as harlotry. Even worldly men recognize that the mixture of politics and religion is obnoxious. The Wall Street Journal, read by the banking interest of Greater New York, speaking of the Papacy, refers to it as "that international nuisance, the church-state." In Italy the Roman Catholic church is well known to be willing to sacrifice Italian nationality to promote its own temporal power. It is claimed that not all of the weakening of the morale of the Italian troops was due to Teutonic influences. The Paris correspondent of the New York Times says:

"No one who has not been recently in Italy would realize the harm done by a propaganda whose theme is America's abstention from war with Austria which, says the Propagandist, proves the justness of the Vatican's pacifism by showing that America also is not in sympathy with the war Italy is waging to complete her national unity. How far that unity is in line with the Vatican's dream of temporal power may be judged by the fact that its heart and center is Rome—the city which the popes regard equally as the home pivot of their rule on earth."

The declaration of war by the United States against Austria was a blow to Papacy's hopes.

The thought that the Papacy is scheming to profit through the present world disaster is nothing surprising to Bible Students; for they are well aware that the word of prophecy points to the part to be played by the "beast" in helping to establish peace and so ingratiating itself with the world as to make possible again the stealthy riveting of the fetters of intolerance upon all true freedom of religion, of the press, of speech and of thought. But however well such craftiness may succeed and induce the nations of Christendom to give their power and strength unto the "beast" (Rev. 17:12, 13), it will be but transitory; for shortly the "ten horns [nations transformed by revolution] shall hate the whore, and shall make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh and burn her with fire" [anarchy and revolution].—Revelation 17:16.

THE SUN DARKENED

As a further evidence of the end of the age and the bringing in of Messiah's kingdom of righteousness, Jesus said, "The sun shall be darkened." (Matthew 24:29) The sun is a symbol of the Gospel of Messiah's kingdom. On November 12, 1917, two thousand representatives of all creeds and denominational systems assembled at Carnegie Hall, New York. Participating in this conference were Catholic cardinals, Protestant Doctors of Divinity and Jewish rabbis. The purpose of the meeting was to formulate a scheme or plan of Biblical education. The New York American quotes Dr. John H. Finley, one of the speakers:

"Here are three steps which we may take: First, the preparation of a book of selections from the Bible by an interdenominational commission appointed by the legislature or by the Board of Regents for use in the schools; second, the formulation of a plan for non-proselyting and coöperation between the schools and various denominations; third, the granting of regents credits for serious work in Bible study outside of the schools. The time has come for Protestants, Catholics, Jews and Gentiles to co-operate to the end that every child may have an intimation at least of his moral and religious inheritance."

Dr. George Albert Coe said:

"We religious people must join with organized labor to compel teaching in the schools which makes for happiness and not for wealth."

The noticeable feature here is that the name of Jesus Christ, his redemptive sacrifice and his kingdom for restitution blessings, are absolutely ignored. Truly this is a fulfilment of the prophecy of the darkening of the sun.

CHURCH FEDERATION

From time to time there has appeared in THE WATCH TOWER much proof from the Scriptures that before the end of the age there would be a federation of the nominal church systems. Such is now practically an accomplished fact. The "beast" of Revelation 13:1 is the Papal system. The "other beast" of Revelation 13:11 is the church of England and Ireland. The United States has entered into an alliance with Great Britain. Thus there is a tacit alliance between civil and ecclesiastical elements. The temporary cessation of the war between the nations with the force of revolution and anarchy becoming more apparent will draw closer together the civil and ecclesiastical powers. Practically all of the church systems with one mind and with one accord are "dancing" before the civil powers. (Mark 6:22) This federation and alliance is "Mystic Babylon" in a most complete sense. In the type the great feast of Belshazzar which preceded the fall of ancient Babylon would seem to represent the rejoicing of the federated systems, particularly when they have gained federal recognition, either directly or indirectly. It seems quite reasonable to conclude that the experiences of John the Baptist with Herod were also typical. Commenting upon this, Brother Russell said:

"Herod would represent civil government and the unlawful wife would represent the nominal church which throughout the symbolic Scriptures is represented as a woman—'Jezebel', etc. Should it prove to be a type by its fulfilment, in antitype the fulfilment will probably be on something like the following lines:

"(1) A partial reunion of church and state.

"(2) In such case it would become the duty of the true church, the forerunners and announcers of the Messianic kingdom, to reprove the civil powers as well as the nominal church systems and to declare their union unlawful, contrary to the Word of God.

"(3) The effect of this would pretty surely be to awaken the animosity of both civil and religious powers; but it would draw out especially the animosity and venom of the latter.

"(4) The church nominal in her false position would be anxious to stop the reproof and to destroy the reprovers; and the effect would be that the civil power would be induced to pass such legislation as to restrain the liberty of the faithful ones and hinder them from public witness—as John was hindered by imprisonment.

"(5) Jezebel's personal influence being insufficient it may subsequently be gained by the influence of her daughter (United Protestantism), who will be so fully in sympathy with her as to become her tool in the destruction of the most loyal servants of God."—Z. '98, p. 95.

THE WORK BEFORE THE CHURCH

We cannot with certainty know what is just before us, but we feel sure that the Lord is pleased to have us be on the alert and prepared to do with our might what he may put in our hands to do. When the Lord speaks to his church through his chosen servant, then it is reasonable to conclude that he expects the members to be governed by the terms of that message. There have been seven messengers to the church. It seems certain that the Lord purposed their messages as a guide for the church. We believe that we are within the bounds of propriety and taking the position which the Lord is pleased to have us take when we say that in the examination of these important questions due consideration should be given to what Brother Russell as the messenger to the Laodicean church wrote on the subject. Such a position is not deifying the man, but giving due consideration to the Lord for the message which he sends us. That Brother Russell was not infallible all will admit; but he being the messenger to the Laodicean church and being a profound student of the Scriptures his expressions should be very closely scrutinized and given careful consideration at this time.

The tangible evidence that the present order is passing away, and that soon the kingdom of God will be fully established, is overwhelming. Such proof causes the true saints to look up and lift up their heads, with rejoicing. At the same time it behooves them to watch and pray. Before the completion of the kingdom class it seems reasonable to conclude from the numerous evidences that we have, that a strong, vigorous, decisive proclamation of the kingdom message must be given; and that this must be given by the Lord's people, the antitypical "John" class, otherwise designated as "the Elijah class." Then surely it behooves every truly consecrated Christian to view the situation calmly and inquire, What is my duty and privilege at this time?

In 1916 Brother Russell said:

"Until now we have never thought much about Elijah coming down to the Jordan and the important work he did there as having any special significance. But now we see that we went to the Jordan in 1914, and that Elijah and Elisha stood there talking, as we are doing now. After they had talked a while Elijah wrapped up his mantle, evidently referring to some special power coming to the Elijah class; and then he smote the waters. Everything led up to that smiting, and everything went before to prepare for this. Now we see that what preceded has only been preparing the way for this. I am daily looking for what the folding up of the mantle may signify. It looks like as if it may mean a great deal of money. We are trying to wrap up whatever mantle comes. The smiting will probably affect the whole civilized world. They are going to feel the influence of this smiting. Let us be ready."

If this conclusion is correct, then it follows that the wrapping up of the mantle and the smiting of the waters must take place after 1914. It is likewise clear that such work must be done before all the members of the body pass into glory beyond the veil; for it is the members of the Elijah class this side of the veil who must do the smiting. In the above quotation it is stated that the mantle evidently refers to some special power given to the Elijah class, who after receiving that power will smite the waters (the people). Brother Russell suggested that the folding of the mantle might mean a great deal of money. The only purpose of having money would be to get the message widely distributed. If the Lord has provided a reasonable amount of money and other means to distribute the message, it would be just as reasonable to say that such is represented by the wrapped-up mantle.

The mantle, in addition to representing power as above stated, sometimes symbolizes authority or dignity, also indentification. (1 Sam. 28:14) The message contained in THE FINISHED MYSTERY—the Seventh Volume of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES—definitely and clearly identifies Pastor Russell as "that servant," the messenger to the Laodicean church, and shows the dignity of his office and his authority to speak as the Lord's mouthpiece. Hence his interpretation of Scriptures bearing upon the question should receive profound consideration. Further commenting upon this same matter, Brother Russell in 1916 said:

"The 149th Psalm evidently pictures a time when the Lord's people on this side the veil would in some way be prominent before the world. It says, 'Let the saints be joyful in glory.' Once we thought this meant joyful in heaven; but now we see that to be joyful in glory need not be on the other side, but on this side the veil. The Psalmist proceeds to say, 'Let them sing aloud upon their beds.' He declares that the saints upon their beds have a two-edged sword in their hands. The bed signifies a condition of ease, so far as the faith is concerned. We shall, of course, be at ease on the other side, but this evidently means an ease of faith on this side the veil. The two-edged sword means the Word of God. That must mean here; for no one will be smiting anything with a two-edged sword over there. It will surely be here. This two-edged sword in the hands of the saints means that while they are resting in their faith they have the Word of God, sharp and powerful, and with it can oppose everything opposed to the truth.

"These are the saints who execute the judgments written. How? I cannot give all the details. Undoubtedly there will be a great many details when we reach that time. We should be ready to take any part which the Lord may give us. He will give all of his people a share. We shall see what this judging may mean a little later on. The River Jordan means a judgment and the smiting of this Jordan may mean to put the truth in such a way as to do the judging; and Elijah will handle this sword."

The Lord has permitted the compilers of Volume Seven to bring together all the gems of truth upon the Scriptures from Brother Russell's pen as these relate to Babylon. From these gems of truth written by the one having authority and making clear the Scriptural testimony we see:

(1) That just preceding the inauguration of the kingdom there would be a church Federation, that there would be a closer relationship established between church and state, and that the felicitations of the ecclesiastical systems would constitute the antitypical feast which preceded the fall of ancient Babylon;

(2) That such federation and alliance is an abomination unto God, and that it would be the duty of the truly consecrated then on earth to rebuke such arrangement by plainly declaring God's message of truth;

(3) That the Prophets Elijah and John typed the same class, that the class typed by them would administer the rebuke, and that such proclamation of the message of truth would turn the people away from the Babylonian systems, thus constituting a division represented by the division of the waters of the River Jordan;

(4) That everything in the harvest leads up to this climax, and that since 1914 everything has been making for this work;

(5) That the smiting of the Jordan and the use of the two-edged sword are two pictures of the same thing, that the two-edged sword means the Word of God, that Jordan may mean to put the truth in such a way as to do the judging, that the wrapping up of the mantle evidently refers to some special power given to the Elijah class; that the Elijah class will handle the sword with which the smiting is done;

(6) That the smiting of the Jordan represents the dividing of the people and the turning of them away from Babylon, that Babylon will fall, and that this smiting will probably affect the whole world;

(7) That the Lord's people this side the veil will in some way be brought prominently before the world.

Examining these points we see that the federation is practically an accomplished fact; and since the end seems to be so near at hand, the time for the performance of the work above mentioned must likewise be near at hand. When Brother Russell says that the two-edged sword is the Word of God or message of truth, and that the truth may be put in such a way as to do the judging, and that the Elijah class will handle the sword, then it follows that there must be some clear explanation of the prophecies of Ezekiel and Revelation which exposes Babylon, and that this message must be given public witness. We find in the Seventh Volume of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES this identical message. One of two things is absolutely certain—that this is the long promised Seventh Volume with which the smiting is to be done or else there must be another one written; and since this one contains all Brother Russell has written upon the subject it would seem unreasonable to conclude that another is to be written, since the Scriptures do not identify another messenger having authority to write.

If the Seventh Volume is the sword of the truth put in such a way as to do the judging, and if the Elijah class is to do it, then it follows that everyone who fails or refuses to grasp this sword and go forth in obedience to the Lord's direction repudiates the provision made for him and could not be designated as of the Elijah class.

A DAY OF DECISION

Some are having difficulty in seeing their privileges of taking a part in the proclamation of the Seventh Volume message. We suggest to all such that they take the matter to the Lord in prayer, and then being guided by the principles of his Word, ask themselves these questions:

Is the Lord still the Chief Reaper, directing his harvest work? If so, would he permit the church to be engaged in such a world-wide activity on a line contrary to his way? Would he grant his blessing upon the work unless it is right? Was Brother Russell, as the Master's servant, right when he said that the "two-edged sword is the Word of God, the message of truth, and that the truth may be put in such a way as to do the judging"? Is it true that the Lord describes Babylon, the false systems, in the Books of Revelation and Ezekiel; and is it true that Volume Seven gives an explanation of these books in harmony with the truth revealed by the Lord to the church through his messenger of the Laodicean period?

The point of the sword is sharp on both sides, therefore a two-edged sword. The Psalmist describes the saints with the two-edged sword in their hands. Is it true that the Books of Ezekiel and John constitute the point—the two-edged sword with which Babylon is to be smitten?—Ezekiel 21:14-15; G 464, 466.

Brother Russell said: "The Elijah class will use this sword. We should be ready to take any part which the Lord may give us. He will give all of his people a share." Was Brother Russell right when he uttered these words? If so, am I of the Elijah class if I neglect or refuse to participate in the use of the sword? Do I believe that the words of Revelation 14: 18, 19 constitute a command from the Lord? (G 227) And if this is a command can I show forth my love to the Lord unless I keep this commandment? (John 14:15) Is not Babylon the product of Satan? Who would be pleased to have me use the point of the sword against Babylon—Satan or our Lord?

PROSPECTS BEFORE US

Will not a vigorous witness of the truth as set forth in Volume Seven bring persecution? Yes; such is quite probable. If I remain aloof and have nothing to do with the message against Babylon, may I not preserve myself from such persecution? Yes, possibly; but can you afford to take that position?

Long ago there was recorded by "that servant," in Volume III, these words:

"It will probably be in an effort at self-preservation on the part of great Babylon—Christendom—when she sees her power in politics, priestcraft and superstition waning, that the work of truth spreading will be stopped as detrimental to her system; and probably at this juncture the Elijah class, persisting in declaring the truth to the last, will suffer violence and pass into glory and escape from the severest features of the great time of trouble coming—just in the crisis of affairs, when men begin to feel that desperate measures must be resorted to, to sustain the tottering structures of Christendom. Although the exact time of the deliverance or change of the last members of the body of Christ is not stated, the approximate time is nevertheless clearly manifest as shortly after the door is shut."—C 231.

"The door of opportunity to engage with Christ our Lord in the work of the Gospel age will be closed when the night cometh wherein no man can work; and all who have not previously, by faithful service, developed the necessary character and proved their sympathy, devotion, love and zeal for the Lord and his truth will then be too late to do so."—C 210.

The prospects for the year 1918 are thrilling—yea, wonderful! It seems that for us to be indifferent to them by failing or refusing to participate in the proclamation of the truth now due would be nothing short of disloyalty and unfaithfulness to the Lord. Beloved, let us gird on our armor and calmly, fearlessly and joyfully meet the task that he has set before us. "The Lord bless thee and keep thee and cause his face to shine upon thee"—as you go forth to battle.

BROUGHT INTO PROMINENCE

Again we quote that servant: "This smiting will probably affect the whole civilized world. They are going to feel the influence of this smiting. The Lord's people this side the veil may in a way be brought prominently before the world." How could this be possible? By turning the people away from Babylon and while so doing "sounding out the high praises of God," thereby clearing his holy name from the dishonor attached to it by false teachings of Babylon's system. Such would surely affect the civilized world. But how would the Lord's people come into prominence? Evidently not by becoming popular. One might be brought into great prominence and yet be very unpopular. Such has always been the result of faithful witnessing to the truth. (Hebrews, Chapter 11) Elijah was prominently known far and wide in the realm of Ahab and Jezebel, but was far from being popular and approved by that kingdom and its subjects.

THE SOCIETY THE MESSENGER

In Revelation 14:18 we read: "And another angel came out from the altar which had power over fire and cried with a loud voice to him that had the sharp sickle [the message of present truth] saying, Thrust in thy sharp sickle and gather the clusters of the vine of the earth; for her grapes are fully ripe."

Since its organization the Lord has used the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY as the messenger to bear the kingdom message to his people. The "altar" is the place of sacrifice. How aptly the description fits the SOCIETY! It is the only institution on earth maintained by the sacrifice of the Lord's saints. Never yet has a plan or scheme succeeded which had for its avowed purpose the gathering or accumulating of a large sum of money to be used in the harvest work. Clearly the Lord desires his work to be done by the sacrifice of his people. He is rich in all things, and needs no one to devise ways and means for him. All of his people need the opportunity of sacrificing to show forth their love and zeal for him. The financial report of the SOCIETY for the year 1917 shows how his faithful ones have sacrificed in order that the money might be provided for the proclamation of his message. The money the Lord has graciously provided, and with the message of truth which he has also provided, and with the organization for his work which he is directing, the time seems ripe to obey the "voice" of the messenger which "had power over fire." Power over fire means authority to send out the message of truth that is destructive of error. The clear exposition of Ezekiel's and John's prophecies set forth in Volume Seven fills this requirement, and it is being sent out far and wide by the SOCIETY. Everyone who truly appreciates the privilege is participating in this work according to their several abilities.

YEAR TEXT IMPORTANT

Surely the child of God can plainly see that the end of all things of the present order is at hand. The world is in a state of great excitement. Statesmen, politicians, business men, clergy, labor leaders, etc., all are at high nervous tension. Everyone feels it. Soon the "four winds" [evil spirits] will be loosened (Revelation 7:1-3); and what a fertile field they will find in the excited minds and high strung nerves of the peoples of earth. Nervous excitement, anger and lack of sobriety will make it much easier for the evil spirits to possess the mind. One who is in such condition is not fit to give attention to important matters. Never before has it been so important for us to remember the admonition of the Apostle—the words of our year text—"The end of all things is at hand; be ye therefore sober and watch unto prayer. And above all things have fervent love among yourselves." Let us remember that the victory in the battle is not with the strong alone, but with those who have full faith and confidence in the Lord. "My help cometh from the Lord." In ourselves there is no strength, but he who is our captain is strong. Let us be strong in faith, giving glory to him. Let us be calm, sober-minded, watchful and prayerful, using the Sword of the Spirit to his glory, and he will bring us off more than conquerors—yea, overcomers?

OUR KING IS MARCHING ON

Mine eyes can see the glory of the presence of the Lord:
He's trampling out the wine-press where his grapes of wrath are stored;
I see the flaming tempest of his swift descending sword,
Our King is marching on.

I see his coming judgments, as they circle all the earth,
The signs and groanings promised to precede a second birth;
I read his righteous sentence in the crumbling thrones of earth:
Our King is marching on.

The "Gentile times" are closing, for their kings have had their day;
And with them sin and sorrow will forever pass away;
The tribe of Judah's Lion now has come to hold the sway:
Our King is marching on.

The "Seventh Trump" is sounding and our King knows no defeat,
He will sift out the hearts of men before his judgment seat,
Be swift, my soul, to welcome him; be jubilant, my feet:
Our King is marching on.

JESUS LORD OF THE SABBATH

[This article, excepting the paragraph below, was a reprint of article entitled, "Which Day is Sabbath," published in issue of March 15, 1912, which please see.]

FEBRUARY 3.—MARK 2:23-3:5.

"The Son of Man is Lord even of the Sabbath."—Verse 28.

Few seem to get the proper thought respecting the Sabbath. Some consider themselves as Jews under the Mosaic Law. Others go to an opposite extreme and, declaring that we are not under the Law but under grace, repudiate the Sabbath entirely. What we believe to be the correct view is the intermediate one between these two extremes, as we shall endeavor to set forth.

God adopted the nation of Israel, all children of Abraham through Jacob, as his special possession in the world. With them he made the Law Covenant through Moses at Mount Sinai; to them he sent his messengers, the Prophets, and finally his Son. With them, and with no other nation, it was his agreement that by the keeping of the Law they would abide in his favor and would have divine blessing upon flocks and herds, lands and people, instead of sickness, pain, drouth and dearth. To no other nation was the Law of Sinai given; with no other nation was that Covenant made. As it is written: "You only have I known of all the families of the earth."

JESUS FORGIVETH SIN

[Paragraph 3, 4, 7 and 13 of this article were reprinted from article entitled, "The Forgiveness of Sins," published in issue of February 15, 1906. The remainder was reprinted from article entitled, "Sin Forgiveness and Healing," published in issue of February 15, 1912. Please see the articles named.]

JESUS CHOOSES THE TWELVE

[This article, excepting the paragraph below, was a reprint of article entitled, "Apostolic Succession Unscriptural," published in issue of April 1, 1912, which please see.]

Sts. Paul and John were not only Apostles, but also special messengers to the early Church. The special messenger in the harvest of the Jewish age was the Apostle Paul, who wrote about one-third of the New Testament, carried the Gospel into Europe, suffered almost unbelievable hardships of every description, and died a martyr in A. D. 66, when he was beheaded by the Emperor Nero. The Lord's mouthpiece to the second stage of the church was St. John, the beloved disciple. He wrote more of the New Testament than did any other, except St. Paul. The Apostle John died at Ephesus at the age of 100, about four years after writing the Apocalypse.

REPORT OF SOUTH AFRICAN BRANCH

DEAR BRETHREN:—

Enclosed herewith you will find a report of harvest work in South Africa during the last eighteen months. We have not been able to put out so many volumes as in 1914-1915; but this is in line, I think, with the work in other parts of the world. Recently, however, the colporteur work in South Africa received a decided impetus by the accession of a dear Dutch Brother to the ranks. In the last three months this dear Brother has put out over 2,000 volumes, averaging about 40 per working day. This unprecedented activity, added to our usual output, has made a great inroad in our stock.

Now, dear Brethren, I will give you a brief outline of the harvest work in South Africa. The number of white brethren—other than natives—we estimate at between two hundred and three hundred. The larger portion of these are divided among four churches — Durban, Johannesburg, Pretoria and Cape Town, all towns of considerable size. This may seem a very small proportion of the people; but when we remember that the white population numbers only about one and a quarter million, scattered over 500,000 square miles, an area equal to one-sixth of the United States, but with only one sixtieth of your means of transportation—it will be understood that the difficulty of getting at the people is considerable. Many of our dear brethren are isolated and alone, with no fellowship but the Lord's; yet their letters and their occasional presence at conventions testify how abundantly he is able to compensate for the lack of human fellowship.

Then to these are to be added our dear native brethren. At Ndwedwe we have a flourishing class of about 80 full-blooded Zulus. At Bank Location a class of Basutos meet, numbering about 24; and a smaller class of Makosas meet in the East London Location. Despite the fact that we have no literature in the native languages, the grasp of present truth which these native brethren have is phenomenal. We can only say, "It is the Lord's doing, and marvelous in our eyes." Entertaining, as they all do, a profound respect for the Bible as the Word of God, they have listened eagerly to the truth imparted to them by native teachers able to read the volumes in English and to translate what they read into the vernacular. Having practically nothing to unlearn, they have readily embraced the Lord's message when presented. The intelligence and the sincerity of their consecration have been attested by their sufferings for conscience's sake. Nearly all of these dear native brethren have been solemnly and publicly excommunicated from Babylon—turned out of the Mission reserves in which they were born, and branded as dangerous persons in their Locations, which are their world. Yet none of these things move them; and they count it all joy that they are permitted to suffer for Christ's sake.

In the Nyassaland Protectorate, the truth has a larger and older following. Nyassaland is much further away—beyond all possibility of visiting unless on a special tour which would take about three months of time and about £150 in money, so that our control of the work in that country is not so substantial. Owing to the lack of white control there, reports from that country are spasmodic. But when they do come, however, they tell of continued interest in present truth on the part of many natives and of large gatherings more or less regularly for convention purposes. The work there has aroused the opposition of the Government, spurred on by jealous missionaries, who see their schools emptied and their churches depleted, with a corresponding loss of revenue. As a result, several of the leading brethren have been deported, and are now interned in Flat Island, Mauritius. Our hearts go out to these dear brethren; and we commend them to him who said, "In the world ye shall have tribulation;; but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world."

The fortunes of the Photo-Drama in Africa were varied. On its arrival in this country, difficulties seemed to stop our pathway at every turn. The crowning difficulty came when after showing it to a Bioscope Advisory Committee, composed largely of clergymen and their henchmen, the Provincial Authorities prohibited its exhibition in the Cape Province because, forsooth! it "would offend the religious susceptibilities" of the public! Remembering the injunction, "When they persecute you in one city, flee to another," we at once took the Drama to the Transvaal, where we exhibited it successfully in Johannesburg, Pretoria and several smaller places, and also in the Orange Free State and Natal. While the Drama has not resulted in a great ingathering, it has borne a great witness, and the practical results have been such as to cause us to thank God for its coming to Africa. Before leaving the subject, I wish to say that in addition to other contributions the brethren here raised about £250 to provide halls, etc., in connection with these exhibitions. This was a great effort on their part; for none of them is wealthy.

It is my custom to make three and sometimes four pilgrim journeys each year; and owing to the scattered abodes, long distances, etc., the mileage amounts to considerable. During the past eighteen months I have traveled over 10,000 miles in this work.

Last Easter we held a most stimulating and refreshing Convention at Durban, which was a source of great blessing to the 65 or 70 brethren who were present. God willing, we hope also to have a general convention in Cape Town at the beginning of 1918. About 147 Brethren reported their memorializing our dear Lord's death and their dying with him. But I feel sure that a larger number actually sat down to the Table of the Lord, although they omitted to send word.

Despite our ups and downs we have much reason to thank God for his great goodness to us; and our great desire is to press on, doing with our might what our hands find to do. The work in Africa would be greatly helped by a visit from our dear Brother Rutherford or some other capable brother. If South Africa were united to Australia for the purpose of a pilgrim journey, the services of some of our "mighty men of valor" could well be spared to make the trip. The help to us in the outposts of the harvest field would be enormous.

We earnestly trust, therefore, that your desire to visit this part of the world will grow until it becomes uncontrollable; and that the Lord will speedily provide the opportunity for you to translate the desire into action.

In closing, permit me to assure you of our continued love and loyalty to our dear Brother Rutherford, as the successor to our well-beloved Pastor, and to the SOCIETY as God's especially chosen channel of communication with his people. We are very jealous for the organization which, under God, has brought us so much blessing in the past, and very suspicious of all that would attempt to divide our affections.

With much love to all the dear brethren at Brooklyn,

Your Brother in Christ,

WM. W. JOHNSON.

"COME, FOLLOW ME!"

"'Come, follow me!' the Master said;
"Come, take the way I trod:
And though the path be dark and drear,
And though thy heart may faint with fear,
It leads to home, to love-born cheer—
The mansion of our God.

"But oh! the way is rough and steep,
Beset by many a stone;
But still I hear, through brier and brake,
'Thee will I never leave, forsake;
Beloved one, fresh courage take,
I trod this way alone.'

"And oh, he stretches forth his hands!
And oh, he gives me grace!
I see the nail-prints that he bore,
The feet, enstained with dust and gore,
The stripes, the thorny crown he wore;
But oh, that lovelit face!

"Dear Master, now I follow on—
The path I cannot trace;
The way thy love for me hath planned
I take and keep at thy command;
Give me the guidance of thy hand,
The heaven of thy face!"

CONVENTIONS RESULTING IN BLESSINGS

DEAR BROTHER RUTHERFORD:—

Loving greetings in our dear Redeemer! Am troubling you with a line to mention one of the many evidences we have noted that the Lord is supervising every feature of the harvest work. We allude to the real good and blessing that is resulting from this year's conventions. Thank the Lord there are so many of them! Many have gone to these conventions, troubled and perplexed because of the things which have been sent our from Brooklyn and elsewhere—not from headquarters—and have returned at rest and full of confidence that the Lord has not lost control of his work. We are sure it is in the Lord's providences that such a program has been arranged. Praying the Father may continue to guide and bless you in your endeavors to serve him, the Truth and the brethren, I remain, with sincere Christian love,

Yours in Him,

W. M. BATTERSON.—Pilgrim.

DRAWN CLOSER TO EACH OTHER IN CHRISTIAN LOVE

DEAR BRETHREN:—

BE IT RESOLVED by the Bible Students in Convention Assembled, That we renew our covenant to our heavenly Father, and to the faithful observance of the instructions of his holy Word; that we pray earnestly for a greater measure of his holy Spirit; that we strive to increase our love to our heavenly Father for the gift of his dear Son, and for the unfolding of his Word to us through that dear servant whom we all so dearly loved; that we will be so inspired by the life he lived that we will be drawn closer to each other in the bonds of Christian love and fellowship, and will put forth our best endeavors that we may make our calling and election sure.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that we heartily co-operate in the work as mapped out by our dear Pastor, and that a copy of this resolution be sent to the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY at Brooklyn, N. Y.

ABLE TO APPRECIATE TOWER MORE FULLY

DEAR BRETHREN:—

Am sending $1.00 to renew my subscription to THE WATCH TOWER, which expires this month.

Am receiving just the same help from THE TOWER that I always have enjoyed for twenty-one years; in fact more, for I am now able to appreciate the articles more fully.

I am in full accord with the management at Bethel and pray daily that love may prevail there.

Your sister by His grace,

A. J. R. H.—Maine.

"GIDEON'S BRAVE THREE HUNDRED"

DEAR EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:—

Greetings of love, peace and joy in your daily, yea hourly, service in the Lord's harvest. My heart is full of desire to make known to you my appreciation of your suggestion in the March 1 TOWER, page 67, especially that under the heading, "A Word to the Pilgrims." How we do need this admonition, "that we adhere strictly to the message which the Lord gave through this chosen channel"! God bless you!

I am constrained through the great kindness of a sister, to note the suggestion of our dear Pastor in the Jan. 1 TOWER of 1915, page 10, re "Gideon's brave three hundred." Could we have in few words a synopsis of that article, that many should drink properly of the water (truth)? When this dear sister wrote me about this article, I was at first puzzled and then, through the wisdom from the Father, for which I asked, he revealed the astounding fact that so few, even I, did not partake properly at all times!

How I have wanted to shout far and wide the fact of how we should drink to his glory and honor, as it is so clearly given in that article. Your suggestion, dear brethren, surely is a direct answer to my prayer and wish. Now by his grace I shall drink of his Water, which is life indeed.

I solicit an interest in your prayers, dear brethren, also remembering you and the harvest work daily at the throne of grace, and those of like precious faith. Daily I realize God's care and promises to his consecrated children.—Num. 6:24-26.

Your Sister by his grace and mercy,

MRS. C. E. NORTON.—Idaho.

INSPIRING COMMENTS RE VOLUME SEVEN

Pilgrim Brother C. E. Heard writes concerning a very effective method of colporteuring with the Seventh Volume, adopted by a class in a Canadian city, as follows:

"This class has done remarkable work with the Seventh Volume. The friends left a copy in every home in town, with a printed slip inserted in the front telling them to read it and, if they wish to keep the book, to remit 60c. Fully 80 per cent of the homes kept the volume when the friends called to collect."

"I am eighty-two years old and have often wondered, 'Would I live to see the Seventh Volume of the world's most wonderful series of God's mysteries unfolded?' 'Praise the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me bless His holy name.'" G. H., W. Va.

"Words can but inadequately express my appreciation of Volume Seven; which will assuredly prove needful, comforting and beneficial to God's dear people and we pray many others. May the Lord bless more and more the Harvest reaping promulgated by Jehovah's Servant."

MRS. E. M. B., N. Y.

"I cannot express to you just how I felt on receiving Volume Seven. To think that I should receive the 'penny!' How anxious we all are to circulate the 'penny' just as soon and as fast as we will be allowed. How it draws His little ones together to feed on the wonderful things it contains, causing us each to spring up into newness of life and zeal. It will drive out the dross faster than anything yet given. Thank God for such a stimulus." L. M. P., Ohio.

"I thank the Lord for the long-looked for Volume Seven. We can now see that it came exactly at the right time for the direct need of the church, and for her comfort and encouragement. Therefore we can have now fresh courage and realize to a certainty that the dear Lord has not forsaken us, but has provided for his household meat in due season by that wise and faithful servant, 'Pastor Russell'; and why should we not be thankful and be eager to go ahead with a burning desire to grasp our weapon and go forth to the smiting of Jordan, praising the Lord for this privilege, knowing the kingdom of heaven is AT HAND?"

N. N., W. Va.

"I am truly very grateful for Volume Seven and shall eagerly peruse its pages that I may be the better prepared to endure all things, by its strength-giving food served to us by our Lord's dear faithful servant. As I have glanced through it, it already has made me see how deeply he saw our need of great faith in our heavenly Father's love for them that are his. Surely this feast in the Seventh Volume is from the hand of our Lord to cheer and comfort us to the end."

N. C. B., Mich.

"We desire to express our appreciation of Volume Seven—the last of the most wonderful books! We feel sure the Lord has sent this for our comfort."

F. K. S., Mo.

"On opening Volume Seven I saw at once that dear Brother Russell could not have written it. He was too modest and humble to have stated the facts as they exist—he occupying the important place in the harvest."

W. S. S., Pa.

"I was amused at the proviso you put in the little printed notice in Volume Seven, 'if you do not desire to keep the volume, return it!'

"I believe that no truly consecrated child of God who has waited so long and anxiously for this book, would part with it for any price if he could not replace it. It will certainly cause the 'false shepherds' to 'take notice.'

"How graciously and bountifully our dear Father provides for our wants! Just what we want, and at the very time that we need it. Praise his holy Name!" F. R. E., Ohio.

"Volume Seven has been duly received. Such pleasant surprises have been few in my life of 52 years. I had no intimation that it was in process of compilation much less on the press. When I found it on my table it was hard for me to believe my eyes were not serving me some trick. I read the title over several times before I was fully convinced there was no mistake. It was good of you to send it as you did, thus sparing us the suspense of waiting for it."

"How faithfully you must have worked to get Volume Seven together and in print, and how wonderful it seems to hear from our dear Pastor after he has passed beyond! It seems to me like a message sent back to us."

M. K. N., Md.

INTERESTING QUESTIONS

THE BEGETTING OF THE HOLY SPIRIT SUPERNATURAL

Question.—Is the begetting of the new creature a direct act of God or is it through the Word of truth?

Answer.—The begetting of the holy Spirit is not without the Word; it is through the Word. But the fact that it is through the Word does not signify that the Word alone is the begetting power. Without God's message telling us of his character, his plan, our sinful condition and the arrangement for the forgiveness of sin through Christ and the opportunity to be of this special elect class, we would not be in any condition to understand or to receive this holy Spirit. We must first have the knowledge which the Bible gives. Therefore it is through the Word of truth that this blessing comes. But the blessing is not the Word of truth. The world in the incoming Age will have the Word of truth, but they will not receive the begetting of the holy Spirit to a new nature, which the church alone receives.

The fact that the church does not now receive any outward demonstration is no proof that we do not receive a supernatural enduement from the Lord. When our Lord Jesus had made his consecration and was baptized, God caused an outward sign to be seen by John the Baptist, who perceived the holy Spirit in the form of a dove descending and resting upon the Lord. This outward manifestation was given to John that he could testify that Jesus was the Messiah. It was not necessary that all the people should see.

This word unction has the thought of anointing, and of smoothness, lubrication, as from oil. Whoever was anointed to be a priest among the Jewish people was anointed with a special kind of fragrant oil, which typified the holy Spirit. The Scriptures represent Aaron the priest, after having received the anointing oil upon his head, as typical of Christ when he received the holy Spirit at Jordan. In the type this holy anointing oil "ran down to the skirts of his [Aaron's] garment." And so the anointing of the holy Spirit is with the church down to its close. The anointing oil was made up of a number of special ingredients. The people of Israel were not permitted to use these ingredients in such combination under penalty of death. Thus the Lord signified that the possession of the holy Spirit, which he alone can give is the special designation of those who are to be the priests and kings of his Order, and of them only.

MARRIAGE OF THE DIVORCED

Question.—Under what circumstances would divorced persons (in the truth) be free to remarry?

Answer.—The many inquiries we have on this subject convince us that the presentation on this matter in the Sixth Volume of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES requires supplementing—although we had supposed it to be a very full examination of the question. Indeed, this is still our belief. The fault is not with the presentation, but with the fact that the dear friends forget what they have read, and fail to consult the Volume. We again refer all inquirers to that treatise.

There are laws governing divorce and the remarriage of divorced persons. Each state makes its own laws on the subject, and the Bible sets forth a very particular law. Everybody is bound to meet the requirements of the civil law. All questions, therefore, appertain to the higher law of the Bible. A simple way of deciding all such questions is indicated by the fact that the Bible does not set forth any laws for the governing of the world and its doings. The only persons whose conduct on this and other subjects is regulated by the Bible are the Jews and true Christians.

If the man or the woman were divorced before coming into the family of God, his or her previous course in life, if approved by the civil law, is not interfered with by the divine law. The divine law begins to operate upon the individual from the time he makes a surrender of himself to the Lord and is accepted into God's family. It is the course of the individual after he has become united to the Lord that is regulated by the teachings of the Bible. He or she, if free according to the civil law, may marry—but "only in the Lord." But being married at the time or after coming into Christ, the Scriptures direct that while there may be various reasons for separation, there could be only one reason for an absolute divorce, which would leave the persons free to marry again—that given in Matthew 5:31, 32; 19:9.

VICE PRESIDENT'S STATEMENT

DEAR BRETHREN IN CHRIST:—

True to his promise, Jehovah of hosts has sent the messenger of the Covenant to prepare the way for the establishment of his kingdom upon earth. Blessed, indeed, are our eyes, which have been opened to see the presence of this One in whom we delight. We have watched with ever-increasing interest the progress of the first phase of His preparatory work, the purification of the antitypical sons of Levi—the household of faith. Like unto the effect of the refiner's fire upon gold and silver has been the result produced by the various purging experiences arranged by the Lord for his people during the period of his presence. Little by little, the dross of selfishness in every form has been burned away from the hearts of those whose golden desire is to do the will of God. Viewed as one of these experiences, the recent sad trial, affecting so many of the Lord's children everywhere, becomes an occasion for thanksgiving. We can "count it all joy."

The publication of my name in connection with statements circulated among the friends has brought many requests for an explanation of the seemingly inconsistent stand I had taken as an officer and director of the SOCIETY. To none of these have I made full reply, believing it unwise to attempt to explain a situation not entirely clear to my own mind; and further believing that such explanation, if made would be justly due all who had read the conflicting reports.

Before the details of the difference were published abroad, I failed to see sufficient cause for the threatened breach between brethren in the Lord who had labored together harmoniously for many years. Consequently, my efforts were bent upon preventing a split and the sore trial it would bring to friends in all parts of the world who have always held the brethren at Bethel in the highest esteem.

When a re-arrangement of the Board of Directors was announced on July 17th, I deeply regretted that such a proceeding was deemed necessary. By signing the resolution commending this action, I had no intention of identifying myself as a party to the controversy (believing that reconciliation could even yet be affected between those at variance), but wished merely to share my portion of responsibility, as an officer of the SOCIETY, in providing an explanation to the comparatively small number of friends who had up to that time learned of the difficulties at headquarters and were beginning to make inquiry. I fully realized the possibility of this action on my part being misconstrued as "taking a side" and, therefore, added my name very reluctantly after assurances that the paper would be used in accordance with my understanding, viz., to satisfy inquiring friends.

Following the circulation of this resolution my friendly attitude toward all the brethren concerned was called in question. Immediately the unwisdom of my course became apparent, and I saw that, if my efforts as a peacemaker were to have further weight, it would be necessary to undo what I seemingly had done in signing the resolution. This I attempted in the letter written July 26th, afterward published. But stepping from one "side" back to neutral ground was a difficult matter; in fact, I now realize that I overstepped to the other "side." It was in this position that, out of sympathy for those who I believed had been made the objects of undeserved publicity, I signed an open letter to the friends attending the Boston convention. When I discerned, after convention, that this action made me equally as incapable of restoring harmony as I had been after signing the resolution, I quietly withdrew, deeming it best to make no further statement at that time. The use of my name in any publications concerning the controversy issued since the Boston convention has been entirely without my previous knowledge and consent.

In the early part of August, the final endeavor to establish peace proved of no avail. My heart ached to think that brethren, respected and loved for their work's sake, should have been held up before the friends all over the world in a way which to them seemed unwarranted. I pleaded with them to follow the course of our Master and suffer gladly whatever bitter experiences the heavenly Father permitted, not even desiring to retaliate or justify themselves; but to commit their cause to him that judgeth righteously. What an opportunity to exhibit the spirit which we all have been striving to cultivate—the spirit of forbearance with one another, the spirit of brotherly love! Preferring not to submit to what they called an injustice, the four brethren chose to leave the home. Here I rested the case with the Lord.

Meantime I have watched developments. Looking back, it is now quite evident that the Lord was pleased to permit the very condition which many of us tried earnestly to avert. But why should our loving Father take pleasure in that which has caused such widespread perplexity and sorrow? Surely he has no desire to injure those who are truly his. Bearing in mind that we are in the closing hours of our trial time, the reason for such treatment at the hands of the Judge of all the earth is obvious: "The Lord your God doth prove you, to know whether ye love the Lord your God with all your heart." If we love our God supremely, we will love every one who is begotten of him—every one who is a partaker of his Spirit. Moved by the spirit of love, we will devote all our energies to provoking one another to love and good works. Remembering that "the Lord will judge his people," we will be content to wait for the expression of his approval or disapproval.

According to all indications, the blessing of the Lord continues increasingly, with those who are striving to "show forth his praises," including the brethren at Brooklyn who are endeavoring to direct the activities of the SOCIETY. Believing that they have been faithful to the divine commission, "to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord, and the day of vengeance of our God," I am glad to coöperate heartily with them. Our opportunities for service may be limited or great in number. Let us be faithful even in the least; for this will determine our worthiness of greater responsibility "in that day."

Some have asked whether I would be a candidate for any office in connection with the SOCIETY'S work during the coming year. Recognizing that the Lord himself is interested in the appointment of those who shall help in the "perfecting of the saints for the work of the ministry," I hesitate to place myself as one eligible. The desire of my heart is to do his bidding, whatever that may be.

Your brother in Christ. ANDREW N. PIERSON.

APPRECIATES THE "POINT" OF THE SWORD

Editorial Committee,
THE WATCH TOWER.

DEAR BRETHREN:—

Inadvertently and without due thought and consideration I affixed my name to the circular letter which I understood was circulated quite widely amongst the friends and sent out with one of the publications of the opposition.

I desire now to go on record as repudiating absolutely, and having no sympathy with, the proposition contained in circular letter referred to on page 367 of Dec. 1st WATCH TOWER.

I am not in opposition to the Lord, the SOCIETY, nor Brother Rutherford, and do not wish to be. On the contrary, I believe the voice of the Lord was expressed in the election last January. I believe it was expressed in the voice of the church in the vote taken Nov. 21st, last, and that it will be expressed in the election of the Shareholders of the SOCIETY this January.

I am fully in harmony with the "Point of the Sword"—Volume VII—and I believe it to be "meat in due season" furnished by the Lord to his hungry sheep during the present time. May it prove as much of a blessing to all as it has been to me!

May the Lord continue to bless your efforts, dear brethren, to serve the interests of his people and give you a due reward is the prayer of Your brother in the One Hope, A. E. BURGESS.

OVERWHELMED IN READING IT

DEAR FELLOW SERVANTS:—

I am sending you sixty cents for the Seventh Volume of SCRIPTURE STUDIES. Please pardon me for not sending it sooner. I have been simply overwhelmed in reading it, and it has been so interesting, that I just could not spare the time to write you a little letter until now.

Your brother in Christ, J. A. HEUDSPETH.—Texas.

VOL. XXXIX BROOKLYN, N. Y., JANUARY 15, 1918 No. 2

ARE THE ADVERSARIES INCREASING IN POWER

"Forasmuch then as Christ has suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind."—1 Peter 4:1.

Why should anyone arm himself unless he expected to meet an enemy in combat? This seems to be the thought of the Apostle expressed in the text. The entire chapter evidently relates to the end of the Gospel age. It is in the nature of a warning against adversaries. "But", says St. Paul, "it is not worldly warfare that we are waging; the weapons with which we fight are not human weapons, but are mighty through God in overthrowing strong fortifications." (2 Corinthians 10:3, 4, Weymouth.) Thus it is seen that it is the new creature that must arm preparatory to the final conflict.

The new creation had its beginning at the baptism of Jesus in the Jordan. Then and there he was begotten to the divine nature. The progressive development of the members of the new creation has continued from Pentecost until now, and the evidence is cumulative that its completion is near at hand. All those who will ultimately be of this class must be of one mind—the mind of Christ. All the members thereof must meet the same adversaries and have combats of a similar nature.

THE DIVINE PLAN

Jehovah foreknew that Adam would disobey him and that all of his progeny would suffer sickness, sorrow and death. In the exercise of his loving kindness and perfect wisdom, God provided redemption of mankind from death through the blood of Jesus, his beloved Son. He further foreordained and provided that because of his full obedience to the divine will and program, Jesus should be exalted above all other creatures (Jehovah alone excepted) and that he should be Head over the new creation, which new creation should occupy the most exalted position amongst the creatures of Jehovah. This new creation is referred to by Jehovah under the title of "the seed of the woman." Satan is mentioned as "the serpent." At the time of Adam's condemnation Jehovah declared that in his own due time "the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head." In God's due time he will use that "seed" to undo all the wrong and wickedness resulting from Lucifer's disloyalty. It seems reasonable to conclude that Satan understood that God would develop this "seed", and that it is the purpose of Jehovah to bring to naught, through this "seed," all the schemes and efforts of Satan, that God intends to give to the "seed" the kingdom which Satan usurped. Hence Satan seeks to resist the development of the "seed" and, if possible, to destroy it, and to keep the human race under his control.

The Prophet of the Lord (Zech. 3:1-10) gives us a brief picture of the staging and unfolding of the great Drama relating to the preparation and development of the new creation —the "seed", according to the promise—and the resistance to its development by its adversaries. In this picture we behold Jehovah as the great Designer and Architect of the plan; his only begotten and beloved Son the Executor of that plan; the members of the new creation being developed by the outworking of the plan; the selection of the members being made from the imperfect race of Adam; the world the stage; Satan as the villain, or opponent, with all the agencies he can bring to bear against the "seed."

The new creation is referred to by the Prophet under the title "Joshua, the High Priest." He designates the ones called to become members of the Priesthood as those who are "clothed in filthy garments," thus picturing their own imperfection. The Prophet shows how the Lord provides a change of raiment, picturing the robe of Christ's righteousness furnished to each one who enters upon the way to become a member of the Priesthood. The "High Priest" is composed primarily of Christ Jesus, our Lord, but when completed will be composed of Jesus the Head and the church his body, all forming the "royal priesthood." The picture furthermore shows that angel of the Lord standing by to render aid to the new creation in the course of its development. Other Scriptures confirm the thought of the Lord providing help through holy angels. "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him and delivereth them." (Psa. 34:7) "Are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation?"—Hebrews 1:14.

SIN'S SMALL BEGINNING

It seems quite evident that Lucifer, when starting upon his wrongful course, did not expect to go to such lengths of wickedness as he has gone. The Prophet pictures him as a beautiful creature, having authority and power over others. He became ambitious to have a kingdom of his own, like the most High God.

Evidently Lucifer desired to have greater prominence than the Lord had given him, because he felt that his ability was not being properly recognized. He had observed that Jehovah had created Adam and Eve in his likeness, and as Jehovah rules the universe he had given to Adam the dominion and rulership of the earth. Then said Lucifer, in substance, "Why did not Jehovah give me something according to my ability?" Then the Prophet represents him as saying in his heart, "I will be like the Most High"—"I will establish a kingdom of my own." His subsequent conduct shows a heart regardless of duty to others, fatally bent upon wrong-doing. He went to Eve and in substance said to her: "God is depriving you of these things that he is keeping secret from you. There is no danger of your dying. Eat the fruit, as I am doing. Exercise your own will power." We dare say that had he known to what great depths of sorrow his conduct would lead, he would have long hesitated to take such a step, and probably would not have taken it. His purpose was to usurp or steal that which the Lord had not given to him. He witnessed the effect, namely, the fall of man and his degradation, and the sickness, decay and death that came upon all mankind.

The Genesis account indicates that God permitted some of the angels of heaven to come to earth and attempt to uplift and bless mankind. The human race was therefore placed under the charge of the angels for a period of approximately 1600 years, or until the great Deluge. (Hebrews 2:5) Observing that Jehovah had placed the angels in charge of the human race, doubtless Satan again reasoned: "Why did not Jehovah let me take charge? I have more ability than they; he does not properly recognize my ability; he is doing me an injustice by keeping me out of what I am justly entitled to have and I will show him he cannot do it. I will get control of the angels and through them I will control the human race." This unsatisfied desire for rulership led him on to envy, hatred and malice, until he deliberately set about to seduce, and did seduce, the angels from the right course, and led them into paths of wickedness. This is in harmony with his general course. The result was that these angels, misusing their power, debauched the human race, except Noah and his family, and filled the whole earth with violence. "God spared not the angels that sinned, but confined them in Tartarus with chains of thick darkness, delivering them into custody for judgment." (2 Pet. 2:4, Diaglott.) "Those angels which kept not their own principality, but left their own habitation, he has kept in perpetual chains under thick darkness for the judgment of the great day."—Jude 6, Diaglott.

THE PRINCE OF DEMONS

Satan therefore was the direct cause of the failure of the angels which resulted in their incarceration. Since the time of the Flood these imprisoned demons have been under the control of Satan as the prince of demons. (Eph. 2:2) In his speech to the Pharisees the great Master recognized that Satan is the prince of devils, having charge over the other demons, all of whom are steeped in wickedness. (Matt. 12:24-29) Since the restraint of the demons Satan has attempted by various fradulent schemes and devices to control the human race, and at the same time thwart the purpose of Jehovah in the development of the new creation.

At the baptism of Jesus in the Jordan, true to the picture shown by the Prophet, Satan stood by to resist, and has ever since resisted the development of The Christ. Anti-Christ means that which is against Christ. Diverse and numerous movements and schemes has Satan instigated to overthrow the "seed." He has been the inspirer and instigator of every anti-Christ, or movement to retard the development of The Christ. He organized the Papacy, the symbolic "beast" of Revelation, which is a complete counterfeit of Messiah's kingdom arrangement. He has gained control of the Protestant systems, and has succeeded in forming the "image of the beast," now co-operating more or less with the "beast" and with the governments of earth. He is the author of Spiritism, Christian Science, New Thought, Theosophy, Hypnotism, and many other fradulent schemes which he makes appear as being for the benefit of mankind, but the real purpose of which is to turn the minds of the people away from the merit of Christ's sacrifice and hinder the development of the "seed according to the promise." He has used every means his fertile mind could devise to destroy the new creation, but he will not, as indeed he cannot, succeed. "God's Word shall not return unto him void, but shall accomplish that whereunto it was sent." In due time the new creation will be completed, to the glory of the great Jehovah.—Isaiah 55:8-11.

BINDING OF SATAN

Since the second presence of the Lord in 1874 the light of truth has been increasing in brightness. The tendency of this has been to restrain evil, and to that extent it has been binding Satan. Concerning the binding of Satan, Jesus said: "No man can enter into a strong man's house and spoil his goods except he first bind the strong man and then he will spoil his goods." (Matt. 12:29; Mark 3:22-27; Luke 11:22) "Thus we are taught that Satan must first be bound, restrained, and deposed, before Christ's reign of righteousness and peace can be established. This binding of Satan is accordingly shown to be the first work of the new dispensation." (A 68, 69) It has been suggested that as the binding of Satan progresses the other demons will be loosened or gain greater power. They could not be fully judged without first being released from prison. The disposition and evil bent of mind of these fallen angels or evil spirits must be taken into consideration in determining what course they will take, and the trouble they will cause when they are liberated from their incarceration.

Russia has long been an autocratic government, practically an absolute monarchy. It has been a mixture of civil and ecclesiastical power exercised by one head—the Czar. The arrangement is clearly the product of Satan. The Czar has been the head of the church and the absolute ruler of the people, and has held in restraint for a long time the subjects of that kingdom. Many of the subjects of Russia have long ago manifested an anarchistic spirit, and this is the class known as the "Bolsheviki." They have desired to disrupt the government, but have been restrained from so doing. As the Czar was deprived of his power gradually, so the "Bolsheviki" increased in power; and when the Czar was completely overthrown, the "Bolsheviki" ran riot, and conditions in Russia are daily growing worse.

In a measure this illustrates Satan's realm. He has been an arbitrary ruler of the evil ones of whom he is the chief or prince. The evil spirits incarcerated in Tartarus have been measurably under the control of Satan. They have at all times manifested the disposition of anarchists or "Bolsheviki." An anarchist is one who defies all rule and rulers, and whose purpose is to destroy every form of government and everything in the form of order. We should therefore expect that when these evil spirits are loosed from their chains of restraint the great trouble will follow. Being anarchists, and having no disposition to be controlled by any one, when they are released it would be expected that they would refuse to recognize any control. All their tendencies before incarceration were evil, and they filled the earth with violence, and hence we are not unaware of their disposition and not in darkness as to what course they will take.

Realizing that their incarceration was due largely to Satan's leading them into the wrong course, without doubt envy, ill-will, malice, hatred and jealousy will fill their minds and direct their actions. What might we expect them to attempt to do? We observe that Satan for many centuries has attempted to destroy the "seed of Abraham according to the promise." These fallen angels observe that he has not succeeded. We suggest that, move by envy, jealousy and rivalry, they may attempt to accomplish what Satan has failed to do, namely, to overthrow the Lord's people who constitute the "seed of Abraham," and who are yet this side the veil.

"THE FOUR WINDS OF THE EARTH"

St. John mentions them in the figure of "the four winds of the earth." (Revelation 7:1.) Commenting upon this Scripture in THE WATCH TOWER of June 1st, 1914, page 160, Brother Russell stated:

"The winds of the earth referred to here are of course symbolic. The thought is that the winds from the four quarters—North, East, South and West—are being held back, and that when the restraint is withdrawn they will rush together, and the result will be a whirlwind. Certain Scriptures tell of a whirlwind that will be raised from the coasts of the earth. See Jer. 23:19; 25:32, 33; 30:23, 24. We do not understand that this will be a physical whirlwind, but this symbolical expression is used to convey the thought of a severe strife of the powers of the air.

"These 'powers of the air' or 'winds' are not powers of natural air, but are powers referred to by St. Paul when he speaks of Satan as the 'prince of the power of the air.' (Eph. 2:2) These spirits who have been under the control of Satan —the fallen angels—were to be restrained in chains of darkness until the judgment of the great day. (2 Peter 2:4) The letting loose of the winds, or air powers, would seem to show that God has let go his hand of restraint; that he will have to do with the permission of the terrible trouble that will come upon the world as a great cataclysm, which will result in the complete overthrow of the social order in anarchy.

"These fallen angels have been under restraint for these many centuries, but they have exercised their influence to whatever extent they have had permission. If they had had unlimited power they would have wrecked the world long ago, but they have been restrained in darkness.

"Apparently God will soon cease to restrain the fallen angels, and they will then proceed to vent their fury upon humanity, so that the whole earth will be full of violence, the same as in the days of Noah. 'As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of Man.'—Luke 17:26.

"The power manifested by the demons when loosed will, we believe, be with a view to the injury of mankind. We do not know but that many of our readers will have a share in that injury. We have every reason to suppose that if these fallen angels get loose, they will vent their first anger upon the Lord's people. We are not to fear this, however, but to take whatever the Lord's providence may permit to come, knowing that everything shall work for our good."

Again commenting upon the same subject (Z '11, 359) Brother Russell said:

"As soon as the power that is now controlling them shall be removed, we shall have a reign of evil all over the earth. The evil spirits will do all the evil that is in their power, and this will constitute the trial of all the fallen angels—the lifting of the restraints to see whether they will go contrary to the divine will. All who thus manifest their alliance with evil in any way will become subjects of the second death; while others who show their loyalty to God will mark themselves as worthy, presumably, of everlasting life.

"It may be something in connection with the saints that will constitute the test of these angels."

HOW WE MAY EXPECT THE ATTACK

The true saints of God are the only ones on earth who have not the spirit of anarchy. Then we may expect the demons to try to put the spirit of anarchy into the mind of even the saintly class. Hence the importance of the warning of the Apostle to "arm yourselves likewise with the same mind."

It is the new creature that the adversaries destroy. The new creature is composed of the new will and new mind, which has its habitation in an earthen vessel. We should expect, therefore, that the adversaries will assault the mind. The words of the text indicate this very clearly. There would be no occasion to arm ourselves with the same mind of Christ unless we expected to be attacked in the same way that he was attacked, by the adversaries. What was the mind of Christ? Humble submission to the Father's will, which meant gladly following the order marked out by the Father. It was to resist the adversaries with the Father's Word.

The spirit of anarchy is among all the inhabitants of the earth. Anarchy is prevalent in Satan's dominion. We should expect, therefore, that the adversaries would seek to produce anarchy among the Lord's people; in other words, to put in the mind of such the thought that they should be subject to no order and no one, but that each one should take his or her own course, pleasing only self; that to take any other course would be submission of the will to another person. While it is true that we are to submit our wills to no one except the will of God, yet we should remember that the will of God concerning his own is that they should be governed by his Word. "Order is heaven's first law," and all disorder tends to anarchy. "God hath set the members every one of them in the body as it hath pleased him." (1 Cor. 12:18) Suppose I think someone else is occupying a place that I should by right have, should I attempt to force myself into the position? Such a course would be prompted by the spirit of the evil one. Such is the course the adversary took. But suppose I am better qualified to fill the position than the one who holds it? Better leave it with the Lord. He knows all about it.

So surely as there are "Bolsheviki" in Russia, just so surely we may expect the adversaries to attempt to put the spirit of "Bolshevism" or anarchy, into the minds of the Lord's people that, succeeding in this, they might overthrow some of his people and produce such a disruption of the work as to have seemingly triumphed in their purpose. But God will not permit anything to be done that will overthrow those who have the right spirit, the spirit of humility —the mind of Christ. Evidently Satan thought he had a great deal of ability (and he did have some) to become a king or ruler, but his ability could not be used of the Lord because of his lack of humility. Any creature's ability in the service of the Lord is measured by his true humility, and where humility is lacking, natural ability is nil. The same spirit actuated the fallen angels. The same spirit will work amongst some of God's people. Humility means a true and joyful submission to the will of God. If we find that the Lord has instituted a certain way to carry out his purposes then we should joyfully fall in line with that way and strive to perform what he gives us to do. Headiness, stubbornness, selfishness, leads to dissension and disruption—such is not the mind of the Lord, but the mind of the adversaries. So surely as the Lord has marked out a way and we seek to go contrary to that way, we remove ourselves from his special protection and open our mind to the assault of the adversaries, and, persisting in this course, we must finally fall.

OUR SAFETY

Wherein then lies the safety of the new creature? St. Peter says: "Arm yourselves with the mind of Christ." The Apostle Paul corroborates this in Ephesians 6:10-18, in plain language showing us that our warfare is not with our hands, not with carnal weapons, not with visible enemies, but with Satan and a host of evil spirits. He then shows us that our safety lies in putting on the whole armor of God and in keeping it on, and using it according to the Lord's will. It should be marked that this armor is not for a human being, but it is for the new creature, and therefore the figure of arming the mind is maintained with reference to the armor here. Mark what the Apostle says, "Take unto you the whole armor of God that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all to stand. Stand, therefore, having your loins girt about with truth." The girdle around the loins indicates that the wearer is a servant, and when this girdle is tightly fastened it indicates that the servant is engaged in some strenuous work. This suggests, then, that the new creature must fill his mind with things pertaining to the Lord's work and see to it that he is a servant of the truth. How may he know whether or not he is a servant of the truth? We answer, by ascertaining whether or not he is using that which the Lord has provided for the church. The 14th chapter of Revelation, verses 13-16, clearly shows that the service of the church during the harvest is first the reaping of the saintly class; and the subsequent verses show that the saintly ones must participate in the reaping of the vine of the earth. It follows, then, that when the time arrives for this work to be done, each one who would be serving that message which the Lord had provided in his own due time must have the loins of his mind girded with the truth—engaging in the service according to opportunity. If we have come to the end of the way, if we are nearing the very closing hours of the harvest, then we may know that the proclamation of the vengeance of the Lord against Babylon must be made. (Isa. 61:2) And to be thus engaged zealously in the Lord's service would mean to keep our mind upon such work, making ourselves the servants of his cause.

LET US ARM OURSELVES

The Apostle then adds that we must have on the breastplate of righteousness. The breastplate fitted over the vital organs. The heart is the most vital organ to the new creature. The necessity for keeping the heart cannot be overstated. If, then, one finds bitterness arising in his heart, regardless of the cause he should take it at once as a warning that he is not arming himself with the mind of Christ, and not properly using the armor. Failing to arm himself thus he would not be able to withstand the assaults of the adversaries. See 1 Thess. 3:8.

The Apostle then suggests that our feet should be shod with the preparation of the Gospel of peace. It is a noticeable fact in recent months that there has been much disturbance in the classes. These disturbances do not arise over doctrinal matters, but are more particularly concerning order or discipline or the manner of doing what should be done. In some places elders seek to lord it over the ecclesia, thinking their ability should be recognized. Other members insist on doing everything their own way. This is manifesting the spirit of the "Bolsheviki." It brings trouble instead of peace, which shows that such a one is not properly armed with the mind of Christ; that he has not on the armor in all its parts; that instead of being shod with the message of peace his feet are shod with the hob-nails of anarchy. It is the duty of the elders to counsel peace and moderation amongst the brethren.

Then, adds the Apostle, we should have the shield of faith with which we shall be able to resist the darts of the wicked ones. This means that we should be fully advised as to the manner of attack by the evil ones; that we obtain this advice from the Word of God, and relying upon it we properly fortify ourselves against all assaults. It means furthermore, that we know of the exceeding great and precious promises of the Lord which are sure to bring to the obedient ones an abundant entrance into the kingdom; and knowing these, that we rely upon them.

Then, adds the Apostle, we must have the helmet of salvation and the sword of the spirit. The helmet is fitted over the head and therefore represents the intellectual part of the creature. This suggests that we must have an intellectual understanding and appreciation of what the Lord's Word is concerning us. This is the basis for the hope of our salvation. The sword of the spirit is the Word of God. Then having the helmet and the sword would mean that we both understand what the Word teaches and are striving to use it both as a defensive and an offensive weapon—as a defensive weapon against our adversaries, as an offensive weapon by proclaiming the message of the Lord now due to be given. (G 466. Ezek. 21:15) Then, adds the Apostle, we should pray with all prayer and supplication for all saints, thus showing the necessity not only for keeping our heart and mind fixed on our welfare, but for having in mind the spiritual welfare of our brethren.

OUR YEAR TEXT

How appropriate, therefore, the text for the year—"The end of all things is at hand; be ye therefore sober and watch unto prayer. And above all things have fervent love among yourselves." That we are at the end of the Gospel age, we all agree. We are at the end of the harvest period of that age. The end of Satan's dominion is also here, and the beginning of the Millennial age. Important to us is the fact that we have come to the end of the development of the new creation, and soon the last member will be complete. Mark the conditions that prevail in the entire world today—discontent, selfishness, passion, frenzy, hatred, malice and ill-will are being manifested in a manner never before witnessed. After enjoying so many of the blessings of the first few years of the 20th century, the human race is now plunged into the most terrible war known, one which the Scriptures show to be followed by revolution and anarchy. The people are required to endure hardships such as they have never before known. The lack of food, the lack of comfort and ease, added to great burdens of taxation with no hope of relief therefrom, increase the spirit of discontent. Selfishness predominates everywhere. Millions of men, for years engaged in shedding human blood, now possess distorted minds, in fact, the entire human race is mentally upset. Added to all of these things, the world is drunken with the doctrines of Babylon. The "beast" is manifesting his power. The "image of the beast" is about to do likewise. The Revelator tells us that when these events take place that Babylon becomes the very habitation and hold of these evil spirits. If now we see so much wrongdoing in the world, what must we expect when the "powers of the air" shall be allowed to gain temporary liberty for the very purpose of manifesting the evil tendencies of the unregenerated heart? Surely, then, there never has been a time like the present when it is so necessary to be of sober mind and watch and pray. Never has it been so important for us to have overspreading love for all the brethren.

That our enemies are increasing in power is manifest on every hand. That they may have more power shortly is to be expected. Let us not be at all discouraged, however. We have been many times warned of this; and to be forewarned is to be forearmed. Now as we are drawing nearer to the great crisis let us remember the admonition of the Lord, to have ourselves "armed with the same mind" that Christ had, having on the whole armor of God, and we shall be safe. And even though we may seemingly go down in defeat from the viewpoint of the world, yet such will mean the great triumph of the faithful and an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. —Psalm 91:1; 2 Peter 1:11.

ANNUAL MEETING OF SHAREHOLDERS

Probably nothing that has occurred in recent months has called forth from the friends such earnest and fervent prayers as those offered in behalf of the convention that should assemble in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and the annual election of officers of the SOCIETY for the ensuing year. With eagerness the brethren have been looking forward to the events that would transpire there, that the will of the Lord might be known. It is believed that their prayers were answered. The Lord very wonderfully manifested his presence and his spirit at the convention and at the annual meeting.

On the morning of January 2nd the convention opened according to program, and closed Sunday evening, January 6th, with a love feast. Approximately one thousand attended. The discourses of the pilgrim brethren were very timely and helpful. Particular emphasis was laid upon the fact that the kingdom of the Lord is near at hand and upon the great necessity for our preparation for the kingdom. Some bitter trials have been experienced during the year just past, and these seem to have whetted the appetites of the Lord's dear children to partake more fully of the spiritual food provided for them. A number of splendid prayer, praise and testimony meetings were a part of the program; and the testimony of the dear brethren at these meetings showed plainly their determination to do one thing, namely to press forward along the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. From every quarter of the country came encouraging messages concerning the Seventh Volume, and the many blessings the brethren have obtained by a careful study of it, and further blessings by its distribution. Many of the classes reported progress in this work, both in the widespreading of the message of truth and in their own personal spiritual development.

ANNUAL MEETING

Saturday, January 5th, was the day appointed for the holding of the annual meeting of the shareholders of the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY. In view of the events that have transpired during the six months ended, the dear friends from every part of the world were keenly interested in this annual meeting. Cablegrams from foreign countries expressed the keen interest the brethren there felt in the result, that they might see the manifestation of the Lord's will concerning the harvest work.

The meeting convened at ten o'clock Saturday morning at Carnegie Hall, N. S. Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, being opened with a song and with a prayer led by Brother Barber. Then followed an exhaustive report by the President concerning the work of the SOCIETY for the year just past. This was followed by a report from the Treasurer, the substance of which has heretofore been published in THE WATCH TOWER.

It was the thought of some present that the recent misunderstanding with reference to the management of the SOCIETY should be discussed in detail; but it was manifestly the belief of the overwhelming majority of the shareholders present that full and complete publication had heretofore been made concerning such misunderstanding, and that further discussion or agitation of the same would do no good. It was pointed out by those who expressed themselves that the friends were fully advised as to the facts, and that further discussion of it was wholly undesirable; that having received the published statements of both sides and carefully considering them, the brethren had come there with their hearts lifted in prayer to the Lord to manifest his will; and that now was the time, not for talking, but for action.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS ELECTED

The Charter requires that first a Board of Directors of seven members be elected, and that from the seven elected, the officers of the SOCIETY shall be chosen. The first thing in order, therefore, was the nomination and election of seven members who should compose the Board of Directors for the ensuing year. The order of business being announced, Brother Barber arose and stated that the friends throughout the country, on the 21st of November, had by referendum vote expressed their choice for directors and officers; and that he would take it therefore as the Lord's will that the brethren receiving the highest number of votes at that referendum should be nominated, and he therefore placed in nomination for directors the following named brethren, to-wit:

Brother	Rutherford	Brother	Macmillan
"	Van Amburgh	"	Spill
"	Pierson	"	Bohnet

Brother Fisher

Brother McGee, of Trenton, N. J., then placed in nomination for directors the following:

Brother	Menta Sturgeon	Brother	Isaac F. Hoskins
"	A. I. Ritchie	"	R. H. Hirsh
"	H. C. Rockwell	"	J. D. Wright

Brother P. S. L. Johnson

Before the ballot was taken, however, Brother Johnson withdrew his name.

Brother F. T. Horth, of Clinton, Iowa, Brother C. J. Woodworth, of Scranton, Pa., and Brother A. M. Zimmerman, of Lancaster, Pa., were appointed by the President as inspectors of election. After they had taken and subscribed to the required oath to perform their duties as such judges and inspectors with fidelity, the ballot was taken. It required a considerable length of time to check up all the proxies and certificates and to count the vote; and although the ballots were cast in the forenoon the count was not completed until about 8:30 P. M. The result of the ballot was as follows:

J. F. Rutherford	194,106	Menta Sturgeon	27,261
A. H. Macmillan	161,871	R. H. Hirsh	23,198
W. E. Van Amburgh	160,215	I. F. Hoskins	22,660
W. E. Spill	118,259	A. I. Ritchie	22,631
J. A. Bohnet	113,422	J. D. Wright	22,623
C. H. Anderson	107,175	H. C. Rockwell	18,178
G. H. Fisher	83,260	P. S. L. Johnson	6,469
A. N. Pierson	57,721	W. J. Hollister	3.931

The seven receiving the highest number of votes cast were:

J. F. Rutherford	A. H. Macmillan
C. H. Anderson	W. E. Spill
W. E. Van Amburgh	J. A. Bohnet

George H. Fisher

and were thereupon declared by the judges of election as having been duly elected as members of the Board of Directors of the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY for the ensuing year.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS

The next order of business was the election of officers who must be selected from amongst those duly chosen as members of the Board of Directors. Brother W. E. Page, of Des Moines, Iowa, placed in nomination for the office of President Brother J. F. Rutherford; and a number of other brethren from different parts of the country seconded this nomination. Brother A. H. Macmillan placed in nomination for Vice President Brother Charles H. Anderson, of Baltimore, Md., whose nomination was seconded by several others. Brother W. E. Spill placed in nomination for the office of Secretary-Treasurer Brother W. E. Van Amburgh, whose nomination was also seconded by a number of the brethren. There being no one else nominated for either of these offices, the ballot was taken; and the results showed that Brother J. F. Rutherford had received all of the ballots cast for the office of President, Brother Charles H. Anderson all the votes cast for Vice President, and Brother W. E. Van Amburgh all the votes cast for Secretary-Treasurer. Thereupon the judges of election declared that these brethren were duly elected to the respective offices named.

PRESIDENT'S REMARKS

Immediately upon announcement by the judges of election as to who were chosen as officers of the SOCIETY, Brother Rutherford spoke from the platform, calling attention to the fact that now, since the Lord had manifested his will and expressed it through his people at this election, he deemed it proper that he should make a statement relating to the recent misunderstanding with other brethren concerning the management of the SOCIETY. He further stated that his action in appointing four members of the Board of Directors in the month of July, 1917, was not done for the purpose of deposing any one, and did not depose any one as a member of the Board of Directors, but that he merely filled the vacancies in the Board for the purposes stated in the Harvest Siftings heretofore published. He further stated that in taking this action personalties did not enter into the matter; that he had no personal feeling against the brethren who took issue with him at the time he made such appointments; that he had not had any feeling against them since, and did not now hold any ill-will toward them; that his action was entirely official, because he believed it to be his duty as the President of the SOCIETY to take this action in behalf of the SOCIETY and the work that it is doing; that he deeply regretted that misunderstanding and trouble had followed; that he realized his imperfections and was aware that he made many mistakes, but that he still believed his action in filling the vacancies on the Board was entirely right and proper.

Brother Rutherford then stated that he had no desire nor disposition to deprive any one of opportunities for service in the harvest field, and that if these brethren who had been openly opposing the management of the SOCIETY for the past few months would cease their opposition and come forward and express their desire and purpose to preach the truth and to work in harmony with the SOCIETY, he would be glad to see that each of them was put actively into the service of the SOCIETY; that if they would do this he would be willing to forget the past, and hoped that the other brethren were likewise willing to forget, and that all now who claimed to be fully consecrated to the Lord should join their hearts and hands in the common cause for righteousness and in spreading the glad tidings of the kingdom. All were invited to forget their differences, for, realizing that the church is a little band of consecrated followers of the Master, surrounded upon every side by enemies—the world, the flesh, the demons and the great adversary—the brethren above all peoples should stand firmly together and in love serve one another and serve the Lord. Nearly all of the members present manifested their hearty approval of the sentiments expressed, by repeated and prolonged applause.

This concluding the business of the annual meeting, the same was adjourned amidst great rejoicing by the brethren present. Many were the expressions that the Lord had certainly been present and guided the deliberations of the meeting, and the result was joyfully taken as his expressed will.

Brother Anderson was not formally placed in nomination for the position of a member of the Board of Directors. Nevertheless this did not preclude any one from properly voting for him, and his election was entirely in harmony with the laws of the land and the Charter of the SOCIETY.

During the time occupied by the judges of election in examining the records and counting the votes the brethren present indulged in praise, prayer and testimonies, interspersed with discourses by several pilgrim brethren. The time, therefore, was very profitably spent. It was indeed a very blessed season together.

THE CLOSE OF THE CONVENTION

All the Sunday sessions of the convention were held in the Lyceum Theatre. Discourses were delivered in the forenoon by Brothers Perrin and Heard. In the afternoon Brother Rutherford addressed the public, there being approximately two thousand present, and splendid interest was manifested. This meeting was followed by a love feast, participated in by approximately one thousand brethren; and many were the expressions of love and joy that came from those who participated.

Just preceding the love feast a motion was made and duly seconded, requesting Brother R. H. Hirsh to resign as a member of the Editorial Committee of THE WATCH TOWER. This motion was unanimously carried by the convention, not a dissenting vote being offered. In the evening, at the Lyceum Theatre, another gathering of the friends was addressed by Brothers Van Amburgh and Heard.

Many were heard to say that this had been the most blessed convention they had ever attended and that never had they seen the spirit of the Lord so manifested by the many brethren. This is exactly what we should have expected to come from all those who realize that we are in the very end of the harvest, and that our work may soon be finished this side the veil. With sobriety of mind and calmness of heart and with the determination to continue steadfast, the dear friends are facing the concluding work of the harvest.

REGARDING MILITARY EXEMPTION

Quite a number of our brethren in different parts of the country have been denied military exemption. Some of them, because of their refusal to engage in military service, have been court-martialed and sentenced to long terms in prison, while others are held in detention camps in different parts of the country. Those attending the convention felt it incumbent upon them to express their love and sympathy in support of these dear brethren who are so loyally standing for the principles represented by our Association; and it was deemed proper to pass a resolution relating to the matter. A committee previously appointed for that purpose reported a resolution on Sunday morning, which was read before the convention and, upon motion, was seconded and unanimously adopted. The resolution follows:

RESOLUTION

"WHEREAS, under the terms of the Selective Draft Act a number of our members and brethren have been called to military duty, and under the terms and provisions of said Selective Draft Act have made application to the proper authorities for discharge or exemption from military service, which right or privilege has been denied many of them, and they have been and are now forcibly restrained of their liberty in either military prisons or army detention camps;

"AND WHEREAS, we believe our position as a religious organization, which has been organized and existing for many years prior to the passage of said Act, is not fully understood by various officers and representatives of the United States Government, and that it is due and proper that we should make a statement as to the position of this religious organization that the attitude of our said members and brethren may be better understood;

"NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED: By the members of the INTERNATIONAL BIBLE STUDENTS ASSOCIATION in annual convention assembled at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, composed of delegates representing our Association from all of the United States and Canada, that we make the following statement of our said Association or organization concerning our attitude and the attitude of our members toward the present great war:

"FIRST. That we recognize in President Wilson a great man who is using his power and influence honestly and conscientiously and according to his best judgment in the interests of the peoples of the world and particularly of the United States.

"SECOND. That we recognize the duty of every one living within the realms of the United States to be law-abiding; that the Congress of the United States, representing the people of the nation, placed a provision in the Selective Act that no person should be compelled to engage in military service who is a member of a well-organized religious organization or association whose teachings or principles forbid its members to engage in war, or who are against war in any form; that in taking the position they do, our members are claiming only the protection the law provides against violation of conscience.

"THIRD. That we are followers of the Great Master Christ Jesus our Redeemer, and have covenanted with the Lord to do his will; and that we are certain that it is not his will that we, as his followers, should participate in the great war now upon the earth. We recognize in the present great war one that is different from any other war ever before known, to wit: That it marks the end of the world—that is to say, the end of the present evil order of things—and is purging the nations and preparing the way for the kingdom of God for which followers of the Great Master, Christ Jesus, have prayed for many centuries; and that for forty years past this Association has held and taught that the year 1914 would mark the beginning of this great international conflict which the prophets of the Lord foretold must take place, immediately preceding the establishment of the everlasting kingdom of righteousness.

"We agree with President Wilson that there can be no lasting peace while the present unrighteous systems exist.

"FOURTH. We hold that the teachings of Jesus and the apostles forbid all his true followers to engage in mortal combat or war; that early in the Christian era this teaching was departed from by those claiming to be his followers and that for many centuries past the clergy of both Catholic and Protestant church systems have departed from the teachings of Jesus and the Apostles, substituting therefor man-made doctrines, and have taught the divine right of kings to rule and that the kingdoms of this earth constitute the kingdom of the Lord, and have mixed the religion of Jesus Christ with the politics of the world, which has resulted in confusion amongst Christian peoples, and which the Lord denounces as Babylon and as an abomination in his sight; that the Lord through many of his holy prophets foretold that such an alliance would result between civil and ecclesiastical powers on earth which would bring upon both the indignation of God, causing wars, revolutions and anarchy, which would be overruled by him for the purging of the nations of the earth to the end that he might establish amongst the people a pure and righteous government.

"FIFTH. With charity to all and malice toward none, we feel it our duty humbly to call attention to the fact that the nations are now passing through that great crisis foretold by the prophets of the Lord, and that God is expressing his displeasure toward the relationship existing between ecclesiastical and civil kingdoms of the earth, particularly as set forth in the following cited Scriptures, to wit: Revelation, chapters 17 and 18; Ezekiel, chapter 34.

"SIXTH. That sincerely believing such to be true, a participation by our members in this war would be contrary to the Lord's will and a violation of our own conscience which would put in jeopardy our eternal destiny and welfare. While we hold that it is the privilege of any and all persons to engage in war who desire to do so if they are not followers of Jesus Christ, yet we hold that they who do follow faithfully in his footsteps cannot consistently participate in war in any form; and we have so held for more that thirty years.

"SEVENTH. We, therefore, enter our solemn protest against the incarceration of our brethren and members in prison because of the refusal on their part to violate their conscience and to violate the law of God; that we respectfully call upon the officials of the Government of the United States to recognize that the members of our Association come clearly within the purvue and terms of the exemption clause of the Selective Draft Act because of the teachings and principles of this religious Association which principles and teachings have been held and taught by it and its members for more than a quarter of a century; and that we respectfully petition and ask that our said brethren and members, to wit:

Herm. Abraham, Holyoke, Mass.	Joy Ferguson, Camp Upton
Martin O. Bowin, Camp Upton	Stanley Olson, Camp Grant
Harold Bruber, Camp Dodge	George Ruiz, Camp Upton
A. W. Christy, Jr., Camp Upton	Walford Marker, Seattle, Wash.
Elmer Christy, Camp Upton	Walter Mozee, Camp Upton
Jerry De Cecca, Camp Devens	J. A. Murch, Cp. Zachary Taylor
Stanley Dixon, Camp Bowie	Carmelo Nicita, Camp Deven
Frank Donogrio, Camp Dix	S. Papageorges, Duluth, Minn.
Charles Feldner, Camp Meade	H. Pound, Camp Zachary Taylor
Charles H. Walker, Camp Zachary Taylor and others, be fully granted the provisions of the exemption clause of the Selective Draft Act, as provided by Congress.

"That a copy of this Resolution be furnished to the President of the United States, to the Secretary of the War Department and the Provost Marshal General Crowder; and that the President of our Association appoint a committee of three to so present these resolutions."

PRESENTED TO PRESIDENT WILSON

Brother Rutherford as president thereupon appointed Brother Dr. Smith of Louisville, Ky., Brother E. D. Sexton, of Los Angeles, California, and Brother E. W. Brenneisen, of New York City, as a committee of three to bear these resolutions to Washington and there in person present them to President Wilson, Secretary Baker of the War Department, and a copy to Provost Marshal General Crowder. The Committee proceeded to Washington for this purpose, and on Friday, January 11th, they were granted an audience with President Wilson. The Committee was very kindly and graciously received by the President who patiently listened to the reading of the resolution. The President expressed himself as fully sympathizing with our position. He suggested that some had exceeded their authority in dealing with our brethren and promised that these mistakes should be speedily rectified. Afterwards a copy of the resolution was presented to Secretary of War Baker and Provost Marshal Crowder.

What effect this resolution may have we cannot of course know, but it is our hope that much good may result. While our brethren are refusing to render military service they are not doing so because of any desire to be against the Government but because they are conscientious and believe that for them to engage in this great war would be to forfeit their share in the kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Having made a consecration to be dead with Christ, all such count not the present life dear unto themselves. They desire above all things to be pleasing to the heavenly Father and to do his will completely.

For the encouragement of our dear brethren in bonds we remind them of the great afflictions endured by the faithful ones of the past as recorded by the Apostle Paul in Hebrews 11. Those men proved their loyalty and faithfulness to God, and because thereof they will have a better resurrection than the world in general. Now some of his dear children are having the privilege of proving their loyalty under somewhat similar circumstances, and if faithful, will have the privilege, together with the King of kings and Lord of lords, of reconstructing the world of mankind which is now engaged in the destruction of each other. What a blessed privilege that will be!

INTERESTING LETTERS

SEEKING TO CAUSE DIVISION

DEAR BRETHREN:—

I hardly know how to start this letter, but will say in passing that my motive is not to embitter any one but, if I know my own heart, to protect the Lord's people where possible from a similar experience.

Wednesday evening at prayer, praise and testimony meeting I was very much surprised to see Brother Johnson walk in with Brother R——. . . . . A motion was put and carried that Brother Johnson give us a discourse. He came forward and gave us one of the best discourses I have ever heard on "Christ having been rich, became poor for us, that we might be made rich"—no reference being made to the trouble at Brooklyn or elsewhere. At the close of the meeting he was invited to address the class on Saturday night and Sunday afternoon. Saturday night he gave us a discourse on "Building up in Love," etc. Sunday morning his talk was along the lines of fiery trials. He started out, using Revelation the seventh chapter by stating that he accepted the Seventh Volume as the Seventh Volume, although he believed it contained some errors, but that the good in the book far exceeded the errors, and he believed it was being used of the Lord. But before he got through with his sledge-hammer blows the Seventh Volume got fixed up wrong, as you may be sure it would be.

Sunday afternoon he gave a discourse along the line of the Parable of the Penny and of the Inkhorn. To make a long story short, he concluded by saying that Brother Russell shows that the chariot in symbol represents an organization; the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY is the chariot of the Elijah class; but that the legalities which you invoked are lurid legalities (the horses); that the separation is now taking place; and the lurid legalities are separating the two classes; that those who are putting out the Seventh Volume and the Babylon Tract are the great company; that they are smiting the Jordan the second time, as Elisha returning. He made the plain, unequivocal statement that Brother Rutherford would be of the great company, and that those adhering to the SOCIETY and distributing the Seventh Volume, etc., would also be of that class. . . . .

I am trying to look for the Lord's spirit continually. "If any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his." If these brethren really think they are of the little flock class, and we are doing the work of the great company class now, why do they take the trouble to hinder it? Why not let us do it and help them and us into the kingdom that much quicker? . . . .

Our business is to do with our might what our hands find to do. I do not believe my sacrifice is complete. If it were I would not be here. If Brother Johnson and others of the opposition think their sacrifice is complete, and that they are merely waiting for their glorification, I trust they will be supremely happy; but I want to work while it is yet day, because I believe shortly no man can work. . . . .

We would be glad to have a few lines from you if you have any suggestions that you think would be helpful to us in our effort to serve and please the Lord in this work.

With much Christian love for you, and believing that you are trying to do the Lord's will, however imperfectly, I am

Your brother in Christ, G. M. K.—Va.

OUR REPLY

DEAR BROTHER IN CHRIST:—

It is with regret that we note the unhappy circumstances described in your letter, that a brother, once prominent and active in the service of the SOCIETY one who was held in the highest confidence by the friends, would appear before the class and for a time apparently manifest the spirit of the Lord and then, taking advantage of the confidence of the friends, attempt to disrupt and hinder the work.—2 Corinthians 11:13-15.

Having in mind what this unfortunate brother did in Great Britain and what he has attempted to do in this country, we feel duty-bound to warn the dear friends everywhere. If, as this Brother and his associates hold, those who are managing the SOCIETY'S affairs are of the great company class, why have these brethren tried so strenuously for the past year to get control of the SOCIETY? Are they so desirous to be of the great company class? Wherein is their consistency? Of course, any one is entitled to hold any opinion he may desire, but if he is of the opinion that the SOCIETY and those working in conjunction with it constitute the great company class, and therefore it has become his duty to oppose the work of the harvest in which the SOCIETY is engaged, then it would be manifestly improper for the friends to receive him and extend to him the fellowship of a brother.

The SOCIETY does not endorse his course at all; he is not sent out by the SOCIETY, and we feel impelled to call attention to the Apostle Paul's words as set forth in Romans 16:17, 18. We feel if we did not thus warn the flock, we would be negligent of our duty. If any brother does not feel that he can work under the direction of the SOCIETY and in harmony with the SOCIETY, then those who are in harmony with the SOCIETY should avoid him. Any separation that may follow need not be in bitterness, nor in self-righteousness, but rather with a desire to be engaged consistently in the Lord's service. "Let every man be persuaded in his own mind," but let none seek to practice deception upon others, or to interfere with others who desire to serve the Lord.

Our advice to you under the circumstances would be that all who desire to engage in the distribution of THE FINISHED MYSTERY—Volume VII, and other literature which the SOCIETY publishes and sends forth—do so; and all others who do not feel disposed to engage should not interfere with those who want to work. If a brother is not in full harmony with the work of the SOCIETY, then he should not accept at the hands of the class appointment upon any committee that has to do with the distribution of the literature. The time is short in which to do the work, and it is evidently the Lord's will that it shall be done. Let us do with our might what our hands find to do and leave it to the Lord to determine whether we shall be of the little flock or great company class. The question that will determine to which class we belong will not be as to how much or how little literature we put out, or how many books we sell, but what is the real heart condition? If any are so situated that they cannot engage actively in the distribution of the message, this would in no wise preclude them from being of the kingdom class, provided they were of the proper heart condition. But if one is so situated that he could engage in the harvest work, but because of his heart condition refuses to do so, the result might be different. We leave the judgment entirely with the Lord. It is not for us to judge. Above all, let us do everything decently and in order, and dwell in peace, avoiding the spirit of rivalry and vain-glory.

Let every one who desires to work in the harvest field enter quickly and work, and those who do not wish to work refrain from so doing, and at least refrain from interfering. Any one who seeks to disrupt the Lord's work surely has not the spirit of the Lord, and all such we are told to avoid.—1 Timothy 6:3-6; Proverbs 6:16, 19.

TO DO GOD'S WILL HIS CHIEF DESIRE

DEAR BROTHER RUTHERFORD:—

I desire further to join my voice with those who have confessed to the wonderful blessings derived through the reading of Volume VII, THE FINISHED MYSTERY. I am thankful indeed that the Lord has, by his grace, enabled me to "see the point" of the Sword; and it has led me to a renewal of my consecration to be faithful unto him and his truth even unto death, and to renewed energy and zeal in his service.

Now, dear brother, my chief desire is to do the will of God in co-operation with the SOCIETY, which I firmly believe to be the angel of God having power (authority) over the coals of fire, and therefore I desire to place my limited capabilities at the service and disposal of the SOCIETY to be used in whatever way the SOCIETY may deem wise.

I wish to say, dear brother, that in reflecting over the past, I realize that your treatment of Sister Burgess and myself has been very kind and considerate, and I desire now to acknowledge it and to thank the Lord for all his undeserved favors, and yourself as an instrument in his hands to dispense them.

I have been greatly blessed and assisted to a right view of the present situation by the articles in THE WATCH TOWER, "Concluding Work of the Harvest," Oct. 1st; "The Price of Exaltation," Nov. 15th; and "The Light of the World," Dec. 1st; and I praise the Lord for the grand food dispensed through THE WATCH TOWER and for its continued spiritual, uplifting influence.

May the blessing of the Lord be with you abundantly, dear brother, and with all those associated with you in this blessed work and labor of love, is my prayer.

Your brother in his grace, A. E. BURGESS.—N. Y.

GOOD RESULTS OF VOLUNTEERING

DEAR SIRS:—

Recently while riding on a street car a lady handed me a paper entitled THE BIBLE STUDENTS MONTHLY in which I became very much interested, and would appreciate your sending me the issue treating "The Battle of Armageddon" and also a copy of "Where Are The Dead?" Please find enclosed $1.00 for which kindly send me THE BIBLE STUDENTS MONTHLY for one year. I read in the paper the cost is only 12c, which seems strange to me that a paper could be published at such a low cost. If so, keep the difference for papers to give out to other strangers.

Yours respectfully, C. A. B.—Ohio.

EUPHRATES GRADUALLY BEING DRIED UP

GENTLEMEN:—

Your issue of THE BIBLE STUDENTS MONTHLY, Vol. 9. No. 5, on "Why do the Nations War?" was placed at my door last Saturday. I read same to my wife and we both came to the conclusion that the truth you put forth fully coincides with our views in the matter. Please send me as many copies of this issue as you can conveniently spare, and any other issues which you may have. I will distribute them amongst my friends and co-workers that their eyes may be opened. There are upwards of 300 clerks in my department. How I wish I could have them all read your "War Extra"! It would wake them up, and remove the scales from their eyes.

Correct you are: Priests and preachers have long since strayed away from Christ's teachings and are blinding his children with falsehoods for their own gain. Any priest or preacher—no matter of what denomination—who approves and agitates the killing of the innocent is far from the teachings of Christ and belongs to the devil.

I want Pastor Russell's STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES which you announce, and wish to subscribe for your MONTHLY. You will also hear from me again. God bless and prosper your good work.

Yours very respectfully, R. D. KOERNER.—Ill.

WARRING AGAINST THE CREEDS

GENTLEMEN:—

I have just read your paper on "The Fall of Babylon" as treated by Pastor Russell. It agrees with my understanding of the truth. I am a scientific man—surgeon, chemist and astronomer—laboring in the fields of creation to the same ends that others are fighting the war on the creeds. I am with you in the great reconstruction where truth shall sweep the earth and the mind of man shall come into a full understanding of the divine will and do it completely.

Faithfully yours, EDWARD GATES DAVIS.—Kan.

CO-OPERATION ASSURED

DEAR BRETHREN:—

RESOLVED, that we, the undersigned members of the York (Pa.) Ecclesia of Associated Bible Students, do hereby assure the faithful officers of the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY, and the Bethel Family, of our hearty co-operation and support in the remaining work of the Harvest, yet to be done.

Be it further resolved that we will continue to pray for the general interests of the work, that it may be carried out to its completion, to the honor and glory of our King.

[SIGNED BY FORTY-SEVEN BRETHREN.]

AS THE LORD HATH PROSPERED THEM

DEAR BRETHREN IN CHRIST:—

Enclosed please find money order, amounting to ——, our quarterly contribution to "Good Hopes," according as the Lord hath prospered us. It pleases us beyond expression that our contributions following the death of our beloved Pastor have been of increased amounts, so that you might be assured of our absolute confidence in those whom it pleases the Lord to place in charge of his great work, and that you might realize our desire to co-operate heartily in that work.

Our little class prays that our love for the Lord and the brethren may abound more and more.

Yours in the King's service,

"GNAWING THEIR TONGUES FOR PAIN"

SIRS:—

I might call your attention to the sheet of paper called "The Fall of Babylon," which has been circulated around our city, much to the disgust of all denominations. As a Protestant, I look upon it as one of the most narrow-minded, vile and decidedly untrue sheets printed for some time. I sincerely hope it will not come into the hands of our Catholic neighbors.

Under the heading "Reformers vs. Antichrist" your jealousy of the pope and church is shown in its real color. Has this circular been read before being distributed, by any responsible (?) sane person in your Association, of which there seems to be a scarcity? You quote St. Paul as saying: "That day shall not come except there come a falling away [Romish Apostasy] first, and that man of sin [Papacy]", etc. Why the words in brackets? Did you ever read or hear of anything so ridiculous? It is a pity that the world has to support such weaklings as your executives have shown themselves to be. Could you not use your time to better advantage by doing Red Cross work, or in fact anything but discussing "religion" of which you appear to be so ignorant? We shall certainly do our utmost to prevent any of the Sunday School classes reading or contaminating themselves with your publication. I have given similar instructions to the Bible Class for men.

Trusting this will reach the hands of the publisher without delay, I am, Disgustedly,

SUPT. OF BIBLE CLASS, "Church of England."—Montreal, Can.

DISAPPOINTMENT TURNED INTO JOY

DEAR BRETHREN:—

Greetings in the name of the dear Father. Mercy unto you; grace, peace and love be multiplied unto you.

I have been interested in present truth ever since I first heard dear Brother Russell in Lynn, Mass., about forty years ago, when he came to give his first six lectures there. I have followed the truth all these years; reading the volumes as they came; finding THE TOWER very helpful; convinced from the beginning that it was the truth and Brother Russell was the special messenger, chosen by God for the last age of the church.

At the time of his death, I recognized our great loss, but rejoiced that our dear brother had passed beyond into his reward, to the inheritance of the saints. I also felt disappointed because the long-looked-for Seventh Volume was not printed. But my disappointment was soon turned to joy when THE FINISHED MYSTERY arrived. I have read it very carefully. It is a wonderful arrangement of Brother Russell's words, brought together in one compact form. It is indeed powerful. It surely seems to be what the church needs in this trying time.

We are rejoicing over Brother Rutherford's reelection. He was chosen by the SOCIETY last year, and again this year. Is not that the channel God had thus far used as his mouthpiece? It seems the Lord's will was manifested at each election.

Enclosed please find check for Good Hopes. In conclusion, we pray that the dear Lord will give you needed strength to carry on the grand work still to be done. Assuring you of our loyalty to the cause, our fidelity to the truth, and our continued cooperation, I am,

Your sister in Christ, MRS. J. C. JOHNSON,—Maine.

"The arrangement of Volume Seven, of chapter and verses with comments, is most satisfying. It makes the Sword of the Spirit shine brighter and renders its use more facile and effective. There is much in it to incite heart-searching as to faith, loyalty and love; much to arouse us to watchfulness, and to admonish, 'My soul, be on thy guard'; much to cause thanksgiving and praise. To all who in any measure had any share in compiling the Seventh Volume I send my thanks and assure them of my prayers ascending to our heavenly Father in their behalf. Theirs has been a labor of love and of sacrifice. It may bring them persecution and suffering. If so, let ours be the privilege of building around them a wall of prayer to help comfort and sustain them." I. M. F., —Pa.

"The way Volume Seven came to me was a great surprise—without any notice of its being off the press! I assure you it brings us much rejoicing and blessing of heart, and this is only a beginning of what we will receive by our further studies of this volume." E. L. M.,—Ind.

VOLUME SEVEN QUESTION BOOKLETS

The Questions to Volume Seven are now ready in booklet form, and orders thus far received are being filled. The Questions are in themselves an inspiration, and will, we are sure, greatly assist the friends in both personal and class study of THE FINISHED MYSTERY. The booklet contains a chart frontispiece which shows the chronological order of the Seven Churches, Messengers, Seals, Trumpets, Angels, Vials and Plagues. Price 10c each or 84c per dozen.

CONTINUE THE DISTRIBUTION

Some of the friends seem to have misunderstood our suggestion regarding the distribution of B. S. M. No. 99 "THE FALL OF BABYLON," assuming that the SOCIETY did not wish any copies given out after the date set for the general distribution, viz., Dec. 30th last. This assumption is incorrect. If you did not receive your papers in time to distribute on that date, or if you were unable to cover your territory in one day, then we recommend that you continue to distribute them as rapidly and judiciously as possible. Many friends are now sending them out into the country districts, either by mail or by personal journeys, with excellent results, while others are having great blessings by distributing them in trains and street cars. If an additional supply of this issue is desired, please advise us and we will ship them promptly.

Since the distribution of THE BIBLE STUDENTS MONTHLY —"THE FALL OF BABYLON"—in greater New York, hundreds of letters have been received at the office from strangers ordering THE FINISHED MYSTERY. We wish to encourage the friends everywhere to greater activity in the distribution of this number of the Volunteer matter. Use this BIBLE STUDENTS MONTHLY at the public meetings for distribution. The public speakers will continue to use the subject "THE FALL OF BABYLON" for public addresses. The Lord is greatly blessing this work.

ATTENTION AUSTRALIAN FRIENDS

A large shipment of Volume Seven is on the way and should reach Melbourne about Feb. 1st. Australian Colporteurs will be promptly supplied by addressing our Melbourne Branch.

VOL. XXXIX BROOKLYN, N. Y., FEBRUARY 1, 1918 No. 3

VIEWS FROM THE WATCH TOWER

When asked what would be the evidence of the end of the world (age), the great Master Teacher enumerated many things that would come to pass at that time, proving that we had reached the end of the world. He admonished his followers to watch the development of these evidences, telling them, "When these things begin to come to pass then look up, lift up your heads, for your deliverance draweth nigh." It seems fitting that we here, from time to time, make note of these events as they transpire, which were foretold by the Lord Jesus, that we might be strengthened in faith and hold fast that which we have received and be better prepared to enter into the kingdom.

Through a number of the prophets God long aforetime called attention to events corroborating the testimony given by the Lord Jesus, events which are now being fulfilled before our eyes. The prophet Elijah, in the mountain, saw a great wind and then an earthquake, that was followed by a fire, and then heard the still, small voice. (1 Kings 19:11, 12) Elijah in the mount, it seems, represented the church of God, who, on this side the vail, are privileged to see and to understand events due which are happening at this time. Thus seeing and understanding and appreciating their privilege, they are further blessed with the opportunity of binding the religio-political "kings" with chains of restraining truth; and the "nobles" with fetters of iron—the beginning of the restraints of the coming iron rule of the kingdom of God.

As another evidence that the Lord used Pastor Russell as his messenger to the Laodicean period of the church's development, we note that he wrote twenty years ago foretelling events now transpiring. He said:

"The four exhibitions of the Lord given to Elijah represent, we believe, four manifestations in which the Lord is about to reveal himself to mankind, the first three of which will prepare men for the final one in which will come the desired blessing to all the families of the earth. The first was the blowing of the winds, which seem to be used in the Scriptures for wars. Second, an earthquake. Throughout the Scriptures an earthquake seems always to represent revolution, and it is not unreasonable to expect that an era of general warfare would so arouse the lower classes of Europe and so discontent them with their lot (especially with the conditions which would follow such a war) that revolution would be the next thing in order. (Rev. 16:18) But severe though those revolutionary experiences will be to the world, they are not sufficient to prepare men to hear the voice of God. It will require fire from Heaven." THE WATCH TOWER, July 1st, 1898, Page 208.

Already we witness the nations passing to the second stage foretold by Elijah's experience, namely, revolution. Already revolution has its grip upon Russia and threatens all the other kingdoms. Revolutionists have control in Russia and a reign of tyranny and crime is the result. Famine adds to the terror, and many are robbed and maltreated. The press despatches, on January 7th, state:

"The new masters of the situation are laborers, factory hands, shop men, waiters and domestic servants, while their former masters have to sing small and listen to their employes. All relationships are reversed. Socialist decrees are rapidly issued for this purpose every day.

"The food situation is critical, owing to the suspension of railway communication. Many trainloads of food for Petrograd have been looted by soldiers and peasants while on the way. Starvation seems to stare us in the face. We receive a small quantity—three quarters of a pound—of black bread per head for two days. The black, sometimes dark brown, bread, doled out by a card system, is sticky, gritty stuff, only half baked, composed of millers' refuse with mixed straw and of the consistency of putty. Meat is a rare luxury. Horse flesh is in common use.

"Petrograd is full of dirt, disorder and crime. There has been no cleaning since the beginning of the war. Burglary, robbery and murder in audacious forms prevail to an extent hitherto unknown. There are no police and no authority one can appeal to. Men and women are stripped of overcoats and shoes in the streets at night, and armed marauders, in military uniform, enter houses under a pretext of official searches. Thieves in stolen motor cars hold up persons driving sledges. Nobody knows where to put money and valuables safely, since even private safes and banks are subjected to revision by government agents."

AFTER THE WIND THE EARTHQUAKE

The Bolsheviki threaten to carry the revolution to every country on earth. A press despatch from London, dated January 12th, reads as follows:

"The call of Ensign Krylenko, the Bolshevik Commander-in-Chief, for volunteers for a Russian army, was issued in the form of an appeal to the soldiers and workmen and as a reply to the German peace proposals.

"In the event of a separate peace between Germany and Russia, the call declares the Russian republic and its councils will be surrounded on all sides by enemies. Krylenko continues:

" 'American and French financiers are lending money to provide war material for Kaledin. The German bourgeoisie are quite prepared to use them as allies for stifling the Russian revolution.

" 'These are conditions which raise for the Russian peasants and workmen the whole question of the defense of the conquest achieved by the revolution and of the holy war against the bourgeoisie, not only of Russia, but of Germany, France and Great Britain.

" 'Should the bourgeoisie be victorious they will take vengeance in the shape of the most cruel terror and torture, drenching the land with blood, and which would put in the shade the torments inflicted by the satellites of the Czar.

" 'It may be that a holy war on the fronts as well as behind the lines stands before us as a terrible and unavoidable fate.'

"The appeal concludes by declaring that there will be no compulsion in recruiting."

Nicholas Lenine, the Bolshevik Dictator and Prime Minister of Russia, answers:

"What are the Bolsheviks, and what do they want? The Bolsheviks are a communistic party representing first the day laborers; secondly, all such workmen as are, as Russians say, 'Soznatelniye,' that is, such as have a full class and political consciousness; and finally, the landless or nearly landless peasants.

"These classes stand for immediate Socialism. Their notion of Socialism is a republic ruled by the Councils of Workmen's, Soldiers' and Peasants' Deputies. They are against every form of monarchy and every form of political power except such as reposes in the hands of the Councils of Deputies. They are against all governments of the type of the governments of Lvoff and Kerensky. They intend to prepare our two hundred million Russians for government by the Councils of Deputies."

Others, too, see and dread the wind, earthquake and fire, not discerning behind it all the wonders of the kingdom of God. Blinded by the god of this world and by his angels (messengers—clergymen—2 Corinthians 11:15) who have for centuries posed as messengers of light, they see the events but do not understand their significance. Prominent clergymen, with ears fairly itching to know what the people want to hear (2 Timothy 4:3), tell their deluded flocks that there is no trouble ahead, more than ordinary; that if the people will only trust the (blind) guides they will all land in the Elysian fields of a better age, not realizing that they are on the very brink of anarchy. When the people wake up to the truth of the situation, they will have no pity on those trusted servants who lulled them to sleep on the verge of the precipice.—2 Chronicles 36:14-19.

MEN'S HEARTS FAILING THEM FOR FEAR

There are some watchers who are not clericals who warn drowsy Christendom in vain. Winston Churchill, in the "New York Times" of December 2nd, 1917, says:

"The more one sees of this war, the more one is inclined to the belief that its real significance lies behind the battle lines rather than on them. Like the great war that followed the French Revolution, it has two aspects, the military and the social, and of these the social is the more serious of the two, as far as the future of the world is concerned. A process of ferment betokening profound social changes had for some time been going on with more or less intensity in various countries before the war began; and, contrary to certain prophecies, the war tended to hasten rather than retard the process.

"The keynote of what is likely to happen in other allied countries in case of a German victory, or of even a pronounced German success, has been struck in Russia. That ferment has been seething for a long time. Since 1905 Russia has been waiting to overthrow a bureaucracy upheld by a mystical and fanatical Czar; the peasants, the army, from an outraged sense of betrayal, supported the revolution, whereupon the revolt at once took on the true evolutionary colors of the time. The inner significance of this war has to do with the emancipation of labor, just as the inner significance of that of a hundred years ago had to do with the emancipation of the shopkeeper—who has since become a plutocrat! We not only have to reconcile ourselves to that idea, but we have the immediate task before us of guiding this evolutionary tendency by using all our intelligence on the problem, otherwise we shall have portions of the world given over to anarchy and chaos. [We would have healed Babylon.—Jeremiah 51:9, Eds.]

"Russia has had her revolution. And it is safe to say that in all the nations of the Western World something like a revolution is due: call it if you like, a profound change in the social fabric that will probably take place peacefully in all countries save Germany, where there is no constitutional outlet for the people's will.

"So far as the Allies are concerned, the probability of a social turnover that would paralyze a nation for the proper prosecution of the war is not unlikely to happen in Italy, France, and even in Britain, provided the war continues to drag on and on and no more reverses are experienced. The peace propaganda is mostly among the working classes, but it must be remembered that the working classes have a potential, an economic power today far beyond the political power represented by their votes. They have a leverage of which they are becoming more and more aware. A great many of them are syndicalists. Like the Junkers—and this is not said detrimentally, but impartially—they deem their first loyalty to be to their class, they are not inclined to reorganize national boundaries; they argue that the more revolutions take place outside of Germany the more likelihood of a revolution inside of Germany; that the way to stop the war is by revolution—peaceful if possible.

"This may or may not be true. The question for the responsible Governments of the nations concerned is whether it is worth while to take such a chance. Wouldn't it be better by military means to force Germany to have her revolution first? That is exactly what, with her cleverness, Junker Germany is trying to do with the allies; she is sowing peace propaganda among their armies and their populations—now that Russia can no longer be kept an absolute monarchy, which would have suited her better. She has done a great deal of that sowing in Italy.

"The situation, then, regarded as judicially as possible, appears to be this: Can we of the Entente, including America, 'beat' Germany to the social upheaval?—to use a slang expression. Can we force her, by properly co-ordinated military operations and the realization of a common purpose, to have her revolution first? If we can do this, we shall be in a position to guide with more wisdom and less haste the evolutionary changes that are coming in our own nations."

RESTLESS LABOR

Pastor Russell long ago foretold the failure of the trade union as a bulwark for labor and the breakdown of Socialism as a national cure for the ills of discontent. How it is working out is described editorially in a recent issue of the "Saturday Evening Post":

"All observers bear witness to a deep undercurrent of dissatisfaction among industrial wage-earners in England. We get glimpses of the same thing in France, Italy and Germany. Conservative organs like the London Times talk darkly about 'the ferment of revolution.'

"Workers are experiencing an extensive application of state socialism. The plant is controlled by the state now, and operated not primarily for the profit of its private owners, but for state service.

"And workers find this state control something much more formidable and intractable than the old private control was. Being the state, it changes laws at will, and a vast body of public opinion is unquestionably at its command.

"Formerly the worker depended upon his trade-union; but that reliance is pretty largely broken down. The overwhelming state demands an extensive dilution of skilled labor—meaning that a great number of unskilled workers shall be admitted to the shop and taught the trade, though they have little or no attachment to the union and are but slightly amenable to its discipline.

"The right to strike is rather effectually suspended; for striking against the state comes close to treason. Even the worker's ancient right to better his condition by leaving one employer and going to another is restricted. In some cases he is the state's industrial conscript and must have the state's permission before he can leave.

"Wages have advanced greatly; but so has the cost of living. The worker has less effectual voice in the industry than ever. The new boss is far more powerful than the old. He is not only the law but he is pretty largely public opinion. There is no one to whom the worker can take an appeal from him.

"He is more remote from the worker than the old boss was—a far, formidable, invulnerable thing, which lives nowhere and everywhere.

"And when the worker does meet this mighty new boss face to face he finds that it is really the old boss. The state controls; but an abstraction cannot sign orders and write checks. It must have a personal representative. And for its personal representative it chooses, of course, the man whose experience qualifies him to manage the business.

"Practical experience of state socialism makes labor restless."

GIANT GRASPING POWER

"There were giants in the earth in those days" (Genesis 6:4), recites the historian concerning the evil period before "the [first] world [state of affairs] that then was, being overflowed with water, perished." (2 Peter 3:6) There are giants in the earth (human society) today, just before the present evil order of things is to be drowned in a flood of man-made trouble.

There are several families of these giants: business giants, known as trusts, corporations, syndicates and cartels; financial giants, such as magnates of great wealth, banks, trust companies and investment bankers; religious giants, great denominations, church trusts and federations, and religious organizations; giant political parties and organizations, and giant societies of every description. All of these giants agree in trying, with cynical disregard of innate truth and fair dealing, to grasp all possible power, no matter at whose expense, and with the ultimate subserviance or enslavement of the common people in view.

Employers are concerned not a little at the rise to power of the labor giants. Says The Iron Age, the great journal of the iron, steel and machinery interests, in its issue for November 15, last:

"Judging from the attitude of organized labor shown in various strike outbreaks and in reported utterances of union leaders, there is a labor element in the United States that could even view with indifference the conclusion of a disgraceful peace between the United States and Germany.

"The counsel of some labor leaders to their followers sounds fair enough, but there is much that is disquieting in current labor developments, but in actual practice the attitude of many representatives of organized labor has been far from keeping faith.

"The spirit of many leaders has been far from the wholehearted support of the pledges given the President. Witness this from the address of the president of the metal trades department of the American Federation of Labor, before the convention of the Boilermakers' Union at Kansas City:

" 'In our country, we took advantage of the situation as we found it abroad, and before the war was declared by the United States we saw to it that organized labor was going to get proper recognition. Nothing can take place, nothing can be done, unless we are consulted and practically give our consent to it.'

"Such utterances and the tactics in line with them which have been all too large a factor in current labor news suggest a day of reckoning for men who are thinking of everything but their country's welfare in the gravest crisis in its history. Or is there ahead a fearful reckoning for the whole country as the result of such disloyalty as exists in the ranks of organized labor?"

"THE EVIL ARROWS OF FAMINE"

From the front page of the New York American under date of January 19 we clip the following items:

"A spirit of angry and violent unrest prevails all over Europe. It springs from food shortage and deferred peace. It manifests itself in strikes, rioting, brigandage and clamor.

"Austria is chiefly malcontent over Germany's persistent annexation policy. Germany's main cause of unease is a continued state of semi-starvation. Russia is overrun with hungry and angry workmen and soldiers who have turned bandits. England is disturbed over diminishing food supplies and favoritism in their distribution."

That much on European conditions. Another article gives us the following on the situation in America:

"Dr. Garfield's statement [in part] follows: 'Industry is in an unbalanced condition. We lack many essentials—food, clothing, fuel. We have piled up enormous stores of things not essential to life, but very essential to war. We have piled up so high on our docks and in our storehouses that the ships available cannot carry them away as fast as they pile up. For lack of bunker coal, held back by traffic congestion, the number of ships in our harbors increases menacingly.

" 'The food supply is threatened to an even greater degree than the fuel supply. This condition is in large part due to the congestion that at many points holds the loaded cars in its grip.' "

HEAVENS ROLLING TOGETHER

From "The Monitor," a Roman Catholic journal, we take the following brief extract of a rather extended article dealing with the co-labors of the Y. M. C. A. and the Knights of Columbus in army camps—particularly in Camp Dix, N. J.

It will be borne in mind that the Young Men's Christian Association has worked among all denominations of men, but that it is a strictly Protestant organization, in that only Protestants can be elected to office in the organization. On the other hand, the Knights of Columbus has worked mostly among Catholic men, and is a Catholic organization in which only Catholics can hold office. The frequent and rather pronounced attendance of Protestant soldiers at the mass is one of the subjects taken up in this article. We read:

"Ten masses are said every Sunday in the Y. M. C. A. and K. of C. buildings (the Y. M. C. A. permit the use of their building.) The buildings are overfilled at each mass. The men kneel in the aisle, on the door-steeps, and even outside on the ground. Protestants marvel at this. They can't understand it."

The "Hudson Dispatch" (N. J.) ran the following two-column heading:

"Rev. Rollins and Gowen will talk tonight to boom K. of C. Campaign. 'What the Catholics did in the Y. M. C. A. campaign' will be the topic of an address that will be made this evening by Rev. R. H. Rollins, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Union Hill, at an open meeting of the K. of C. War Camp Committee. Dr. Rollins was chairman of the recent Y. M. C. A. war work fund in North Hudson, when Catholics worked side by side with non-Catholics to put North Hudson well 'over the top,' helping to go far beyond the allotment in the national campaign.

"Another non-Catholic speaker tonight will be Rev. I. W. Gowen, D. D., pastor of Grove Reformed Church."

"THE FOUL STAIN DISHONORING GOD'S HOLY NAME"

Should anyone be in doubt as to the propriety of still vindicating the divine name and character from the foul charges of eternal torment, which have made our God of Love into a demon of inexorable cruelty, we suggest consideration of the following letter, taken, not from a monastery of the middle ages but from a modern church paper which incorporates in its heading the name of Christ and which bears the date of January 1, 1918.

A minister had been obliged to quit preaching and go to work in the log woods in the hope of dissolving some debts which had accumulated during his ministry. He could not tell how long it would take "to raise the $200 above living expenses, but long enough to leave a number of good men and women out of the kingdom, no doubt." The correspondent then adds his own plea:

"Brethren and sisters, will we wake up now, or will we wait till it is too late and wake up in hell? Think of it! A brother forced to quit the field because we do not give as we should. Would you deliberately send a soul into endless torment? No. In effect you are doing that very thing when you shut up your bowels of compassion."

We must at least admire the consistency here shown; even if one is amazed at the ignorance of the Gospel and of the disposition of Jehovah and his faithful son, Jesus. We must bear in mind that it is not long since God was pleased to illumine our minds respecting his character and plan and that we therefore have nothing of which we can boast. "But now ye also put off all these; anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy." Blasphemy in the case of eternal torment preaching lies in ascribing to God what should be ascribed to the devil.

FUEL HOLIDAYS OPPORTUNE FOR SERVICE

Fuel Administrator Garfield's order constituting every Monday until April 1st a legal holiday for all industries east of the Mississippi River, for the conservation of the nation's coal supply, will give splendid opportunities to the friends in general to do effective harvest work on those days. Many have advised us that they intend to use each Monday for volunteering and for distributing Volume VII, thereby having a share in reaping "the vine of the earth." It may be in the Lord's providence that thousands of additional "sharpshooters" may thus be put into the field for at least one day per week during the remainder of the winter and early spring. Surely "all things work together for good" to those who love the Lord. Let us labor while it is yet day for the "night" cometh quickly.

A SONG OF TRIUMPH

Standing at the portal of the opening year,
Words of comfort meet us, hushing every fear;
Tender, strong and faithful, making us rejoice.
Spoken through the silence by our Father's voice,
Onward, then, and fear not, children of the Day;
For His Word shall never, never pass away.

He will never fail us, He will not forsake;
His eternal covenant He will never break;
Resting on His promise, what have we to fear?
God is all-sufficient for the coming year.
Onward, then, and fear not, children of the Day;
For His Word shall never, never pass away.

SOME INTERESTING QUESTIONS

TWO KINDS OF LIFE AT ONCE?

Question.—Is it possible to have two kinds of life at the same time?

Answer.—The word life may be used in different ways. No one but our Lord ever had a right to two kinds of life at once. He had a right to human life; for having been made flesh, he committed no sin and never violated or forfeited his right to life. He was always fully obedient to the divine law. His life was not taken from him; as he declared he laid it down of himself. (John 10:17, 18) The Father's reward gave to him a new life, on the divine plane. Hence he had the right also to the divine life. He therefore had a right to two lives. Our Lord is to give his human life to the world of mankind, and the offer or gift of this life will be made during the thousand years of his reign on earth. If he were still a man, and should give that human life away, he would have no life for himself; for when he would apply his life for Adam, he would lose life altogether.

But this right to life on two planes of being has never been ours, as disciples of Christ. We were born under sentence of death. We had no right to life on any plane. God never recognized us as having even earthly rights. The Apostle Paul says, "The life that I now live I live by the faith of the Son of God." Before this, he was in a dying condition, and the whole world is dead in trespasses and in sins.

The only life-right the Lord's people have is spiritual, although actually they still have a measure of human life. Our work now is the laying down of the earthly life with Christ. Our human body is being sacrificed. It is reckoned dead, but is really dying daily. As new creatures we have life and right to life, as recognized by God. The apostle says, "The world knoweth us not, even as it knew him not." So, then, we are dual beings while in the flesh, though we are not dual-minded. The world does not understand this. The world did not know that Christ Jesus was a dual being when here on earth, after his consecration and baptism in Jordan. They knew not that he had a right to two lives, and really had two lives—the one which he had not yet fully laid down and the one which he had not yet fully assumed.

THE "HEAVENLY THINGS" THAT ARE PURGED

Question.—The apostle says, "It was therefore necessary that the patterns of things in the heavens should be purged with these, but the heavenly things themselves with better sacrifices than these." (Hebrews 9:23) What are these "heavenly things" thus purged?

Answer.—The Apostle's thought evidently seems to be that under the Law Covenant there was a series of types which all co-operated. There were the animals, the Court, the Holy, the Most Holy, the sacrificing of the animals by the priest, etc. All these things were necessary, and the blood was necessary, to the cleansing, the purifying, which was there typically accomplished. Now the apostle says that the heavenly things, that is, the higher things, the antitypes (the word "heavens" meaning high, or heaved up), are purged with better sacrifices than these. These "better sacrifices" we understand to be the sacrifice of Jesus and that of the church which is his body; and these sacrifices purge these higher, or antitypical things typified by the Court, the Holy, the Camp, etc.—making atonement for sin as respects the church and as respects the world, making full reconciliation for iniquity, providing for the bringing in of the everlasting condition which God has promised. The words "heavens" and "heavenly," used here have no reference to spiritual things. It is not spiritual things that are purged, but natural things—human nature.

The sacrifice of Jesus purges the church, and the sacrifice of the body members with their Head purges the world, the imputed merit of Jesus making possible the acceptance of the sacrifice of the members of the church which is his body.

SEVENTH VOLUME IN GERMAN WATCH TOWER

Our German-reading brethren will doubtless be pleased to know that the Seventh Volume of SCRIPTURE STUDIES is being translated into German and published in monthly installments in the German WATCH TOWER. This does not interfere with the sixteen page regular WATCH TOWER, which is made up of articles previously appearing in the English edition.

Subscribers to the German WATCH TOWER receive this supplemental matter on their regular subscription, but to other than subscribers this extra edition each month is sold for ten cents, singly, or five cents in lots of fifty or more. We are printing an extra supply for such orders.

There are many elderly people of German extraction in this country who read little or no English and who might be reached in this way with the message of the Seventh Volume. It is expected that not less than 32 WATCH TOWER pages will appear with each issue—over and above the regular 16 pages.

VOLUME VII IN GREEK AND POLISH

Greek and Polish-reading brethren are receiving the Seventh Volume piecemeal in their respective WATCH TOWERS. If you have acquaintances or neighbors who read either of these languages in preference to English, we suggest such as a favorable means for conveying to them the message of "THE FINISHED MYSTERY."

LETTERS FROM THE INTERESTED

SPECIAL CLASSES FOR CHILDREN

DEAR BRETHREN:—

One of the perplexing problems confronting many of the larger classes, for which a solution seems generally difficult, is what disposition to make of the children during certain periods of the Sunday services.

Frequently the themes treated are too abstruse for the children to grasp, and they are seldom if ever permitted to ask even a question in the Berean studies. To my personal knowledge many children are anxious to inform themselves along the lines of the truth but are hindered and discouraged by arbitrary opposition by some of the elders.

On my own part I cannot see any grounds for objecting to a special Berean First Volume study for children from eight to fifteen years of age, if properly conducted by a qualified elder. Such an arrangement in my judgment would be much better and far more helpful than the present practice by many classes of allowing the children to run loose or have a season of play during services.

What helpful course of action could best be suggested under such conditions? Your servant in him,

WM. A. BAKER,—Ore.

OUR REPLY

Having in mind the period in which we are living, it would seem that to neglect the children of the consecrated at this time would not be wholly pleasing to the Lord. The prophet of the Lord says concerning this time: "Seek righteousness, seek meekness; it may be ye shall be hid in the day of the Lord's anger." (Zephaniah 2:3) Our thought is that it would be well for the classes to arrange for one meeting for the children from eight to fifteen years of age, and have this meeting led by a competent elder, or other brother who possesses the qualifications to teach, and that the children be taught concerning the present-day events and the cause, and particularly concerning the kingdom of the Lord that shall soon be established; and generally an outline of the divine plan in so far as they can understand it.

They should be specially instructed to lead a meek and quiet life and walk humbly before the Lord, avoiding all troubles and difficulties and seeking to deal justly with every one and to be obedient to those to whom they are subject. Nothing, however, in these suggestions should be understood to minimize the responsibility of the parents.

CLASS SINGING, PRAYING CUSTOMS, ETC.

DEAR BRETHREN:—

I find various customs prevailing amongst the brethren in respect to worship. Some sit when they sing and stand when they pray; others seem to have no regular custom. Have you any suggestion?

Another matter: What is your thought respecting class meetings—how should the different members of the class be called upon by the leader?

Very truly yours, J. A. B.

OUR REPLY

Every class has, of course, the right to regulate its own methods of worship, since the Bible does not give any particular direction on the subject. Unless the class votes to the contrary, the Society recommends that all classes rise to sing, because thus the lungs can have better exercise and the singing is apt to be the better, and it would be a restful change from the sitting posture. We advise that at prayer all sit with bowed heads, this being a reverential attitude and one conducive to thought on the prayer. Where the meetings are very small and held in a private room, kneeling would be appropriate, or where the prayer is the closing one in the nature of a benediction and after the friends have been sitting for a good while, it would be desirable to stand.

In respect to the leading of classes: We feel that we cannot do better than to direct attention afresh to the very particular suggestion along this line provided for all in Volume VI. of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES. The class leader should not ask each question of each one present, but merely of one or two or three, if necessary, until a full, proper answer has been heard; and then throw the question open, saying: Does any one have a different thought on this question? Then briefly, the leader might give his own expression, buttressed with Scripture, if possible, and read a confirmation from the Volume of STUDIES.

GLORIOUS VOLUNTEER WORK

MY DEAR BRETHREN IN CHRIST:—

Greetings in the name of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ to all the dear ones at the Bethel Home, whom, though we do not know all personally, yet we love for their work's sake and because they are our brethren in Christ.

I know that you are all busy; but allow me, please, to take just a few minutes of your valuable time to assure you that Sr. M—— and myself are still loyal to the W. T. B. & T. SOCIETY—which we have every reason to believe is the Lord's instrument in the harvest work—and to the officers who by the Lord's providence have been elected to serve in the various capacities.

We thank the Lord daily for "that servant," our dear Brother Russell, and for his faithful ministry and for the example he set before us, that he has been called to his reward, and for the further provision of meat in due season he has made for us. We are rejoicing in the glorious truth. We also thank our heavenly Father for the many little privileges of spreading this glorious truth. Our part in the volunteer work is indeed a pleasure. We wish to relate a little experience we had this evening while putting out B. S. M., Vol 9, No. 5—"Why Do the Nations War?"

A man to whom I had handed a paper while he was leisurely sitting on his porch stopped me on my way back, on the other side of the street. He said, "Where are you getting all these? Who is doing this?" I told him. He seemed to be very much worked up and angry about something.

He then said, "You do not mean to tell me that God is responsible for this awful war and all these awful things that are going on now!" I told him he would have to admit that if God was all-powerful—as we all believe—he was in a way responsible in that he was permitting it to go on, and that he could stop it whenever he pleased. But the fact that he was permitting it showed that it must be for a wise and good purpose. He replied, "Well, yes; I guess that is so. But what is your object in putting these out now?" I said, "Why not? We are trying to enlighten the people along these lines. No better time! These are Bible truths now due to be understood." He said, "Well, I do not want to argue along this line. I will investigate the thing further." I told him that was what we wanted him to do.

I think we are going to have some grand opportunities to witness for the truth. People are beginning to want to know just what we have to tell them, and some are very glad to have these little papers. One lady met me half way when I was walking toward her house, and said, smiling, "It has been quite a while since we received one of these." Another lady told a brother that she was glad to get them, and that she was saving all of them she could get, besides reading them. I want to do my part in putting the Seventh Volume into the hands of the people.

Your brother in Christ, J. F. M.—Ind.

HOW CAN THEY KEEP FROM SINGING!

DEAR BROTHER RUTHERFORD:—

Greetings in the name of him we love! Thanks for your loving letter. Have recently returned from another pilgrim tour. This time I visited one of the largest work-centres where about 110 of our brethren who are conscientious objectors to military service are confined. Though they are subjected to many indignities, experience much physical discomfort, and their liberty is restrained, you will be glad to know that they, one and all, glory in the privilege of suffering for righteousness' sake. Their joy in the Lord is grand to see. They spend much of their leisure time in united study, and embrace every opportunity to present the truth to their companions in affliction who belong to other religious bodies. The Lord has blessed their efforts, and some have been brought to a knowledge of the truth there, while several are now reading the volumes. Their favorite hymn is 179—"My life flows on in endless song," and it is indeed a great treat to hear their hearty singing.

I wish specially to thank you for HARVEST SIFTINGS No. II. It clears up some matters which were difficult to understand, and the spirit in which it is written should do much to comfort the brethren. The Glasgow church is loyal to you as their counsellor, and surely you have my own personal love. I greatly admire your devotion and self-sacrifice, as well as the gentleness, yet firmness, with which you set forth your position. It is my strong conviction that you have acted as the Lord would have you do.

Your brother by his grace, ALEX TAIT,—Scotland.

PRESIDENT'S REPLY

MY DEAR BROTHER TAIT:—

Your very kind letter to hand. I am glad to hear also that you have visited our brethren who are incarcerated in prison. Surely these dear brethren are real martyrs. I am reminded of the experiences through which the dear ancient worthies passed, mentioned in the 11th chapter of Hebrews. They suffered all these indignities in order that they might have a better resurrection. Let us try to encourage the dear brethren, that, while they are suffering now, the Lord is permitting it, giving them a chance to witness by their lives to his great plan, and of their privilege to fill up that which is behind of the sufferings of Christ. And soon, by his grace, they shall enter into their everlasting reward, far beyond any other creatures of the world or in heaven. Please continue to encourage the dear brethren all you can. If there is anything that we can do for them here, kindly let me know.

With much love to you and all the dear ones in Glasgow, I beg to remain,

Your brother and servant by his grace,

J. F. RUTHERFORD.

AWAKENED BY VOLUME SEVEN

DEAR SIRS:—

Last week I purchased one of your books entitled "The Finished Mystery"—Series VII of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES. I did not know what it was when I bought it, but I now thank God that it came into my possession. It is as a drink to one dying of thirst in a desert.

For the past four years my heart has been full of unrest. I could not tell why, but I simply could not enjoy going to church. Try as I might, I could find no satisfaction and peace when I did go; finally I gave myself up as hopelessly lost and wondered why I had ever lived.

But now I am awakened! I beg of you to tell me if there is time enough left for me to do anything in the service of our King whom I have always loved and longed to serve. I am sending for the other volumes of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES and for the booklet "About Hell" which you announce. I can distribute tracts if you have any and will send me some. I want to become one of you and work in the Master's vineyard.

Yours in need of Christian counsel,

MRS. T. C. CLARK,—Okla.

CHURCHES LIKE OPERA HOUSES

DEAR SIRS:—

Some friend has sent me a copy of Volume Seven of your series of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES. I don't know who did it; but I have been praying God to give me more light on the Bible, and when I received this book it was surely a god-send. Our churches are getting like opera houses where people go just to have a good time. Six weeks ago I ceased going to church. I have quit churchianity. I told our minister that no church institution could serve two masters and spiritually prosper.

Enclosed find Money Order for $4.60 for which please send me the entire seven books by Pastor Russell and THE WATCH TOWER for one year, as announced on the last page of this Seventh Volume.

Respectfully, L. H. SCHULTE, County Treas.—Iowa.

WORDS INADEQUATE FOR EXPRESSION

DEAR BRETHREN IN THE LORD:—

Words are totally inadequate to describe the feelings of the brethren with regard to the Seventh Volume. We are unanimous in proclaiming it to be the work of those guided by God. It is really a wonderful book and, like the Bible itself, there is nothing to be eliminated, nor can there be anything added; it is complete in itself. We join in praising the great Jehovah in giving us such a help through his honored servants.

Our prayer is that the heart of each one may be filled with a determination to continue faithful unto death.

Your brother in Christ, A. HUNT,—Eng.

VOLUME SEVEN LED HER TO CONSECRATION

DEAR BRETHREN:—

I am truly grateful that our heavenly Father has placed the Seventh Volume in my hand. It has brought me out of darkness into the light. It has opened my eyes of understanding that I have been able to see more clearly God's wonderful plan. The first word of truth I received was in October when one of our dear sisters in the colporteur work asked me to buy Volume VII. Since then I have bought the other six volumes and I study every spare moment. I am now one of the fully consecrated children of God and I pray and trust that I may continue to be until death. I ask you to pray for me. Your sister by his grace,

WHAT THE "PENNY" SIGNIFIES

DEAR BRETHREN:—

Greetings! Please permit me to draw your attention to an article from our dear Brother Russell's pen, found in THE WATCH TOWER of Aug. 15, 1910, page 264, entitled "Go Ye Also into the Vineyard"—especially that portion under the subhead, "Agreed for a Penny a Day." This seems to be very timely just now in settling the question of the "Penny"; and will you not, dear brethren, prayerfully take the matter to the Lord, for it seems to me it is indeed "meat in due season," and would be his will that the article be republished in THE TOWER at the present time?

How we rejoice in our privileges of service! "The Lord bless thee and keep thee" is my prayer continually. With love and best wishes, as ever,

Your brother in the Lord, W. M. HERSEE,—Pilgrim.

[The article above referred to is reprinted in this issue.]

"The Lord has indeed multiplied my blessings this day by the safe and unexpected arrival of the Seventh Volume. My joy was so evident when the post woman delivered it that she had to know about it and was glad to get Volume One for herself. 'My cup runneth over.'

"At our Praise meeting tonight the testimonies were full of thanksgiving for this very precious completing volume. The immediate effect of the short time already given to Volume Seven is a heart full of gratitude to God and a reiteration of my consecration to him; also deep thankfulness to our Lord Jesus, who has girded himself during this harvest period and is serving us with so rich a feast culminating in Volume Seven, through that 'faithful servant,' our beloved Brother Russell (who seems very near to us though parted from us for a brief while). The preceding six volumes are made still more precious by the possession of the Seventh. Truly we are thoroughly furnished." F. H. W.,—Scotland.

TWO CLASSES IN THE CHURCH

"Nevertheless the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, The Lord knoweth them that are his. And, Let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity. But in a great house there are not only vessels of gold and of silver, but also of wood and of earth; and some to honor, and some to less honor."—2 Timothy 2:19, 20.

The Scriptures clearly teach that when God's plan concerning man is completed there will be four classes redeemed from among men; viz., (1) the little flock, who are to sit with Christ on his throne, reign with him in the regeneration of the human race, and who will forever be the recipients of God's favor through Christ Jesus; (2) the great company class, born on the spirit plane, who are to be the servants before the throne, like unto angels; (3) the ancient worthies, who will be princes or representatives of the Christ in the earth; and (4) restored human beings, who shall inherit the earth forever. All of these classes, when finally completed, will be perfectly happy in the position they gain.

The little flock is mentioned in the Scriptures under many names, such as, the bride of Christ, the body of Christ, the royal priesthood, etc. To such the Lord Jesus said, "I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me; that ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel." (Luke 22: 29, 30) These shall "bear the image of the heavenly" (1 Corinthians 15:49) and shall "shine forth as the sun in the kingdom. (Matthew 13:43) Those who have sacrificed all things to follow in the footsteps of the Master, because of their love for God and his beloved Son, are anxious to awake in his likeness and be forever with the Lord.—Psalm 27:4.

BE NOT AT EASE (IDLE) IN ZION

Some who for a long while have actively participated in the harvest work under the direction of the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY have recently assumed a position in opposition to its work, and their speech and conduct has tended to disturb some of the Lord's dear sheep. Reference is made to THE WATCH TOWER of January 15, 1918, page 30, wherein the brother who is really the leader of those who take this position in opposition is quoted as saying, in substance, that those adhering to the SOCIETY or having anything to do with its present management, and all those who are participating in the distribution of THE BIBLE STUDENTS MONTHLY, "The Fall of Babylon," and of "The Finished Mystery" are of the great company class. The purposes in making such a statement could be only to induce those actively engaged in the harvest work to cease their efforts and to discourage others, so that they would not enter the service, and to cause as many as possible to withdraw their support from the SOCIETY and thus hinder its work.

To aid some of the weaker in faith to get their equilibrium and to encourage all the dear saints to press with vigor the good fight of faith while yet it is called day, we mention these matters here. We have no desire for a controversy and will not engage in one. It is not for us to judge who is of the great company class and who is of the little flock. We desire to leave all judgment to him who judgeth without mistake and who doeth all things well. It is proper, however, that each one of us apply the measuring line of the divine Word, that we may have the full assurance of faith, so essential to enable us to stand in the hour of peril. The question with each of the consecrated now is and should be, Shall we be wise virgins, or shall we be foolish virgins? We must answer these questions in the light of the Scriptures and according to the Scriptural standard.

A SAFE RULE

Where a brother gives an interpretation of a Scripture which differs from that given by Brother Russell, and Brother Russell's interpretation seems reasonable and in harmony with the plan of God, then we believe it a safe rule to follow Brother Russell's interpretation, for the reason that he is the servant of the church, so constituted by the Lord for the Laodicean period; and therefore we should expect the Lord to teach us through him. Where there arises a doubt in the mind as to which interpretation is correct, then it is always safer to resolve that doubt in favor of Brother Russell's interpretation. We believe such to be in harmony with the Lord's will.

No one could be either of the little flock or of the great company class unless he is spirit-begotten. Both classes must be perfected in love; for God will require perfect love of every creature to whom he grants life eternal on any plane. Addressing himself to the class who shall ultimately inherit the kingdom with him, the great Master said: "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me." (Matthew 16:24) No one is called to membership in the great company class, but all are called "in one hope of our calling." What, then, is the distinction between the two? We believe that the whole matter may be summed up in a few words by saying that the little flock is zealously faithful to the covenant of sacrifice, even unto death, whereas those composing the great company class become indifferent and negligent.—2 Peter 1:4-11.

The Lord Jesus likens the one to the branches in the vine which go out to fruit-bearing, developing ripe and luscious fruit; while the others bring forth chiefly leaves, or tendrils—feeling after earthly honors and emoluments. (John 15:2) Again, the Lord Jesus, referring to the great company class, said: "How can ye believe [effectively] which receive honor one of another and seek not the honor which cometh from God only?" (John 5:44) This would mean that the course which is pleasing to the Lord is that which leads one to give all glory and honor to him and to seek no honor, glory or recognition for self. The Apostle again refers to the great company class as being disobedient, because they fail to mortify, or put to death, earthly and sinful tendencies. (Colossians 3:5, 6) Another picture is given of the great company class, as contrasted with the little flock, in Joshua 6:25, where the great company class is represented by Rahab, who was in the citadel of Jericho when it fell, representing those who are in Babylon at its fall; while the Christ class, pictured by Joshua, causes it to fall.—Z. '07-267.

These two classes are pictured in the experiences of Gideon's band. The 9,700 represented those of the larger company who buried their faces from the work by getting down and drinking out of the brook; while the little flock is pictured by those dipping the water in their hands and drinking it, thus showing a class with their eyes out over the horizon, seeking to serve, to spend and be spent in the Master's service, who are anxious not only to drink the truth, but, having it in their hand (using its power), to do with their might what their hands find to do. (Judges 7:2-8) Again, the apostle represents the great company class as being double-minded, having some idea of attaining heavenly things and some idea of getting all the earthly things they can in the way of honor, emoluments, etc.—James 1:8.

Furthermore, the great company class is likened unto those who, while they love the truth, fail to become active in its proclamation because of faint-heartedness and fear. (Numbers 13:31; Z. '04-220) They are also represented by the prophet as saying, "The harvest [the time of special favor] is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved." (Jeremiah 8:20) They are also pictured as those who do not keep their garments unspotted from the world, but who must pass through the great tribulation with which the Gospel age is to end.—Revelation 7:9-16.

CHARACTERISTICS OF THE OVERCOMERS

The Psalmist seems clearly to mark out a characteristic of the little flock when he says: "I am become a stranger unto my brethren, and an alien unto my mother's children. For the zeal of thine house hath eaten me up; and the reproaches of them that reproached thee are fallen upon me." (Psalm 69:8, 9) The one who has fully consecrated himself to walk in the footsteps of Jesus realizes that he must forget his own people and his father's house and become a stranger and an alien to the things of the earth; and he does so gladly. As he performs the terms of his covenant, he finds that the reproaches that fell upon the Lord Jesus now fall upon him. He esteems it a privilege to prove his devotion to the Lord by enduring hardness in his service as a good soldier. He expects to receive taunts, reproaches and persecutions; and receiving these, he endures them patiently, while his heart grows in love for the Lord, for his brethren, and his pity love increases for even those who wickedly persecute him.

The predominant characteristic, then, is a loving zeal for the Lord and his cause. The Psalmist shows that this zeal is peculiar to the house of the Lord; and it is such that it causes the sacrifices to be wholly consumed. The Lord Jesus manifested this peculiar zeal as the Head of the house, by faithfully fulfilling every part of his covenant; and he did so with a joyful heart. Those who shall sit on the throne with him likewise manifest that zeal and loving devotion for him and his cause by gladly doing his will, willing and anxious to engage in any part of his service.

THE LAST WORK OF THE CHURCH

God clearly outlined the commission given to the entire Christ class, as set forth in Isaiah 61:1-3. This commission plainly says that such are to preach the good tidings unto the teachable; to bind up the broken-hearted; to proclaim liberty to the captives; and amongst other things to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord and "the day of vengeance of our God." Clearly, then, the Lord intended that at some time those who would compose the little flock, or kingdom class, would be the ones to declare the day of vengeance. This would mean to tell all those who would have the hearing ear what would be the natural results of not heeding the Lord's instruction. The Lord caused his holy prophets and apostles to mark out the course that should be followed by those who profess to be his and what would be the result to those not following this instruction.

Through his prophets, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel and others, God foretold what would constitute Babylon and foretold that some of the true saints would be found in Babylon. He caused these prophets to write all the evil that shall come upon Babylon. Surely the Lord purposed that those in Babylon should know something about this, and that some one should deliver the message concerning Babylon. Did he design that the great company or the little flock should deliver this message? It is very clear from the Scriptures above cited concerning the day of God's vengeance that he intended the little flock to give this message. It must be conceded by all who are in harmony with the teachings of present truth that we are in the closing days of the harvest period; and before that harvest would entirely close it would become necessary for some one to declare the day of God's vengeance. Surely it would be only those who have the zeal peculiar to the Lord's house that would engage in joyfully declaring the message against Babylon.

"The Finished Mystery," Volume Seven of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES, brings together all that the messenger of the Laodicean Church has written concerning Babylon, and, in the light of what he has written, further explains other parts of Revelation and Ezekiel, thus putting in compact and pointed form the Word of the Lord, by the use of which the declaration against Babylon must be made. THE BIBLE STUDENTS MONTHLY—"The Fall of Babylon"—is made up almost entirely of what has been written by "that servant," and is directed against Babylon in that it calls attention to what constitutes Babylon, why it shall fall, and what will be the result of its fall. And it seems to be clearly in harmony with the Scriptures above cited that the little flock, possessing the zeal peculiar to the Lord's house, would be the ones that will fearlessly declare this message. The thought that the great company class would have anything to do with the proclamation of this message is entirely out of harmony with the Scriptures which indicate the predominant characteristics of that class.—Hebrews 2:15.

JOHN THE BAPTIST A TYPE

We have long recognized that John the Baptist was a type of the little flock class. In this connection the Lord's servant wrote:

"It is altogether possible, indeed probable, we think, that John's course, which brought him into conflict with Herod, was in some degree typical of the course of the Gospel church in this present time and of the course of events that may be expected. If it be a type, Herod would represent the civil government and the unlawful wife would represent the nominal church, which throughout the symbolic Scriptures is represented as a woman—Jezebel, etc. Should it prove to be a type by its fulfilment in antitype, the fulfilment will probably be on something like the following lines:

"(1) A partial reunion of church and state. (This is now practically an accomplished fact.)

"(2) In such case it would become the duty of the true church, the forerunners and announcers of the Messianic kingdom, to reprove the civil powers as well as the nominal church systems and to declare their union unlawful—contrary to the Word of God.

"(3) The effect of this would pretty surely be to awaken the animosity of both civil and religious powers; but it would draw out especially the animosity and venom of the latter.

"(4) The church nominal, in her false position, would be anxious to stifle the reproofs and to destroy the reprovers; and the effect would be that the civil powers would be induced to pass such legislation as would restrain the liberty of the faithful ones and hinder them from public utterances, as John was hindered by imprisonment.

"(5) Herodias' daughter (united Protestantism) will become the tool for the destruction of the most loyal servants of God."—Z. 1898-95

Instead of the great company class engaging in the work above mentioned, the Scriptures show that those who will be of that class are such as rebel against the words of God and disregard the counsel of the Most High, and are in fear of performing their covenant.—Psalm 107:9-16; Hebrews 2:15.

A LOGICAL CONCLUSION

Again, commenting upon the spirit manifested by the little flock class in singing the song which none could learn except the little flock, "that servant" wrote:

"Nothing is more manifest than that it is necessary to be somewhat of an overcomer of the world and its spirit, which pervades nominal Christendom, ere any one would have the courage to sing this song—to declare before men the lengths, breadths, heights and depths of the goodness of God's plan, of which Jesus and his sacrifice are the center. To all others the fear of man bringeth a snare and stoppeth their mouths from speaking forth the praise of him who called us out of darkness into his marvelous light. But the people that do know their God (his character and plan) shall be valiant and do exploits, and like the apostles of old will feel and say, 'Whether it be right to obey God or men, judge ye; but we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard.'" —Z. 1900-37.

THE WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY has been used of the Lord since its organization as a vehicle to convey the message of truth to all who would hear. It would hardly seem probable, therefore, that it would be pleasing to the Lord now to put aside this vehicle when it comes to declaring the day of vengeance of our God and carrying to the people the message concerning Babylon. If the great company class is in charge of the SOCIETY, then the conclusion must follow that all the harvest work is finished, and that there is nothing for the little flock to do but to stand and wait for their change. Such does not seem to be at all in harmony with the Scriptures, nor with that which Brother Russell has heretofore written on the subject. The period of the harvest is not yet over; and the work of the harvest, as outlined in the Scriptures (Revelation 14:13-19), does not seem to have been completed. Concerning that work and those who would do it, Brother Russell wrote in Volume Three, STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES, page 231, as follows:

"It will probably be in an effort at self-preservation on the part of Great Babylon—'Christendom'—when she sees her work in politics, priestcraft and superstition waning, that the work of truth-spreading will be stopped as detrimental to her system. And probably at this juncture the Elijah class, persisting in declaring the truth to the last, will suffer violence, pass into glory and escape from the severest features of the great time of trouble coming—just in the crisis of affairs when men begin to feel that desperate measures must be resorted to, to sustain the tottering structure of Christendom. Although the exact time of the deliverance or 'change' of the last members of the body of Christ is not stated, the approximate time is nevertheless clearly manifest, as shortly after the 'door' is shut."—Matthew 25:10.

It will be observed from the above quotation that Brother Russell plainly says that the Elijah class (the little flock) will persist in declaring the truth. It would be exactly in harmony with the tactics of the adversary to induce some of those who have engaged in the harvest work to desist now and to let their zeal and ardor cool, that they might not have part in this final witness of the Lord's great message. Surely it would not be the will of the Lord that one should sit down and idly fold his hands, waiting for his deliverance.

"Ne'er think the victory won,
Nor once at ease sit down;
Thine arduous work will not be done,
Till thou hast gained thy crown."

EXPERIENCES OF ELIJAH AND ELISHA TYPICAL

Time and again the church has been told through the channel which the Lord chose as his mouthpiece during the church's last experience that Elijah is a type of the overcoming church and that Elisha probably represents in a measure the great company class. It is a noticeable fact that Elisha walked with Elijah. There was never any disagreement between them; they did not quarrel. There is no record that Elijah ever opposed anything that Elisha was doing. If those now claiming to be the Elijah class are correct in their view that only the Elisha class is doing the work of the SOCIETY, then the facts do not seem to fit the picture at all. Elisha did not smite the waters of the Jordan until after Elijah had been taken up in the fiery chariot. If the Elisha class is now smiting the Jordan, then it must be that all the Elijah class have gone up in the fiery chariot. Thus we see the ridiculous position in which we would place ourselves if we assumed such to be true.

Again, if it is the Elisha class that is now smiting the Jordan, then surely those who compose the Elijah class would not wish to interfere; for Elisha did according to the Lord's will, and any one who has the Lord's spirit could not consistently interfere with the Elisha work. As we read: "If any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his." (Romans 8:9) We are not here saying who is of one class and who of the other. That is not our province. We do not know. The Lord did not purpose for us to know; and we will not presume to judge that which the Lord has not given us to judge. Quoting Brother Russell upon this point:

"We are to be careful not to form a judgment as to who are to be of the great company. Some say to us, 'What do you think of such a brother?' We are not to judge one another. It is not for us to say that such a one belongs to the great company class. We are to consider all the friends as one people. Only the Lord knows who are his wholly faithful ones, and he is leaving the matter to be manifested. At the end of the earthly career of the little flock the Lord himself will do the dividing."—Z. 1916-38.

We call attention to these words of Brother Russell that the dear friends may not be discouraged by the statement of another who volunteers to teach them, that all who have anything to do with the SOCIETY and its present work are a part of the great company class. We do not believe it is proper for any one to say, "Brother A is of the great company and Brother B of the little flock." The Lord shows the characteristics that will be manifested by each class; and we may examine ourselves to enable us to determine whether or not we are coming up to the proper standard. But let us carefully refrain from passing judgment upon any one else.

THE ANTITYPICAL CHARIOT

Again referring to the letter in our issue of January 15, 1918, the brother who leads the opposing thought is quoted as saying that "the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY is the chariot of the Elijah class; that the separation is now taking place; that the lurid legalities are separating the two classes; that those who are putting out the Seventh Volume and the Babylon tract are the great company."

The chariot, being a vehicle, would very fitly represent the SOCIETY which the Lord has used as a vehicle to bear the message of truth. What makes it lurid, in our opinion, is the fiery message of Ezekiel and John, which message it is now conveying to others. There were no legal differences between Elijah and Elisha, and nothing in the picture would seem to indicate that the management of the SOCIETY could have been pictured by what occurred between Elijah and Elisha. They were on the very best of terms until the last moment, Elisha's last request being that he might receive a double portion of the spirit of Elijah. The suggestion, therefore, that "lurid legalities" were represented by the fiery horses does not seem at all to fit. According to that interpretation it is the Elisha class that is now in the chariot and the Elijah class is outside of it. And if that picture were true and were carried out to its finality, it would mean that the Elisha class would be taken up in the fiery chariot and the Elijah class left behind! Here seems to be a wide difference in interpretation by Brother Russell and these other brethren. And following the rule that we suggested above, we think it the safer course to heed the interpretation given us by the Lord's chosen servant. Note what Brother Russell says on this subject:

ELIJAH, NOT ELISHA, USED THE CHARIOT

"We recognize that the church of God is the antitype of Elijah, because she is, with her great Head, the Christ of God. It is the Christ in the flesh that antitypes Elijah. His experiences during his career as God's prophet typify the experiences of the Christ class during all the more than eighteen hundred years of their earthly career. His closing experiences would parallel, we understand the Scriptures to teach, the closing experiences of the last members of the Christ body in the flesh. . . . 'The Lord knoweth them that are his.'

"When the Lord's time comes for separating his little flock class, he will make no mistake. It will be the little flock that will go up in the chariot, and no others. Let us, therefore, keep ourselves in the love of God. Never mind what any one else thinks. Of course we are to love and serve the brethren; but even when we do our best, some of the brethren may misunderstand us. Do not decide about anybody else; but let each of us watch for himself and see to it that he keeps his heart in the right attitude toward the Lord and the brethren. We shall see the Elijah class taken away in the chariot; the others will not be taken. Then we shall see the radical division. We shall know all about it then. The Lord will attend to it."—Z. 1916-38, 39.

Since it is conceded that the SOCIETY is the chariot, then, according to Brother Russell's interpretation, it is the Elijah class that will take to the chariot; and "it will be the little flock that will go up in the chariot and no others. We shall see the Elijah class taken away in the chariot; the others will not be taken."

SIGNIFICATION OF ELIJAH'S MANTLE

Referring to the picture, we note that Elijah and Elisha journeyed together until they reached the Jordan, and there they stood and talked awhile. Then Elijah took his mantle, wrapped it up and smote the waters of the Jordan. The waters represent the peoples; and their separation would picture the separation of people from people. We are to keep in mind that Elijah had this mantle all during his journey, and that not until he reached the Jordan did he wrap up the mantle and use it to smite the waters (people). We are also reminded that the antitypical Elijah class has had the message of truth during their entire journey of the harvest of the Gospel age. Brother Russell pointed out that October, 1914, antityped Elijah and Elisha standing at the Jordan, talking the matter over; that this was the last point to which Elijah was directed to go, and that it represented the last definite date we had concerning the church. He then pointed out that something else must be done after that time. We quote Brother Russell:

"Elijah and Elisha came to the river Jordan. They stopped there and stood talking. Something must be done before they could go further. So the Lord's people have been standing for a time since we came to October, 1914. Then Elijah took his mantle, wrapped it together and smote the waters of Jordan."

In Ezekiel 21:14, 15 we read, "Let the sword be doubled the third time," which to our mind would represent the message of truth contained in the first six volumes of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES. And then we read: "I have set the point of the sword against all their gates, that their heart may faint and their ruins be multiplied. Ah, it is made lightning brightness; it is wrapped up for the slaughter." We suggest that this represents the message of truth contained in the Seventh Volume, which is in truth and in fact a condensed statement of the entire message relating to Babylon and the true church and the relationship between the two, as set forth in the preceding six volumes. Therefore, it is properly designated "the point of the sword," and is wrapped up (put into compact form) for the purpose of doing the smiting, viz., the separation of people from people. In the eighth chapter of Revelation, verses 3 to 5, seemingly referring to the same message, we read that it (the message) "is deliberately hurled into the earth;" that is to say, deliberately distributed broadcast amongst order-loving people.

The message of truth contained in Volume Seven of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES, therefore, seems to be more fitly represented in Elijah's wrapped-up mantle than does anything else. If that is true, then it follows that it is the message of truth sent far and wide amongst the people that will cause the division or separation; and it is manifest beyond the question of a doubt that it is the Elijah class that uses it, and not Elisha. It is easy to be seen now that the Elija class, persisting in the proclamation of the message against Babylon, would thus separate themselves from the Elisha class, who would be fearful or negligent of performing any part of this work; and that Elijah, continuing thus to use the point of the sword, would in due time be taken up in the fiery chariot by a whirlwind of anarchy.

Again we quote from Brother Russell (THE WATCH TOWER, February 1, 1916, page 39):

"Are you expecting the fiery chariot any minute now, or do you think it some distance off—perhaps some months yet, or a year or more? will be asked. At least a year, or probably more, is my thought. [Just one year and five months later Volume Seven was issued.] Something else is coming first, dear friends. We do not as yet see clearly what it is. But this matter of Elijah's rolling his mantle together and smiting the waters of the Jordan seems to mean something, and also the crossing of the river. This picture is not given for nothing. What does it mean? you ask. Ah, we know that most prophecies are understood only after they are fulfilled. We might, however, have a suspicion. What would that be? Something like this: In Bible symbolic language water represents truth and also represents people. Both of these are given in Scripture as being symbolized by water. (Revelation 17:1, 15; 22:1, 2; Jeremiah 51:12,'13; Ezekiel 47:1-12; Ephesians 5:26) Furthermore, Jordan means testing or judging down. Now who or what would be judged in the antitype?

"We answer, we believe that the peoples of the earth, the public in general, are to be judged by the truth. The peoples are represented by waters. It would seem that in some way the people are to be judged and tested; and that a division of public sentiment is to be caused in connection with the truth. Waters are to be separated from waters, people from people; the truth being received by some and rejected by others. Elijah wrapped his mantle together and smote the waters; and they were divided. Elijah's mantle was the outward indication or sign of God's power with him and represented God's power and blessing with the church. The mantle was in Elijah's hand when he smote the waters with it. So the church, it would seem, will use what is in their hand, the power and authority of the truth, the power of God, in smiting the waters—the peoples. Do you think that this has not yet taken place? may be a question in your mind. We think it has not as yet fully taken place. Do you think that the PHOTO-DRAMA OF CREATION has had a part in this? It may be. Will there be something more? We do not know. We rather think there is something more."

"CHARIOT," "FIRE," AND "WHIRLWIND"

"Now, as to the meaning of the fire and the chariot: Fire always represents destruction, and a chariot of fire would seem to signify some very trying experience that will separate the Elijah Class from the Elisha class, and bring the deliverance of the Elijah class.

"Brother Russell, are you not afraid of alarming us? some may ask. No! We are all very desirous of getting into the Lord's chariot, surely. It is the best thing in all the world. But it means trouble! Well, we desire trouble, if this trouble will be our chariot to take us home. We are waiting for it day by day. When Elijah's chariot came, it was in a whirlwind that he was carried into the heavens, into the atmosphere, beyond earthly vision. What did the whirlwind signify as regards the church? Does it mean more trouble? you will ask. We think it does. Dear friends, we are waiting for that chariot and whirlwind. What will it be? Well, we know that the Lord pictures the great time of anarchy that is coming as a great whirlwind. He says, 'Behold, evil shall go forth from nation to nation, and a great whirlwind shall be raised up from the coasts of the earth. And the slain of the Lord shall be at that day from one end of the earth even unto the other end of the earth; they shall not be lamented, neither gathered nor buried; they shall be dung upon the ground.'—Jeremiah 25:30-33; 30:23, 24.

"To our understanding the Elijah class will be amongst the first to be affected by the great whirlwind of anarchy. We believe it signifies that many of the Lord's people—all of the faithful at that time—will be taken from the present life in some anarchistic movement. We would not talk about these things to the public; for the public would not be interested in them. The Master said, 'Cast not your pearls before swine.' We are talking about it here because we think that all here are deeply interested, and are expecting to share in the chariot and whirlwind experiences. Here is the point, then: We think that our final experiences will be during some kind of anarchistic uprising. For some time we have been wondering just how all the church would be taken. If the change comes to each one by death in the usual way, it would seem very wonderful to see the consecrated all over the world die suddenly. Neither can they all die of old age; for this would mean that some would have to live a good many years yet."

If Brother Russell's interpretation be correct—and we would prefer to take it to that of any one else—then it would seem that the Elijah class, with the power of truth in their hands, viz., the message of God's vengeance against Babylon, must use that power, or message; and their persisting in using it unto the end would produce the separation and ultimately result in the taking up of the Elijah class in a time of fiery trials and testings.

"THE LORD KNOWETH THEM THAT ARE HIS"

Let us not be deceived, dear brethren, and become slack now in the performance of our covenant with the Lord. But, grasping the sword of the Spirit which the Lord has placed in the hands of his people, let every one who loves the Lord and his cause better than this life and all things else this life may bring, go forward in a united effort to perform the duty which the Lord has laid before us. If one is fully consecrated to the Lord and actively striving to fulfil his covenant of sacrifice, let him not be disturbed by the expressed opinion of another that his activity in some part of the Lord's work will put him in the great company class. God is not unmindful of your labor of love; he is faithful and true to his promise. Those who are his will not be disturbed or discouraged by what others may say, but will be governed in their conclusions by the Lord's Word. "The Lord knoweth them that are his." It is not necessary for us to know just where our brother will be. It is sufficient if we are diligent to make our own calling and election sure. In the Lord's house there are some occupying positions of honor and some of less honor. God setteth the members in the body as it pleaseth him; and this setting applies both to their position while in the flesh and beyond the vail. If we do our best to fulfil our part of the covenant, he is faithful and just to fulfil his; and to each one who manifests a diligence (not negligence) to make his calling and election sure he will grant an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

Let every one who would thus serve the Lord refrain from judging another. Let us put no one into this class or the other class. Let us leave the judgment with the Lord; and doing so, look well to ourselves. It is for the Lord to judge, not us. But in the language of John, the Beloved, let us "look to ourselves, that we lose not those things which we have wrought, but that we receive a full reward."—2 John 8.

In harmony with the thoughts above expressed, we call attention to the words of Revelation 19:17: "And I saw an angel standing in the sun; and he cried with a loud voice, saying to all the fowls that fly in the midst of heaven, Come and gather yourselves together unto the supper of the great God." The angel here clearly is the Elijah class, standing in the resplendent light of the Gospel, now more brilliantly illuminated than ever before by reason of having the interpretations of the lurid prophecies of Ezekiel and John. And thus standing in the light, they are joyful, fearlessly and plainly declaring the message of truth, calling first to the eagles (Matthew 24:28), their brethren in Christ, the far-sighted ones, to come and join in this glorious feast that the Lord has spread before us. And may he give every one of his little ones the courage and faith and strength to stand at this time. Those who faithfully trust and follow our great Captain will ultimately be brought off more than conquerors, yea, most fervent overcomers.

We emphasize the fact that the church—Elijah and Elisha—were standing in 1914, talking together. When Brother Russell died in 1916 everything seemed to have come to a standstill. No one seemed to know exactly what should be done. Then suddenly something was delivered to the church. What was it? All remember how that on a certain day in July, 1917, the message of the truth wrapped up in compact form in "The Finished Mystery" was delivered into the hands of the church; and then the antitypical Elijah had the message in such form that it could be used for the smiting of the antitypical Jordan; and the smiting began.

COMPENSATION

"Hush! oh, hush! for the Father, whose ways are true and just,
Knoweth and careth and loveth, and waits for thy perfect trust;
The cup he is slowly filling shall soon be full to the brim,
And infinite compensations forever be found in him.

"Hush! oh, hush! for the Father hath fulness of joy in store,
Treasures of power and wisdom, and pleasures forevermore;
Blessing and honor and glory, endless, infinite bliss.
Child of his love and his choice, oh, canst thou not wait for this?"

"Hush! oh, hush! for the Father portioneth as he will
To all his beloved children; and shall they not be still?
Is not his will the wisest? Is not his choice the best?
And in perfect acquiescence is there not perfect rest?

THE LAST PASSOVER OF CHRIST

"Christ, our Passover is sacrificed for us; therefore let us keep the feast, with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth."—1 Corinthians 5:7, 8.

During the past two thousand years the new moon nearest the spring equinox has been reckoned as the beginning of the Hebrew religious year. (Z. '07-88; Z '15-78) The Passover comes on the following full moon.

In 1918, the nearest new moon to the spring equinox (5.26 a.m., March 21) appears at 2.52 p.m., Eastern time, on March twelfth. That moon reaches its full at 10.33 a.m. on March the twenty-seventh. The Hebrew day begins at sundown of the previous modern day, and our antitypical Passover memorial should be celebrated on the evening of March twenty-sixth, some time after sundown—say at 7:30 p.m. At this time the Lord's dear ones consecrated, set apart unto death, so far as their earthly lives are concerned, will doubtless be anxious to assemble for the celebration of this solemn spiritual feast.

It is a matter of interest that, if the Passover date were reckoned as formerly indicated in Volume Six, page 470, it would have fallen on the same date as the date for the smiting of the city, or April twenty-sixth, 1918.

Let us review the events of that tragic day when our Passover Lamb was slain. It was on Thursday evening 1,885 years ago in the upper chamber that the thirteen celebrated their Passover, the last one for the Lord. The same evening Judas went out to clinch his evil bargain with the clergy of his day. The betrayer had left the little faithful company, and, as his last legacy, the Master gave them the most spiritual message of the Gospels, the thirteenth to seventeenth chapters of the Gospel according to the beloved disciple, John. After he sang with his dear ones a hymn, and conversed with them, he knowing and they ignorant of the tragedy just before them, he led them to Gethsemane.

JUDAS, GETHSEMANE, CALVARY

It was on that Thursday evening that Judas, with an expression of intimacy, fellowship and love, betrayed the Son of God into the hands of the crucifiers. That night the Light of the World was before the hostile forces of a benighted ecclesiasticism bound in unholy alliance with the secular powers. Secularism saw his innocence, but ecclesiasticism, blinded by envy and hatred, overcame the honorable scruples of the earthly rulers, and secured on a false and trumped up charge of treason, unjust conviction of the Son of Man. Forsaken and shunned by those who "had trusted that it had been he which should have redeemed Israel" (Luke 24:21), the Messiah faithfully kept the sacrifice on the altar, through ridicule and abuse of clergy, soldiers and public servants, through the Via Dolorosa—the way of tears—and up the difficult path to Calvary and finished the offering of that body which God has prepared for him.

Judas, who had not looked for such a dreadful outcome of his evil scheme, went and ended his iniquitous course by self-destruction. By nine o'clock Friday morning the Beloved was raised up, as the brazen or copper serpent (perfect humanity), as though made sin, even for those of the great worldly system of government, "which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified" (Rev. 11:8), and which continues to this day, being now called Christendom, where his feet members soon shall at last fill up completely the sufferings of Christ that are left behind.

Under the heat of a semi-tropic sun, the great Lover of mankind, stripped by unholy hands to open view, was the object of revilings by the Hebrew clergy and laity, a spectacle and a wondrous lesson of divine love for men and for angels. There hung the Savior of humanity, forsaken by all save those who loved him most—Peter, the strong, and John whom he loved, and the women who would, if they might, have died in his stead. And "sitting down about him, the unbelievers watched him there."

And from noon, "the sixth hour" of that dreadful day, there was both a literal darkness and an obliteration of light and of love over all the land, over all in the condition termed "Sodom and Egypt," for while they were covering themselves with the greatest weight of guilt ever known, filling up the chalice of their iniquity until it overran, they were in the darkness of night as to the real quality of their acts—"they knew not what they did."

It was afternoon of Friday, Passover day, that the holy Sufferer said, "I thirst"—and they gave him to drink, not cold, refreshing water, but that which while somewhat stupifying was calculated to enhance the agonies of thirst in the most brutal and cruel death known to wicked and degenerate men.

By this act the prince of this world sealed his death sentence, for "by death the mighty one was beginning to destroy him that hath the power of death, that is to say, the devil." And by their death the feet members of Christ will set in motion the forces which will utterly destroy them that destroy the earth—Great Babylon, the accursed system of organized and established iniquity.

"IT IS FINISHED!"

But pain of body was not sufficient for the fiery trial of him who was to be the first to suffer that he might reign with God. He must be finally and fully made a sin offering, and experience to the full the wages of sin, that he might save to the uttermost. And as in the extremity of mortal pain and weakness the realization came upon him that he was, as it were and as it seemed to him, utterly cast off by his Father, with the final despairing cry, "My God! My God! why hast thou forsaken me?" in pain of spirit that was too much to bear, the great heart broke, and there came forth his last exclamation, "IT IS FINISHED!" like unto the last loud cry of the Church in the flesh—"It is done." (Rev. 16:17) The Wonderful One bowed his majestic head and gave up the life he had covenanted to lay down; and the new life, the new creature, the spirit, became hid in God until the third day there should come the springing forth of the first-fruits of the dead.

This is the central event of all history which we celebrate on the approaching Passover—the death of the Savior of the world. We suggest that each participant read beforehand with reverence and prayer the Bible chapters on the Passover—the first Passover in Exodus 11 to 13; the story of the death of the antitypical lamb in Matthew 26 and 27, Mark 14 and 15, Luke 22 and 23, John 12 to 19, and such other passages as 1 Corinthians 10:16-21, 11:20-34, etc., and the comments in Volume VI SCRIPTURE STUDIES, Chapter 11, on "The Passover of the New Creation." Let not the consecrated unto death fail of the injunction, "Assemble yourselves together, and so much the more as ye see the day approaching."—Hebrews 10:25.

Let the bride get herself thoroughly ready for whatever the wise and loving Father and the altogether lovely Bridegroom may have for her in the way of experience of preparation, trial, change or exaltation. Let each one consecrated unto death examine himself, cast out every alien thought or affection from the heart, cast out every weight and the sin that doth so easily beset him. Especially let each see that he loves even his enemies, but that he loves supremely the beloved Father in heaven. Let us so increase and abound in divine love toward one another and toward all men, that whether it be near or far in time our change will find us "ready" to go in, ready to stand in the confidence of pure and single-hearted love before our Elder Brother and before our God and Father.

LETTERS FROM THE INTERESTED

GIVING LIFE TO THE IMAGE

DEAR BRETHREN:—

I am sending you some thoughts regarding the vitalizing of the "image of the beast" as it appears to me after a cursory examination of a book entitled "The Churches of Christ in Time of War," edited by Charles A. Macfarland, General Secretary of the "Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America." It is manifestly official. It says, among other things, "There is now being witnessed the coöperation of politics and religion in the common service of the whole people as never before in the history of the human race." On the last page of the book is a letter from President Wilson to Dr. Macfarland, dated June 8, 1917, which says, "I need not say how much I appreciate the message from the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. It has helped to reassure me and keep me in heart."

Briefly the United States, by alliance with Great Britain, naturally becomes identified with it (G214), and thus the "other beast with two horns like a lamb" vitalizes the "image of the beast" ("the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ") by the United States Government giving official recognition (the President's letter of June 8, 1917, to Secretary Macfarland is such) to the image which was patiently awaiting this vitalization, having previously (on May 8, 1917) declared "its endorsement and support of the war aims and policies of the Government." "All this took place before the publication of the Seventh Volume—before the coming of the seventh plague. "The change of name of the 'image of the beast' to that of 'false prophet' in Rev. 16:13, between the sixth and seventh plagues, shows that the 'image' was vitalized prior to the publication of Volume VII."—G211. The coöperation of the "beast" and the "false prophet" with the "dragon" is very manifest in army camps in the way the Knights of Columbus and the Y. M. C. A. work under military authorization.

Permit me to now mention some correspondencies between the French Revolution and the present time of trouble which seem to be transpiring at this time.

1. The decisive defeat of the Austrians and Prussians by the French Revolutionists on the 20th of September, 1792, seems very clearly to indicate the importance of the events connected with the German Reichstag sessions of Sept., 1917.

There can be no doubt that the Reichstag session of September 27th was of far-reaching importance. It seems to have definitely proven that the majority of the Reichstag were opposed to the war aims of the Prussian military autocracy, and in a sense resulted in the downfall of Prussia—in the appointment of Count von Hertling, the Bavarian Premier, to the German chancellorship. The German chancellorship, created by Bismarck, has always been in Prussian or pro-Prussian hands. Bavaria is regarded as thoroughly unsympathetic to Prussian aims, and the new Chancellor may therefore prove to be a chancellor of peace.

2. On December 11, 1792, King Louis XVI was placed on trial by the revolutionists; was convicted and condemned to the guillotine. The correspondency seems to be in the peace negotiations between Russia and Germany and we may expect a further defeat of the Prussian military autocracy. It is very remarkable that the peace negotiations opened on the very day (December 18, 1917) indicated by the beginning of the trial of Louis XVI.

I have received a great blessing from the January 1st WATCH TOWER. The first article is certainly timely. The statement, "He will give all of his people a share," is specially comforting to one situated as I am (in an army camp). I may be mistaken, but I hope and believe that we who are now restrained because of being drafted will be released in time to participate in the smiting of Babylon. Here we have some opportunities to present the truth, but there seems to be little appreciation of the message, although they seem to generally recognize that we are Bible Students. We have been having a Seventh Volume study. It started out as a class for the study of Revelation led by a Pentecostal preacher who bought the Seventh Volume since coming here. He used the Seventh Volume altogether and depended on the three members of the I. B. S. A. for bringing out the correct thoughts. However he "taught" the class only a few evenings and then, seemingly realizing that he was not well enough acquainted with the subject, turned it over to us; so we have been privileged to present to a few, whom we could probably not have reached at all otherwise, the explanation of Revelation furnished in Volume Seven. We use the Seventh Volume; asking questions, reading the comments, and now and then emphasizing or explaining such features as those not familiar with the truth might not be able to understand.

I am greatly pleased with the way the election at Pittsburgh turned out. It surely is a complete vindication of the present management of the SOCIETY. Undoubtedly the Lord's hand was in the holding of the straw vote on November 21st. for had it not been held the claim would probably have been made that the election was purely a matter of voting shares and did not represent the voice of the church. Now this leaves them absolutely without excuse for any agitation against the SOCIETY and its work. Undoubtedly the Lord still has a very important work for the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY and is himself directing all its interests.

With much Christian love, your brother in Christ,

JAMES ALLEN MURCH.—Ky.

THE LORD IS NIGH UNTO A CONTRITE HEART

MY DEAR BROTHER RUTHERFORD:—

There is a matter which has been on my mind and heart for several months which I am constrained to present to you as the chief representative of all the brethren in the truth. In 1912 I dissented in a measure from the common view of the brethren in regard to the impending events of 1914. The resentment of the friends, which I thought unjust, was returned with an emphasis which brought darkness to my mind. The adversary took advantage of it and caused a series of stumblings such as has not occurred in all my Christian experience of 47 years. I sought for and began to magnify every trivial mistake I could find and to publish it abroad. I not only censured my brethren but I repudiated my vow. Now the Lord in love and mercy is opening my eyes and I review the past with amazement and sorrow. The harvest is closing, and I realize that if I make my calling and election sure I must renew my obligation to my brethren and my vow to the Lord. I do so today with an humble heart, praying that the Lord and the dear brethren will forgive me. I desire that you and the dear Bethel family may know of this determination and that I may have a special interest in your prayers. Praying God's rich blessing upon you, dear brother, and upon all those associated with you in the most significant work of all ages, I am,

Your brother in best of bonds, EDWIN BUNDY.—Ore.

BLESSED EFFECT OF VOLUME SEVEN

DEAR BRETHREN:—

At Montreal, Canada, we were much interested and pleased, recently, to fellowship with a brother and sister who received the truth only five weeks ago, through the reading of Volume Seven. The sister had formerly taken no interest at all in things religious. Now both husband and wife are fully consecrated and are showing wonderful progress. They have a clearer knowledge of the truth than many who have been "truth people" for several years. It was inspiring to note their zeal. With Christian love,

Yours in joyful service, E. F. CRIST. —Pilgrim.

PRESENT POSSIBILITIES BEING REALIZED

DEAR BRETHREN:—

Enclosed find usual weekly report. The past week has been crowned with much personal blessings from the Lord. The work goes forward grandly and the sublime possibilities of the present are being more and more realized by the Lord's people. They are undergoing a wonderful heart-and-mind shaping in preparation for the final conflict with the powers of darkness. Many who had settled down to the thought that the work was (about) over are now rubbing their eyes and becoming conscious of the fact that the mightiest conflict of the ages is upon us.

O, how evident it is that everything should be swept aside that would hinder us in following our Captain! What is the value of time, energy, money, treasures of any kind to the consecrated NOW, except to forward this cause to which our lives are dedicated and for which Jesus died?

The Seventh Volume is being accepted, studied and pushed everywhere. It is my observation that those most interested in it are invariably happy and prosperous in the Lord, whereas the few who reject it are unhappy and developing bitterness. With much Christian love, I am,

Your fellow servant, O. L. SULLIVAN. —Pilgrim.

RESOLUTION FROM FRENCH BRETHREN

DEAR BRETHREN:—

We hereby send you a resolution passed by the Paris Ecclesia in reference to the management of the SOCIETY. We received, much delayed, the facts in relation thereto, and now wish to send you direct the following resolution:

"By unanimous vote of the Paris (France) Ecclesia, assembled on Sunday, December 23d, we hereby express:

"1st. Our gratitude to the Lord for permitting the present Board of Directors of the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY (Brother J. F. Rutherford being their President) to administer with wisdom and faithfulness the interests of the harvest work during the past months;

"2d. Our desire to see maintained in charge of the work during the year 1918 the same Board and President;

"3d. Our fervent Christian love and moral support to said Board; also to their valiant colaborers near and far; and we daily present them all to the throne of heavenly grace in accordance with our Vow."

THE ECCLESIA OF PARIS.—France.

"We cannot tell you how grateful we are to have the Seventh Volume nor of the heart full of thankfulness and love to God and to you, as we read it. We surely realize that the Lord is using the same channel in dispensing meat in due season. We assure you of our loyal support now and to the end and recognize that our dear Brother Rutherford was surely chosen of the Lord to lead the Church to the end of her journey." A. E. W. W.—Ohio.

"I feel that my cup of joy overflows. I rejoice that it is due time for this solemn message, and I desire to use Volume Seven as a chariot that shall help me mount to the skies."

MRS. E. B.—Mass.

"LET PATIENCE HAVE HER PERFECT WORK"

As is quite generally known, the present traffic congestion due to shortage of cars, etc., is unprecedented in the history of the country. We hear of unparalleled delays in not only freight shipments, but also in express and mail. The Government is endeavoring to alleviate this congestion. Let us hear from you if you feel that sufficient time has elapsed for your order to have reached you under present circumstances, and we will do what we can to trace the shipment. In the meantime we advise patience in respect to undelivered shipments and the importance of placing future orders as far in advance as possible. Mail matter is usually delivered with reasonable promptness, although we have recently heard of instances where WATCH TOWER issues have been in transit three or four weeks before reaching subscribers. We mention this that the friends may not think us negligent when THE WATCH TOWER fails to arrive on time.

MARGOLIS BIBLE—A NEW HEBREW TRANSLATION

We have recently added to our stock a Jewish Translation of the Old Testament which some claim to be superior to the Leeser version. This new translation is known as the Margolis Version, as Prof. Max L. Margolis was the Editor-in-Chief and Secretary of the Editorial Board; but the actual work of translation was accomplished by a Committee of over twenty-five eminent Jewish Rabbis and Hebrew scholars, whose work covered a period of twenty-four years. The volume is in good, clear type, cloth bound, $1.25 postpaid.

IN MEMORY OF OUR KING

"This do . . . in remembrance of me. For as oft as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come."—1 Corinthians 11:25, 26.

The truly consecrated Christian, walking in the light of present truth, looks forward with the keenest interest to the approaching Memorial celebration. This Passover season holds a peculiar interest, because it may mark the last for the church on earth and may mark the drinking of the wine anew with the Lord in glory. Since Pentecost the followers of the Lord have been waiting with joyful expectancy for his return as the King of glory. For many years the best-informed of his followers have known that he is present and that he will soon be fully revealed to all who are his. Soon he will take unto himself his completed bride and reign in glory. It was his expressed desire that the bride class should have him in memory until he call for her. Whether the coming Memorial will be the last on earth, we do not, of course, know; but we do know that we are one year nearer the full consummation of our hopes. If it please the Lord to have us celebrate this Memorial other years, then we shall do so gladly. If it please him to take all the members of the church home this year, then our joy will be full and we shall have pleasures for evermore. His will, not ours, be done. Glad we are to assemble together again to remind each other of that wonderful event that transpired so many centuries past.

When a man of the world has risen to fame, he desires to leave a monument, so that future generations may know of his greatness. Of course there is selfishness in this desire. Jesus of Nazareth, the greatest man that lived on earth, when he approached the time of his crucifixion, prepared a monument that will endure forever. Unselfishly he acted in this regard, as he did in all others. He was about to perform the greatest work of the ages—to make himself an offering for sin on behalf of the human race. This Memorial was a means whereby his followers should remember him until they should see him again. He knew that the fully consecrated would appreciate this more than anything else. He knew that the world would not appreciate it; and therefore his death would be sweetly kept in the memory of those who had received the benefit of his great ransom-sacrifice. None but the truly consecrated have ever appreciated the Lord's death and its meaning. The time is near at hand, however, when even the world will begin to understand why he suffered and why he died. The Lord Jesus knew that the time from Pentecost until his kingdom is established would be occupied in the selection of his bride and he desired that she should keep fresh in mind the importance of the great sin-offering and likewise appreciate her privilege of participating in his sufferings, in order that she might reign with him in glory, for the regeneration and reconstruction of the world.

Many of the members of the bride class are already with the Lord. Those remaining this side are eager to be with him, yet biding his own good time. It is reasonable, then, that as we approach each Memorial season, as we come nearer to the time of seeing our great King and Lord, our hearts are thrilled with the prospect that this is perhaps the last this side the vail and that soon we may see him face to face.

"LORD, IS IT I?"

When Jesus was about to take leave of his disciples, his associates for three and a half years, he marked that they were troubled, and said: "Let not your heart be troubled. . . . . I go to prepare a place for you; and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am, there ye may be also." And now the day draws near when this sweet promise from the Master's lips will have complete fulfilment. Is it any wonder, then, that the truly consecrated are looking forward with great desire to the approaching Memorial and to that which may follow after!

It was after Jesus and his disciples had eaten the Passover according to the Jewish Law, that he instituted the Memorial Supper as a reminder of his death. Judas was present at that time and was given a sop and went out from the others before the supper was ended, fully bent upon betraying the Master; and this he did. This incident may represent the fact that in the close of this age, and just before the bride is completed, the sop of truth will become so strong that it shall drive forth from the company and communion of the faithful all those who do not have a full and proper appreciation of the blood of Jesus, shed by the Lamb of God for the taking away of the sin of the world. It is not for anyone this side the vail to judge who may be of that class. It is sufficient that each one carefully examine himself or herself, saying, "Is it I?" Truly this is a time for careful self-examination, for seeing to it that we are pure in heart toward all.

That we may more fully appreciate the importance of that great event which transpired at Calvary, we do well to remind ourselves again of the events that took place just preceding that time.

THE ORIGINAL PASSOVER

The Hebrew year begins on the day of the first new moon nearest the Spring equinox. The Hebrew Passover marked a wonderful event in Jewish history and foreshadowed the death of the great Ransomer of humankind. St. Paul tells us that the things pertaining to the Law were shadows of greater things to come. (Colossians 2:17; Hebrews 10:1) Looking, then, from the type to the antitype, we find much food for thought. The Israelites had been held in bondage to the Egyptians for years. From time to time their tasks were increased and their burdens made grievous to be borne. God sent Moses to deliver them and sent Aaron with him as his mouthpiece. They appeared before Pharaoh and requested him to permit the children of Israel to leave Egypt. This Pharaoh denied. God sent punishment upon him for refusing to let them go. Time and time again he promised to let them depart from Egypt; time and time again he broke his promise.

Nine times had the Lord sent plagues upon the Egyptians and as many times, at the instance of Moses, had relieved Pharaoh and his people therefrom. Then the tenth plague was sent—the death of the first-born. Pharaoh was devoted to his son, his first-born; and the smiting of him would touch Pharaoh's heart as nothing else could do. God informed Moses that at midnight of the fourteenth of Nisan the death messenger of the Lord would pass through Egypt and every first-born of every family should die. He then directed Moses to make provision for the saving of the first-born of Israel. The arrangement was that each family or household should, on the tenth day of Nisan, take a lamb into the house; that the lamb should be a male of the first year and without blemish; that it should be kept in the house until the fourteenth day of the same month, when it should be killed and the blood sprinkled upon the door-posts and upon the lintel; that the lamb should then be roasted with fire; that no bones of it should be broken; that it should be eaten with unleavened bread and bitter herbs, and that those eating it should do so with their loins girded, their shoes on their feet and their staves in hand, and that they should eat with haste; that when the messenger of the Lord should pass through Egypt the first-born of each household would be spared where the blood of the lamb appeared on the door. Moses carried out these instructions and the faithful Jews acted upon his advice. They killed the lamb, sprinkled its blood as directed and, in due season, ate it. At midnight of the fourteenth of Nisan, all the first-born of Egypt died, including Pharaoh's beloved son. Great consternation followed and Pharaoh immediately summoned Moses and Aaron. He now not only promised that they should go, but thrust them out, and Moses led the children of Israel to the Red Sea, across it and on to Mount Sinai.

TYPE AND ANTITYPE

In this picture the first-born represent the church of the first born whose names are written in heaven. These are the heirs of the exceeding great and precious promises of Jehovah. Like the first-born in Egypt, they are subject to the second death, but escape from it by complying with the Lord's fixed rules. All who during the Gospel age come under the protection of the blood of Jesus, and there remain, are safe from this great penalty.

In this picture the lamb represented Jesus, slain for the cancellation of the sin of mankind. (John 1:29) A door is a place of entrance. Hence the blood sprinkled upon the door-posts of the Israelitish homes signifies the fact that the way to safety and life is through faith in the blood of Jesus, who declared: "I am the door." The Passover night pictured the Gospel age when sin and darkness prevail, and during which time the bride of Christ is gathered out from mankind. And now we see this time of suffering drawing to an end and amidst a time of great confusion, both political and ecclesiastical: and soon the sufferings of the Christ will end.

No animal could more fitly represent the lowly Nazarene than could the lamb. It is noted for its defenselessness and its innocence. The antitypical Lamb, the Man Jesus, true to the picture, was "holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners." (Hebrews 7:26) "A lamb without blemish and without spot, who verily was foreordained before the foundation of the world, but was manifested in the last times." "He was brought as a lamb to the slaughter; and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he opened not his mouth."

Born under the Law, Jesus must fulfil its terms; and since the Passover was a part of the Law arrangement, he must eat it at the appointed time; viz., the fourteenth of Nisan. As he was the great antitypical Lamb now to be slain, he must eat this Passover just preceding his death. It must be apparent to all that it would be inappropriate to celebrate the Lord's death more than once a year, and that the time of this celebration should, as nearly as possible, correspond with the date at which he instituted the Memorial.

THE PURPOSE OF THE MEMORIAL

After eating the Passover Supper, Jesus instituted the Memorial. This he did that his followers might remember him until he come again. "And as they were eating, Jesus took bread and blessed it and brake it, and gave it to his disciples and said, Take, eat; this is my body." That is to say, the bread represented his flesh, his humanity, which was broken on behalf of mankind. "And he took the cup and gave thanks and gave it to them, saying, All ye drink of it; for this is my blood of the new covenant which is shed for the remission of sins." The cup there represented the pouring out of his life blood as the great sacrifice on behalf of all who shall accept the benefits of the ransom.

It was the will of God that the members of the bride of Christ should fill up that which is behind of the sufferings of Christ Jesus. Hence those who will compose the bride are privileged to suffer with him. The celebration of the Memorial once each year not only reminds the celebraters of the death of their great Master, but also brings vividly to mind that each member of the body has covenanted to be dead with him. Clearly the Apostle expresses this thought when he says: "The cup of blessing for which we bless God, is it not the participation of the blood of the Anointed One; the loaf which we break, is it not the participation of the body of the Anointed One; because there is one loaf, we the many are one body, for we all partake of the one loaf."—1 Cor. 10:16, 17, Diaglott.

Coming, then, to the celebration this year, let each one have in mind the privilege of suffering with Christ Jesus. Whatever may be our experiences, however joyful or however trying, all shall come to us by the Lord's permission and as a great favor. "For unto you it is given in behalf of Christ not only to believe on him, but also to suffer for his sake." (Philippians 1:29) We know not what awaits us; but we do know that all who are abiding in the shadow of God's wing are safe and that no evil shall befall the new creature in Christ. Whatever anyone may do to us in the way of persecution, it is of the utmost importance to see to it that we ourselves do no persecuting. It is vital to us that we keep a pure heart. We do well personally to examine self as we approach the hour of the celebration of the Memorial. Let us remember the words of Brother Paul, "Know ye not that a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump? Purge out, therefore, the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump, as ye are unleavened. For even Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us; therefore let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity." Leaven is a symbol of sin and old leaven signifies sins of long standing. Malice means ill will, hatred and a wrong condition of heart. These should all be put away and each one, upon self-examination, see to it that he has clean hands and a pure heart. "Let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and mind, perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord."

LET US EXAMINE OURSELVES

It was jealousy, ill will and malice that led Judas into his wrongful course in betraying the Lord to the ecclesiastics of that time. Judas knew that the ecclesiastics were anxious to destroy Jesus; hence he betrayed the Master into their hands. The civil powers saw the innocence of the Lord, but permitted their scruples to be overruled by the clergy and thus falsely and without just cause or excuse convicted the Son of Man and sent him to an ignominious death. It is not at all improbable that the very closing scenes of the Gospel age shall witness something of a similar kind. He whose zeal and faithfulness and loyalty to the Master brings him to the point of persecution because of such faithfulness will be greatly favored. No one should act foolishly nor put himself in a way to be persecuted, but with calmness of mind and sobriety of heart should diligently and faithfully represent the Lord, trusting him fully as to the results.

If there be strife among any of the Lord's people (and such there is among some of the classes), this is the time above all times to cease such strife and to seek diligently to establish peace and harmony. It has been the rule that such strife is usually caused by the desire of a few to be more highly honored than others. And such it was in the Lord's time. "And there was also strife among them, which one of them should be counted the greatest. And he said unto them, The kings of the Gentiles exercise lordship over them, and they that exercise authority upon them are called benefactors; but ye shall not be so. But he that is greatest among you let him be as the younger; and he that is chief, as he that doth serve." If we find that injustice has been heaped upon us, that we have not been favored in the ecclesia as much as we, in our judgment, should have been; if we feel that we should have been more highly honored, let us remember the danger of insisting on what we believe are our rights and the great privilege of humbly submitting to the Lord's will. No trial could come without his permission, and the one which hurts us most has probably come to test the faith and love of those involved. "By love serve one another." May we, then, be able to see through our trying experiences that all of these things are evidences that the Lord is still dealing with us, and may we appreciate the privilege of overcoming them and manifesting our unselfish love for the brethren and therefore for the Lord and his cause by serving in a humble and loving manner in whatsoever place the Lord puts us. Our great desire is and should be to see the King of glory. Everything else should be made subservient to that. Let us have in mind that the eating of the Passover lamb was with bitter herbs and that this sharpened the appetite and created a greater desire for more of the flesh to remove that bitter taste. This fitly illustrates that the bitter experiences and trials that come to us, if we are properly exercised thereby, cause us to flee to the Master that we might partake of more of his merit and his loving-kindness. Feeding, then, upon our precious God-given promises and upon the prospects of soon seeing the King and being with him in glory, will make us forget the bitter trials and we shall rejoice with great joy, giving thanks that we are permitted to have such trials as make sweeter our joys.

One may ask: "Shall I decline to partake of this Memorial because of some difficulty I have had with a brother?" Our answer would be, if possible try to bring about a reconciliation by talking over the differences in the spirit of love. Effect a reconciliation, if possible; but if not, examine your own heart and see to it that there is no bitterness there. If you have been wronged, then see that you freely forgive, even as the Lord forgives us; and then go and keep the feast. All who have made a full consecration to the Lord should partake. If some have made a consecration and have not symbolized this consecration by water immersion, such should be done, if possible, before partaking. But the mere fact that one has not been baptized since making a consecration should not preclude him from partaking of the Memorial.

Let us all have in mind that "the end of all things is at hand; be of sober mind and watch unto prayer." How glad should be our hearts that we have come to the end of this dark night and that soon the light of the Lord shall fill the earth! Having in mind our great desire to see our King, let us also remember the admonition of the Apostle. "Above all things have fervent love among yourselves." Having this love, we will cover each other's defects; and nothing enables us so much to have this love as looking with expectant joy to seeing the Lord and our beloved brethren who have gone before.

DEMONS TO WRECK SOCIETY

Psychic phenomena are attracting the attention of some of the greatest men of the land. These men claim that they are able to communicate with the dead. That they receive messages from some hidden source cannot be questioned. This psychic science is called Immortalism. In truth and fact it is demonism. And these demons, exercising greater power over the human mind, will, as the Scriptures foreshow, soon wreck all society. It is of great importance that every person acquaint himself with the Scriptural teaching upon the subject. We issue a little book, "What say the Scriptures About Spiritism?" that throws a flood of light upon this occult science. Everybody should read it. Postpaid, 10c. But if any one who desires to read it will send us a post card stating he is too poor to purchase, we will mail him a copy free.

QUALIFICATIONS OF ELDERS

Some of the ecclesias at recent elections have declined to elect anyone to the office of elder or deacon until such an one answered in the affirmative questions of the following import: (1) Have you answered the V. D. M. questions and have you passed that examination? (2) Are you in harmony with the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY and the work in which it is engaged? (3) Do you accept "The Finished Mystery" as the Seventh Volume of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES, and are you willing to teach the same?

Some have raised objection to these questions, insisting that they require an additional qualification for one to be an elder or a deacon, and are therefore contrary to the Scriptures. In our judgment such contention is without merit. The Apostle Paul set forth what are the qualifications of an elder. (1 Timothy 3:2-6; Titus 1:6-10) There is nothing in the above questions that is in any manner out of harmony with the requirements announced by the Apostle. On the contrary, they are exactly in harmony with the qualifications there named.

The first question relates particularly to one's knowledge of the Truth, such knowledge as would modestly qualify one to teach. St. Paul says an elder must be "apt to teach." "In addition to the foregoing limitations, it is required that an elder shall be apt to teach; that is to say, he must have ability as a teacher, explainer, expounder, of the divine plan, and thus be able to assist the Lord's flock in word and in doctrine." (STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES, Vol. Six, page 249) The V. D. M. questions relate to doctrinal matters and are intended to indicate the process of determining one's aptness to teach. One who is unable to answer them would demonstrate that he did not have a sufficiently accurate knowledge of the divine plan to teach a class. Any ecclesia must be the judge of who shall be its elders and it is clearly within the province of each such ecclesia to require them to show that they are qualified and are apt to teach, before electing them to office.

As to the second question: the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY has long been used of the Lord. Clearly it is the messenger mentioned in Revelation 14:18. It has been the channel for the dispensing of the harvest message. The various ecclesias have long since adopted its publications as helps to study the Bible. Any one, therefore, out of harmony with the SOCIETY would hardly be a proper person to be a leader or teacher of an ecclesia which uses the publications of the SOCIETY as its helps to Bible study. The Apostle is emphatic in his statement as to what is the proper relationship between class and teacher, declaring that "if any man teach otherwise and consent not to sound words, the words of the Lord Jesus Christ, and to the doctrine which is according to godliness," such is not a proper teacher and from such the others should withdraw. (1 Timothy 6:3-5) A leader of a class who is openly opposed to the work in which the SOCIETY is engaged would tend to cause dissension and trouble, instead of peace and harmony. Hence it becomes the reasonable duty of the class to know the attitude of its teachers.

As to the third question: the SOCIETY has published and is widely distributing "The Finished Mystery"—Volume Seven of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES. There is nothing in it out of harmony with the divine plan as revealed. The doctrines there taught are wholesome and clearly in harmony with that of the Lord Jesus Christ and the other six volumes of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES. It is a part of the work of the SOCIETY to give this volume a wide distribution, because it is believed the due time has come for the message to be given against Babylon. A teacher that is opposed to the Seventh Volume, therefore, would be opposed to the SOCIETY'S work, out of harmony with the SOCIETY; and, as a leader, such an one would breed discontent and trouble, rather than establish harmony and peace and development among those of the Lord's people who had already expressed themselves as being in harmony with such Seventh Volume. Hence such an one should not stand for election to the position of elder.

This does not mean that such persons who would not answer the foregoing questions in the affirmative should be disfellowshiped. On the contrary, they should be encouraged to study the Lord's Word and grow in knowledge and the fruits and graces of the Spirit.

We remember when the Vow was promulgated by Brother Russell through the SOCIETY, there was some decided opposition to it. Brother Russell then held that any one out of sympathy with the Vow and the work of the SOCIETY in general should not be elected as an elder of the class. Concerning this subject he said:

"Question: Is it proper or wise for a Pilgrim en route to be entertained by those who are out of sympathy with the Vow and with the work of the SOCIETY in general, even though he be an elder of the class?"

"Answer: Most decidedly not. Furthermore, the Pilgrim should make clear to the class that they had greatly erred in selecting such an one for an elder, and should help them to rectify the matter as quickly as possible. If the class likes the elder who is out of accord with the SOCIETY'S work, it should not make a request for Pilgrim service. Some of the Lord's dear sheep are very stupid. Meekness and gentleness are commendable, but there are times when they would mean disloyalty to God."—Z. '13-14.

The above quotation from the pen of Brother Russell puts the matter in clear, terse language, about which there can be no doubt. It will be noticed especially that he said that one who is out of accord with the SOCIETY'S work should not be elected an elder, and a class which would not follow that rule should not even request the SOCIETY to send Pilgrims. The purpose of Brother Russell and the SOCIETY clearly was and is not to lay burdens upon the brethren, but to point out the privilege of the various ecclesias in determining whether their elders possess the qualifications, and furthermore emphasizing the importance and necessity of working together in harmony. By way of illustration: Suppose the general of an army should give an order to be executed, the colonel should pass it on to his sub-officers and each one would decide to execute the order according to his own ideas. The result would be disorganization of the worst kind. We recognize the Lord Jesus as the great General and Director of the harvest work, and his people as workers together with him, some occupying one position and some another. Then all who have his spirit will desire to work in harmony with him and his approved way of putting forth the message. Any one, then, who would refuse to answer in the affirmative that he accepts "The Finished Mystery" and that he will teach it would thereby declare himself out of harmony and opposed to the SOCIETY'S work, and any one opposed to the work of the SOCIETY would hardly be qualified to be a teacher of a class which by its request for Pilgrim visits, or otherwise, had indicated its desire to coöperate with the SOCIETY. We believe that when the dear friends see the principle here involved they will readily agree that the questions that some of the ecclesias have adopted and required to be answered by those standing for election as elders and deacons are entirely right and proper and in full harmony with the Scriptures.

RELIGIOUS INTOLERANCE

On February 12 the public press contained the following dispatch from Ottawa, Canada: "The Secretary of State, under the press censorship regulations, has issued warrants forbidding the possession in Canada of a number of publications, amongst which is the book published by the International Bible Students Association, entitled 'STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES—The Finished Mystery,' generally known as the posthumous publication of Pastor Russell. 'The Bible Students Monthly,' also published by this Association at its office in Brooklyn, New York, is also prohibited circulation in Canada. The possession of any prohibited books lays the possessor open to a fine not exceeding $5,000 and five years in prison."

Winnipeg papers had previously announced that certain clergymen had denounced these publications from their pulpits and stated that the attention of the Attorney General had been called to the matter. Later, the Winnipeg Tribune, after mentioning the order issued by the public censor, said, "The banned publications are alleged to contain seditious and anti-war statements. Excerpts from one of the recent issues of 'The Bible Students Monthly' were denounced from the pulpit a few weeks ago by Rev. Charles G. Patterson, Pastor of St. Stephen's Church. Afterward Attorney General Johnson sent to Rev. Patterson for a copy of the publication. The censor's order is believed to be the direct result."

A large number of the copies of "The Finished Mystery" were confiscated; houses were searched and the books taken away from the people; and several of our brethren were arrested. Some have been tried and fined all the way from one to five hundred dollars. The sale and distribution of the book in Canada has been stopped of course. One of the leading lawyers of Canada has delivered a written opinion on the case, from which we quote: "There is no doubt that the Secretary of State has the power to put any publication under the ban. Once he does this, the wisdom of his act and the nature of the publication cannot be reviewed in any court. On the contrary, the courts must hold that the publication is objectionable. This, of course, is exceedingly arbitrary, but it is nevertheless the state of the law. To illustrate how absurd it is, I mention that the Secretary of State could put Webster's Dictionary or the Bible under the ban, and immediately any one found in possession of either would be subject to very severe penalties without any recourse to the courts. My suggestion to you, in view of the unsatisfactory condition of the law, is that a strong publicity campaign be started to secure the rescinding of the ban order. To this end petitions, similar to the one I drew up for you, should be vigorously circulated. Meetings should be held and suitable advertisements inserted in magazines having a wide distribution in Canada. This should, at a seasonable time, be followed up by an influential deputation waiting upon the Government and members of Parliament at Ottawa."

Shortly thereafter, acting upon information from Canada, the Army Intelligence Bureau at New York began an investigation of the Brooklyn headquarters. The public press announced that the headquarters were raided, which is entirely untrue. Some one had misrepresented to the authorities that our SOCIETY is carrying on a German propaganda and retarding the draft, which, of course, is also untrue.

On February 24, the President of the SOCIETY delivered a public lecture in the city of Los Angeles, California, to fully 3,500 people, as many more being turned away. The Los Angeles Tribune the morning following carried a full-page report. This very much aroused the indignation of the clergy there. The ministerial associations held a meeting on Monday morning and sent its president to the managers of the paper, demanding an explanation as to why they would publish so much about the lecture. On Thursday following the Army Intelligence Bureau of Los Angeles took possession of the Los Angeles headquarters, taking away many of the SOCIETY'S publications. Since then, a number of these have been returned.

On Monday, March 4, several of our brethren at Scranton, Pennsylvania, including Brothers C. J. Woodworth and M. L. Herr, were arrested, charged with conspiracy and put under bond for their appearance for trial next May. Without a doubt, the prosecution of these brethren has been instigated by some nominal ecclesiastical adherents. The Bible's terrible arraignment of the Papacy, which Brother Woodworth has been instrumental in bringing to the attention of many, is quite probably the cause of this action against them.

CONCERNING THE WIRELESS OUTFIT

Following their wicked course of persecution, it was reported in the public press that Government agents had seized a wireless apparatus which was erected on the Bethel Home and ready for use. The facts are these: Some two or three years ago, a wireless outfit was presented to Brother Russell. It was erected on the roof to enable some of the younger brethren to see if they could learn to operate it. When this nation was about to be engaged in war, all wireless instruments were required to be dismantled. The one on the Bethel Home was taken down and the poles sawed up and used for other purposes; and the instrument was carefully packed away in the Art Room, where it has been ever since. The apparatus consisted of a receiver only, no transmitter, and has not been in use for more than two years. When two Army Intelligence men were in conversation with a member of the Home, the wireless was mentioned. They were taken to the roof and shown where it formerly was and then were shown the instrument itself, packed away; and by consent the instrument was taken away by these gentlemen because we have no use for it. There never was a sending instrument at Bethel, hence impossible to transmit a message anywhere.

It seems that the objectionable language of Volume Seven is that on pages 248 to 253, inclusive, which is chiefly quoted from statements made by Rev. C. E. Jefferson and Rev. John Haynes (not Hayes) Holmes. All of this matter was written prior to the time that the United States entered the war.

Upon notice being brought to us that the above mentioned pages were objectionable, the SOCIETY took immediate steps to stop the sale of "The Finished Mystery" until further information could be obtained. Our President then, at the instance of the Board, appointed a representative to visit the Government officials at Washington and ascertain, if possible, how the objection could be removed. The Seventh Volume —"The Finished Mystery"—was submitted by Brother Robison, the SOCIETY'S representative, to the proper authorities at Washington; and he was advised that there was no disposition on the part of the Government in interfere with our work in general and that if pages 247 to 253, inclusive, were removed, there would be no known objection to the volume.

We immediately sent out a letter to the colporteurs and class Secretaries, advising that the pages above mentioned be deleted and that the distribution of the volume be proceeded with. This was done in many instances, as we are advised, and the work went on. Later, on the 14th day of March, the Department of Justice at Washington, instructed the District Attorneys that a further distribution of "The Finished Mystery" would be a violation of the Espionage Act. The Department of Justice, however, declined to state whether or not this violation related only to pages 247 to 253, or to something else, and according to the custom of that Department declined to render an opinion as to what part of the volume does trangress the law. We are having the entire book gone over carefully by able counsel in order to be fully advised before taking further action. We are convinced that there is nothing in the volume at all that in any wise violates the Espionage Act; but we believe that the action is inspired by other influence which desires to suppress the message with reference to the ecclesiastical systems. We are preparing a statement to present to the Department of Justice, that our side may be heard and hope to be able to advise the friends later.

We suggest that the colporteurs proceed with the sale of the other six volumes of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES until further word from us, and that every one who can give a public address do so each Sunday, or oftener, if possible, using the subject, "The World Has Ended—Millions Now Living May Never Die." We have a quantity of PASTOR RUSSELL'S SERMONS and we advise the colporteurs to push the sale of these at this time. Daily the evidences grow stronger that the kingdom of heaven is at hand. Let us be faithful in announcing it. We are not at all responsible for what is in the Bible. There is no book that so strongly arraigns dishonesty, and especially with reference to those who claim to be the representatives of the Lord. We feel quite sure that no part of Volume VII has in any wise interfered with the Government's prosecution of the war; but the clergy have sought to make it thus appear, in order that they might protect themselves from being exposed before the people.

NOT AGAINST THE GOVERNMENT

These clergymen who object to the teachings of the Bible concerning themselves being laid bare before the public have raised a great deal of dust, and cried loud and long that our SOCIETY is against the Government and that its work is retarding the progress of the war. Nothing is further from the truth. We are not against the war. We are not against the Government in any sense of the word. We recognize the Government of the United States as the best government on earth. We recognize that the governments, being political and economic institutions, have the power and authority, under the fundamental law, to declare war and to draft their citizens into military service. We have not the slightest disposition to interfere with this, nor to speak against it so far as the governments' power or authority is concerned. We recognize that it is the duty of every citizen to obey the laws of the land, and the duty of every citizen, who can conscientiously do so, to participate in the defense of the country. All should be respectful to officers of the law. (Acts 23:5) The law of the land recognizes that there are Christian people who cannot engage in military service without doing violence to their conscience. Hence the Congress of the United States, in passing the Selective Draft Act of May 18, 1917, inserted a clause providing that certain ones, under certain conditions, should not be compelled to engage in combatant military service. We hold that the members of our SOCIETY come within the purvue of this section of the law and are entitled to its protection. And none of our members, so far as we know, have done more than to claim the benefit of the provisions of this Act of Congress.

For forty years the attention of the people has been called to the unrighteous practices of the ecclesiastical systems and how they have kept the people in ignorance. In that time the clergy have been called upon repeatedly to explain to the people the Scriptures, and they have industriously avoided making either answer or explanation. The Lord long ago, through his prophet, foretold that this would be their course, and that, refusing themselves to answer the people, the clergy would attempt to shield themselves behind the civil powers and, if possible, induce the latter to prevent a free and uninterrupted proclamation of the message of the Lord. The Scriptures designate these ecclesiastical systems as Babylon. The Lord says: "The mighty men of Babylon [the clergy] have forborne to fight; they have remained in their holds [shielding themselves behind civil officers]; their might hath failed; they became as women."—Jeremiah 51:30.

Plainly and clearly, then, our position is: We would not do injury to any one, not even the clergy; and certainly not to the Government. Our mission is to preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ and his kingdom. Jesus taught that when the Gospel age ended, present institutions would go to pieces and that upon the ruins thereof his kingdom would be established. He taught his followers to pray, "Thy kingdom come; thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven." If, then, it is disloyal to call attention to the unrighteous ecclesiastical systems that have been blinding the peoples of earth for so long, it is disloyal to repeat the Lord's prayer. We are convinced that all difficulty which has arisen has been local, and instigated by those clergymen who could not answer the great truths set forth against them in the Bible and who have sought to stir up the civil authorities against others who are meekly and earnestly preaching the Gospel with malice toward none and with love toward all.

As consecrated Christians, we must, in obedience to the Lord, call attention to the great truths he has recorded in the Bible and which he has commissioned us to tell others. (Isaiah 61:1-3; Luke 4:18-21) It is the duty of every one to be obedient to the law. The fundamental law guarantees that every one shall worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience and speak the truth with freedom. There is no disposition on the part of any Christian to do violence to the laws of the land.

A WARNING TO THE CHURCH

What we are about to write is not written with pleasure, but from a sense of duty to the church. St. Paul prophetically wrote, "For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them. Therefore watch." (Acts 20:29-31) The words of St. Paul are now having their fulfilment.

THE WATCH TOWER of November 1, 1916, published an article from the pen of Brother Russell, whose words likewise seem prophetic and are now having a fulfilment. He quotes the Apostle's words above mentioned and shows how they will specially apply in the closing days of the church's earthly journey. Amongst other things, he said:

"We have already alluded to the ambitious and selfish spirit in the world leading on to anarchy; and we have just pointed out how the same selfish, ambitious spirit is leading on to anarchy in the church. We foresee a time of trouble for the world upon this score, and a time of trouble also for the church. The world cannot purge itself of this class; for the leaders and the led have the worldly spirit, which is sure to wax worse and worse. But not so in the church of Christ. Ours is the spirit of the Master, the spirit of loyalty to truth, the spirit of the golden rule, the spirit of brotherly love, the spirit of liberty and helpfulness, the spirit of fidelity to what we believe to be the truth."

ANARCHY IN THE CHURCH

The persons hereinafter mentioned participated in the referendum vote relating to the SOCIETY and its management; they likewise participated in the shareholders' annual meeting, and at each place diligently endeavored to carry the election their way. The result has been heretofore reported in THE WATCH TOWER, showing the overwhelming expressions of opinion from the Lord's people. At the Pittsburgh annual meeting, amongst the shareholders represented, about 88 per cent was in favor of the present management, as against 12 per cent opposed. Having participated in these elections, the spirit of loyalty and obedience to the Lord's arrangements would require all such to abide by the result until another similar election. Any other spirit is the spirit of anarchy described by Brother Russell in the preceding paragraph.

It is with pain that we mention the names of some individuals, but we do this in the interest of the church at large. The Apostle Paul gives us the precedent for this; and we feel fully justified in mentioning the matter, that the friends may not be further deceived. "This thou knowest, that all they which are in Asia be turned away from me; of whom are Phygellus and Hermogenes." (2 Timothy 1:15) "And their word will eat as doth a canker; of whom is Hymenæus and Philetus." (2 Timothy 2:17) "Alexander the coppersmith did me much evil; the Lord reward him according to his works."—2 Timothy 4:14.

A wolf in sheep's clothing pictures the disposition of one who appears as a friend and yet is ready to do injury. Several of the friends report the method that is being pursued by P. S. L. Johnson and R. G. Jolly. The practise is along the following line: They appear at a class of the brethren and, by their words and conduct, make it appear as though they are in complete harmony with the SOCIETY and its work; but after they have ingratiated themselves into the confidence of a number, seeds of doubt are sown. They stay in a community for several days or longer. They advise the friends to hold cottage meetings to be addressed by themselves. They then go about and call on all the consecrated. If any one suggests a break with the SOCIETY, they discourage this for a time until they finish their campaign and thoroughly sow their seeds of discord; and then they have a resolution offered by some one, withdrawing support from the SOCIETY and its work. We publish below a letter from one of the brethren of the Philadelphia Ecclesia, which discloses the method of operation:

"DEAR BRETHREN:

"We are constrained to drop you a note at this time in order that, should you think wise, the ——— Class might be warned.

"Brother Jolly, an able assistant of the Johnson propaganda, will go to ——— for three weeks, because of his success here in gaining so many over on the side of the opposition that he might try the same methods there. They are similar to those stated in THE WATCH TOWER recently.

"Kindly accept this as a warning. Things are said and done to make it appear as though the brother is in complete harmony with the Bible House; then, after he has gained the confidence of a number, seeds of doubt are subtly sown. This is accomplished at little gatherings during the week. Attempts of an open break are discouraged and prevented, if possible, until the entire class is thoroughly saturated with seeds of disloyalty; then an open break is forced. This method has proven very successful here.

"Experience has taught me the necessity of an uncompromisingly strong stand against all such subtlety immediately when attempted. What would I not do if I could but spare any ecclesia the sad experience here encountered! But the lessons to be learned were helpful, and perhaps our experience may assist the friends elsewhere. We suggest that one rotten apple in a barrel will make all the apples in the barrel rotten if not removed.

"Realizing that all the attempts of the adversary will come to naught and desiring to do our little part and trust in the Lord, we leave this matter with you, as we do not know who are loyal and who are not at ———."

"MARK THEM WHICH CAUSE DIVISION"

We take this occasion to call attention of the brethren everywhere to the fact that P. S. L. Johnson and R. G. Jolly do not represent the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY in any manner whatsoever, and are wholly unauthorized to represent it or the International Bible Students Association or the Peoples Pulpit Association. The evident purpose of the two named and those associated with them is to cause division amongst the brethren. "Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offences, contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and avoid them. For they that are such serve not our Lord Jesus Christ, but their own belly; and by good words and fair speeches deceive the hearts of the simple." (Romans 16:17, 18) "These six things doth the Lord hate; yea, seven are an abomination unto him: A proud look, a lying tongue, and hands that shed innocent blood, an heart that deviseth wicked imaginations, feet that be swift in running to mischief, a false witness that speaketh lies, and he that soweth discord among brethren."

To avoid such does not mean to treat them unkindly, but it does mean to refuse to fellowship such in the spirit of the Lord. Leave their judgment entirely to him who judgeth all things righteously. Again Brother Russell's words in the article above mentioned are applicable:

"If he has different views, do not persecute him—do not follow the style of the dark ages, but follow the proper course of letting him 'flock to himself,' or with as many as prefer to view matters as he views them. We have not given such strong advice heretofore; but we perceive that many of the dear sheep are being troubled, hindered of development, and imposed upon. We see that proportionately such elders and deacons are growing more bold, and hence the need is the greater that all who have the right spirit, and who realize that under the Lord's guidance in our study of the 'Divine Plan of the Ages,' we have not been following 'cunningly devised fables,' should now take a positive stand for the good of themselves, for the good of the leaders who manifest a wrong spirit, and for the good of the public, who are inquiring for the way of the Lord as never before."

VOL. XXXIX BROOKLYN, N. Y., MARCH 15, 1918 No. 6

THE GREAT SHAKIN G NOW IN PROGRESS

"Whose voice then shook the earth; but now he hath promised, saying, Yet once more I shake not the earth only, but also heaven. And this word, Yet once more, signifieth the removing of those things that are shaken, as of things that are made, that those things which cannot be shaken may remain."—Hebrews 12:26, 27.

Why should there be so many trying experiences in the church at this time? is a question often asked. A Scriptural consideration of the period in which we are living clearly answers this question. And we believe all who will thus prayerfully and carefully examine the matter will, instead of having their faith shaken by reason of the trials that are now upon the Lord's people, have it greatly strengthened. This is a time when all the consecrated should have confident assurance of their standing with the Lord. Since making a consecration, our hope has been for an abundant entrance into the kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Confident assurance of the establishment of Messiah's kingdom is that condition of mind resulting from believing the teachings of the Scriptures upon the subject. These teachings are clear, cogent and convincing; so that, thoroughly relying upon them, all doubt of an early establishment of the kingdom is removed.

Each one who will enter the kingdom must have his faith thoroughly tested. This test will demonstrate who is loyal and who is not. To be faithful means not only to know the truth and rely upon it, but to be loyal to the Lord—to Jehovah, to Christ Jesus, to the cause of truth and to the brethren. Loyalty to the very core will be required of those who enter in.

In chapters eleven, twelve and thirteen of the epistle to the Hebrews the apostle presents the most convincing argument concerning the establishment of the kingdom and the conditions to prevail immediately preceding that event. In the eleventh chapter he defines faith, without which it is impossible even to be considered in the class that is running for the prize of the kingdom. He defines the elements of faith, which, when once acquired, lead to confident assurance and loyalty. Beginning with Abel, the first martyr to shed his blood for the cause of righteousness, the apostle enumerates many of that array of strong characters, which reaches down to and includes John the Baptist, the last and greatest of the prophets. The crowning virtue of each of these approved ones, that which gained for him a good report before God, was his loyalty to the Lord and to righteousness. It would appear that the very purpose of the historical record in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews is to establish definitely in the mind of the Christian the fact that the fixed law of Jehovah approves only those who are fully loyal at heart; and the further fact that to prove himself loyal he must endure many trying experiences. He must fight against the foes of righteousness, and he must fight loyally to the end. Applied to the fully consecrated Christian, these principles prove that only the truly loyal at heart will be able to stand the great shaking that precedes the establishment of the kingdom.

The apostle waxes eloquent when he describes the virtues and achievements of the faithful ancient worthies. He tells us that time would fail him to tell of Gideon, Barak, Samson, Jephtha, David and other prophets, who by reason of their faith and loyalty subdued kingdoms; wrought righteousness; fought with wild beasts; quenched the violence of fire; turned armies to flight; endured mockings and scourgings, bonds and imprisonments; wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins, being destitute, afflicted, tormented; were stoned, sawn asunder, and slain with the sword; of whom the world was not worthy. All this they did that they might obtain a better resurrection. But they have not yet received the thing promised, God having prepared a better thing for the Gospel church. But when the church is perfected, then these faithful ones of old shall come into their reward.

WRITTEN AFORETIME FOR OUR ADMONITION

Why did the Lord cause the apostle to record these events so much in detail? Because they are experiences typical of the experiences that should come to the members of the church. Those trying things demonstrated the loyalty of the men of old, and prove that those who enter into the kingdom must possess a like loyalty. These faithful worthies were consecrated, but they had no opportunity to obtain membership in the heavenly phase of the kingdom; for the ransom sacrifice was not yet given.

The apostle's argument beginning with the twelfth chapter shows conclusively that the eleventh chapter was written for the very purpose of encouraging Christians in their trying experiences. There he says in substance: "Take into consideration the great trial through which the prophets and faithful worthies passed; and having in mind the promise of membership in the heavenly kingdom, let those experiences be a stimulus to you to endure cheerfully whatsoever the Lord is pleased to give you; having in mind also the Lord Jesus, who was the author and who will be the finisher of your faith, who rejoiced greatly in the prize set before him and endured all hardships and persecutions gladly. Take these into consideration, therefore, lest you become wearied and faint in your minds. You have not yet resisted to the end; but you must thus resist in order to prove your loyalty to the Lord."

What an encouragement to Christians at this time, who may be undergoing severe trials and tribulations! There is a disposition, when severely tested, to draw back and give up the fight. Not infrequently one will say: "I wonder why the Lord permits me to have such severe trials. Why does the church have to endure such trying experiences now?" To this the apostle answers in substance: 'You have forgotten that the Lord disciplines his called ones, and that he puts them through the necessary trials for that purpose. He does this because he loves his children.' It is added then that if we endure this discipline cheerfully, God deals with us as his sons. To emphasize the matter he says that if we are without this discipline we should have cause to be alarmed. It would be an evidence that we were not sons. In other phrase, trying experiences are indispensable to all those who come into the kingdom.

INAUGURATION OF MESSIAH'S KINGDOM AT HAND

"But," one asks, "why are these trials more severe just now?" The apostle answers that question, saying, "Ye are come unto Mount Zion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and church of the first-born, which are written in heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect, and to Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling that speaketh better things than that of Abel . . . . whose voice then shook the earth; but now he hath promised, saying, Yet once more I shake not the earth only, but also heaven."

In brief, we are told that when the feet members of the church approach the inauguration of the kingdom there will be a great shaking and testing. A picture or illustration of this was given at the institution of the Law Covenant at Mount Sinai. God directed the children of Israel through Moses, to purify themselves three days, saying that on the morning of the third day he would make a covenant with them through Moses as their mediator. On the third day, amdist a great convulsion of the elements, the covenant was made. This circumstance foretold that Messiah's kingdom would be inaugurated in the morning of the third thousand-year day. Moses vividly describes the events accompanying the institution of the Law Covenant. There was a great fire in Mount Sinai. A blackness settled down over the mountain, darkness and tempest, the sounding of trumpets, the voice of words; and so terrible was the sight and the sound that the people of Israel entreated that such should not be repeated to them. Even Moses said: "I do exceedingly fear and quake."—Exodus 19:1-19.

We are now well into the morning of the third thousand-year day. There is great darkness and blackness over the nations and kingdoms of the earth. The shaking is in progress. Kingdoms and governments are being shaken. The financial powers are shaken. The ecclesiastical elements are shaken. The temptations and trials that have come to the world of mankind must be met by those of the church yet in the flesh. The Lord has promised the faithful, however, that he will not suffer them to be tempted above their ability to endure; but that with each temptation or trial he will provide a way to escape.—1 Corinthians 10:13.

In the picture made at Mount Sinai, and mentioned by the apostle, only the things of earth were shaken; but now, he says that God will "shake not the earth only, but also heaven." This means that all things pertaining to the governmental institutions of the earth and all the ecclesiastical systems and those who are of the truly consecrated shall be shaken, "that those things which cannot be shaken [out] may remain." Clearly, the apostle states that the purpose of this shaking is not merely to shake out the disapproved, but to make manifest who are approved of the Lord, who are accounted worthy. Absolutely certain it is that the kingdom class cannot be shaken out, for the reason that if they could be shaken they could not be of the kingdom. This time of testing is the same to which the Lord Jesus referred when he said that he would send forth his messengers to gather out of his kingdom all things that offend and them which do iniquity. (Matthew 13:41) It is the time of final testing for the church; and this testing will make known who are faithful and loyal; all others will be shaken out.

ADMONITION FOR PREPAREDNESS

The evidence about us everywhere shows that the institutions of this world are going to pieces. Seeing, then, that this is "the end of all things," we should expect a shaking in the church; and if there should be no shaking, there might be reason for doubt as to the nearness of the Lord's kingdom. Instead of these trials bringing to us discouragement, let us look up and lift up our heads, because our deliverance draweth nigh.

To be forewarned means to be forearmed. The apostle admonishes those who are to engage in this fight and who are looking for entrance into the kingdom to take heed, fully fortifying themselves against this time of great testing. Knowing that some will become discouraged, faint-hearted, hang down their hands and be weak in their knees, the apostle said: "Lift up the hands which hang down, and the feeble knees; and make straight paths for your feet, lest that which is lame be turned out of the way; but let it rather be healed." The consecrated, being forewarned of the dangers besetting their pathway, are to take heed to the course they pursue and to be of good courage.

WAR OR PEACE ONE OF THE TESTS

All of Christendom so-called is at war. The ecclesiastical systems are involved. Based upon the apostle's reasoning that the church must encounter similar trials, we should expect a disturbance of the peace in the ecclesia of the Lord, the purpose of such disturbance being to make manifest who are loyal to the Lord and his way of action; and to shake out all others. To this end the apostle says: "Follow peace with all, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." In the ecclesias there are often some who are of a contentious spirit, who insist on having their way; and failing in this, seek to bring about strife and confusion. This often results in disruptions of the little classes, and many are surprised and astounded that those claiming consecration should take such a course. But we should not be surprised. "Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fire among you to try you, as though some strange thing had happened unto you." (1 Peter 4:12—Diaglott) Plainly, those who provoke difficulties and indulge in strife will sooner or later be shaken out, unless they mend their course.

Further we read: "Looking diligently, lest any man fail of the grace of God; lest any root of bitterness springing up trouble you, and thereby many be defiled." In this time of shaking, the heart condition of every one is being thoroughly tested. If there is any root of bitterness in the heart against any one else, and particularly against any of the brethren, the shaking will make it manifest. And if that root of bitterness is cultivated, it will quickly cause the one having it to be shaken out and to go into outer darkness. The apostle makes it clear that in order to have a full assurance of faith and a knowledge of the mystery of God, the Father, and of Christ, in whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge, it is necessary not only to put out bitterness but that the hearts of the approved must be united closely together in love. —Colossians 2:1-3.

SOWERS OF DISCORD AMONG BRETHREN

"God hath set the members in the body as it pleaseth him." The Father, through the Son, is executing his great plan. The Master of the harvest is attending to his business, and he knows exactly what to do. Any attempt on our part to assume a place that the Lord has not selected for us would necessarily result in his disapproval, would show a wrong condition of heart and would manifest a spirit of disloyalty, and subject such an one to such a severe shaking that might result in his being shaken out. Some who have been much favored of the Lord and given many opportunities of service, not being able to have their own will carried out with reference to the harvest work and the manner of conducting it, have deemed it their duty to go about the ecclesias and stir up strife and seek to draw away followers after themselves. We are not surprised that such a thing should take place. The Apostle Paul plainly warned against this. He first admonishes each elder to take heed to himself. He foretells that after his departure grievous wolves would enter, not sparing the flock, and then pointedly adds: "Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them." (Acts 20:28-30) Brother Russell, seemingly in prophetic language in approximately his last message to the church, repeated this warning. (Z. '16, p. 327—"The Hour of Temptation") We now observe its fulfilment; and instead of being surprised at it, we mark it as a part of the great shaking mentioned in our text.

With deep regret we here mention that the practice of some is to go about the classes and at first, by soft and smooth speech, assure the dear sheep that they have deeply the interest of the Lord's work at heart; and then suddenly they bring a tirade against the work as the Lord is conducting it through the channel that he has used for the past forty years. Some of the dear sheep become very much disturbed, and some are shaken out. This in another evidence of the great shaking now in progress. It would seem that any one who is loyal to the Lord and his cause and the brethren would not seek to disrupt his work; at least, if they could not see eye to eye with the manner in which it is being conducted, the proper spirit would prompt such to remain quiet or quietly to withdraw. Any other spirit would not seem to be the spirit of the Master.

What should be our attitude toward those who thus disturb the Lord's little ones? St. Paul answers: "Mark them which cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and avoid them." (Romans 16:17, 18) Should those who manifest a wrong spirit be the majority of an ecclesia, what, then, should be the attitude of the minority? To this the apostle answers: "From such withdraw thyself."—1 Tim. 6:3-5.

Let us see to it, dear brethren, that we do not indulge in strife. Whatsoever another may do, let us follow the apostle's admonition to live in peace and pursue a course of holiness, without which we shall not be permitted to see the Lord. We should manifest our disapproval of those who show a wrong spirit by calmly and quietly withdrawing ourselves. Let us refrain from indulging in acrimonious debate or discussion. "I will keep my mouth with a bridle while the wicked is before me." (Psalm 39:1) It matters little who is in the majority here. The question with each one of us should be, Am I heeding the instructions of the Lord and his inspired apostles? Let us keep uppermost in our mind at all times that we are now approaching the inauguration of the kingdom. We see that the prophetic words of the apostle are being fulfilled; and it behooves us to run patiently, to be of calm and sober mind, watchful and prayerful, permitting nothing to swerve us from the right course or to divert our attention from the great prize of entering and participating in the kingdom.

Our Lord, speaking of this time says: "The Son of Man will send forth his messengers, and they will gather out of his kingdom all the seducers and those working the lawlessness," i. e., those who are lawless.—Matthew 13:41, Diaglott.

TESTS ALONG OTHER LINES

A further admonition is: "Let brotherly love continue." Thus we are shown that this great shaking will severely test our love for the brethren. Love for the brethren means an unselfish desire to do good to the brethren and the putting of that desire into operation even at a sacrifice to ourselves, having in mind the building up of such an one in the most holy faith. Such desire, then, would preclude us from contending in the class for our own way; and, on the contrary, would lead us to be patient and kind with others; and should it become necessary for us out of good conscience to take a course contrary to others, then with calmness and sobriety we should state our position and leave it there, avoiding all controversy.

Some of the Lord's dear children in this time of great stress may be disturbed about their prospects of supplying things needful for themselves and dependent ones. There may be a temptation here to turn aside from active participation in the service with a view of amassing a sum of money. Some might even be induced to think that it would be proper to let their minds be turned into the channel of money-making to the exclusion of spiritual interests, and that they would give any overplus to the work of the harvest. But a warning is apparently given against such a course. The literal rendering of Hebrews 13:5, 6 is: "Let not your turn of mind be toward money-making, but be content with such things as you have; for himself hath said, I will in no wise fail thee, neither will I in any wise forsake thee. So then with good courage we can say, The Lord is my helper; I will not fear."

The real vocation of the Christian is to prepare himself for entering the kingdom—to be made "meet for the inheritance of the saints in light." Let the sentiment of our hearts find expression in the words of Brother Paul: "This one thing I do." Let our purpose be a single one, resolving by God's grace to prove our loyalty and fidelity to him, come what may.

THE GLORIES OF THE KINGDOM

Since the mind is the battleground, we do well to keep before our mental vision the exceeding great and precious promises and the glories that await those who love the Lord supremely. Let us, then, at times take a mental view of that which we are approaching. "Ye are approaching Mount Zion, the city of the living God," which means the kingdom of our Lord. That the peoples of earth and the creatures of heaven may ever appreciate the importance of this great kingdom, God will manifest his power and justice to all, inaugurating his kingdom amid a great time of trouble—afterward the peoples of earth will learn to know his love.

The faithful martyrs looked and hoped for the coming of this kingdom, but were not permitted to know the time or manner of its coming. The Psalmist sang of its coming, and those songs have gladdened the hearts of Christians throughout the Gospel age. Long has natural Israel hoped for its coming. Long has spiritual Israel prayed for its coming; and now with joy we can say, "The kingdom of heaven is at hand." In happy anticipation the members of the bride this side the vail await their change. We may reasonably expect the change and shaking. But this change will come in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye. One moment the creature will be corruptible; the next, incorruptible. One moment, in weakness; the next, in power. One moment, amid the clouds of blackness and darkness; the next moment, ushered into the glorious light of the divine nature. In our minds now we have gone beyond the vail and are about to behold the assembly of the glorious sons of God. For whom shall we first look?

THE JOYOUS INTRODUCTION

If a person who expected to be presented to an earthly king or potentate had a friend who was acquainted at that court, he would certainly desire first to consult his friend and receive some suggestions as to how he should appear before the court. Court functions are always attended with much formality and dignity. We are expecting to be presented to the great King of Kings, before whom all things must be graced with dignity and formality. Have we a friend who knows something about that great King? Yes, indeed. We are assured that all along our pilgrim journey we have been attended by our guardian angel. (Hebrews 1:14; Psalm 34:7) Speaking of the Lord's little ones, Jesus said: "In heaven their angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven." (Matthew 18:10) In describing the general assembly of the church of the first-born, the Apostle mentions first an innumerable company of angels. Pure, lovable, and beautiful in form and character must these be. They have kept a record of our journey and of our blessed assembling together. (Malachi 3:16) Anxious shall we be to become acquainted with these precious and beautiful creatures who have been our helpers along the way. May we not want their help further to know just what to do that we may be presented properly to the great King, in harmony with the dignity of his court? Having loved and served us along our earthly journey, surely they will be glad to direct us when first we reach the kingdom and we shall be glad to make their acquaintance. It would not seem reasonable that one born on the spirit plane would immediately have all knowledge; but he would have to acquire knowledge after reaching that condition. Hence the angels could be of assistance.

Next is mentioned the "church of the first-born," of which Christ Jesus, the great King, is the Head. Certainly we shall be eager to see our wonderful Lord—the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world, who redeemed us to God with his precious blood, and who has made it possible for us to aspire to membership in the kingdom and to enter the race-course. To us he is the dearest friend, our Advocate and our Deliverer. And now, entering the kingdom, the relationship of bride and bridegroom is about to be experienced in its completeness. How thrilling will be that time! Behold him! He is the fairest of ten thousand and altogether lovely. From the time, when by faith we first knew the Lord, we have longed for the hour when we might see him face to face. Then shall we express to him our devotion and love as we desire. Then "we shall be like him and see him as he is." (1 John 3:2) "In thy pressure is fulness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures forevermore." The joy of meeting the Lord cannot be approximated.

We shall next desire to see the various members of the Royal Family. Among these will be especially the apostles, who so faithfully served the Lord and left food upon which we have fed. Then we shall look for those whom we have known and especially loved here, and whom the Lord used as a special blessing or help to us. Every member who has come to a knowledge of the truth during the harvest period of this age will be especially anxious to greet Brother Russell, that faithful messenger of Laodicea. To us he has been the dearest friend amongst men whom we have seen; for the Lord used him to bring to us the message of the divine plan. Without doubt he will occupy a very honorable position in that Royal Family. Others who will compose that heavenly assemblage we shall be anxious to see, for they have been specially near and dear to us; some with whom we have had special opportunities of service, whose weaknesses and virtues, whose love and devotion to the Lord and his cause we have learned of, with whom we have passed through peculiarly fiery trials, which greatly blessed us. All the members of that family will be beautiful; for all will be like the Lord. But as star differeth from star, so shall the glory of one differ from that of another. What a glorious convention that will be!

THE GREATEST ASSEMBLY OF THE CHURCH

For some years during the harvest it has been the blessed privilege of many of the Lord's dear people to meet at conventions; and the sweet experiences there enjoyed have been but foretastes of the general convention which is so near at hand. At our earthly conventions the difficulty has been in separating after coming together. At the general convention there will be no seperation. In due time we shall become acquainted with all of the 144,000 perfect, beautiful, glorious beings. There will be nothing there to mar the beauty and sweetness of the fellowship with each other throughout eternity.

Next in order will be the presentation of the church before Jehovah, which will surely be attended with great ceremony and splendor. It is unthinkable that heaven is a place where every one is constantly beholding every one else. Surely Jesus and his bride will have a place prepared especially for them (John 14:2, 3) to which none other shall be admitted. Surely Jehovah inhabits a place of exclusion, where none other can gaze upon him except by his permission.

The day approaches for the presentation of the bride before the throne of God, and the Apostle informs us that to Jesus is granted this honor. In vision we behold an innumerable company of angels assembled before the throne of the all-wise, all-loving, eternal Jehovah. The trumpets of the heavenly heralds announce the approach of the Bridegroom with his bride. Music of surpassing sweetness fills the heavenly courts. Behold the conquering Hero approaching with his bride upon his arm! All honor and praise is due to him. Every knee in heaven is bowing to him and every tongue is singing his praise. He presents before Jehovah his bride, whom he has redeemed and blest. She is garbed in her robes of glory and beauty; "her clothing is of inwrought gold. She shall be brought to the King in raiment of embroidered work." (Psalm 45:13, 14) Thus the prophet in symbol describes her immortality and inherent beauty. "Faultless before the presence of his glory, with exceeding joy," shall he present his bride. (Jude 24, 25) Then the union is made complete.

"Oh, that will be a union such as earth has never known,
When Bride and Bridegroom are made one
Before the great white throne!"

The members of the church of the first-born, the bride of Christ, will be a special monument to the grace of God. She has been taken from an unrighteous race and exalted to the highest position in heaven. Of her the prophet says: "Thou shalt be a crown of glory in the hand of the Lord and a royal diadem in the hand of thy God." (Isaiah 62:3) And "in the ages to come God will show forth the exceeding riches of his grace in his kindness toward us through Christ Jesus." (Ephesians 2:7) And thus she will ever be the recipient of Jehovah's favor. Having in mind the blessedness, the glory and honor and the surpassing sweetness of being in that general assembly in heaven, who would not gladly undergo any and all kinds of shakings and testings that the Lord might see fit to give his people in order that they might have part in that kingdom! "Wherefore, we receiving a kingdom which cannot be moved, let us have grace whereby we may serve God acceptably with reverence and goodly fear."

In this time of the greatest crisis in the world's history, a time of the worst shaking yet known, a time of petty trials and fiery experiences that have come upon the Lord's people, if we keep in mind the glories of the kingdom we shall be enabled to endure; and forgetting the things behind, and looking to that wonderful thing before, to press forward along the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Beloved, let us think it not strange concerning these fiery times through which the church is passing, but rather, receiving them as a strengthener to our faith, let us with calmness and sobriety meet them, keeping a pure heart toward all; and soon we shall be forever with the Lord.

THY WILL BE DONE

We see not, know not, all our way
Is night,—with thee alone is day,
From out the torrent's troubled drift,
Above the storm our prayers we lift,
Thy will be done!

The flesh may fail, the heart may faint,
But who are we to make complaint
Or dare to plead, in times like these,
The weakness of our love of ease?
Thy will be done!

We take with solemn thankfulness
Our burden up, nor ask it less,
And count it joy that even we
May suffer, serve, or wait for thee,
Thy will be done!

And if, in our unworthiness,
Thy sacrificial wine we press,
If from thy ordeal's heated bars
Our feet are seamed with crimson scars,
Thy will be done!

SOME INTERESTING LETTERS

THE POWER OF THE TRUTH

DEAR BRETHREN:—

A returned missionary called at our store yesterday with the object of denouncing what he called Russellism. He told me that he had spent many years in India, and that in the district next to him, many Methodist missionaries had labored hard for many years, and the fruit of their labor was that they established in all forty churches. At the time he was speaking of, the missionary society's funds became low, and they were forced to recall these missionaries.

Just after this, Brother Davy [I. B. S. A. representative in India] and another native brother visited that district; and in a few weeks, the missionary told me, they took over all the forty churches, thus undoing the missionaries' arduous work of many years of trying to scare the poor natives into their belief of eternal torment and hell-fire! "What do you think of that for Russellism?" asked my informant; and I had to admit that it was fine. I told him I was glad that the poor natives had the fear of hell-fire removed from them. Surely this is just another example of the great force of the truth!

We thank you for the allotment of further territory, Alaska and the Yukon. We will endeavor faithfully to colporteur as much of this district as we can, all of it if possible.

With much Christian love, I am
Your brother and servant in the Lord, J. E.—Can.

READING WITH THE GREATEST INTEREST

The Secretary
THE WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY.

DEAR SIR:—

I am enclosing two Money Orders, amounting to $130.00, as a donation to the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY, with my best wishes for every success during 1918.

This includes the payment for the long-looked-for ——— Volume of the STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES, by Pastor Russell, which was sent to me by mail last July, and which I have just realized was not paid for. I am reading it with the greatest interest. Yours truly, C. H. M.—Can.

RESOLUTION OF LOYALTY

WHEREAS: Certain of the Philadelphia Ecclesia went out from us because they were not in harmony with the Lord's arrangements as represented in the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY and its present management, and

WHEREAS: We understand they intend to publish a resolution condemning the present management of the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY, to which the loyal members did not subscribe, and

WHEREAS: This might lead to an inference by those unfamiliar with the circumstances that the Philadelphia Ecclesia is not in harmony with the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY and its present management, therefore

BE IT RESOLVED: That the Philadelphia Ecclesia to the number of about 200 unanimously loyal to the Lord and his arrangements for carrying on his work under the present management of his channel, the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY, make known to all its unalterable fidelity to the Lord, its hearty co-operation with the dear feet members in spreading the message of the Seventh Volume and all kindred work, and its appreciation of the zeal and love displayed by our President and those associated with him.

BE IT RESOLVED: That realizing that none are perfect, "no not one," we believe that any mistakes that may have been made are of the head and not of the heart, and that the Lord will overrule all to the advancement of his cause.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED: That this resolution be sent to the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY with the request that it be given the widest possible publicity, and that our assurance be sent to our dear Brother Rutherford and all the dear co-laborers everywhere that daily at the throne of Heavenly grace, we, who continue to keep our Vow unto the Lord, members of the most wonderful prayer circle that has ever existed, remember the general interests of the harvest work and particularly the share which we are permitted to enjoy in that work, and also the dear co-laborers at the Brooklyn Tabernacle and Bethel and everywhere.

"RENDER THEREFORE TO ALL THEIR DUE"

DEAR BROTHER RUTHERFORD:—

I have wanted for some time to write you and to tell you of my great appreciation of the privileges afforded me in the Pilgrim service and the blessings received therefrom.

It has been my pleasure to attend no less than eight conventions since last fall, and the benefits I have received therefrom, and the hopes inspired, are beyond computation. It is, indeed, refreshing to see the enthusiasm manifested by the friends everywhere, and the avidity with which they have grasped the opportunities in connection with the Seventh Volume; and it is seldom that I meet any one now who is opposing himself in the work.

The love and general good feeling manifested at the meetings, especially at our little conventions, is distinctly noticeable. There is one matter, however, that I wish could be definitely impressed upon the minds of the friends everywhere, especially at the conventions, and that is the necessity of punctuality and orderliness in our meetings. I do not like to be over-critical; but I notice that it is as a general thing that the same individuals are invariably late in coming in, and they never seem to realize what a disturbing factor this is, inconsiderate and impolite. I verily believe in this respect we are apt to be the most disorderly and lacking in reverence of all Christian people. I am sure if these dear friends realized how inconsiderate it appears to others, and what a lack of reverence is shown, they would surely try to correct this unseemly habit of coming in after service is started, or leaving before it is finished.

If we were given the privilege of an audience with an earthly king or ruler, we would be very punctilious as regards the time and manner of our arrival; and we would surely have respect enough to wait until the interview was closed, and not unceremoniously turn our back upon the king and leave his presence whilst he was yet speaking. Surely, if this is the case with any that hold high positions here on earth, it ought to be more true when you have been granted an audience with the Lord, and that he is communicating a message to us through his servant, whoever that may be. In plain words, we should have respect enough and reverence enough for our Lord to come in time to our appointment and stay with him until the interview is ended from the opening hymn to the close of the Doxology.

Of course, to every rule there are exceptions. In the case of illness or having to catch a train, there might be some allowance made, but where brethren or sisters have any reason to believe that they must leave the meeting before it is ended, they should be careful and considerate enough to take their seats in the most inconspicuous place possible, so that their withdrawal would not cause any commotion.

I am afraid, dear brother, that instead of writing a letter, I got to sermonizing. However, if you will pardon the suggestion, I do believe some short and pithy article in THE WATCH TOWER might help us to overcome our slackness.

With much love and earnest prayers for the Lord's blessings and guidance to be with you, I remain,

Your brother in the Lord, E. D. SEXTON.—Pilgrim.

FOR SUCH LOVE SHE WOULD MAKE RETURN

DEARLY BELOVED BRETHREN:—

Greetings in his dear name! I was so amazed at the wonderful love of the Father and Son, in a re-reading of the first article in THE WATCH TOWER of July 15, 1916, that I cannot refrain from now expressing my gratitude that the dear heavenly Father used Brother Russell to make it so plain, that even my unworthiness can no longer cause me to doubt the love of these two Supreme Beings. Surely, "My cup runneth over!"

As I read that article I thought, "Oh, for such love I would make some return!" and I am reminded that I can, if I be willing. I want to have my will completely immersed into the Lord's will. I still have daily, yea, hourly evidences that I am His child; and I am determined by the Lord's assisting grace to hold on until the end.

The suggestion some time ago that we seek by prayer and study to develop more love has been pursued by me, and I am unable to express what a wonderful help I have derived therefrom. The Lord surely has answered my prayers! With my heart filled with love even some very crucial tests have been only "light afflictions."

In rereading my back TOWERS, I have derived so much more good than at the former reading! I had not the capacity to assimilate them all at once.

Yours in him, FARRELL F. GOSSIN.

MORE ENCOURAGEMENT FOR VOLUNTEERS

GENTLEMEN:—

Having read one of your pamphlets found in one of the railway depots I wish to state that it has never before been my pleasure to reach such a definite understanding with regard to a number of wonderfully important points heretofore a mystery.

I would like you to see to it that it will be made possible for me to receive regularly a copy of your BIBLE STUDENTS MONTHLY, as I am interested in the work coming from people who have not only been sincere and devout believers but also teachers and preachers of the gospel.

Yours very truly, A. O. SMITH.—Ind.

WOULD CORRECT THE RUMORS

DEAR BROTHER:—

Replying to your letter regarding rumors that have come to you about me and the questions respecting "that servant" in Matthew 24, and the "resurrection of the saints," will state: because of misunderstandings, rumors have started on these and other subjects, which when passed from one to another, soon become distorted from the original facts.

For your information, as well as for the information of any others, I desire to state:

1st. I fully believe that the expression, "that servant," in Matthew 24 and Luke 12, applied to Pastor Russell.

2nd. I do not deny the resurrection of the saints in 1878.

3rd. I may add that neither I nor any of my fellow directors in our present work are in any way opposing the SOCIETY.

Trusting these statements may stop these and other rumors from being further circulated, and clear up the present misunderstanding, I remain, Yours in his service, L. W. JONES, M. D.—Ill.

NOT IN HARMONY

DEAR BROTHER:—

I hereby withdraw as a shareholder of the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY, relinquishing any right to vote or be a member in the SOCIETY.

I am not in harmony with nor do I approve of the SOCIETY nor its subsidiary corporations as now conducted subsequent to the death of Pastor Russell,

Very truly years, F. H. MCGEE.—N. J.

[We commend the above as an honorable course for any who cannot conscientiously work in harmony with the SOCIETY.—Ed. Com.]

FALSE IMPRESSION DISSIPATED

Recent publications in the press concerning the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY of Brooklyn, are of so exaggerated, sensational and untruthful a character as to create a false impression in the minds of those ignorant of the facts. These publications made it appear that this great SOCIETY is rent by internal dissensions and that dissatisfaction has taken the place of harmony and that unity no longer exists.

We are in a position to state here that no such condition of affairs exists. There may be a diversity of opinion upon certain subjects, but that is only natural in an organization of such an extensive membership. Beyond this there is nothing to justify the sensational stories referred to. The SOCIETY is as strong today, if not stronger, than ever before in its history. The death of Pastor Russell, its great founder, was of course severely felt, as he was the controlling spirit of its destinies, the man who made it the great and dominating influence for good it is. But a worthy successor has been found in Mr. Rutherford, who was the close friend, confidant and chief aid of Pastor Russell. With the great ability with which he is endowed, Mr. Rutherford is continuing the work along the lines laid down by his predecessor, and already, as the result of his earnestness, energy and well-directed efforts, has succeeded in increasing the efficiency and usefulness of the SOCIETY.

This is the position of affairs today, no matter what any newspaper may say to the contrary. Needless to say that we rejoice that such is the case, because we recognize in this SOCIETY a great force for good. Through its instrumentality the Bible today is read by more people and read more intelligently, than ever before. It has made people think, it has caused them to moralize along the right lines, and has opened their eyes to the absurdity, and in some instances, the cruelty of certain old-fashioned dogmatic theologians.

FROM MERCANTILE AND FINANCIAL TIMES.—N. Y.

IN RE THE MENA FILM CO.

From time to time we receive letters concerning the Mena Film Company; and some of the dear friends seem to misunderstand the attitude of the Society toward that organization. We have heretofore published in THE WATCH TOWER the Society's position, but we now repeat that the Mena Film Company is a separate and distinct organization from the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY. Our Society has nothing whatsoever to do with the work of the Mena Film Company. We have no money invested in it now, nor have we had anything to do with this work in the past.

This does not mean that we are antagonistic to the Mena Film Company and would, therefore, want to do it injury. It is not our province to do injury to any one. We have no interest in the railroads of the land; yet we would not want to do injury to any railroad company. Investments in railroad securities are for purely selfish purposes. Investments which are for the purpose of teaching the Bible surely are much more commendable.

The WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY we believe was specially organized under the Lord's direction for the purpose of doing the harvest work of the gospel age, and nothing else. Thousands of Christian people, realizing this to be the mission of the Society, have gladly contributed their time and money and have joined with it in such work. We do not believe that any other organization in the world has been used or is now being used to do harvest work; hence all of our time, energy and money is spent in that behalf. We do not believe it to be pleasing to the Lord for us to engage in any other work except that supervised by the Society.

More than a year ago certain consecrated brethren believed that they saw a field opening to them for the teaching of the Bible through the medium of moving pictures. They organized the Mena Film Company for that purpose. Such was their privilege. They believe the Lord's blessing has been upon their undertaking. If so, then all Christians should rejoice with them. Anything that turns the people away from error and teaches them the truth is to be commended. The Mena Film Company has produced a picture different from any that is shown in any of the theatres throughout the world. The picture discloses the perfect man and woman in Eden, and the temptation of Mother Eve by Lucifer. Many episodes are then presented showing how Satan, from the time of Eden until now, has sought to thwart God's purposes and how, ultimately, Satan will be overthrown, and how restitution blessings will then come to mankind. Surely every true Christian rejoices to have the people receive the message of Truth relating to God's great plan. We cannot believe that Satan would wish this picture shown, because it exposes his nefarious methods and his ultimate downfall. We must conclude, then, that the Lord would be pleased to have it shown; because it shows the ultimate triumph of truth and righteousness. Just how much good will be acquired by the public who have no knowledge of the Bible, we do not know; but it may be that the Lord desires to use this for the purpose of turning the minds of the people back to the Bible. The clergy have turned their minds away from it and offer them no hope. The world is in great distress. If the Lord is pleased to bless the efforts of these brethren of the Mena Film Company, then we will rejoice with them.

KINGDOM NEWS

The evidences daily increase that the "dark night" is fast settling down. The new dispensation is coming in. It seems appropriate, therefore, to announce the kingdom, and to call the people's attention to the fact that millions now living on earth may never die, because the "times of restitution" will soon begin. The Society is issuing a statement which explains the opposition manifested against the message of the seventh volume, how it came to be suppressed, and the clergy's responsibility in connection therewith. A full explanation such as the friends and the public desire is given in clear terms. We are shipping the classes a supply of these papers for general circulation, in about the same quantity as was ordered for the No. 99 B. S. M. distribution. These papers are released for distribution immediately you receive them, and we pray the Lord's blessing upon the united efforts of the friends in this proclamation of our present position. Shipments will begin to be made within a few days.

YEAR'S MOTTO FULL OF MEANING

Many recent letters from friends throughout the country tell of the special help and comfort the 1918 Year Text has given them at this time: "The end of all things is at hand: Be ye therefore sober and watch unto prayer; and above all things have fervent love among yourselves." (1 Peter 4:7, 8)

We still have a small quantity of these mottoes, also postcards bearing this text, which the friends may have at half price while they last. The mottoes, 5c each; the postcards 10c per dozen, postpaid.

VOL. XXXIX BROOKLYN, N. Y., APRIL 1, 1918 No. 7

OUR SAFE REFUGE

"Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee; hide thyself as it were for a little moment until the indignation be overpast. For, behold, the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity; the earth also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain."—Isaiah 26:20, 21.

While standing upon the watch tower and beholding the terrible storm that is raging, the sea and the waves roaring, lashing with fury the more stable places of society; while hearing the rumbling thunder of the near approaching earthquake and beholding in the distance occasional flashes of destructive fire, what a wonderful privilege to be numbered among the people of God and to know that we are absolutely secure from all harm! Who can enjoy such a privilege as this? Jehovah, through his Word, answers, "My people."

What does it mean to be of the people of God? What are the requirements? Ah, it means much more than many think it means—much more, both on man's part and on God's part. On the part of man it means not merely the naming of the name of Christ and being a member of some organization which claims to be Christian. It means on man's part that he must recognize himself to be born a sinner and in need of a savior; he must recognize that Jesus Christ, by the grace of God, died and rose again for the purpose of redeeming mankind. Believing this, it means that man must take the further step of a full surrender of his own will to do the will of God—a full and complete consecration to the Lord. It means, further, full heart obedience to the will of God by daily taking up his cross and following in the footsteps of Jesus, and thus continuing faithful, even unto death. As the Psalmist expresses it, the thought of "my people" includes only those who have made a covenant with God by sacrifice. (Psalm 50:5) It includes all such consecrated and faithful children of God, however young or old, weak or strong, they may be, who possess a pure heart, firmly and resolutely fixed, and loyally obedient unto the heavenly Father.

WHO CONSTITUTE GOD'S PEOPLE

On the part of God it means that he has accepted us at consecration through the merit of his beloved Son, Jesus, and that he has begotten us anew to a hope of life, reserved in heaven for those who are kept by his power, through faith, even unto the end; that he has given to such his exceeding great and precious promises, which promises guarantee the faithful one that she shall be a partaker of the first, or chief resurrection. It signifies that in this present life we have the fatherly love, care, counsel, discipline and protection of God. It means that such may claim the precious promises in his Word, which are given for their comfort in the hour of distress or tribulation. All such have the glorious hope set before them of being forever with the Lord.

DIVINE WRATH UPON FALSE SYSTEMS

Thousands have been wrongly induced by the blind clergy to believe that they are God's people if they merely join themselves to some earthly organization and support the clergy, no matter what else they may do. These blindly follow the clergy, concerning whom Jesus said: "If the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch," in the great time of trouble that is now impending. (Matthew 15:14) Through all the age, God has permitted his people to be among these organizations, some being fed by good shepherds, while others were ministered unto by false shepherds. Until the harvest time the wheat class has been scattered among the tares, the true sheep among the wolves. In due time the harvest of the age came; the gathering and separating has been taking place, and now is about accomplished.

Throughout the age, "his people" have been in the midst of these great man-made organizations, the nominal Christian church, which God designates as Babylon (meaning confusion), but which men call Christendom (meaning Christ's kingdom). These systems have contained some true, loyal Christians and many who have been merely Christians in name. Toward these great systems which have appropriated the name of Christ and claimed to represent his teachings and his spirit, although possessing the spirit of the world, God is now manifesting his displeasure and soon will pour upon them his indignation. For some time he has been warning his people in these systems, saying, "Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues."—Revelation 18:4.

In the text, Jehovah addresses himself to "his people." More than twenty centuries ago, God's prophet, Daniel, took his standpoint at the hour in which the church now finds herself, standing on this side the vail. God foreknew the condition now on the earth. He foresaw the great time of trouble that would come upon mankind because of the unfaithfulness of that class of men to which he had committed the privilege and obligation of proclaiming his coming kingdom. Through other prophets also he spoke of this time of trouble. He indicated that wars would first come, to be followed by revolution and anarchy. The great Master himself referred to such a time, saying, "Upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth; for the powers of heaven shall be shaken," culminating, as he stated, in "great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be."—Luke 21:25, 26; Matthew 24:21.

God foresaw that sin would reach its fulness; that selfishness would ripen and go to seed; that a time of ill-will and hatred would prevail—a time of religious intolerance and persecution upon the faithful ones following in the Master's footsteps. In our text, the Prophet seems to express the thought that the Lord bides his time; and when his due time arrives, he says: "For, behold, the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity; the earth also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain."

GOD'S LOVING COUNSEL TO HIS PEOPLE

The Lord likens his people unto sheep. Sheep are defenseless creatures. Again he likens them unto children. Children are guileless. But his description of the trouble is so terrible that even the strong and full-grown might well be expected to quake for fear. Amid all the storm and strife and turmoil, God would have his children to rest in peace and quietness in his love. And so he causes his Prophet to say: "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee; because he trusteth in thee. Trust ye in the Lord forever; for in the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength." (Isaiah 26:3, 4) When one becomes a child of God and follows in the footsteps of the blessed Master and Lord, those of the world cannot understand him. They look upon him as they did upon the Master—as despised ones. God foreknew that the time of great stress would come and that some of his people would be in the midst of it; and so he caused his Prophet to write the words of the text, which seem to apply so appropriately at the present hour. There is an affectionate tenderness and sweetness in his words. Like a loving, gentle father, he says: "Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee; hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast." How loving of our Father thus to provide a refuge, and sweetly to invite his people to enter in!

Knowing the inability of his people to defend and protect themselves; knowing their desire for help and strength, he lovingly made provision by giving them numerous precious promises. Through another of his holy prophets, he put into our mouths the beautiful words of trust and confidence: "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. Therefore will not we fear, though the earth [the present order of society] be removed, and though the mountains [governments] be carried into the midst of the sea [overthrown by the turbulent sea of world-wide anarchy]; though the waters [peoples] thereof roar and be troubled, though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof. . . . The Lord of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge." (Psalm 46:1-7) With fatherly love he beholds his children, and "like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that reverence him." (Psalm 103:13) Lovingly he counsels them to full confidence and faith and to quiet trustfulness in his loving power and provision, saying to them "In quietness and in confidence shall be your strength."—Isaiah 30:15.

Poor, sin-sick world; groaning and travailing in pain, waiting and hoping for deliverance, but not knowing how it will come. God is not lacking in love for them. In the midst of the great tribulation, gladly would we call their attention to the loving provision that Jehovah has made. The great indignation of Jehovah now upon the earth is permitted for a good purpose. Vailed behind the clouds of his expressed indignation against the sins of men, he strikes with wisdom these heavy blows which will humble their pride to the dust and shatter their idols. Then he will pour in the balm of Gilead and commence their everlasting healing. Sweetly the Master gave expression to his Father's will when, in beautiful phrase, he said: "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." (John 3:16) Jehovah loved the world then, and his loving provision will soon be put into operation for them. Now he wields the rod for correction. Thus he shows his people his love for all mankind. While God's people, amid the storm, rejoice in the protection he has graciously provided for them, he would have them manifest his spirit toward the world. And while his blows of righteous indignation fall heavily upon the world, he would have his people point mankind to the cause of their calamities and to his, the only remedy. He would have them know that he is the mighty One who will rule the universe through his Christ, to bring blessings to the peoples and nations of earth. To them he says: "Be still, and know that I am God; I will be exalted among the nations; I will be exalted in the earth."—Psalm 46:10.

OUR JOURNEY

When first we knew the Lord and his gracious provision for the human race, our hearts responded with sincere joy. Born in sin, shapen in iniquity, having no right to life, children of wrath, without God and without hope, we wandered in the wilderness (of Babylon) in a solitary way and we found no place in any of her organizations in which we could dwell in peace and happiness. Hungry and thirsty, our souls fainted within us, and we cried unto the Lord in our trouble and he delivered us out of our distress. Then he led us forth by the right way, that we might go to the city (kingdom) of our everlasting abiding place. Feeling the warmth of his love, joy filled our hearts, because the Lord had satisfied our longings and filled our hungry souls with goodness. Then we saw not only a hope for the consecrated of the Gospel age, but a hope for all mankind in due time to turn away from the wrongful course and receive the blessings of restitution. Then was our mouth filled with laughter and our tongue with singing, and we said: "The Lord has made a wonderful provision for all, even the heathen." "The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad."—Psalm 107:1-10; 126:1-3.

Begotten of the holy Spirit, and having our minds illuminated, we perceived that we had entered the blessed condition of 'the Holy" and found that our heart's desire was beginning to be realized. As we have rested here, the words of the Psalmist have been sweet to us: "One thing have I desired of the Lord, that will I seek after; that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life, to behold the beauty of the Lord, and to inquire in his temple." (Psalm 27:4) Dwelling temporarily in the spirit-begotten condition, we have looked forward to the spirit-born state, when we may behold the Lord in all his glory, and worship him in the beauty of holiness.

Gradually the knowledge was brought to us that some severe trials awaited us on the journey. "For even hereunto were ye called, because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example that we should follow in his steps." (1 Peter 2:21) The sufferings of The Christ must precede the everlasting joy. Christ Jesus, the Head, was made perfect through the things which he suffered. Likewise must the members of the body pass through the fiery trials. In no other way could a loving, sympathetic high priest be developed. The journey has been interspersed with some trials and some joys, the Lord granting to us just the experiences needful to develop his people.

WARNED OF THE STORM

Graciously and lovingly our Father warned us of the storm coming upon the earth at the close of the age, to the end that we might be prepared for it, having our faith strong in him and in the power of his might. Wonderfully he has led us from time to time in greener pastures, and lovingly fed us upon the precious promises, giving us a clearer vision thereof, that we might grow stronger in him. Through his chosen servant, he, time and again placed before us the meat in due season. We were told and expected that the Seventh Volume of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES, the last of a series foretold in Revelation, would be given to us and that it would bring greater trials and sufferings, because it would greatly anger Babylon. We were forewarned, that we might be fortified in faith and in the love of God. More than twenty years ago, the Lord of the harvest, through his servant, called our attention to the fact (Z. 1898-95) that King Ahab and his queen, Jezebel, typified the civil and ecclesiastical powers; that Elijah typed the church in her closing days; that likewise Herod and his unlawful wife, Herodias, typed the civil powers and the apostate church, long ago unlawfully united; that Salome, the daughter of Herodias, typified united Protestantism, and John the Baptist the last members of the church upon the earth. We were advised to expect a fulfillment of these types in antitype.
Then it was that Brother Russell wrote:

> "It is altogether possible, indeed probable, we think, that John's course which brought him into conflict with Herod was in some degree typical of the course of the Gospel church in this present time; and of the course of events that may be expected. If it be a type, Herod would represent civil government, and the unlawful wife would represent the nominal church, which throughout the symbolic Scriptures is represented as a woman, Jezebel, etc. Should it prove to be a type by its fulfillment in antitype, the fulfillment will probably be on something like the following lines:
> "(1) A partial reunion of church and state. (This is now practically an accomplished fact.)
> "(2) In such case it would become the duty of the true church, the forerunners and announcers of the Messianic kingdom, to reprove the civil powers as well as the nominal church systems, and to declare their union unlawful—contrary to the Word of God.
> "(3) The effect of this would pretty surely be to awaken the animosity of both civil and religious powers; but it would draw out especially the animosity and venom of the latter.
> "(4) The church nominal, in her false position, would be anxious to stifle the reproofs and to destroy the reprovers, and the effect would be that the civil power would be induced to pass such legislation as would restrain the liberty of the faithful ones and hinder them from public utterances—as John was hindered by imprisonment.
> "(5) Herodias' personal influence being insufficient, it may subsequently be augmented by the influence of her daughter (united Protestantism) who will be so fully in sympathy with her as to become her tool in the destruction of the most loyal servants of God."

In due time we received the Seventh Volume, and it caused some fiery trials among the consecrated. Others joyfully grasped the pointed sword and used it. We behold the picture being fulfilled. Is it not now time for all who have been disturbed in their minds and in doubt as to what should be done to get their eyes opened to the real situation? Long have we known of the grudge held by Herodias. We have beheld now the dancing of Salome, and Herod has said to the John class. "No longer may you wield the Sword—'The Finished Mystery'—and press it against the gates of Babylon." A place typifies a condition. John was put in prison, and this would suggest that the John class would be restrained from the proclamation of the message of the kingdom. The John class is now in this condition. While in prison, John was in doubt as to whether or not Jesus was the Messiah. So he sent and asked him. Some are now in doubt as to whether or not the Lord is really here and that the end is here, and if the kingdom of Messiah is about to be made visible. Some are in doubt as to whether or not a mistake has been made with reference to the use of the sword. Jesus sent word to John that the blind were seeing, the halt and lame were being healed, and other miracles wrought. He did not say, "I am the Messiah"; but he gave the evidences that would prove he was. Now the Lord is saying to the John class, "Look up, lift up your heads, behold the fulfillment of my great prophecy set forth in Matthew 24. This is evidence that your deliverance is nigh. The kingdom of heaven is at hand. Rejoice!"

DOOR CLOSING—WINDS BLOWING

The evidence seems to point strongly to the fact that the door is closing. We are also seeing evidences of the winds being somewhat loosened, and these we may expect to be fully loosed and the great storm or whirlwind soon to be upon the world. Many are asking, "What are we to do when we see the door closing?" The words of Brother Russell, written more than eleven years ago, seem fittingly appropriate here:

> "The shutting of the door mentioned in one of our Lord's parables seems to imply something quite in harmony with the loosing of the winds when the sealing in the forehead shall have been accomplished. We cannot surmise just how this trouble will be precipitated and the door for further fellowship and promulgation of the truth be closed. It would not surprise us, however, if in some manner it would be accomplished through some governmental department. We cannot think now of what plea or pretext could be used to interfere with our legal rights and privileges under the law, but we are to expect that politicians will be ready at that time to obey the united voice of the people, not the voice of God, and that, however illegal or unjust the procedure, they would be prepared to put a stop to our work. When that time shall come we will consider it to be our duty to use all reasonable energy to maintain our legal rights and privileges and to keep the door open. When it shall close, in spite of our every endeavor, we will accept the result as being of divine providence and apply the Master's words, 'Thou couldst have no power at all over me except it were given thee from above.' (John 19:11)"—Z. 1907-148.

All of us realize that we are living in a peculiar time, a time in which the public mind is peculiarly affected. Few, indeed, are those who can understand our motive in withdrawing from the world and its various organizations and the nominal Christian church, to walk alone with God. Many are the reproaches which the Lord's people must endure for his sake. Let us not be dismayed with these trying experiences. Long ago the Lord warned that they would come, and now they are here. To us now he says: "Fear not, shut thy doors [of faith] about thee [and heed not the reproaches]; hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast."

PLACE OF REFUGE

The place of hiding is the secret place of the Most High, under the shadow of the Almighty. (Psalm 91:1-9) This secret place of the Most High, beloved, is the secret place of communion and intimate fellowship with God, through the blessed privilege of prayer and through faith in his precious Word and his promised providential care. Beautifully the poet has expressed it:

> "When the storms of life are raging,
> Tempests wild on sea and land,
> I will seek a place of refuge
> In the shadow of God's hand.
> He will hide me, he will hide me,
> Where no harm can e'er betide me;
> He will hide me, safely hide me,
> In the shadow of his hand."

Oh, how precious is this hiding place! What rest and refreshment we find in the midst of the commotion that is now upon the whole world and especially upon Christendom. We pity the poor, groaning creation. We rejoice to know that ere long God will bring order out of chaos, and peace to the people. It can come only in his own good way.

"FEAR NOT"

The day of persecution is at hand. The same religious intolerance manifested in the dark ages is still abroad in the land and is being manifested in a marked degree. Recently some of the Lord's dear little ones have been roughly treated. Their homes have been searched, without even a search warrant being presented, and their books and Bibles taken away from them. In some instances houses were broken into by force, in clear violation of the law. Some have been arrested and thrown into foul jails. The clergy have incited this work. They have openly charged from their pulpits and continue to charge that the International Bible Students Association is a pro-German organization, distributing "Hun propaganda under the cloak of religion." They have denounced the Bible Students as traitors and urged that they be prosecuted for treason. Verily, the spirit of Inquisition is in their hearts.

But, beloved, be not at all disturbed by these things. The same charge was laid against the Master by the same class of men. Evidently Jesus had in mind the present condition when he said: "If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you. The servant is not greater than his lord. If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you."—John 15:18, 20.

The Constitution of the United States guarantees that every man shall be free from search and his property from seizure, except upon presentation of a warrant, duly issued and served according to law. No person, not even an officer, has the right to go into the house of another and search it and take away his property unless he is armed with a warrant properly issued. "But they disregard the law," you say. Yes, even so. The inflamed condition of the public mind at this time is such that men go to all kinds of excesses. Usually it is the clergy that are the worst agitators. They stir up the people. But be not afraid, having in mind always that we are in the Lord's hands. The Lord speaks to his people that their faith might be strong. He desires that they shall have a child-like trust in him; and, that they may be encouraged, he bids them turn a deaf ear to the reproaches of men, saying, "Hearken unto me, ye that know righteousness, the people in whose heart is my law: fear ye not the reproach of men, neither be ye afraid of their revilings. . . . . I, even I, am he that comforteth you; who art thou that thou shouldest be afraid of a man that shall die, and of the son of man which shall be made as grass; and forgettest the Lord thy maker, that hath stretched forth the heavens, and laid the foundations of the earth; and hast feared continually every day because of the fury of the oppressor, as if he were ready to destroy? . . . . I have put my words in thy mouth, and I have covered thee in the shadow of mine hand, that I may plant the heavens [establish the new visible ruling powers] and lay the foundations of the earth [the new order of society], and say unto Zion [those tried and proved by these afflictions], Thou art my people."—Isaiah 51:7-16.

How marvelously the Almighty God has made provision for his little ones! He would not have one of his children whom Christ has made free to come again under the bondage of the fear of man, which bringeth a snare. He would have every one in Christ realize his liberty from sin and superstition, and his solemn accountability to God for all his thoughts and words and doings.

The child of God who is strong in faith will claim the promises and say: "The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? the Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid? . . . . Though a host should encamp against me, my heart shall not fear; though war should rise against me, in this will I be confident. . . . In the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion; in the secret place of his tabernacle shall he hide me; he shall set me up upon a rock." "The Lord is my rock, and my fortress, and my deliverer; the God of my rock; in him will I trust; he is my shield, and the horn of my salvation, my high tower, and my refuge, my savior; thou savest me from violence."—Psalm 27:1-10; 2 Samuel 22:2-4.

If we have come to the end of the harvest, if the dark night is here, then we may expect to be required to stand for a while. To such the words of the Apostle come as a consolation: "Wherefore take unto you the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and, having done all, to stand." (Ephesians 6:13-18) In this time of great stress it is especially needful that the Lord's people consider the value of the whole armor of God and have it all on. "Above all, take the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked." The experiences through which the church is now passing are real tests of faith. The heavenly Father now sweetly says: "Hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast." Some of the afflictions through which the Lord's people are now passing seem indeed grievous to be borne; but let us remember the Apostle's words, that these are light afflictions, enduring but for a moment, and working out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. (2 Corinthians 4:17) Having always in mind the glories that are before us, we can rejoice in the tribulation, knowing that we have a home, not made with hands eternal in the heavens, into which it will soon be our privilege to enter. And there, in the presence of the Lord, we shall have fulness of joy and pleasures for evermore. —Psalm 16:11.

THE KINGDOM HERE

It will be the policy of the International Bible Students Association to do legally all in their power to keep the door of opportunity open for the proclamation of the message of the Lord's kingdom; but when conditions become such that this can no longer be done in a lawful manner, then we will take it to be the Lord's will that we do no more. We know that nothing can happen to the Lord's little ones, except by the Lord's permission. "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper, and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord and their righteousness is of me, saith the Lord."—Isaiah 54:17.

We believe that the end of the harvest is here and that the kingdom of heaven is at hand. And if so, then shortly after the great time of trouble ends, restitution blessings will begin. Marvelous are the times in which we are living. Daily the evidence accumulates that the Lord is taking control of things. The public press announces that "by the close of the present month (March) Palestine, the ancient home of the Jews, will again, after a lapse of many centuries, be under Jewish administration. The Jewish Commission sent out by the English Zionist Federation, with the authority of the King of England and the British Parliament, left London a few days ago to take full charge of the reconstruction of the Holy Land and to lay the foundation of a new Jewish State. This commission will act not later than March 27, the eve of the Passover, the festival commemorating Jewish emancipation from Egyptian bondage." Forty years after the withdrawal of God's favor from the Jews, Judea was subjugated. Forty years from the beginning of the return of his favor to the Jews (1878), the Jews officially take possession of Jerusalem. They are returning to Jerusalem in unbelief. But soon the eyes of their understanding will be opened and they will recognize the Lord Jesus as the great long-looked-for Messiah.

The great Master plainly said that for the elect's sake the time of trouble would be cut short and that some flesh will be saved, being brought through the fiery trouble. Therefore, confidently we may say that some now living on earth will never die. What a wonderful privilege to announce that to the world at this time! Let every child of God do so, according to his several ability. Surely this is good tidings of great joy to the sin-sick, torn and bleeding world. Surely it is a wonderful honor and privilege to announce the kingdom. "How beautiful upon the mountains [kingdoms] are the feet of him [The Christ] that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace, that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation; that saith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth." (Isaiah 52:7) While the turmoil increases we can confidently announce the kingdom of the Lord and at the same time enjoy the blessed invitation of our Father: "Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers and shut thy doors upon thee; hide thyself as it were for a little moment until the indignation be overpast." With full assurance of faith, then, we can say, "Lord, we will trust in the covert of thy wings."

Glorious is the great Prince of Peace, taking unto himself his power to reign. Glorious his kingdom of peace and blessings, whose walls signify salvation, protection and blessing to all who enter it; whose foundations, laid in justice, can never be moved; whose builder and designer is God. It is in the light which will shine forth from this glorious kingdom of God that the nations and peoples of earth will walk up the highway of holiness, up to perfection and full harmony with Jehovah. By the eye of faith beholding the blessings that await us, with confidence and joy will we, by the Lord's grace, endure for a little while, until we shall see him face to face.

OUR STRONG INCENTIVE TO COURAGE AND CONFIDENCE

"Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need."—Hebrews 4:16.

The Jewish priesthood was, as we all know typical of the royal priesthood, Head and body, which has been developed during the Gospel age. Israel's high priest was a type of our great High Priest, Jesus Christ. The Jewish high priest made a typical atonement for his sins every year. Did he not possess sympathy for sinners, he would probably be very loath to undergo the experiences in which he risked his life, as he passed under the vail into the Most Holy, to sprinkle the blood of the sacrifice upon and before the Mercy Seat. This was a crucial test to the high priest. If he had done all the work in the proper manner, he would pass beyond the vail successfully and make the atonement. But if he had failed in any particular, the passing under the vail would mean his death. Hence the high priest was undertaking something which was fraught with the gravest danger and the most serious possibilities for himself.

The apostle points out to us that, while there may have been more or less sympathy in the high priests of Israel, yet our High Priest is the one who has special sympathy, special feeling for human weakness. He is not one of the hard, callous kind, who could not or would not appreciate the difficulties of those for whom his sacrifice was made, and especially for those who are seeking to be his followers, to walk as he walked. God's Word assures us that he is "touched with the feeling of our infirmities." He was "tempted in all points like as we [his disciples] are, yet without sin." This gives him special ability to sympathize with us.—Hebrews 4:15.

Some may inquire in what way our Lord Jesus could be tempted as we are, seeing that he was "holy, harmless, undefiled, and separate from sinners." We are to remember that this expression does not relate to the mere man Christ Jesus, but to our Lord after he had become our High Priest, after he had been begotten of God's holy spirit. He was not tempted in all points like as the unregenerate world are tempted; for he was not a fallen being, but was perfect, and was a new creature. Hence he was tempted, tried, as new creatures have ever since been tried. Jesus was never tempted to drunkenness, profligacy, debauchery, murder, theft, etc. Neither do his followers, as new creatures have any such temptations. If any of them are tempted along these lines, it is their perverted, fallen flesh that is tempted; it is because of a disordered and diseased condition of their mortal body resulting from a former life of sin or from inherited tendencies. These the new creatures must overcome by divine grace.

NEW CREATURE'S PECULIAR TEMPTATIONS

The temptations which are peculiar to the new creature, and to which our Lord was exposed are along the lines of loyalty to God, of trust in God, of persevering determination to obey him, however contrary to human inclination. They are temptations which would present themselves to any intelligent creature of God under like conditions. These were the lines of Jesus' temptations and testings.

During the period of our Lord's temptation in the wilderness the adversary suggested to him that he should attract the public, to arouse their awe and admiration for him, that he might thus become their king—not according to God's will, but according to worldly policy. If he had leaped from the pinnacle of the temple he would have been tempting God, and would have been guilty of presumptuous sin. God has never promised to protect any one who acts in violation of his will. Satan's quotation of Psalm 91:11, 12, presented to our Lord a temptation to misapply a Scriptural promise and to presume upon the Father's protection while seeking to gratify a desire for vain-glory, and to become a great king by a course contrary to God's purpose.

And so Jesus promptly said to the tempter, "Get thee behind me, Satan!" The Father had mapped out a certain course for the Son to follow, a course that would bring suffering and death. But it was the only pathway to glory. He has mapped out the same course for those who have covenanted to walk in Jesus' footsteps; and we are to be loyal, as he was. If we are not thus loyal, we shall surely not reach our goal. As temptation to take any other plan or way than the one which God had purposed was one of the special lines of temptation that came to our great Head, so will it be to each member of his body.

Our temptations will be as strong as were those of Jesus; i.e., they will be as strong for us as his were for him. As he was a perfect man, he was much more able to reason into these things and to see his way through them than are we. Yet the same principle is involved. Jesus had perfect flesh, perfect mentality; but he also had larger ambitions. We have imperfect flesh, defective mentality, and have not the same degree of ambition. And so the Father has seemed to arrange that all his sons shall have practically the same amount of difficulty and testing.

Jesus had all the vigor and energy of a perfect man, and naturally the greater dread of death. It is a comparatively small thing for a person who is weakened by disease and physical suffering, and who is drawing to the tomb, to say, "I am so tired, and would be so glad to die!" But for one who is enjoying perfection of life and vigor, to say, "Father, I yield up my life to thee," is a different matter. He would naturally desire to cling tenaciously to life, to shrink from letting it slip from his grasp.

THE TENDER SYMPATHY OF THE MASTER

We are glad to know that the Master was "touched with a feeling of our infirmities." Although he was free from the weaknesses of the flesh which hamper his body members, yet be mingled with men for thirty-thee years; and he saw and realized their condition. Moreover, "he took upon himself our weaknesses and sicknesses and bare our infirmities." In fulfilling the Father's will he gave out his vitality to the multitudes. "Virtue went out of him and healed them all." It is particularly recorded, in the case of the woman who had an issue of blood, that when she touched Jesus, he perceived that virtue [vitality, strength] had gone out of him. Thus was his own vitality depleted and some measure of their suffering transferred to his own person.

When we recognize the loving, sympathetic character of the one who died for us, who afterward ascended up on high, and who tells us that he will apply of his sacrificial merit on our behalf to make good for all deficiencies and unintentional sins, we may well take courage and press on in the race set before us. The realization of his tender love and care should enable us to lay hold with greater firmness upon the precious promises. Forgetting the things that are behind, and pressing forward to the glorious things just before us, let us run with patience and determination to win. Let us, as the apostle enjoins, "come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need."

The apostle's thought is not that we are to come with boldness, with self-assurance, but rather with holy courage, stimulated by the Lord's own invitation and promise. Let us come trustingly, pouring out our hearts freely unreservedly, to our Father, in the name of our beloved Advocate, our High Priest. Let us not be discouraged by our difficulties, by our trials and cares. We are to proceed onward in our heavenward way with confidence not in ourselves, but in the Lord. Although the Captain of our Salvation was without sin, yet because of is own experiences while he was a man, he knows all about our temptations, our struggles, our besetments. Knowing this we can come to him with greater courage, and tell him all about our troubles, realizing his perfect sympathy.

REASONS FOR COMING TO THE THRONE OF GRACE

For two reasons we should come to the throne of grace:

(1) That we may obtain mercy. There is not a son or daughter of Adam who has not done wrong. There is not a soul amongst the Lord's family who has not made many mistakes. The new creature does not meditate sin nor follow sin; but if any be overtaken in a fault, let him come with courage to the mercy seat, to the throne of favor, for mercy and pardon through our dear Redeemer. Let him remember that if his heart is still loyal and true, if he is grieved because of his trespasses, the throne of grace is open to him, for the Lord knows all about his difficulties.

If he does not thus come, he will be under a cloud, because of his wrong course and his failure to run quickly to his Father in heaven. He needs to have that earthborn cloud removed. But it will only grow more dense if he remains away from the mercy seat. The sin will remain; and thus another spot will appear upon his wedding robe, because of his lack of faith and obedience, in postponing the proper step of hastening to the Lord. The heavenly Father shows no mercy directly. All these applications of mercy and cleansing are made through the Son, our great Advocate and Head. We must come to the Father through the channel of his own arrangement, in order to obtain the promised mercy; for God himself has bidden us thus to come. In this way the cloud is entirely removed, and the erring one has full forgiveness of sins through the merit of our Savior.

(2) Additionally, we need to come to the throne of grace to find help for future times of need. We need to keep close to the source of strength. Our mistakes should prove helpful lessons to us, as we remember what a season of distress our previous error brought to us. Therefore when the child of God sees the temptation coming, he will flee to the place where he may find the needed supply of grace. Fleeing there, he obtains the help in advance of the temptation, and is kept from falling.

Whenever we find ourselves under temptations, however, we should lift our heart at once to our Father in heaven. Let us do this in full assurance of faith, realizing his love, his wisdom and his power to give us the needed assistance, and his willingness to make all things work together for our own good because we love him. Our appeal for help in such times of need will surely draw to us the ministry of the heavenly messengers; and we shall receive strength for righteousness, for truth, for purity, for loyalty. Thus shall we be victorious in every battle, and be crowned a victor at last.

BROOKLYN CONVENTION AND MEMORIAL

Upwards of 1200 brethren, mostly from points in the near Eastern states, have just been enjoying the privileges of a four-day convention with us in Brooklyn, terminating with the celebration of the Passover Memorial on the evening of Tuesday, March 26th.

Opportunities for fellowship between the meetings were pleasantly employed by all, so far as we have any knowledge, the recent manifestation on the part of churchianity of the disposition to persecute the International Bible Students in a more open and pronounced way has doubtless contributed much to a sharpening of appreciation and zeal on the part of the friends generally.

For many years the Lord's people have wondered whether or not each convention might be the last. Each one has always proved to be the last for some of the dear friends; but abundant evidence, not only from the Lord's Word, but also from corroborative occurrences pressing in upon us from all sides, seems to lend more basis for the hope that this might be the last in this vicinity, before the great convention beyond the vail.

The convention opened with an address of welcome by Brother J. F. Stephenson, the chairman. Probably not more than 700 were present at this meeting, on Saturday afternoon in the Tabernacle. Then followed a discourse by Brother T. H. Thornton, in which he compared our heavenly Father with a great and provident housekeeper. He contrasted God's method with that of man in the matter of establishing a household. He called attention to the fact that when a young man determines to get married the first thing he thinks about is a bride; the second thing he thinks about is his bride; and the third thing he thinks of is his bride. After the marriage has taken place he begins to think about the details of the home, children, and servants. All of these things God has provided for in connection with the nuptials of his Son and the glorified church.

In the evening a discourse was heard from Brother F. H. Robison on the subject of Gratitude. He reminded the friends how that all we have, whether on the natural plane or spiritual plane, comes from God, because he is the giver of every good and perfect gift. We are indebted to him for life, and for food, raiment and shelter to sustain even the imperfect life which we now have until we shall have learned the lessons and developed the character which will make us meet for the inheritance of the saints in light. Additional causes for gratitude were found in provisions which God has made for the delighting of our senses. These rightly used and directed will enable us to appreciate their giver and be a genuine help in the narrow way. Many other occasions for thankfulness were cited, touching more especially the opportunity for sacrifice, God's providential instruction, etc.

Sunday morning dawned bright and clear, bringing with it several hundred friends from surrounding cities and towns who could not find it possible to attend all the sessions.

At ten o'clock Brother R. J. Martin met with about 200 friends in the Bethel dining room, where also is located a baptistry, and reviewed for those present the Scripture teaching on the subject of baptism. Seventy-three were immersed at the close of this talk; 40 sisters and 33 brothers. While this meeting was going on at the Bethel Home, Brother Siewert delivered a discourse at the Tabernacle on the heavenly phases of the kingdom and its development.

At eleven o'clock Brother Stephenson talked to the friends on St. Paul's words: "I have fought a good fight; I have kept the faith; I have finished my course; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous Judge, will give me at that day." He dwelt on each phase of this text, showing that to keep the faith at all it is necessary to fight a good fight and that this fight itself is a fight of faith which, when properly waged, enables one to lay hold on eternal life.

Sunday afternoon was a public session, held in the Brooklyn Academy of Music, and announced to a considerable extent through newspaper advertising and house to house distribution of special announcements. The topic was: "The World has Ended—Millions now Living will never Die." A two-column report of the lecture was given in one of the Brooklyn papers on Monday afternoon. Many prayers had gone up for the success of this meeting, all made, we trust, with entire submission to the Lord's will. The Academy Opera House seats about 2200 people, but close to 3000 were admitted, about 300 being seated on the stage back of the curtain and other hundreds standing in the rear of the main auditorium and balconies. Government officers were present to take stenographic report of all that was said. It is expected that this topic will be used quite extensively by brethren who have ability for speaking in public, so that a report of the discourse will not be necessary here. The great audience showed intense interest for two hours, and many points were received with distinct approval, as manifested by continued hand-clapping on several occasions. Our Lord's great prophecy, containing testimony by which we would be able to discern the end of the world, was taken as a basis for the discourse. Everything pointed to a deep interest on the part of the public—save ecclesiastics and ecclesiastical "hangers on"—in the general subject of religious tolerance as necessarily involved in a meeting of this kind.

Sunday evening Brother R. H. Barber addressed the friends in the Music Hall of the Academy of Music. He traced the experiences of the "seed of the woman" and the "seed of the serpent," and pointed out how many attempts had been made, either overt or covert, on the part of Satan to make away with what he considered to be the promised "seed." Brother Barber's talk contained much encouragement to all in the narrow way at this present time. Considerable use was made of present day military terms and figures, even as the Apostle Paul used such similes in his time. He showed that we had entered the fight against the world, the flesh and the devil, and that it would be a fight to the finish, the complexity of the enemy making the situation a peculiarly difficult one and requiring extreme faith and obedience.

On Monday morning a most enjoyable Praise and Testimony meeting was held in the Academy of Music, followed by a discourse by Brother J. A. Bohnet on various items mentioned in the eleventh chapter of Revelation, but bearing especially on the "two witnesses." He showed that God had given these witnesses to the church for her benefit, that she might be developed in character sufficient to make her pleasing and acceptable in the sight of her Lord. He showed that while the Bible had been suppressed in large measure for the greater portion of the Gospel age, still God had preserved it despite all the efforts of the clergy class to effect its destruction. Finally the time came for the exaltation of the Word, and the Bible sprang into great circulation—it was "lifted up to the heavens"—it was exalted in the ecclesiastical heavens and came to be looked upon as a source of real authority by the most active denominations. He showed that efforts had been made in times past to destroy the Scriptures by the burning of Bibles or ordering their destruction. Some refused to burn their books, so that God's word was not destroyed, though the clergy had hoped for its extinction in the common languages.

Brother Bohnet was followed on the morning program by Brother R. O. Hadley, who spoke on the text, "Fight the good fight of faith; lay hold on eternal life." He dealt especially with the necessity of having on the armor of God in order to be able to fight effectually this great fight of faith. He showed the Scriptural significance of the various pieces which compose the armor, and indicated the value of each one, drawing also example from the Apostle Paul's own course of faithfulness as a "good soldier of Jesus Christ."

First in the afternoon Brother O. L. Sullivan spoke from the 46th Psalm: "God is our refuge and strength." Among many other things peculiarly dear to the Lord's people he gave expression to the love and appreciation which he had for his country, the country in which he was born and which had accorded him so many advantages. He stated that one of his sons was in the navy and the other in the army. He pointed out also that, though he loved his country, still God loved it much more than he was able to, and that Jehovah purposed to establish conditions which will guarantee that the high ideals of America will be far more than fulfilled when his glorious plans and blessings for the world are more fully inaugurated. He said that no claim should be considered superior to the claim of one's country—saving fidelity to God himself.

Brother Rutherford next spoke to the friends from 1 Peter 4:1: Forasmuch then as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourself likewise with the same mind." He suggested that the admonition "arm" implies combat with an enemy. This enemy was seen to be Satan and his minions of the air who seek to dominate in earth's affairs. Scripture testimony was adduced to show that the fallen angels would be released and bring about the great "whirlwind" which even now gives signs of approaching: further, that the bitter persecution which has broken out against the truth, and especially against the message contained in "The Finished Mystery," is doubtless attributable to these fallen spirit beings. As before the great flood they had liberties with mankind and dominated public thought and action, so that it was possible to say, "The thoughts of men's hearts were evil and that continually," so now as they are allowed more and more liberty with mankind we may expect that many of the heretofore recognized standards of right and decency will be pushed aside, especially by those who seek to persecute the Lord's most earnest and active saints.

Evidence pointed to the fact that the sealing of the servants of the Lord is about complete, and that thus the restraining influences hitherto exercised against the evil spirits would be withdrawn and that they would have to do with the great cataclysm upon the world. If permitted they would doubtless have wrecked the whole world long ago, but when now let loose the whole earth will be full of violence and there will be a saturnalia of crime and wickedness such as the earth has never known. But we should not be fearful under these conditions; for we have been forewarned and thus forearmed by the instructions of God's Word. We know that nothing can befall us except such as will constitute the proper test for our faith. Not only do these evil spirits seek to bring outward persecution against the Lord's people, but they attempt to bring dissension within the ranks. They suggest to one that he is not receiving proper honor in the church, not having enough recognition of his abilities and talents. This test comes chiefly upon those holding positions of responsibility and honor in the churches.

Thus is will be seen that the mind of the saints becomes a battle ground for the fallen angels in conflict with the holy spirit. They can be most thoroughly repulsed if we "love one another," and "in honor prefer one another." The safe mind is the humble mind, filled with appreciation for the privilege of doing the Lord's will. Indeed, the usefulness of any is measured by humility rather than by natural ability.

Just before the beginning of Brother Rutherford's discourse 22 children were presented by their parents to receive the Lord's blessing. This was understood as indicating the hopes and intents of the parents, rather than in any way obligating the children, when they shall become responsible.

Monday evening Brother Burgess addressed the friends in the Tabernacle chapel on the subject of "the hope which is an anchor to the soul." He dealt somewhat with the necessity of faith as a foundation for our hope. He showed that without hope there would be absolutely nothing accomplished, because it constitutes the stimulating element of our Christian experiences. If there were no hope or relief from suffering then it would be folly to engage voluntarily in it. The figure of a ship and the relationship which the anchor bears to its welfare was elaborated upon with profit.

Tuesday morning, Memorial day, after an enjoyable Praise and Testimony meeting Brother W. E. Van Amburgh addressed the friends, using the Tabernacle Chart as a basis for his remarks. He referred to the steps of consecration, the begetting and developing of the new mind, and to the fact that the flesh shrinks from the experiences suggested by the brazen altar in the court. But as the bodies of the beasts offered must be consumed, so all the powers and energies possessed by the Lord's consecrated people must be used up in ways that meet with God's distinct approval. He showed how that the greatest progress and keenest enjoyment is had in the Christian way if one does not look back at the altar, but keeps his face toward the holy of holies, as it is written of our Lord: "who, for the joy set before him, endured the cross, disregarding the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the majesty on high."

Tuesday afternoon Brother A. H. Macmillan delivered an enthusiastic address on the text, "The end of all things is at hand." He expressed it as a belief, and brought forth several Scriptures to lend strong color to his thought, that the gate of entrance into the narrow way is closing, and that the Jewish commission now taking possession in Palestine is further proof of the dispensational change. The glories and beauties of the heavenly state were dwelt upon; and all were encouraged to press forward with renewed zeal and vigor and be faithful unto death.

In the evening 1184 of the Lord's consecrated people assembled in the Music Hall to celebrate the memorial of our Lord's antitypical Passover. After singing Hymn No. 122 prayer was offered by Brother Van Amburgh. Then followed appropriate remarks by Brother Rutherford on the subject of the Passover in type and antitype. Song No. 98 was sung and then appropriate remarks were offered by Brother Van Amburgh on the significance of the loaf, followed by prayer by Brother Barber, that our hearts might be in the right attitude and that we might fully appreciate the privilege of partaking of this emblem. The assembly of friends was quietly served with bread, after which Brother Barber offered brief remarks on the significance of the cup. Brother Rutherford asked the Lord's blessing on the wine and upon the hearts of all assembled, that they might enter into fullest appreciation of its symbolic significance. After serving those present with the wine, true to the picture which our Lord established, we sang a hymn, No. 1, and went out, each heart solemn with the thought that this might be our last Memorial this side the vail, yet each willing to remain as long as the Father's love and wisdom indicates our presence to be most useful on the earth.

MUCH WORK TO DO

In no wise should the friends be discouraged because of the persecution that is being carried on against the promulgation of the Truth. In due time the right to circulate the Seventh Volume will be tested in the courts. In the meantime, we are asking all the Pilgrim brethren to have public meetings each Sunday in some well-located hall, each one using the subject, "The World Has Ended—Millions Now Living Will Never Die." The meeting should be well advertised; and to this end we are furnishing KINGDOM NEWS announcing that a free public lecture will be given in the vicinity soon on the above topic, and for the people to watch newspapers for place and date of the meeting. These should be widely distributed, that the people might have the truth concerning the unwarranted action taken with reference to the Seventh Volume and the persecution by the clergy. The Constitution guarantees that no one's property shall be taken without due process of law. Therefore, when officers demand possession of the Seventh Volume, they should produce a search warrant; otherwise the friends are under no obligation to deliver up the property. We advise the friends everywhere to store their supply of the Seventh Volume and not to distribute them until the question is adjudicated.

Be of good courage! Let every one be active and zealous now in arranging for public meetings. The adversary is desperately striving to thwart the Lord's purpose, but he cannot succeed beyond the Lord's permission. Let us be faithful and true and loyal to the Lord and to his cause.

VOL. XXXIX BROOKLYN, N. Y., APRIL 15, 1918 No. 8

ISRAEL'S DOUBLE ACCOMPLISHED

WONDERFUL PROPHECY FULFILLED—EVENT FORETOLD OVER EIGHTEEN CENTURIES AGO NOW TRANSPIRING—ANOTHER CRISIS IN HUMAN HISTORY

Dispatches from Europe state that a commission of prominent Jews left London last month for Jerusalem, expecting to arrive at the holy city on March 27th, the date of the Jewish Passover. To all students of history this is indeed interesting news; but it is doubtful whether many are aware of the fact that this event was foretold by three of the great prophets of Israel and that the very date of this return of the Jews to Palestine as representatives of a nation—the day of the Passover, 1918—was indicated by their prophecies, when viewed with the sidelight of secular historic records. Surely we are living in momentous times; yet only a few realize that today the God of Israel is actually taking part in the affairs of men, particularly with reference to his chosen people.

It is a noteworthy fact that the Jewish prophets clearly foretold many of the experiences of the children of Israel, including even those of the present time and of the immediate future. Most Bible scholars have recognized that a large portion of the Old Testament was written particularly to the Jews and for the Jews, and that the world's history is more or less associated with this peculiar people. But all may not have noticed the exactness with which the Scriptures outline Jewish history.

In Romans 11:25 St. Paul informs us that God caused blindness, or "hardness," to happen to the children of Israel until he had completed a certain work among the Gentiles, and had gathered from the Gentiles a sufficient number to fill of a pre-ordained class; and that at the completion of this selection from the nations his favor would return to the Jews, as mentioned in verses 26-28.

Notice, particularly, the following Scriptures: "For thus saith Jehovah, Like as I have brought all this great evil upon this people, so will I bring upon them all the good that I have promised them." (Jeremiah 32:42) "Behold, I will bring them health and cure and I will cure them and reveal unto them the abundance of peace and truth." (Jer. 33:6) "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will perform that good thing which I have promised unto the house of Israel and to the house of Judah."—Jer. 33:14.

From Amos 3:2 we learn that God's dealings with earthly nations have been principally confined to the children of Israel, saying, "You only have I known [recognized as my people] of all the families of the earth; therefore I will punish you for all your iniquities." In Exodus 19:5 and Deuteronomy 14:2 we read that God chose this nation "to be a peculiar people unto himself above all the nations that are upon the earth." From Deuteronomy 28:15-29 we are informed that God told the Israelites that if they would not obey his laws he would cast them out of his favor. Jewish history of the last twenty centuries attests to God's faithfulness in carrying out his purpose.

By comparison of the statements of three of the most prominent of the Old Testament prophecies, we learn that the Passover of this very year, 1918, is clearly indicated as a time for some special favor to be shown to the Jews. God advises that he is carrying out a plan of his own (Ephesians 1:11) and that this plan was purposed from the beginning. (Ephesians 3:11; Acts 15:18) In Isaiah 46:10, 11 we read: "Declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet accomplished, saying, My plan shall stand, and I will do all my good pleasure; . . . . I have spoken it, I will also bring it to pass; I have purposed it, I will also do it."

ISRAEL'S PERIODS OF FAVOR AND DISFAVOR EQUAL

Jeremiah 16:13-15 reads: "Therefore I will cast you out of this land [Palestine] into a land that ye know not, neither ye nor your fathers; and there ye shall serve other gods [mighty ones, rulers] day and night; where I will not show you favor. Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that it shall no more be said, The Lord liveth, that brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt; but, The Lord liveth that brought up the children of Israel from the land of the north [the lands north of Palestine], and from all the lands whither he had driven them; and I will bring them again into their land that I gave unto their fathers." Notice particularly the 18th verse, which says: "And first [before I do this] I will recompense [requite them for] their iniquity and their sin double [a repetition or counterpart in time]; because they have defiled mine inheritance [my land]." This prophecy implies very strongly that God would grant Israel his special favor for a certain length of time, and that if they were not faithful he would then turn his face against them for an equal length of time, for "a double," or corresponding period.

Zechariah 9:9 reads: "Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem; behold, thy King cometh unto thee: he is just, and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass." In verse 12 we read: "Turn you to the stronghold, ye prisoners of hope; even today do I declare that I will render [literally, turn back] a double unto you."

A CRISIS IN JEWISH HISTORY

Matthew 21:4, 5 identifies the incident mentioned in Zechariah 9:9; and our Lord's words in Matthew 23:37-39 identify Zechariah 9:12. Evidently, then, this is the beginning of the repetition count or double, the beginning of Israel's disfavor. Is it possible to locate the time when Israel's favor began? It is! The children of Israel were first recognized as the nation of Israel at the death of their father Jacob, as recorded in Genesis 49:28. The children of Israel were in favor with God from that event down to the time when they were cast off by Christ.

Referring to Exodus 12:40, 41 we have the statement that the sojourning of the children of Israel was 430 years. In Galatians 3:16, 17 the same period is mentioned as the time intervening between the covenant given to Abraham when he was seventy-five years old (Genesis 12:3, 4, 7) and the time when the covenant was made with the children of Israel at Mount Sinai. Therefore,

From the Abrahamic to the Law Covenant ..... 430 years

Abraham was 75 years old when the covenant was made with him, and his son Isaac was born 25 years later. (Gen. 17:17) 25 years

Isaac's son Jacob was born 60 years later. (Gen. 25:26) ..... 60 "

Jacob lived 147 years. (Genesis 47:28) .. 147 "

From the time of God's covenant with Abraham down to the death of Jacob would then be 232 years

Since the entire time of the sojourning was 430 years, and since Jacob died 232 years after the sojourning began, the time when the children of Israel were first recognized as a nation would be 198 years

Comparing Numbers 33:3 with Numbers 10:11, 12, also Numbers 13:3 and Joshua 14:7-10, we find the period of time from the Exodus to the division of the land of Canaan among the tribes of Israel was .. 46 "

Acts 13:19, 20 gives the period of the Judges as 450 years. (See footnote Wilson's Emphatic Diaglott) .450 "

Total length of Jewish favor from the time of Israel's first recognition as a nation to the time when Christ cast off that nation from divine favor.	1845 "

In Isaiah 40:2 the statement is made: "Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her that her warfare [marginal reading, appointed time] is accomplished [completed, filled out], that her iniquity is pardoned; for she hath received of the Lord's hands double [a counterpart] for all her sins." This statement assures Israel that the time would come when her double, or time of disfavor, equivalent to former favor, would be accomplished, and that then he would turn his face towards her again.

If the foregoing be true, then just 1845 years after their rejection by Christ (Matthew 23:37-39) we should expect some historic event indicating that divine favor was beginning to return to the Jews. 1845 years from the spring of 33 A. D. would bring us to the spring of 1878. We should, therefore, expect to find some occurrence in the early part of the year 1878, as an indication of returning divine favor. What do we find?

In June, 1878, the Berlin Congress assembled, Lord Beaconsfield (a Jew) was the chairman and the central figure, the dominating mind that changed the treaty of San Stephano between the Russians and the Turks, and so amended it that the Turks were to have suzerainty over Palestine and that the Jews were to be permitted some measure of liberty. This was the first act on the part of any of the nations of Europe to recognize in any way the Jews as a nation.

A REMARKABLE PROPHECY LITERALLY FULFILLED

Note Zechariah 8:23: "In those days it shall come to pass that ten men shall take hold out of all [manner of] languages of the nations, even shall take hold of the skirt of him that is a Jew, saying, We will go with you; for we have heard that God is with you." It is a remarkable historic fact that this conference was attended by representatives from the following eleven nations: Great Britain, Russia, France, Italy, Turkey, Austria-Hungary, Germany, Greece, Roumania, Serbia and Montenegro. Thus there were ten representatives in attendance at that particular congress, in conference with the eleventh, a Jew. (See Berlin Conference, International Encyclopedia.)

But did God have anything to do with the raising of a Jew, Lord Beaconsfield, to the premiership of England, in order that he might fulfill this very prophecy, and in overruling that exactly ten other nations should be represented, and that the chairman should be the Jew? And did God have anything to do with the bringing about of that conference in the spring of 1878, exactly 1845 years after he had cast the Jews into disfavor? It is surely a remarkable coincidence, to say the least! The Lord's casting off of the Jewish people was in A. D. 33; but it was just 40 years afterward that the nation was completely destroyed, and it has not been recognized as a nation since that time until our day.

THE DESTRUCTION OF THE JEWISH POLITY

We quote as follows from Cornil's History of the People of Israel: "On the 15th of Nisan, i. e., of April, in the year 73 A. D., the first day of the Easter festival, the same day on which, according to tradition, the God of Israel had led His people out of Egyptian bondage into freedom, the last bulwark of Israel's liberty had fallen, and Israel was delivered into bondage."

We quote again from the Jewish Encyclopedia: "Masada attained great importance in the war with the Romans . . . . With the fall of Masada the war came to an end, on the 15th of Nisan, 73." Again from Morrison's Jews Under Roman Rule: "The capture of Masada, a Jewish fortress on the southwestern shore of the Dead Sea, put a termination to one of the fiercest struggles recorded in history." (73 A. D.) Graetz's History of the Jews, Vol. 2, says: "Judea was not entirely subjugated; for three strong fortresses were still in arms: Herodium, Machaerus, and Masada . . . . The heroes agreed to this proposal (of their leader Eleasar) even with enthusiasm, and on the first day of the great Feast of the Passover (A. D. 73), after slaying their own wives and children, they all perished on their own swords." We quote further from Ewald's History of Israel, Vol. 7 (which is entitled "The Apostolic Age," and which Prof. Ewald makes to end with the year A. D. 73.): "Eleasar accordingly persuaded all his people during that night to kill their wives and children and then themselves, but to burn all their treasures first. The next day the Romans found only 960 dead bodies, whilst but two women and five children hid themselves in caverns and were discovered. The Easter of the year 73, just seven years [note the great awakening of interest among the Jews by Pastor Russell in 1910 and 1911 through his message to them at the New York Hippodrome, Oct. 9, 1910, and the wide distribution of 'Die Stimme' in 1911, just seven years ago] from the beginning of the great movement and forty years after Christ's crucifixion, saw this end of the whole tragedy." Josephus also relates that Masada fell on the 15th of Nisan, April, A. D. 73.

THE COMPLETION OF THE DOUBLE

The above quotations from standard authors show fully that the Jewish nationality came to an end just forty years after their rejection of Christ and their being cast off as a nation.

As the first sign of their rejection was the declaration of our Lord just before his crucifixion and was just 1845 years prior to the year 1878, would not their recognition at the Berlin Congress imply the first indication of God's returning favor to them again as a nation? If we are right in these conclusions, then just 1845 years after the spring of A. D. 73 we should expect some national recognition of the Jews as a nation. Does it not seem peculiar at least that such a national recognition should occur this year exactly 1845 years to the month after their complete downfall? Does this not seem to imply to all reasoning students that divine providence is now taking a hand in the affairs of the nations? Would it be reasonable to account for all these exact correspondencies as merely coincidence—especially since we find them so accurately stated in his Word?

The Apostle Paul in the eleventh chapter of his letter to the Romans declares that the falling away of the Jews from divine favor meant the passing of that favor to the Gentiles. Recall the expression in Luke 21:24: "And they shall fall by the edge of the sword and shall be led away captive into all nations; and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." Is it not reasonable to suppose that the returning of favor to the Jews means to some extent the withdrawing of that favor from the Gentiles?—Romans 11:15.

Ezekiel 36:19-36 tells of the wanderings of the Jews and of the restoration of their land to its pristine holiness: "I scattered them among the heathen and they were dispersed through the countries: according to their way and according to their doings I judged them. And when they entered unto the heathen whither they went they profaned my holy name when they said to them, These are the people of the Lord and are gone forth out of his land; but I had pity on mine holy name which the house of Israel had profaned among the heathen whither they went. Therefore say unto the house of Israel, saith the Lord God, I do not this for your sakes, O house of Israel, but for my holy name's sake which ye have profaned among the heathen, whither you went, for I will take you from among the heathen and gather you out of all countries and bring you into your own land, and ye shall dwell in the land that I gave to your fathers, and ye shall be my people and I will be your God and I will also save you from your uncleanness and I will call for the corn and will increase it and lay no famine upon you, and I will multiply the fruit of the tree and the increase of the field, and ye shall receive no more reproach of famine among the heathen. And the desolate land shall be tilled, whereas it lay desolate in the sight of all that passed by and they shall say, This land that was desolate is become like the garden of Eden, and the waste and desolate and ruined cities are become fenced and inhabited. Then shall the heathen [Gentiles] that are left round about you know that I the Lord built the ruined places and planted that that was desolate. I the Lord have spoken and I will do it."

Ezekiel 37:25: "And they shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob, my servant, wherein your fathers have dwelt, and they shall dwell therein, even they and their children and their children's children forever, and my servant David shall be their prince forever."

Who shall say what great events may not soon follow the opening of this door for the Jews, and who can accurately appreciate all the blessing which is to come!—Jeremiah 3:17, 18.

"ABOUT MIDNIGHT"

"About midnight will I go out into the midst of Egypt."—Exodus 11:4.

The children of Israel, in bondage to Egypt, were typical of the Lord's people of this Gospel age long in bondage to "Christendom." Egypt symbolizes that condition of middle-course, compromising worldliness which the word "Christendom" represents, and which is identified by our blessed Lord as "the great city, which spiritually is called Sodom [typical of carnal union of church and state] and Egypt, where [in its ancient form of pagan Rome] also our Lord was crucified" (Revelation 11:8) and where the crucifixion of the Lord's body members has steadily progressed. Historic precedent and Scriptural suggestions combine in warranting the expectation that this crucifixion, this crucial testing is about to reach its final climax in oppression and persecution by nominal church and clergy, acting underhandedly or openly through the civil powers and the mob.

Several divinely arranged plagues came upon Egypt, because of the unwillingness of Pharaoh, the king, to release the Hebrews from bondage. Spiritual Israel has long sought to be released from the world, the flesh and the devil, and especially from doctrines of devils, which constitute the strength of antitypical Egypt's oppression. Pharaoh, king of Egypt, typified Satan, prince of this world, order of things, or civilization. Several times Pharaoh had promised to let the Hebrews go, but each time "the Lord hardened Pharaoh's heart, so that he would not let the people go."—Exodus 10:20.

"And the Lord said unto Moses [Christ, Head and body], stretch out thine hand [instrumentality or applied power] toward heaven [the powers of spiritual control, the clergy and churches of Christendom] that there may be darkness [lack of knowledge, understanding, love] over the land of Egypt [Christendom], even darkness that may be felt. And Moses stretched forth his hand toward heaven [the churches who claim to represent heaven]; and there was a thick darkness in all the land of Egypt [all in the condition of worldliness, including worldly-minded clergymen] three days." The great world war among those nations that call themselves Christians has upset all theories about "Christ"-endom being Christian. During the first three years of the war from August, 1914, to August, 1917, there was no understanding by the world of the true, the Scriptural, significance of the war; all were in darkness, and remained so for three years, until enlightenment came to them through the Lord's divinely appointed channel, the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY, in the shape of the message in Volume Seven of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES.—Exodus 10:22.

"They saw not one another [comprehended not what they really were in God's sight] neither rose any from his place for three days." In proof of the antitypical correspondency we quote Rev. Joseph H. Odell, D. D., in the February, 1918, "Atlantic Monthly"; "The vastest of the world's tragedies came, and the church was not its interpreter. The majority of the clergy have not even sensed the unique strategy which the convulsed and confused world conditions have made possible. There are ministers everywhere who are still busy building their denominational fences and feverishly staking their sectarian claims." Neither worldly clergyman nor layman "rose from his place for three years"—from the old somnolent condition of dumb dogs (D.D.'s) and blind guides (B.G.'s). (Isaiah 56:10; Matthew 15:14) The utmost darkness, something keenly and anxiously felt, pervaded the houses —churches—of the worldly-minded. "But the children of Israel [the Lord's truly loyal and devoted people] had light in their dwellings [understood the significance of the world war and the things to come, in all their humble ecclesias.]"—Exodus 10:23.

OUR CONSECRATION MUST BE COMPLETE

"And Pharaoh called unto Moses and said, Go, ye, serve the Lord; only let your flocks and herds be stayed; let your little ones also go with you." (Exodus 10:24) In sacrificial rites the animals used typified the offerers of those animals; and the offering of an animal by a person pictured that person's consecration. Ecclesiasticism (the product of Satan, antitype of Pharaoh) is willing enough for the Lord's people, old or young in Christ, to serve Jehovah, if only they will not offer themselves in complete consecration, in such a consecration as consumes their very bodies on the altar of sacrifice.

"And Moses said, Thou must give us also sacrifices and burnt offerings, that we may sacrifice unto Jehovah, our God. Our cattle also shall go with us; there shall not an hoof be left behind; for thereof must we take to serve Jehovah our God; and we know not with what we must serve Jehovah, until we come thither."—Exodus 10:25, 26.

Those who start to serve the Lord cannot determine in advance just what or how much must be done; yet the sincere ones purpose to hold nothing back, but to make a complete consecration of themselves and all that they have.

"But Jehovah hardened Pharaoh's heart, and he would not let them go." (Exodus 10:27) No type can be taken to teach a doctrine; and we have no reason for supposing that Satan has intended to co-operate with God, but in the last analysis it must be admitted that he has done nothing which can successfully oppose the divine program. In this case it was really not God's purpose to have the people of Israel go until he had instituted the Passover type. Likewise, in recent years, it may be that Satan has been willing to make away with the Lord's people; but divine providence intervened, because the hour was not yet come. But whether this part of the account was intended to be pictorial or not we do not know. At all events the people did not go. Several times during the harvest, during the progress of what seemed plagues to Christendom, the Lord has permitted his people to think that they were about to go. Brother Russell expected the church to go beyond the vail in 1878, 1881, 1910 and 1914—just as with Elijah, who went with Elisha to four different places before he was actually taken. These seeming disappointments were divinely foreknown, "his appointments."

"And Pharaoh said unto him, Get thee from me, take heed to thyself, see my face no more; for in the day thou seest my face thou shalt die." (Exodus 10:28) Satan, speaking through ecclesiasticism is peeved at the claims of the Lord's people, and manifesting his displeasure, begins to utter threats.

"And Moses said, Thou has spoken well, I will see thy face again no more." (Exodus 10:29) The face is a sign of either favor or disfavor. The time has passed when the Lord will any longer show any favor toward ecclesiasticism, or when ecclesiasticism will show favor or intentional benefit to the Lord's people.

THE ANTITYPICAL TENTH PLAGUE

"And the Lord said unto Moses, Yet will I bring one plague more upon Pharaoh [ecclesiasticism] and upon Egypt [Christendom—it will be to them an unprecedented plague]: afterwards he will let you go hence [this suggests that the church now expecting to go to her Lord will not be disappointed this time; she shall surely be delivered after the divinely appointed last plague]: when he shall let you go, he shall surely thrust you out hence altogether." The final visitation of God's displeasure, amounting to the utmost expression of his wrath against Christendom, will so disturb the antitypical Egyptians that they may not confine themselves to words of chastisement against the Lord's people, but they may feel impelled to visit upon them tangible persecution, possibly culminating in imprisonment—through those civil powers which are deceived as to the true nature and character of the persecutors—and in bloody persecution and death. (Exodus 11:1) Here again we must not let the type teach us something which is not plainly stated elsewhere. This is no time to think "panicky" thoughts or to pose as martyrs unduly. But our Lord suffered such things, so did several of the apostles, so have many of the most noble and faithful of this age. We, as servants, are not better than our Lord and we have no just claim for better treatment. The Lord's will be done.

"Speak now in the ears of the people, [proclaim the message of the seven STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES to all Christendom], and let every man borrow [ask] of his neighbor, and every woman of her neighbor [every truth ecclesia of the neighboring churches] jewels of silver and jewels of gold [the Lord's jewels in the great company and in the little flock]."—Exodus 11:2.

"And the Lord gave the people favor in the sight of the Egyptians. [In some respects, for their truly Christian character and lives the Lord's people are appreciated by the peoples of the world.] Moreover the man Moses [Christ, the Head] was very great [highly esteemed, theoretically] in the land of Egypt [throughout Christendom] in the sight of Pharaoh's servants [clergymen] and in the sight of the people" [the laity of Christendom].—Exodus 11:3.

"And Moses [Christ through the STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES] said [to ecclesiasticism], Thus saith the Lord, About midnight will I go out into the midst of Egypt." (Exodus 11:4) If the year in which the remaining church is expected to begin, in a more pronounced degree, to go beyond the vail is the year beginning October, 1917, then midnight of that day (reckoning the days from sundown to sundown) would be about January, 1918. God, through some special word of indignation and wrath, may be looked for as going throughout the heart and center of Christendom about that time.

"And all the firstborn [the firstborn of Egypt were set aside to the deity and typified the clergy-ministers of Christendom, set apart, in fact to the social service of Christendom] in Egypt, shall die [cease to be firstborns, or be divinely declared not to be what they claim and think themselves to be], from the firstborn [the leading ecclesiastic, the pope of Rome] of Pharaoh that sitteth upon his throne [Satan the god of priestcraft, is prince or ruler of this evil world], even unto the firstborn of the maidservant that is behind the mill [down to the lowliest minister of the smallest church grinding out its religious provender] and all the firstborn of beasts."—Exodus 11:5.

"And there shall be a great cry throughout all the land of Egypt, such as there was none like it, nor shall be like it any more." (Exodus 11:6) This suggests the final cry in Christendom. If this interpretation be correct, the next thing to look for is an unprecedented outcry on the part of Christendom's clergy and laity against the divine pronouncement which declares the end of Egypt's firstborn, the clergy, priestcraft, ecclesiasticism, churchianity.

"But against any of the children of Israel shall not a dog move his tongue against man or beast; that ye may know that Jehovah doth put a difference between the Egyptians and Israel." (Exodus 11:7) How manifestly is God's favor with his own people who are dwelling in peace of heart amid a world in arms, and how markedly is his disfavor upon the people of Christendom torn with the sword and threatened with revolution, famine and pestilence!

"And all these thy servants [the people of Christendom] shall come down unto me [Christ] and bow themselves down unto me [they will beseech the Lord's people to let their evil practices and institutions alone], saying, Get thee out, and all the people that sit at thy feet [Marginal reading. In this the day of the wrath of the Lamb, Christendom will want none of Christ or his members to trouble them any longer with their divinely authorized plagues]; and after that I will go out. [Not till things have taken some such a turn will the feet members of Christ pass over to 'be ever with the Lord']. And he went out from Pharaoh in a great anger." (Exodus 11:8) As the church turns her back forever in disfavor upon ecclesiasticism it is with a message containing all "the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God" (Revelation 19:15), in Volume Seven of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES.

THE EFFECT OF THE PLAGUE UPON EGYPT

"And Jehovah said unto Moses, Pharaoh will not hearken unto you; [ecclesiasticism will not heed the awful warnings of Ezekiel and Revelation, as shown forth in 'The Finished Mystery']; that my wonders may be multiplied in the land of Egypt." (Exodus 11:9) As a result of Christendom's failure to turn to God in a godly repentance, the words of God against her will be promptly and wonderfully fulfilled.

"And it came to pass that at midnight [about January of the year 1918, through the enormous circulation of 'The Finished Mystery' and the distribution of 10,000,000 'Fall of Babylon'] Jehovah [through his Word] smote all the firstborn in the land of Egypt [declared plainly and explicitly that the clergy, who insist on being first and foremost in everything, are really in his estimation dead, incapable of doing what they claim to do, because of iniquities which they committed in the dark ages and for which they are still unrepentant] from the firstborn of Pharaoh that sat on his throne unto the firstborn of the captive that was in the dungeon [literally, 'house of the pit,' church of eternal torment]; and all the firstborn of cattle."—Exodus 12:29.

"And Pharaoh rose up in the night, he, and all his servants, and all the Egyptians [if the suggestive interpretation set forth in these comments be right, then we may consistently look for an uprising of all worldly "Christians" because of and against the pronouncements of the wrath of God]; and there was a great cry in Egypt [such a cry has begun to rise from the clergy, who are seeking to enlist the civil powers in a campaign of persecution of the Lord's people]; for there was not a house where there was not one dead." Not a church where there was not a clergyman against whom this divine denunciation had gone forth.

"And he [ecclesiasticism] called for Moses and Aaron by night, [before the spring or summer of 1918] and said, Rise up ['rise to heights unknown,' to 'sit with Christ in the heavens'] and get you forth from among my people, both ye and the children of Israel; and go, serve Jehovah, as ye have said."—Exodus 12:31.

"And take your flocks and your herds, as ye have said [the Lord's people are completely consecrated], and be gone [there will be nothing the antitypical Egyptians will wish so heartily as to see gone forever those in whom is the present word of God. The wish may be father to their thought to hasten the going of the spiritual Israelites]; and bless me also." (Exodus 12:32) When an antitypical Egyptian is in peril or fear, he seeks a blessing from somewhere.

"And the Egyptians were urgent upon the people, that they might send them out of the land in haste [aroused nominal churchianity may be inclined to find quick means to expedite the passage of the Lord's people beyond the vail] for they said, We be all dead men." (Exodus 12:33) It was the atrociously false alarm, "If we don't kill them, they will kill us," that caused the weak king of France to sign the wicked order for the utter destruction of all Protestants on St. Bartholomew's Night.

"And the people took their dough before it was leavened [the Lord's people have the unadulterated truth, the divine Word, without any of the leaven, evil teachings, traditions and theories of the clergy], their dough [marginal reading] being bound up in their clothes upon their shoulders." (Exodus 12:34) The pure word of truth is bound up with the robe of Christ's righteousness and with the promises, with which the Lord's people are invested.

"And the children of Israel did according to the word of Moses [of Christ, as set forth in the Bible]; and they borrowed of the Egyptians jewels of silver and jewels of gold, and raiment; and Jehovah gave the people favor in the sight of the Egyptians, so that they lent unto them. And they spoiled the Egyptians." (Exodus 12:35, 36) When the Lord's people go forth from Christendom to be ever with their Lord, they will take with them every Christian having the Lord's spirit; not a single one of the Lord's jewels will be left in Christendom when the approaching exodus of the last members of the body of Christ is finished.

"It is a night [the dark night even now settling down] to be much observed unto Jehovah [it will be memorable forever] for bringing them out of the land of Egypt [out of the bondage of Christendom]; this is that night of Jehovah to be observed [remembered] of all the children of Israel in their generations."—Exodus 12:42.

COLPORTEUR AND PASTORAL WORK

The great amount of advertising the public press has given Pastor Russell's books recently, particularly "The Finished Mystery," has doubtless created a demand for these books; and while it is not proper at this time to circulate "The Finished Mystery," we advise the friends to colporteur for the other six volumes, especially the fourth, and to carry on the pastoral work, bearing the good tidings to as many as desire to hear.

JESUS FACES BETRAYAL AND DEATH

[With the exception of the first paragraph (printed below) this article was a reprint of that entitled, "Two Passover Memorials," published in issue of September 15, 1914, which please see.]

Nothing connected with the Gospel narrative appeals to human judgment more forcibly than does its simplicity. The fact that the weaknesses, failures and stumblings of the apostles themselves are faithfully narrated, without apologies or excuses or attempts to gloss over the defects, shows a sincerity, a truthfulness of intention, very rarely found in other writings. Nowhere is this characteristic more conspicuous than in today's lesson, which records the shameless perfidy of Judas and the weakness of the remaining eleven. In our Lord's darkest hour these all forsook him and fled, seeking personal safety; and one of them subsequently denied knowing him. Had the writers of the Gospels interjected excuses and explanations for their course, they would have been excusable; but the narrative is really stronger as it stands, and we are perhaps inclined to furnish excuses for them which we might have been loath to receive had they offered similar ones for themselves.

JESUS ON THE CROSS

[The last twelve paragraphs of this article were reprinted from article entitled, "Smitten of God—Afflicted," published in issue of November 15, 1914, which please see.]

JUNE 16.—MARK 15:22-39.

AN ILLEGAL ARREST—AN INIQUITOUS TRIAL—OUR LORD TAKEN BEFORE THE ROMAN GOVERNOR—CONDEMNED BY NEITHER PILATE NOR HEROD—THE ROMAN GOVERNOR'S ATTEMPTS TO FREE OUR LORD—LEADERS OF RELIGIOUS THOUGHT COMPEL PILATE TO ACT CONTRARY TO HIS DESIRES—WHY DEATH BY CRUCIFIXION WAS NECESSARY IN OUR LORD'S CASE.

"Truly this man was the Son of God."—Verse 39.

Following the institution of the Memorial Supper our Lord and his disciples sang a hymn, and then went out of the city to the Mount of Olives, a distance of perhaps a mile. Apparently several important lessons were given to the disciples en route to Gethsemane. These are recorded in John 15-17.

After they had arrived at the garden of Gethsemane, the Master left eight of the apostles near the entrance, and went a little further into its shades with Peter, James and John. All were to watch, to be on guard against something which was to occur, something of which Jesus knew, but which seemed most improbable to the apostles. It was midnight, and they were accustomed to retire early. The strain of the evening, and the weighty lessons which the Master had imparted, reacted in drowsiness; and they slept, instead of watching and praying. This was true even of the three nearest the Master.

Wishing to be alone in his communion with the heavenly Father, our Lord went a stone's throw farther into the shadows by himself. Time and again, in the agony which fell upon him, he came seeking human sympathy, only to find his dearest ones oblivious in sleep. Well had it been expressed by the prophet: "Of the people there was none with me." (Isaiah 63:3) He trod the winepress of grief alone.

For three and a half years he had devoted his life to the doing of the divine will. Had he done that will completely and absolutely, in a spirit that had been pleasing to the heavenly Father? More than this, could he, would he, pass through the experiences of the next few hours with proper courage, proper faith, proper obedience? Or would he fail, and lose his all in death?

STRENGTHENED FROM ON HIGH

Had the Master failed, there was no one to make good for him. He had no advocate. His failure meant, not only death everlasting for himself, but the loss of the great privilege of uplifting humanity from sin and death conditions through the Messianic kingdom. The Master's personal eternal life was in the balance that night in Gethsemane, as also were all his prospects of glory, honor, immortality and high exaltation at the right hand of the Father, far above angels, principalities and powers. No wonder the Master, realizing all this, was overwhelmed with the thought! No wonder he wished that if the divine plan could be otherwise worked out, he might be spared from the special tribulations and horribly misrepresenting experiences just before him!

Apparently the ignominy of being crucified as a malefactor and blasphemer, a terrible experience to one of his refinement and nobility of soul, was the thing which he prayed might pass away. He did not ask that he might not die; for he knew that for this very purpose he had come into the world, and that only by his death could the penalty resting upon the human family be removed. He had not thought of escaping death, but he hoped that the Father might have some way of eliminating the special ignominy of that hour. Yet even in his greatest distress the Master prayed: "Nevertheless, not my will, but thine, be done."

St. Paul assures us that the Master's Gethsemane experiences were linked with the fear of remaining in the death condition, fear of not being accounted of the Father as worthy of that glorious resurrection which he had been promised. (Hebrews 5:7) He was saved out of death, however; and more than this, he was given the assurance by the Father that he would be saved out of death. This is the explanation of the statement that an angel of God appeared to him in the garden and strengthened him, gave him the Father's assurance that he had been faithful up to that moment, and that the divine blessing would be with him during the hour of trial just at hand. From that moment onward, all the fear and agony were gone. If the Father's blessing and smile went with him, he could endure all things come what might.

VIOLATION OF LAW AND OF JUST PRINCIPLES

Our Lord was arrested, neither by Pilate's nor Herod's instructions, nor by their soldiers. His arrest was made at the instance of the Jewish high priest and his associates, who had concluded that his life and ministry were inimical to their plans and projects and to what they considered to be the best interests of Judaism. The murder of Jesus was plotted in advance. But the murderers sought some excuse for their conduct, as all murderers do; and being politicians, they also sought an outward form or semblance of justice, having regard for the opinions of others of more tender conscience than theirs.

Under the charge of the priests were men who served as policemen in the Temple and its precincts. Armed with maces, swords and lanterns, these servants of the priests followed Judas, who knew beforehand that on this particular night Jesus did not intend to go to Bethany as usual, but had purposed to rendezvous with his disciples in the Gethsemane olive orchard.

After they had apprehended our Lord, the Temple police brought him directly to the house of Annas, a superannuated high priest, whose son-in-law Caiaphas officiated in his stead. Annas attempted an examination of Jesus, but met with little success, and so turned him over to Caiaphas, whose house was in the same courtyard. There, at probably three o'clock in the morning, the Sanhedrin had assembled.

The plot for Jesus' death was deeply laid. The hours between the time when Judas had left Jesus and the other apostles at the Passover supper and the hour of this trial were spent in gathering the members of the Sanhedrin from their various homes throughout the city. Conditions were considered desperate enough to justify all this arrangement for the murder of him who "spake as never man spake." This was because he taught the people, because his teachings were weakening the power of the Scribes and the Pharisees and of the traditions of the elders.—John 7:46; Matt. 26:55.

The theory of erroneous religious teachings is that ignorance and superstition are necessary to the preservation of sacerdotal power. Thus always has error hated the truth. Thus always has darkness hated the light. Jesus' condemnation was merely another triumph of darkness over light. Yet it was a triumph only in appearance; for the divine plan was thus being carried out. The great atonement for sin was thus being arranged for, the result of which will be the ultimate overthrow of Satan, sin and death, and the world-wide establishment of righteousness and truth forever.

THE CASE BROUGHT BEFORE PILATE

As quickly as possible the high priest and representatives of the Sanhedrin hurried Jesus to the Prætorium, asking Pilate to condemn him. The Roman governor inquired as to what charge they had against Jesus. They evasively answered that of course he was a wicked man, worthy of death, or they would not be there accusing him.

Pilate reminded them that under Roman usage they had great liberty in dealing with all disputes of a religious kind, that he was not posted in the tenets of Judaism, and that therefore they should deal with the case themselves. The priests responded that they knew this, but that they had no power to inflict the death penalty. Thus they revealed the depth of their wickedness. They had deliberately plotted to have Pilate inflict the death sentence upon an innocent person.

Then they began to accuse Jesus, claiming that he was perverting the nation, turning it away from loyalty and obedience to the Roman government, that he was telling the people not to pay taxes to Cæsar, and that he claimed to be the Jewish King. These were serious charges, and the Roman governor was in duty bound to consider them. We note that these were altogether different charges from those brought against Jesus at the trial before the Sanhedrin. Although the charges were false, our Lord made no defense. He knew that the time had come for him to die; and he would not attempt to turn aside that which he knew to be a part of the divine program for him.

OUR LORD ACCUSED OF TREASON

The wicked shrewdness of the Sanhedrin is very manifest, in preferring the charge of blasphemy for its effect upon the people, before whom they desired to appear very zealous for the divine law, while they brought an entirely different, but equally false, set of charges against him before Pilate, who cared nothing for their religious opinions. The accusation made before Pilate involved the charge of treason, a charge most likely to arouse the indignation and wrath of the Roman rulers. The Jewish religionists accused our Lord of seditious agitation, of prohibiting the payment of tribute money and of assuming the title of king of the Jews, and thus apparently of conspiring against the Roman government.

While the second charge was entirely false (Matthew 22:21), the other two had an appearance of truth; and to these were added numerous petty individual charges. But to none of them did our Lord make reply, so that Pilate marvelled that he made no effort at self-defense in the midst of such danger.

Pilate's several efforts to release his innocent prisoner who, he discovered, had been delivered to him because of envy, were unavailing before the boisterous mob. These, instigated by their rulers, loudly clamored for our Lord's death, and that by the most ignominious and cruel method, crucifixion, so that his memory should ever be covered with infamy.

Then Pilate, who was influenced more by considerations of policy than by principle, delivered Jesus to be scourged. Yet at the same time he protested the innocnce of his prisoner, and washed his hands in token of his own innocence in thus delivering up to them this just person. Not until he himself was pressed by the mob with the threat that he could be reported to Cæsar as one hostile to the government and a traitor to his trust in encouraging sedition and conspiracy aganist the government did he relinquish his efforts to save Jesus.

OUR LORD'S LAST EARTHLY JOURNEY

The Master had been on a constant strain, without sleep, from the time he had sent his disciples to prepare the Passover. This period had included the trying experiences connected with the Passover and the institution of the Memorial Supper, the journey to Gethsemane, the agony and physical weakness there, the trial by the Sanhedrin, the trials before Pilate and Herod, the scourging, etc. All this must have been an enervating strain on him. Now, condemned to crucifixion by those for whom he had sacrificed his heavenly home and the glory which he had with the Father before the world came into existence, he was additionally required to carry his own cross. He did so until his weakness under its weight hindered, and a passing farmer was compelled to assist.

PERSECUTION CRYSTALLIZES CHRISTIAN CHARACTER

"All that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution."—2 Timothy 3:12.

When St. Paul wrote the words of this text he seemingly had in mind the very closing experiences of the church on earth. While it is true that the principle of persecution of those who live godly in Christ Jesus has applied throughout the entire age, yet in a marked degree was that to be expected in the end of the harvest period. We reach this conclusion because in the context the apostle says: "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come; for men shall be lovers of their own selves, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient, ... heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof."

The best lexicographers define persecution as the act of doing injury to another; to beset with cruelty or malignity; to harass; especially to punish by loss, pain or death for adherence to a particular creed or mode of worship. Men with inflamed minds are apt to persecute any one who does not agree with them. Some have been persecuted by being put in prison; others by slander, libel, misrepresentation, which the Scriptures describe as bitter words shot out like arrows by the wicked. (Psalm 64:2-4) As civilization has advanced, methods of persecution have changed. In their turn, Lutherans, Baptists, Methodists, Presbyterians and others were persecuted; and in course of time have themselves become persecutors.

We are now living in a day when gross, vile persecution is not so popular as in olden times. The state of the public mind has much to do with determining the character of persecution inflicted, and which will be tolerated. At a time when the country is in stress, many take advantage of the situation to persecute those with whom they do not agree. They do this cunningly by misrepresentation. As an illustration, recently the clergy of the various denominations, Catholic and Protestant, have represented that members of the International Bible Students Association are engaged in the spreading of "Hun propaganda," and are in the employ of the German government. Nothing would have a greater tendency to inflame the public mind than such a charge. If the charge were true, it would be a heinous crime. Therefore, if the charge be false, it is a great crime to make such an accusation. These misrepresentations, carried by the clergy and their emissaries to petty public officials and by these officials reported to officials in higher station, often result in action which amounts to persecution. For instance, Dr. Case, of the Divinity School of Chicago University, recently published a statement referring to the work of the International Bible Students Association, saying, "Two thousand dollars a week is being spent to spread their doctrine. Where the money comes from is unknown; but there is a strong suspicion that it emanates from German sources. In my belief, the fund would be a profitable field for government investigation." This, stimulated by similar charges from other nominal churchmen, evidently had something to do with Army Intelligence officers seizing the books of the Treasurer of the Society. The authorities doubtless thought that they would find some evidence to substantiate the charge that our Society is working in the interest of the German government. Of course, the books disclose nothing of the kind. All the money used by our Society is contributed by those who are interested in preaching the Gospel of Jesus Christ and his kingdom, and nothing else.

The wide publication by newspapers throughout the country of the fact that the Society's books have been seized had a tendency to excite suspicion in the minds of others. In many places, local officers have attempted to prohibit the holding of any kind of meetings, either public or private, for the preaching of the Gospel. Certain local officials have required every one to bring in their books and deliver them up. This, of course, is without legal authority, because the Constitution guarantees that no one shall be compelled to surrender his property except by due process of law. All of this persecution really emanates from a class of religionists who hold views antagonistic to the Scriptures and the Society's teachings.

Our information is that the Department of Justice has instructed the District Attorneys to prosecute any one who sells "The Finished Mystery" from and after the date the order was made (some time in March). There was nothing in the order authorizing local officers to interfere with Bible study, nor with public meetings which are held for the purpose of preaching the Gospel. It is in no wise a violation of law to meet together to study the Bible; and, acting under advice of legal counsel, we are advising all the Bible classes to meet in the usual manner and continue the Berean studies, including the study of Volume VII. We advise, however, that the objectionable pages (247 to 253, inclusive) be removed from all books, in order that there may be no semblance of violating the law. It is the duty of everyone to be law-abiding; but frequently men who think they are enforcing the law are themselves violating it. No Bible class should teach, instruct, or otherwise do any act or thing that will interfere with the Government's prosecution of the war. Our business is to declare the message of the kingdom.

The Scriptures and the facts both lead us to the conclusion that the persecutions will increase. Those who make themselves the persecutors are to be pitied. In a measure we can sympathize with them, because once our eyes were blinded. We should have patience with these and speak to them kindly, trusting in the Lord to give us opportunity to open their eyes to the true situation.

In the text the Apostle declares that some form of persecution will attach to any one who lives a godly life. This infliction of injury may come directly upon an individual, or he may suffer indirectly by being associated with others who are persecuted. (Hebrews 10:32-34) Whatever injury is done to one of the Lord's little ones, all who are of that same class will likewise suffer. "Whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it." (1 Corinthians 12:26) With consolation we remember the words of the Master: "If ye were of the world, the world would love his own; but because I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you. . . . All these things will they do unto you for my name's sake, because they know not him that sent me." (John 15:19-21) In a general way, every person who is in opposition to the Lord's consecrated may be said to be of the world. All who have not the spirit of Christ are of the world. The clergy, manifesting the spirit of the world, are of the world; and history, from the beginning of the Christian era, shows that they have been the chief persecutors.

LIVING GODLY IN CHRIST JESUS

It is those who live godly in Christ Jesus that suffer persecution. To live godly means to live after the manner which God would approve; that is to say, to live in opposition to sin and in harmony with righteousness. It means to live according to the divine law, practising the golden rule. In the world there are two classes: one marching under the banner of Satan; the other, under the banner of the Lord. The first class is in darkness, not out of choice, but because they were born that way—all coming under the influence of the "prince of the power of the air." The other class have escaped from darkness only by reason of a full consecration to the Lord. Such have come into Christ.

In some respects the world has attained a very good standard. As a general rule the laws are very just; but because of the imperfection of man it is impossible to rightly construe and enforce the law. Every Christian realizes this and deeply sympathizes with those who are striving to enforce the law.

Our text applies to those who live godly in Christ Jesus, which means more than keeping the Ten Commandments. It means that such a one must be fully consecrated to the Lord, begotten of the holy Spirit being accepted by the Father in the Beloved One; and then that such a one should seek faithfully and consistently to carry out the vow of consecration even unto death. Such consecration vow requires the one making it to follow faithfully in the Master's footsteps. His commission is to make proclamation of God's message concerning the establishment of his kingdom. It is his present duty to announce that the kingdom is here. All who do this will be opposed by those who say, "The kingdom is not here; things are going on as they were from the beginning."

A true patriot is one who is willing to lay down his life in the interest of his fellow-men. The Christian who consecrates himself unto death is a real patriot, because he has agreed to be faithful to the Lord even unto death, in order that he might be associated with Christ Jesus in uplifting and blessing the human race. He, then, is the real friend of the people. Those who take a view opposite to his and who have not the mind of the Lord, readily become persecutors. Thus we see that those who are in Christ Jesus and who live godly have a difficult and narrow path to travel. Those who faithfully follow in the Master's footsteps bring upon themselves persecution. All who are loyal to God and to his message of truth must thus suffer. They must expect persecution.

A good soldier is one who patiently endures the hardships incident to the performance of his duty. The good soldier of Christ Jesus must learn to endure patiently all hardships and persecutions that come to him. (2 Timothy 2:3) God in his perfect wisdom knows what is best for his children; hence the persecutions that come must be for the good of his children.

WHY PERSECUTION IS PERMITTED

The word "suffer" as used in the text means to experience. Therefore, he who will live godly in Christ Jesus is certain to experience persecutions as a part of his lot. The Lord Jesus and the apostles all suffered persecutions at the hands of those who did not understand them. Misunderstanding is generally the cause of persecution. Had the Jews known that Jesus was the great Messiah whom they were expecting, doubtless they never would have persecuted him. Did the world know the real purpose of Christians who are striving to follow in the Master's footsteps, doubtless the world would never persecute them. God's arrangement is such and the Scriptures everywhere tell us that those who belong to the royal priesthood will suffer persecution if they live godly, and that those amongst this class who do not experience such suffering may be sure they are not living according to God's will.

It is clearly God's will that in the end of the age his vengeance should be declared against the Babylonish systems. (Isaiah 61:1-3; Jeremiah 51:6) It is unpopular to take this course, but since it is the will of God, those in Christ must call attention to the manner of Babylon's deception. They must call attention to the fact that the Lord's kingdom is at hand, and that the great King is now present and will soon set up his kingdom. Any other course would be ungodly. Following the right course brings what the Apostle said it would—persecution.

The conditions imposed upon the church are designed by the Lord to be crucial tests of loyalty to him and the principles of righteousness. Trials, difficulties and persecutions are useful in demonstrating whether or not our covenant of consecration is really from the heart. Those who have merely made a covenant with the Lord by words, and not in truth and in fact, in due time will be sifted out. The faithful and loyal ones God has promised shall be made joint-heirs with Jesus Christ in his kingdom. It is for this reason that the church was called while evil still was permitted to reign in the earth and while the majority of mankind were under the blinding influence of the adversary. Now it seems that the calling is ended and the final crucial test of patient endurance is upon the church. The truly consecrated would have been disappointed had not the events developed as they have. This fiery experience is absolutely necessary, that the dross may be burned away and that the true character might be made manifest. The end is here. The great crucial test is upon God's people. Let every one, then, who has hope of being of the kingdom class know that he must suffer persecution; and in doing this, remember the Apostle's words: "If we suffer, we shall also reign with him. If we deny him, he also will deny us." All things of the world, all of its hopes and prospects, we have left behind us. We have burned every bridge connecting us with things earthly and the hope of earthly blessings. There is nothing to which we could turn back. All things are before us: life everlasting, with a perfect, glorious organism; joint-heirship with Christ Jesus in his kingdom: the loving smile and approval of Jehovah. There is no inducement to relax. There is every inducement to firmly press on, enduring hardness as good soldiers of Jesus Christ—patiently and cheerfully bearing whatsoever experiences the Father permits us to have, having in mind that soon we shall see him face to face and be forever with our Lord and King. Be patient, dear brethren. Look up and lift up your heads! The evidence is conclusive that our deliverance draweth nigh.

TWO KINDS OF LOVE

Question: Would you kindly explain the distinction between the two Greek words "philia" and "agapee," as used in the New Testament?

Answer: These are elusive words to translate into English, but may be approximated by our terms love and friendship. In languages older than our own, the distinction between the love that craves and the love that goes out uncravingly is indicated in equivalents of "love" and "friendship." Thus the Sanskrit—elder sister in our family of tongues—gives for "love" (lubh) "covetousness" or "greediness"; and for "friendship" (pri) "unselfish love". The Greek has philia for that love which goes out "lovingly" after its object, "an inclination prompted by sense and emotion"; while in the Septuagint and the New Testament it has agapee, "a love without desire." The Latin correspondingly has amo as representing the love that turns to another in the spirit of agreement and of longing; but, as an equivalent of agapao, it has diligo for the act of "a distinguishing love—without desire," a love that selects and rests on the one selected without asking any return.

Failing to preserve clearly the distinction between a love that instinctively grows out of a relationship, or that is based upon a natural desire for possession, and a voluntary and distinguishing love that goes out unselfishly and admiringly toward its chosen object, New Testament critics and commentators generally have been confused in their minds, while seeking to account for the apparent difference between the two words—philia and agapee—employed in the sacred text for the designation of "love".

It is admitted by practically all that philia was a word in common use in New Testament times, as expressive of the love between parents and children, and brothers and sisters, and also of craving love between the sexes. It is also admitted that the word agapee comes into new prominence in New Testament use, as applicable to man's love to God, and to love that is otherwise peculiarly pure and sacred. But these two words seem at times to be employed interchangeably; and many an eminent scholar has confessed his inability to see the real difference between the words in their using, as accounting for the often indicated superiority of agapee, in spite of the greater warmth and intensity of philia.

Cramer, in his "Biblico-Theological Lexicon of New Testament Greek," covers the simple facts in the case when he says: "We find agapee used to designate a love unknown to writers outside of the New Testament—love in its fullest conceivable form; love as it is the distinguishing attribute in all humanity, but, in the strictest sense, of divinity." Trench, in seeking to differentiate the meanings of the two words agapee and philia, says: "The first expresses a more resting attachment, of choice and selection—diligere=deligere—from seeing in the object on which it is bestowed that which is worthy of regard; while the second, without being necessarily an unresting attachment, does yet oftentimes give less account of itself to itself; is more instinctive, has more of the feelings, implies more passion." Woolsey, after an exhaustive study of the histories of the two terms, says of Trench's definition: "We believe that this is a true statement of the difference between the two words and notions." And all this is in confirmation of the claim made here that philia represents a love that grows out of relationship or craving, while agapee represents a love that goes out voluntarily without any intermingling of selfishness—the one being ordinary love, and the other the higher form of friendship love.

Men are said to love, or crave (philein), "the chief place at feasts" (Matthew 23:6), and "salutations in the market places" (Luke 20:46) and to have this self-interested love (philein), as growing out of relationship, for "father or mother", or for "son or daughter". (Matthew 10:37) On the other hand, the Roman centurion is said by the Jews to have had an unselfish, friendship love (agapan) for their nation, as evidenced by his building for them a synagogue. (Luke 7:5) God's children are commanded to have friendship love (agapan) for their "neighbors" (Matthew 5:43; Galatians 5:14), and for their "enemies" (Matthew 5:44), because love does not go out in those directions instinctively, but must be given unselfishly, and of deliberate choice.

The saints are enjoined to have a feeling of family love (philein) for their Lord (1 Corinthians 16:22) and for one another in the household of faith. (Titus 3:15) "The world" is said to give a selfish, interested love (philein) to "its own," because of the mutual relation between the two. (John 15:19) But Jesus is said to give a pure and unselfish friendship love (agapan) to Mary and Martha and their brother Lazarus, in the home so dear to him at Bethany. (John 11:5) God is said to be governed by unselfish, friendship love (agapan) toward the world, in the gift of his Son. (John 3:16) But Jesus says the Father loves as with a feeling of family love (philein) those who have come into his inner family circle through love for his Son. (John 16:27) And many another passage seems to recognize and accentuate these distinctions in the force of the two words severally.

A striking illustration of the significant uses of the two words in the same conversation is found in the narrative of the interview of Jesus with Peter, on the shore of the Sea of Galilee, after the resurrection. (John 21:15-19) Jesus asks Peter if he gives him friendship love (agapan) more truly than the other disciples, as Peter had asserted that he was ready to do. Peter, remembering his denial of his Lord, replies that Jesus knows that he gives him longing love (philein). The second time Jesus asks Peter if he can claim to give him any measure of friendship love (agapan), apart from all comparison with others. Again, Peter affirms that the Lord knows that he gives him a longing love (philein). Then Jesus changes his form of question, and asks Peter if he is sure that he gives him even a longing love (philein). At this Peter is "grieved", not because the question is repeated a third time, but because in its third putting it seems to imply a doubt whether Peter has any love for his Lord, even on the lower plane; and his earnest answer is: "Lord, thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee"—with a longing love (philein); and Jesus quietly goes on to say that he would have Peter bear himself towards his dear ones just as he would if he were a devoted friend above all the other disciples. Thus the way is opened for Jesus to tell Peter plainly of what is in store for him in his faithful service.

Only in the light of the distinction here pointed out is the full force of divine love to be comprehended in the teachings of the New Testament.

SOME INTERESTING LETTERS

EUPHRATES BEING DRIED UP

DEAR BRETHREN:—

Just a few minutes of your valuable time to let you know of another joyful experience in the harvest field. On one of my regular visits to the Syrian class in Mt. Pleasant, Pa., one of the elders informed me that he had a Free Methodist friend to whom he had often spoken about the truth, but could not make him see the true meaning of "hell," etc.

We went together to the home of his friend, who was a Sunday School superintendent. After a few minutes we turned our conversation onto the real subject. He said he had bought the first three volumes several times and burned them at the instigation of the clergy, and that nothing under the sun could convince him that there is no hell-fire and eternal torment. He said his church was the true church. Then I said: Dear Brother, if that is true, why is the Methodist church divided into 16 different sections! Is Christ divided?

He was speechless with surprise. He said he did not know that the Methodist church had 16 different divisions. Our conversation lasted about an hour and a half; his wife and four daughters and a few Syrian brethren were the audience. After we finished he said: "Please send me that booklet on 'hell' because I want to read it."

After he read the hell booklet it dispelled the eternal torment idea from his mind and he is rejoicing over it. Soon after he procured the first three volumes of SCRIPTURE STUDIES. This month he knew that I was coming and arranged to attend the meeting, but he did not show up. Later we learned why. He said that the preacher and some of the church officials had come and hindered him by their presence at that hour. The preacher told him not to come to our meeting. He turned to the preacher and said: "Reverend, I believed your misrepresentations in the past without proof, but now you cannot fool me any longer, because I have proved Pastor Russell's teachings to be the real truth by the Word." The preacher and those with him were greatly astonished. Again he said: "Now please take my name off your church roll." I just received a letter from him saying that he is reading the books and walking in the light as far as he sees it. Are there not many like him?

Yours with best Christian love, GEO. E. KAFOORY.—Pa.

NOW VIEWS MATTERS DIFFERENTLY

DEAR BRETHREN IN CHRIST:—

You will doubtless have had my answer to your letter of October 23 last, returning the Vow slip unsigned. That was the true expression of my heart as to the Vow at that time. I have been opposed to the Vow ever since I came to know present truth in 1910, yet not opposed to individual liberty in taking it; nor did I think that it contained anything wrong. But I objected to its being made a test for holding any office in the church.

That part of the Vow which speaks of the relationship of the sexes I used to think the most objectionable. I used to think that all who had put on Christ would not need any such help by vowing to abstain from all appearances of evil—as the Vow suggests. The words of Brother Hollister come back to me now. When talking over this matter with me he said: "You do not seem to realize the great stress that is upon mankind during this evil day and the powers of evil that are against us for our downfall."

Since that faithful servant has passed beyond the vail and the magnitude of his great office has become more apparent, and the fact that the Lord is still using only the one channel to give us meat in due season, I come to the one conclusion that it must be of the Lord that such a safeguard is now set before us. I wish to do the will of God in all things and I have rest about the matter when I realize after careful thought and prayer that by subscribing to the Vow I am doing his holy will. I have always appreciated the Morning Resolve. If the V. D. M. questions were being answered by me now I believe I would give more care to the work, yet I think on the whole the answers were very close to the truth. I shall sign and date separate slip for attachment to Vow form, or you can return me the slip itself and I will sign it.

I have deeply appreciated the article, "The Price of Exaltation" in Nov. 15th WATCH TOWER. It is clear evidence to me the Lord is still at the helm.

Your brother in hope of eternal life,

J. R. DOUGLAS.—Aus.

APPRECIATES FREE PRESS AND SPEECH

DEAR SIRS:—

My attention has been called through a news item to a book published by you called "The Finished Mystery," which the Canadian press censor proscribed as pro-German.

If there is no law in this country against your supplying the book, please let me know its price. Catalogue of other publications of yours would be appreciated.

As I understand it, a free press is one of the fundamentals upon which this government is based. I like to see for myself why certain books and publications are so greatly feared by the ruling class. Thus far I have usually found that there is some unpleasant truth which they hope by these tyrannical and undemocratic methods to suppress. All autocrats hate to let the people do their thinking. I believe that nothing that could be done would do more to create dissatisfaction and unrest in a country supposedly free than to attempt autocratically to say what the people shall be allowed to read or not read.

I am far from being a pro-German, but I pride myself on being a free and independent American, and nothing stirs me more than to see efforts made to suppress free-speech, free-press and free-assembly.

Sincerely, F. H. S.—N. Y.

ZION'S TRIUMPH NEAR

"Cast not away therefore your confidence, which hath great recompense of reward. For ye have need of patience, that, after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise."—Hebrews 10:35, 36.

With bated breath and joyful heart the watchers in Zion behold the closing of the harvest. Next the dark night, followed shortly by the glorious sunburst of everlasting happiness. Wonderful is the present privilege of the faithful watchers. The graduating test is now upon the church.

By the words of our text St. Paul clearly proves that patience (cheerful endurance) is the final test, and that this test must come after we have done the will of God. What, then, has been and is the will of God for the members of Zion in the closing days of the age? During the past forty years the harvest of the age has been in progress. That the harvest began in 1878, there is ample and convincing proof. The end of the harvest is due in the spring of 1918. During the period of the harvest the will of God concerning his people finds expression in the words of the Master: "In the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them; but gather the wheat into my barn." (Matthew 13:30) In that time, according to his word, he has sent forth his messengers with a great sound of a trumpet, to gather his elect from one end of heaven to the other. (Matthew 24:31) Again God expressed his will concerning his people, saying, "Gather my saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice." (Psalm 50:5) Again Jesus expressed the will of our Father: "Thrust in thy sickle and reap; for the time is come for thee to reap; for the harvest of the earth [order-loving people] is ripe."—Revelation 14:15.

The sickle here mentioned is the message of truth; thrusting it in means to send out the truth to those who hunger for it. Again God expressed his will concerning the called ones when he commissioned them to preach the good tidings to the meek, to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord and the day of vengeance of our God (Isaiah 61:1-3); and that this vengeance should be declared against Babylon. (Jeremiah 51:6) Jesus makes it clear that the latter part of the work of the harvest is the gathering of the vine of the earth. (Revelation 14:18) If, then, we see these things fulfilled and we have joyfully participated in the work of their fulfillment, we have been doing the will of God; and it is after thus doing his will that we must cheerfully endure before receiving the promise.

HOW FULFILLED

It is doubtless true that every saint this side the vail who has a knowledge of present truth came to such knowledge of God's plan since 1878—the opening of the harvest work. At that time the church nominal was composed of both wheat and tares, true and false Christians. During the time of the harvest these classes must be separated. In outward appearance the two are much alike. The great Master had personally instructed that there should be no attempt at separation until the harvest time.

He himself has been present, directing the work of separating the two classes; and he has used various consecrated instruments as his messengers to do this work. The separating and gathering work has been accomplished with a sickle, which is the message of truth, and which necessarily must be understood by the consecrated. The thrusting in of that sickle of truth has had the effect of causing all denominations or religious systems to bind themselves together in bundles; thus uniting to oppose the message of truth. This binding together in bundles, according to the parable, must take place before the destruction of the tares. That these bundles have for some time been bound together cannot be gainsaid. The tacit union of the systems is complete, all together composing Babylon, mother and daughters. The doom of Babylon is sealed and has been announced. God has smitten her with plagues (Revelation 16:20, 21); and her destruction will follow shortly.

SEALING OF THE SAINTS

During the entire forty years of the harvest the sealing of the saints progressed. A knowledge and appreciation of God's plan has served as both a sealing and a separating agency. To those who hungered and thirsted for the truth, God gave the satisfying portion; and those who appreciated it have been prompt in doing his will concerning them by gladly engaging in the harvest work. These heard the call, "Come out of Babylon," and joyfully obeyed, took up the trumpet and engaged in sounding forth the message of the kingdom.

The great Master of the harvest, through St. John, shows that this sealing is in the forehead and must be accomplished before the storm of destruction breaks upon Babylon. This seems clearly to indicate that every one who will be of the kingdom class must have a knowledge and appreciation of God's plan by the end of the harvest. If the harvest has ended, then the sealing is complete. The evidence strongly indicates that all the saints are sealed. This would mean that all the saints have been gathered into the "barn"—into the condition of separateness from the world.

Concerning this point, the Laodicean messenger wrote:

"When this night cometh, when the reapers must cease their labors, it will prove that this final work of the Gospel age is accomplished; that the elect number of the bride of Christ have all been 'sealed,' and 'gathered' into a condition of separateness from the worldly—into the barn condition; for God will not permit anything to put an end to his work until it is finished. Then all the true and faithful servants of God will have been sealed in their foreheads; and, the work of the Gospel age being finished, no more can enter into that work or reap its rich reward."—C 211, 212.

"The forehead sealing indicates that a mental comprehension of the truth will be the mark of seal which will separate and distinguish the servants of God from the servants and votaries of Babylon. And this agrees with Daniel's testimony: 'The wise [of thy people] shall understand; but none of the wicked [unfaithful to their covenant] shall understand.' (Daniel 12:10) Thus the classes are to be marked and separated before the plagues come upon rejected, cast-off Babylon."—C 165, 166.

PLAGUE OF HAIL

It has heretofore been shown (Z. 1918-119) that the first-born of Egypt pictured or represented the clergy of Christendom, claiming to be the first ones of importance in the systems. The exposition of the prophecies of Ezekiel and Revelation in "The Finished Mystery" shows to the world that the clergy are not what they have claimed and think themselves to be. THE BIBLE STUDENTS MONTHLY which contains the article on "The Fall of Babylon" is likewise a pointed message directed against the same class. In the picture, the angel that smote the first-born of Egypt passed through the land about midnight; and, as heretofore suggested in THE WATCH TOWER, "about midnight" in the antitype would apply to about January 1, 1918. On December 30 and 31, 1917, and January 1, 1918, approximately 10,000,000 copies of the above mentioned issue of THE BIBLE STUDENTS MONTHLY—the message against Babylon, and particularly the clergy of Babylon—were placed in the homes of the people of the United States and Canada. This was like a great hailstorm, and brought to the attention of the people the fact that Babylon is not what she claims to be. Nothing has so angered Babylon as this. Twenty-seven years before that "hailstorm," the Laodicean messenger wrote:

"After the truth, which Babylon now begins to regard as her enemy, and as calculated to accomplish her destruction, shall have become more generally known and widely circulated; after 'the hail' has to a considerable extent swept away the refuge of lies; and after the now smoldering and menacing hatred of the truth is thereby roused to an opposition so violent and so general as to effectually stop the further progress of the great work in which the saints are engaged," will be "the approximate time of the deliverance or 'change' of the last members of the body of Christ."—C 231, 232.

MANTLE OF ELIJAH

After Elijah smote the Jordan with his mantle, he crossed over with Elisha; and while the two walked together on the other side, Elijah was taken up by a whirlwind into heaven. Elisha then took up the mantle of Elijah, that had fallen from him, and went back over the Jordan. It seems quite reasonable that the mantle represented the message of truth which the Elijah class has possessed throughout its journey during the harvest period. (Psalm 91:4) Elijah had this mantle with him all the way from Gilgal to the Jordan. Elijah and Elisha stood at the Jordan, talking; then Elijah wrapped up his mantle and smote the waters. This seems to explain the waiting period from 1914 to 1917, when the smiting of the antitypical Jordan began by the message "wrapped up for the slaughter." (Ezekiel 21:15) "The Finished Mystery" contains the message of truth in brief, compact form, specially directed against Babylon. It was used particularly from the latter part of 1917 to the spring of 1918.

About the middle of March, 1918, the distribution of "The Finished Mystery" was suddenly stopped. The suggestion does not seem unreasonable that, "The Finished Mystery" being the mantle, the quantity of these printed and not distributed will be used by the Elisha class for a second smiting of the waters (peoples).

HAS THE HARVEST ENDED?

The saints need not be disturbed by the suppression of the message against Babylon. This is not man's work, but the Lord's work. God has permitted it to be interrupted for some good purpose and will overrule it to his own glory. "The Finished Mystery" has been suppressed on the theory that it interferes with the prosecution of the war. (Jeremiah 38:4) Doubtless the clergy have represented to officials that it is interfering with the war. We cannot agree that the circulation of this book in any manner interferes with the war's prosecution. Those having to do with its distribution have had no intention whatsoever to interfere with the prosecution of the war. Something, however, must interfere with the harvest work. Excessive use of authority may be expected in this time of stress. In many places, petty officials of the law have arrested, without warrant, some of the faithful Colporteur brethren; have thrown them into jail and refused to give them opportunity to arrange for bail; and after several days have turned them loose with the warning that they should not sell any of the STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES or any publications of the Society. Undoubtedly officials have thought it absolutely necessary to suppress this message. The Scriptures indicate that such a course would be taken. In 1891, the faithful messenger of Laodicea, discussing this point said:

"When repressive, restrictive and coercive measures are thought to be necessary, such measures will probably include not only labor organizations and the publications which advocate their rights and wrongs, but also such others as point out the plan of God, and the real cause and only remedy for the great distress of the nations. Yes, the time is probably not many years distant, when repressive measures may be brought to bear against every effort of the saints to spread the good news of the coming kingdom, all on the plea that the general interests and the public welfare demand such a course.

"Thus would be fulfilled the predictions of the Second Psalm, and probably in the end with more bitterness than can now well be imagined, though it has been partially fulfilled upon the Head of the body.—Acts 4:25-29.

"The same necessity for restricting liberty on political and social questions will probably be supposed to apply equally to freedom of expression on religious questions which really lies at the foundation of all liberty. It would not be surprising if a 'strong government' would some day replace this present great republic; and it is entirely probable that one common standard of religious belief will be deemed expedient and will be promulgated, to teach outside of which will be treated and punished as a political offense. Such a persecution would not only furnish, in the end or harvest of this age, another parallel to the harvest of the Jewish age, but would also give a wider and deeper significance to the words of the Apostles Paul and John, and to the typical illustrations of the close of the earthly career of the true church, as represented in Elijah's whirlwind departure and John the Baptist's imprisonment and beheading."—B 263, 264.

THE DOOR CLOSING

The door which by the way, our Lord calls a gate—represents the way of entrance into a certain condition or privilege. (Luke 13:24, 25) In this instance it represents entrance into the race for the prize of the heavenly calling to joint-heirship with Christ Jesus in his kingdom. That door opened at Pentecost. It must be closed some time. It must remain open until all the "wise virgins" have been sealed in their foreheads. While open, it means that those who enter have the blessed privilege of sacrificing and suffering with Christ Jesus, which suffering is not ordinary suffering, but such suffering as results from faithfully walking in the footsteps of the Master in loving devotion to the cause of righteousness, and in joyfully defending the truth, which is unpopular, and in exposing errors which are popular. It means a zealous and energetic promulgation of the truth as we have opportunity, at all hazards. It means to be true, loyal and faithful to the Lord under all conditions, even unto death. Such privileges are the greatest ever afforded to any creature. The ceasing of such privileges to any and all persons would seem to mark definitely the closing of the door. "The night cometh when no man can work." (John 9:4) That time will mark the closing of the door. Discussing this point, the last messenger to the church said:

"There are three ways in which the closing of this door might be indicated: first, by a definite Bible statement of the exact date; second, by such a reversal of public sentiment with reference to the truth that fidelity and zeal in its service would no longer meet with opposition, and when suffering with Christ for the truth's sake would be no longer possible; or third, by such a condition of affairs obtaining in the world that all opportunity for such service would be effectually obstructed, thus leaving no opportunities for candidates to enter into the work and to develop and prove their love and faithfulness by their activity and endurance. . . . We have a clear intimation that the door will be shut in the manner last named; for, before the Millennial day breaks, we are forewarned of a dark night wherein no man can labor."—C 207, 208.

"The closing of the 'door,' in the parable of Matthew 25, marks the full end of all opportunity for any, even of the 'called' ones, thereafter to attain the prize of the high calling. It marks the end of all opportunity to prove worthy of the prize by faithfulness in the service: all opportunity for service will there terminate in the 'night' wherein no man can work."—C 213.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE?

" 'The morning cometh, and also the night.' 'The night cometh when no man can work.' When that is true, you may know that 'the door is shut,' that all the wise virgins have entered in, that all have been proved, and that all vacancies have been acceptably filled."—C 225.

"Ere long our work will be cut short—gradually at first, and then completely and finally, when 'the night cometh, when no man can work.' And the gloom of that 'night' will be dispelled only by the Millennial sunrise. When our work is done, and that night closes in around us, we may expect not only to see the storm-clouds grow much darker, but also to hear and to feel the rising 'winds' which will culminate in a wild hurricane of human passion—a whirlwind of trouble. Then, having finished our appointed work, it will be our part to 'stand,' patiently, until our 'change' comes."—C 230.

We record here some of the trying experiences through which our brethren are caused to pass because of their faithfulness to the Lord. About the 14th day of March, the Attorney General instructed the District Attorneys throughout the country to prevent the further sale and distribution of "The Finished Mystery," but to arrest no one who had sold or distributed the book prior to that date without wrongful intent. Notwithstanding this order, local Government officials in different places have exceeded their authority. Some of the dear friends have been arrested and thrown into jail for distributing THE BIBLE STUDENTS MONTHLY, others because they were selling the first six volumes of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES; others, because they sold the Scenario of the Photo-Drama of Creation. Two were arrested and brought into court because they had distributed the KINGDOM NEWS. After their incarceration, some one induced a woman to make a false affidavit against one of them. When the case was heard, the affidavit was proven to be false and both brethren were released.

REPORTS FROM THE FRIENDS

Following are a few extracts from letters such as have been received here every day during the past few weeks:

"———— County Jail. In harmony with the Lord's will, I am having a quiet season of study and fellowship with him here."—Conn.

"————Jail. We shall be taken from here by an officer to the District Attorney's office for distributing KINGDOM NEWS."—N. Y.

"Your telegram received yesterday in the ——— Jail. They turned us loose yesterday, after keeping us four days and five nights, making us promise to quit selling any of the STUDIES in ———— County before they would release us. As the people are so stirred up there, we thought best to take up the work in the new territory in Illinois."—Ind.

"We are experiencing considerable opposition. Thursday four sisters went to a neighboring town and distributed THE BIBLE STUDENTS MONTHLY—'Clergy Ordination Proved Fraudulent.' Just as they got through with the distribution, the city marshal, with another, insisted that they go and gather the tracts up, and then they had a public burning."—Ill.

"Sheriff's Office. Last night I was placed in jail here for selling 'The Finished Mystery.' "—N. Dak.

"Last Saturday I went to ———— to attend the trial of two Colporteurs, and, while looking for them, was arrested. They could not prove that I had circulated any of the books since the ruling was made."—Okla.

"While busily engaged in cutting out the pages objected to [in "The Finished Mystery"], an officer of the federal government arrested us. My request to show me his warrant was completely ignored. We were conveyed to the police station and no one was allowed to communicate with us. From the press account, next morning, I learned that two of my friends came to bail me out, but were not allowed to see us at all. After spending several nights in jail, we were released without any explanation whatsoever. Two people told me that the officer gave them several books, with instructions to burn them when they had finished reading them."—La.

"We are undergoing great persecution while trying to do colporteur work. The officers are gathering up all the Seventh Volumes and the question booklets; also THE BIBLE STUDENTS MONTHLY, 'The Fall of Babylon.' We have been working some with the other volumes and the Scenario and booklets; but hear threats of arrest every day."—Tex.

"———— County Jail. There are three brothers and myself in jail here for selling 'The Finished Mystery.' We are rejoicing that we have a share in drinking the Lord's cup."—Calif.

"At ———— my brother and I were stopped from selling the six volumes of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES by a secret service man. He told us if we tried to sell any more books we would be arrested. We were not selling any Seventh Volumes."—Wash.

In Texas two of the pilgrims have been arrested for preaching the Gospel, one of them being held in $10,000 bond for appearance before the Grand Jury. Another of our traveling ministers was waited upon by the mayor and chief of police in a western town and warned not to preach. When he attempted to do so, a mob chased him out of town, but captured his companion and tarred him. The governor co-operated to furnish protection. This mob violence indicates that the demons are loose and inhabiting the minds of men, inciting them to lawless deeds.

DEMONS LOOSE

St. John the Revelator wrote: "And I saw another angel ascending from the east, having the seal of the living God; and he cried with a loud voice to the four angels to whom it was given to hurt the earth and the sea, saying, Hurt not the earth, neither the sea, nor the trees, till we have sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads." (Revelation 7:2, 3) The conclusion to be drawn from this is that the demons will be loosed when the saints are sealed and the door is closed. The Scriptures clearly show that the demons will inhabit Babylon. (Revelation 18:2) It is reasonable to conclude that, after being loosed, some little time might be occupied by the demons in influencing the minds of the willing ones in Babylon and in the formulation of plans for operation against the last members of the body of Christ, and that during that time the saints would be concluding their work. These demons will inhabit the members of Babylon by taking control of the body and mind, as in the days of Noah. They will probably first vent their spleen or vengeance upon the members of the kingdom class.

Conditions which have recently developed in Russia strongly indicate that the evil spirits are loose. It is well known that the czar of Russia consulted the demons through mediums. The violent disposition recently manifested by the clergy toward some of our brethren indicates that the demons are occupying their minds. We may expect this violence to increase in the near future. Let us not be surprised if within a short time every avenue for the promulgation of the truth is closed.

A BRIEF RESPITE

We need not be at all disturbed because the opportunity to distribute "The Finished Mystery" has been taken from us. The work is the Lord's. Our business, as his ambassadors, is to deliver the message. In the days to come the clergy will not be heard to say that they did not have opportunity to know of this message. This message must be delivered to Babylon. Only the faithful will engage in delivering it. If you have had any opportunity to do so, rejoice and give thanks to the Lord. The fiery chariot that took away Elijah represents the fiery experiences that would come to the faithful ones who persist in making proclamations of the message of the kingdom, and who are anxious to enter the fiery chariot and be taken home in the Lord's own due time.

Some, when seeing these fiery experiences—the fiery chariot—appearing, have sought a place of safety by ceasing their labors in the harvest field and by refusing to speak anything concerning Babylon, declining even to mention it in class study. It seems that this shows a lack of faith in the Lord. Let us have in mind the Apostle's words: "Now the just [the justified, having the robe of Christ's righteousness] shall live by his faith; but if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him." (Hebrews 10:38) This is the time above all times to stand firm and trust in the Lord. Even though we see the persecution becoming more violent day by day, because of our faithfulness, let us keep in mind that he who is on our part is greater than all that can be against us. Let us not waver. Let us proceed in the declaration of the message of the kingdom as long as the Lord gives us any opportunities. "And probably at this juncture the Elijah class, persisting in declaring the truth to the last, will suffer violence, pass into glory and escape from the severest features of the great time of trouble."—C 231.

The Lord has permitted some of his people to remain to this time in order to leave records concerning his kingdom that will be valuable to the undeveloped great company class and to the world in general. It therefore becomes the privilege of all the consecrated, as opportunity offers, to make proclamation of the message of the kingdom. The time is short. Let every one be active. Let every one who is able to give a public address, and who can find an opportunity, do so, using the subject, "The World Has Ended—Millions Now Living Will Never Die." It is a great privilege to announce this message of the kingdom to the poor world in this hour of distress. If we are privileged to be the very last ones on the earth to do this, such will be a great honor. "To be among those who remain is no dishonor; and to be the very last one of those to be 'changed' will be no discredit. Several Scriptures show that there is a special work for the last members of the body to do on this side the vail, as important and as essentially a part of kingdom work as that of the glorified members on the other side."—C 235.

SPECIAL WORK

Seeing, then, that some avenues of service are closing, let us look quickly for some other avenue remaining open. Soon all will close. Gradually the work will close down, and then suddenly will stop completely. But let us remember that the feet members—the last members—have some work to do even yet.

"The mission of the feet, which is no insignificant part of the kingdom work, will be accomplished. Though their message is popularly hated and discredited and they are despised by the world as fools (for Christ's sake)—as all his faithful servants have been throughout the Gospel age—yet, before they are all 'changed' and joined to the glorified members beyond the vail, they, as agents of the kingdom, will have left such records of that kingdom and its present and future work as will be most valuable information to the world and to the undeveloped and over-charged children of God who, though consecrated to God, will have failed so to run as to obtain the prize of our high calling.

"And let it not be forgotten that all who are of the 'feet' will be thus engaged in publishing these good tidings and in saying to Zion, 'Thy God reigneth!'—the kingdom of Christ is begun! And all who are true watchmen can at this time see clearly, as one man, and can together harmoniously sing the song of Moses and the Lamb."—C 237.

Keeping always in mind the great honor conferred upon us by being granted the opportunity to make proclamation of the kingdom, and also by faith beholding the glories of the kingdom in full operation, our faith will be strong and we will keep our faces to the enemy and valiantly press on. Plainly we can see the disintegration of the present order. Let us rejoice to proclaim to the peoples of earth the blessings of the great King, who has come to reign and bring righteousness in the earth. Long ago the prophet of the Lord, beholding the privilege now enjoyed by the last members of the body of Christ on earth, in ecstasy exclaimed: "How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace; that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation; that saith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth!"—Isaiah 52:7.

PATIENCE PERFECTING HER WORK

Let no one slack his hand as long as any opportunity for proclaiming the truth is afforded. Remember the words of the Apostle: "Ye have need of patience [cheerful endurance], that after ye have done the will of God ye might receive the promise." The will of God is that we do all in our power to give testimony to his glorious character and coming kingdom. Having done this, we must wait and behold the salvation of the Lord, patiently biding his time to call us home. The Apostle Paul, again speaking to the church, says: "Having done all, stand." (Ephesians 6:13) This clearly indicates that the last of the feet members must stand a while after the door is closed, stand, letting patience perfect her work; waiting until the Lord Jehovah shall deliver us. Some will be required to stand in enforced idleness for a time, despised and rejected of all men, deprived of opportunities to labor either for the production of the necessities of life or in testifying of the kingdom. Let us remember in this connection the words of the Master: "He that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved." (Matthew 24:13) Nearly twenty years ago, the faithful Laodicean messenger wrote:

"How long the Lord may be pleased to let his saints stand in enforced idleness so far as his work is concerned, we do not know, but probably only long enough to let faith and patience have their perfect work. Here these virtues will be most fully developed, tested and manifested. This test of patience will be the final trial of the church. Then 'God will help her, at the dawning of [her] morning.' (Psalm 46:5—Leeser)—not the morning which is to dawn on the world at the brightness of her rising with her Lord as the sun of righteousness, but at the dawning of her morning, in which she is to be changed to the nature and likeness of her Lord. Her morning is to precede the Millennial morning."—C 230, 231.

TRIUMPHANT ZION

Having made a consecration unto death, the child of God understands that he must die before he can gain the promised prize. "Ye shall die like men, and fall like one of the princes." (Psalm 82:7) The journey of the consecrated has not been one strewn with flowers. It has not been one of ease. God permitted it to be otherwise, in order that by trying experiences a strong, firm, crystalized character might be developed. The last of the feet members have come to a very trying time in the church's history. Poor, bruised and despised ones; misunderstood by all in the world, persecuted, ridiculed, the victims of scoffers, charged as violators of the law and denounced as the offscourgings of the earth. And yet they have pressed along and are still pressing along the narrow way! No one appreciates them; indeed, none except the consecrated can appreciate them. But how beautiful they are and how wonderful their privilege! They are highly honored and esteemed by the Lord himself and greatly loved by him—not because of their own merit, but because of faithful, loving devotion to duty and to his cause. They are now performing their precious mission of proclaiming that the kingdom of heaven is at hand. A little while, and their journey will be ended, and their "change" shall suddenly come. And that "change" will bring them into fellowship and glory and power already possessed by those who have preceded them into glory.

Of the last members, St. Paul says: "They shall be caught away to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall they ever be with the Lord." The term "caught away" is rendered "removed by force" by some translators. It seems that some of the Lord's dear saints may go down into the very anarchy, yet at all times protected by the Lord. When the true church's hour seems the darkest, then God will help her. She will emerge from the turmoil and distress of earth into glory and beauty, in the likeness of her Lord and Head. Triumphant Zion she then shall be. Thus will God help Zion in the dawning of her morning—in the morning of the eternal day of Christ's triumph.

"Triumphant Zion, lift thy head
From dust and darkness and the dead!
Though humbled long, awake at length,
And gird thee with thy Savior's strength.

"Yea, soon astonished men shall see
The laurels of thy victory;
And thou, with grace and glory crowned,
May'st lavish blessings all around."

JESUS TRIUMPHANT OVER DEATH

JUNE 23.—MARK 16:1-11.

IMPORTANCE OF OUR LORD'S RESURRECTION—ERRORS OF DARK AGES LEAD TO CONFUSION IN MANY MINDS—PROOFS OF THE RESURRECTION NUMEROUS AND WELL SUBSTANTIATED—THE WITNESSES MOST RELIABLE—OUR LORD'S RESURRECTION CHANGE—PURPOSE OF HIS VARIOUS APPEARANCES IN DIFFERENT BODIES OF FLESH—HIS EXALTATION "FAR ABOVE ANGELS, PRINCIPALITIES AND POWERS, AND EVERY NAME THAT IS NAMED"—HIS GREAT REWARD.

"Now hath Christ been raised from the dead."—1 Corinthians 15:20.

Few seem to realize the importance of the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead, its bearing upon the entire Gospel message. The Apostle indicates how much depended upon our Lord's resurrection when he wrote: "If Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain. . . . They also who are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." (1 Corinthians 15:14, 18) The number of the Lord's professed followers, both clergy and laity, who fail to appreciate the resurrection, yea, who actually do not believe in it, is very large. The number of those who really believe in it is very small.

Under the teachings which have come down to us from the dark ages, the majority of professed Christians fail entirely to realize that death means a cessation of life, as the Scriptures clearly teach. On the contrary the masses of Christendom have come to believe that there is no death, that the dead are more alive than they were before they died. Applying this erroneous thought to our Lord, as well as to others, they do not appreciate the Scriptural declaration that "Christ died for our sins and rose again on the third day." They think of him as being alive during that time, and that it was merely his fleshly body that was inanimate in the tomb, and that the resurrection which occurred on the third day was not his resurrection to life, but merely the reanimation of his dead body.

Confused thus by the errors of medieval times, which were also adopted by the reformers and which are engrafted upon the minds of the civilized world today, the great majority of Christian people cannot appreciate the Scriptural declarations in respect to the importance of the resurrection of our Lord. Instead of believing the Apostle's assertion that our faith is vain, our preaching vain, if Jesus did not rise from the dead, the majority of Christendom would be inclined to say just the reverse of this. Hence only those who realize that the dead are dead, that until awakened from the sleep of death they can have no conscious existence—only these can really appreciate the importance of the resurrection.

CONFUSION THE RESULT OF ERROR

Some one may ask: "What difference would it make to our beloved dead, what difference would it make to our preaching, what difference would it make to our faith, if Jesus had been left in the tomb?" We reply: If Jesus had not been raised from the dead we would have had no basis for the preaching of the Gospel; for the Gospel message is that by the grace of God the death of our Lord Jesus provided the ransom-price for father Adam and his posterity, and that therefore in God's appointed time Adam and all his posterity will be released from the death sentence and be brought back to the original perfection of nature lost in Eden. Christ Jesus as the great King of earth is to establish the kingdom of God in the earth, and through it to lift from mankind the burden, the penalty of death. All that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of God and come forth to the glorious opportunities of the Millennial kingdom, opportunities for reconciliation with God and for release from all the imperfections and weaknesses resulting from Adam's fall from perfection.

With the fact before us that Jesus had died, but without any proof of his resurrection, the preaching of any such gospel would be vain preaching, foolish preaching, deception of the people. To believe such a gospel under such circumstances would be to brand ourselves as simpletons; and to have any hope that our dead friends could ever be benefited by a dead Christ would be absurd.

Seeing, then, that every feature of the Gospel is dependent upon the great fact of our Lord's resurrection, we understand why it was that the apostles based everything upon the fact that Jesus not only died for our sins as our ransom-price, but also arose from the dead for our justification, for our deliverance from the sentence, the guilt, the penalty, that is upon the human family—the death penalty. No wonder that our Heavenly Father arranged that we should have so explicit an account, so detailed a statement, of everything pertaining to our Lord's resurrection! No wonder that the Evangelists recorded matters with such minuteness! No wonder that in all the preaching of the apostles this great fundamental truth, which was the basis of their own faith toward God, was set before the church as being all important! From this viewpoint the lesson for today must be of deep interest to all of the Lord's people for all time, until the outward manifestations of the kingdom shall attest the things which the household of faith must now accept by faith.

PROOFS OF THE RESURRECTION

Summing up the proofs that our Lord arose from the dead on the third day we find that they are numerous and well substantiated, as follows:

(1) Our Lord's death could not have been a case of suspended animation. The spear-thrust made this fact evident, not only because it was a mortal wound, but because it furnished proof that our Lord was already dead, for water as well as coagulated blood issued from his side.

(2) The centurion charged with the execution was convinced of his death, and so reported to Pilate, the Roman governor.

(3) The request of the chief priests that the stone against the door of the sepulcher be sealed and a guard be placed around the tomb, so that no one could remove the body and then pretend that he had risen, was a further evidence that Jesus was dead.

(4) His friends believed that he was dead, and wrapped him in spices for burial. Indeed, in their grief they seem to have forgotten his promise of a resurrection, so much so that even after he had arisen it was with difficulty that they were convinced of the fact.

(5) The record that the guards dissembled and declared that the disciples stole Jesus' body while the soldiers slept, being bribed by the Jewish rulers, served at least to prove that the guard had been set and that everybody recognized that Jesus was dead.

(6) The tomb in which Jesus was buried was a new one, in which no one had previously been buried, so there could be no doubt as to the identity of the one who arose. We are glad that there is such satisfactory evidence that Christ died, and that thus we have further foundation for the Scriptural assurance that he died as man's Redeemer.

TWO VIEWS OF THE RESURRECTION

The view held by the majority of Christian people is that our Lord arose from the dead to exactly the same conditions that he had during his life upon earth—a man, subject to the same limitations that he had before he died. The other view is that he arose from the dead a spirit being; but that since spirit beings cannot be seen by the human eye without injury, our Lord clothed himself, as it were, with flesh and clothing in order to be seen by his followers, to demonstrate to them that he was no longer dead. The latter we find to be the Scriptural view.

The majority of Christian people are greatly confused over the matter of the resurrection; for they believe the doctrines received from heathen philosophy during the dark ages, the very same doctrines which were communicated by the devil to all the heathen, namely, that the dead are more alive than they were during their life-time. Consequently people often wonder why the Scriptures lay such stress upon the resurrection and why there should be any necessity for a resurrection. They properly enough reason that if, as they are usually told at the time of the funeral, their dead friend is now "free, no longer trammeled with his earthly body," why need he be trammeled with it in the future any more than in the present, and if some have gotten along for centuries without bodies, why should they need bodies thereafter any more than before?

All this confusion of thought is directly traceable to Satan's falsehood, "Ye shall not surely [really] die," and the rejection of God's statement, 'In the day that thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die." (Genesis 3:4; 2:17) When we accept the teachings of the Word of God that the dead are really dead, then we perceive that there is no hope whatever for them to have any knowledge or consciousness except by a resurrection. Then we realize the truthfulness of the Scriptural statement that there is neither knowledge nor device nor wisdom in the grave, sheol, the death state, whither all go.—Ecclesiastes 9:5, 10; Job 14:21; Psalm 146:4.

The cause of popular confusion on this subject is due to the error of supposing that the dead are not dead, and to the failure to see that our Lord was "put to death in the flesh, but quickened in the spirit," as the Apostle Peter explicitly tells us. (1 Peter 3:18) Thank God that with the morning light now shining upon the divine record these shadows, so confusing to heart and mind, are gradually fleeing away, disclosing to us new beauties in our heavenly Father's Word, consistencies, harmonies! When permitted to interpret themselves, the Scriptures are beautiful, reasonable, irrefutable.

A COMMON BUT GROSS ERROR

The Apostle Peter informs us that Christ was "put to death in flesh, but quickened in spirit," as we have said. These words being true (we give a literal translation), those who declare that our Lord arose from the dead a fleshly being are grossly in error. Indeed, it is evident that they have misconceived the entire subject of the atonement; for if our Lord, as the man Christ Jesus, gave himself a ransom, he could not be restored to manhood in a resurrection without annulling the ransom—taking back the price he had provided for the sin of the world. The Scriptural thought is that as man had sinned and been sentenced to death, it was necessary that the Redeemer become a man and give his manhood as the ransom-price for Adam and his race. Moreover, the Scriptural declaration is not that this ransom-price was taken back, but that God raised our Lord from the dead a new creature of a new nature, not in flesh, not in human nature, but in spirit, a spirit being.

St. Paul agrees with St. Peter's testimony, that Jesus was quickened in spirit, saying that Jesus was "declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead." (Romans 1:4) Again, he says in describing the first resurrection: "Thus also is the resurrection of the dead: it is sown in corruption, it is raised in incorruption; it is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory; it is sown in weakness, it is raised in power; it is sown a natural [animal] body, it is raised a spiritual body." (1 Corinthians 15:42-45) Elsewhere he declares that the church's highest ambition is to be a partaker in this first resurrection, which he denominates "his resurrection," the Christ-resurrection, the resurrection to spirit conditions, nature, which came first to our Lord and in which all of his body, the church, will have a share.—Philippians 3:10; Revelation 20:6.

OUR LORD'S RESURRECTION CHANGE

This being true, we know that the time when our Lord received his spirit body was at his resurrection and not subsequently. Speaking of our Lord's humiliation and his subsequent exaltation at his resurrection, St. Paul assures us that Jesus left the glory which he had with the Father and humbled himself to become a man; and that in due time he humbled himself unto death, even the death of the cross. "Wherefore God hath highly exalted him and given him a name above every name." The exaltation came to him in his resurrection change. It was true of him then, as in due time it will be true of all the members of his body, that he was sown in weakness, raised in power; sown a natural [animal, human] body, raised a spirit body.

This spiritual body was just as glorious in the moment of our Lord's resurrection as it was at any subsequent time. It had all the powers properly granted to spirit beings in harmony with Jehovah God. He was not, as previously, the man Christ Jesus merely, but the Lord of glory. As such he was able to associate himself with his disciples, either visibly or invisibly, to appear as a gardener, as a traveler, as a stranger on Galilee's shore, or in any manner he might see fit. He was the same glorious being who subsequently appeared to Saul of Tarsus, shining as the lightning, much as the angel appeared when the Roman guard was overcome.

Some may inquire, 'Why did not our Lord appear to the women and the apostles in the same glorious manner, with shining features?' We answer that to have done so would have been to hinder the very object he had in view. How could his followers, who were not then begotten of the holy Spirit and who consequently were unable to understand spiritual things (1 Corinthians 2:14), have understood that a being shining like an angel was the Master whom three days before they had seen crucified? Even if they could have associated the two in some manner, what evidence would there have been for others who have lived since then?

The removal of our Lord's remains from the tomb was an essential to the faith of the disciples of that day and of all who would believe on him since that time through their word. Manifestations of his being alive from the dead were also necessary to all these. The instructions which our Lord gave, his expositions of the prophecies and his application of these to himself, given at that particular time, were necessary as a firm foundation for faith. None of these objects could have been so well served in any other way than that which was adopted.

THE VARIOUS ACCOUNTS HARMONIZED

To harmonize the various accounts of the resurrection we must suppose that the women charged with the work of embalming our Lord's body lived in different parts of Jerusalem, and did not all arrive at the same hour. Mary Magdalene arrived first, and finding the tomb empty hastened to tell some of the disciples. First she found Peter and afterward John, both of whom at once ran to the sepulcher, while Mary probably returned more slowly, arriving there after the two disciples and the other women had gone. It was at this second visit that our Lord revealed himself to her. She had been weeping, and had stooped down to look through the low doorway of the tomb, as if to reassure herself that it was empty. Then she saw for the first time two angels in white, who inquired respecting her sorrow. Doubtless the angels had been there when she was there before, but had not chosen to manifest themselves.

Doubtless holy angels had in charge not only our Lord's body, but also the interests of his bereaved followers; and now and then some of these appeared as young men, though they were not flesh, but spirit beings, assuming fleshly bodies for a time, that they might render the service necessary. They are said to appear, because they could not be seen except as they manifested themselves. In Luke 24:4 these same angels appearing as men are said to have been clothed in shining garments, so that they might not be understood to be men, but might at once be recognized as heavenly messengers. On the contrary, when our risen Lord as "a quickening spirit" similarly appeared in flesh in order to come closer to his followers, he did not appear in shining garments, but in ordinary apparel, assumed for the purpose, in order that he might have the better opportunity for giving the instructions which his followers needed.

IMPORTANCE OF OUR LORD'S RESURRECTION

That our risen Lord is no longer flesh, but a spirit being with celestial glory, is clearly established by Paul's narrative of his own experiences. He explains that it was necessary that the twelve apostles should be able to bear witness to the fact that Jesus had risen from the dead. There could have been no Gospel message of hope of divine favor through a dead Savior. If Christ had not risen from the dead, who would there have been who could establish the Messianic kingdom? Who would there have been who could have given the church a share in the first resurrection and in the heavenly glory? Who would there be who could call forth from the tomb the sleeping thousands of millions of Adam's race, awakening them to the opportunities of life everlasting through obedience to the laws of the kingdom?

All this the Apostle calls forcibly to our minds, saying, "If Christ be not risen from the dead, your faith is vain; and all who have fallen asleep in Christ have perished." (1 Corinthians 15:16-18) From this we see that St. Paul in no way shared the views of those who unscripturally claim that Jesus, while dead, was really alive, and that the resurrection of the dead is a mere formality, quite unnecessary to the carrying out of God's plan of salvation. On the contrary the divine teaching is that the dead know not anything, and that the resurrection of the dead is an absolute necessity to future life or blessing.

The fact that Christ has risen from the dead is a guarantee of God's power to raise the dead. Additionally, it is a guarantee that Jesus accomplished the work which he came into the world to do. It proves to us that he must have kept the divine law perfectly; else he would not have been worthy of a resurrection from the dead. It also proves the value of his death, its efficacy as the offset of Adam's sin, and thus as the ransom-price for the sin of the world.

POST-RESURRECTION MANIFESTATIONS

Our Lord's manifestations in the flesh during the forty days subsequent to his resurrection correspond exactly to those manifestations which he had made long before, one of which was to Abraham. The Logos ate and talked with Abraham, but the Hebrew thought of him only as a man, because the heavenly guest appeared in human form and ordinary clothing. He vanished from Abraham's sight just as he did from the apostles' sight and from the sight of Saul of Tarsus. When he appeared to Abraham, he was a spirit being, and he was a spirit being again after his resurrection, when he appeared to his apostles. But in the meantime, he had been made flesh for the very purpose of suffering for the unjust.

Having accomplished the suffering, there was no further reason why our Lord should remain flesh. The heavenly Lord of Glory is not flesh, not a man. If he were, he would still be "a little lower than the angels." But the Scriptures assure us that in his resurrection he ascended "far above angels."—Philippians 2:9-11; Hebrews 1:3, 4.

It was just as easy for Jesus to appear in one form as in another, in one kind of clothing as in another. He appeared in various forms to impress the double lesson that he was not dead and that he was no longer a man. His second appearance, with the wounds with which to convince St. Thomas, is especially noteworthy. Our Lord was ready to give any demonstration that was necessary to convince his disciples that he had actually risen from the dead; for unless they were so convinced, they could neither do the work before them nor receive the holy Spirit at Pentecost. The holy Spirit was given only to those who believed in Jesus, those who accepted the fact of his death as the sacrifice for sin and who trusted in him as the Savior through whom would come the divine blessing. This impartation of the holy Spirit had the effect of begetting them to a new nature, and restoring them to fellowship with God as his children and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ their Lord.

NOT ASHAMED OF THE GOSPEL

JUNE 30.—QUARTERLY REVIEW.

THE REASONABLENESS OF ST. PAUL'S TEACHINGS—THE FALSE GOSPEL OF THE DARK AGES A TRAVESTY ON JUSTICE AND LOVE—THE TRUE GOSPEL, OF WHICH THE GREAT APOSTLE WAS NOT ASHAMED—CROSS AND CROWN—SHAME AND GLORY—SPIRITUAL SEED OF ABRAHAM TO BLESS ALL THE FAMILIES OF THE EARTH—THE MILLENNIAL KINGDOM.

"I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."—Romans 1:16

Whoever has studied the masterly writings of the Apostle Paul, constituting so large a portion of the New Testament, must surely have been impressed with the reasonableness and logic of his mental positions as therein stated. While it is true that not many really understand the Bible, yet even those who do not grasp the full import of the Apostle's teachings can see enough therein to convince them of the soundness of his logic; and the comparatively few, begotten of the holy Spirit, who really understand the depth of his writings unanimously give his epistles the first place among the books of the Bible as well as in general literature.

Now we ask all who recognize St. Paul's ability and sterling honesty of expression: Is it possible to suppose that when the Apostle wrote the words which constitute our Golden Text he had in mind anything akin to the gross travesty on justice and love which during the dark ages was branded the Gospel of Christ, and which has been handed down to us under that caption? Could we suppose that the great Apostle had in mind a race not only born in sin and shapen in iniquity, but condemned by its Creator to an eternity of torture since the time of Adam's disobedience? Could we suppose that St. Paul had in mind for such a race a message that Christ had died and that the net result of the Savior's sacrifice for sin would affect only about one in ten thousand of earth's thousands of millions, to open the eyes of their understanding and to lead them from sin to righteousness, to obedience as saints with a reward of heavenly glory?

Even in the Apostle's day he had noted the tendency of the adversary to bring false doctrines and to put "another gospel" instead of the true one. (Galatians 1:6-9) The faithful Paul was not only ashamed of this false gospel, but denounced it and forewarned the church to be on guard against the wiles of the devil, who would attempt to present himself as an angel of light in order to deceive the followers of Christ. (2 Corinthians 11:13-15) To what extent Satan has been successful as a theologian and teacher in the church let all the creeds of the dark ages bear witness!

MANY ASHAMED OF THE PERVERTED GOSPEL

For many years past, and especially since the beginning of the harvest of the Gospel age, thinking people have been perplexed and fretted in respect to the creeds of Christendom. Both heart and head told them that these creeds are wrong, that such a plan as therein outlined, so far from being a heavenly one, is earthly, sensual, devilish, far beneath the standard of moral honesty and decency among men—not to speak of love for our neighbor as for ourselves, which would do for others as we would that they should do for us. This false gospel contradicts entirely the Lord's statement that as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are his ways higher than man's ways.—Isaiah 55:8-11.

Many of our fallen race, alas! are very mean, and are impelled by very wicked, malicious influences at times. But we have yet to find a man or a woman so wretchedly degraded, so unjust, so unsympathetic, so unloving, so fierce, so venomous, so deficient, that he or she would purposely, knowingly, intentionally, bring into being a creature, human or brute, and then take continual pleasure, year after year, in torturing that creature, in witnessing its sufferings, its groans and its agonizing cries. Yet by following Satan's delusion foisted upon humanity during the dark ages, many Christian people have unwittingly ascribed to the God of wisdom, justice, love and power a plan which would make him more detestable than any other being in the universe.

Alas, for such a slander of our heavenly Father, for such blasphemy of his holy name, we might well mourn in sackcloth and ashes for the remainder of our earthly life. But he is gracious to us, and does not impute our transgressions to us. He remembers that we are fallen dust, and that as a race we have come largely under the deceptive influence of our adversary, who has blinded mankind with ignorance and superstition. It is high time that all mankind awake, that they learn to use our God-given reasoning faculties upon religious matters, as well as upon the affairs of daily life.

THE GOSPEL OF CHRIST

How different from the false gospel of the dark ages is the Gospel of Christ! The Bible teaches that man was created in God's image and likeness, but that he fell into sin through disobedience of his Creator's commands, and so incurred the penalty of death, extinction. The Gospel of which the Apostle Paul was not ashamed declares that God in mercy provided Jesus as our Redeemer. It shows that no member of the fallen race could redeem it because each child of Adam was himself under the divine sentence of death. It explains that Christ's death was the offset to Adam's sentence, and that as the whole race suffered through Adam's disobedience and sentence so likewise God could with equal justice permit the redemptive work of Jesus to apply not only to Adam but to all of his posterity.

This Gospel of which St. Paul was not ashamed is clearly set forth in Romans 5:12-19. The Apostle does not say that the penalty upon Adam was eternal torment, but that it was death; nor does he say that the penalty upon mankind is eternal torture. He does not say that Christ went to eternal torment to pay the penalty upon man, but that "Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures." (1 Corinthians 15:3) He does not say that mankind is to be recovered from eternal torment, but rather brought back from the dead, that "there is to be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and of the unjust."—Acts 24:15.

Delineating still further the Gospel of which he was not ashamed, the Apostle explains that during this Gospel age God is gathering out of the world a special elect class to be the bride, the Lamb's wife, to suffer with him that they may be also glorified with him, to die with him that they may also live with him. (Romans 8:17) He declares that there has been a mystery connected with this subject which is designed of God to be understood only by the spirit-begotten ones, the faithful. He tells us that this mystery consists in the fact that the heavenly Father foreknew and predestinated that the great Messiah, the Seed of Abraham through whom all the families of the earth are to be blessed, would be composed not only of our Lord Jesus, but also of the elect church, which symbolically is the body of Christ.—Galatians 3:8, 16, 29.

The false doctrines of the dark ages, of which we are greatly ashamed, declare that after the elect church shall have been gathered, all the families of the earth shall forever be condemned and eternally tortured. But the Gospel of which the Apostle Paul was not ashamed declares to the contrary, teaching that after the elect church shall have been completed, its mission as the Seed of Abraham, as the glorified kingdom of Christ, the Millennial kingdom under the whole heavens, shall be to bless all the families of the earth, to convert them, to lift them up out of sin and death conditions, to give all the willing and obedient a full opportunity to return to divine favor as Adam at first enjoyed it and to an earthly Paradise restored.

WHAT KINGDOM HONORS WILL COST THE ELECT

The Gospel of which the Apostle was not ashamed, and which he preached faithfully, invited those having hearing ears to consecrate their lives to God in order that they might be of the elect church. It gave assurance that the cross of the present time would, if faithfully carried to the end of the way, bring glory, honor and immortality, a share with our Lord Jesus in his Millennial kingdom and its glorious work of blessing all mankind. In view of this sure reward believers were urged to present their bodies a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable to God through Christ, and then to suffer with him now, to be sharers in his ignominy, shame and death in order that in due time they might be sharers with him in his kingdom and its blessed work.

In all of his teachings our Lord kept before the minds of the church the fact that the cross and the crown are inseparably united in the divine program. "If we suffer with him, we shall also reign with him." At the second advent of Christ his faithful followers were to receive a crown of glory which fadeth not away. (1 Peter 5:4) In their glorified condition they are to be the exalted Seed of Abraham with the glorious mission of blessing Israel after the flesh and all the other families of the earth. (Romans 11:25-32) Even the casting away of the Jews from divine favor upon their rejection of Messiah, the Apostle assures us, will eventually be overruled, so that Natural Israel will receive mercy at the hands of Spiritual Israel.

In his letter to the Ephesians the Apostle indicates that the glories of the church are not to be expected in the present time, which is a period of sacrifice and of suffering with Christ. The glory is to follow, and is to last not only during the thousand years set apart for the world's blessing, but during the ages to come, throughout eternity. The elect church, proved and tested by present disciplines, will be forever blest with her Lord, and joint-heir with him in the riches of the grace of God. (Ephesians 2:7) Therefore the Apostle urges us not to cast away our confidence, our trust in the promises of God; for in due season we shall receive them if we faint not.

In Hebrews 6:17-20 attention is called to the fact that during this trial time of suffering with Christ the oathbound promise made to Abraham is to be, to us who believe God's word and oath, an anchor to our souls sure and steadfast and entering into that which is beyond the vail. There our forerunner is entered for us, even Jesus, who has already been glorified as the great antitypical High Priest, who during the Millennial age shall exercise his priestly office for the blessing of the world.

In line with this thought is the assurance that all of the faithful of the church of Christ, the "little flock," shall in due time be members of the Royal Priesthood, who as enthroned priests associated with their royal High Priest, Jesus, shall share with him the blessed privilege of ruling, instructing and assisting the world of mankind. Who, we ask, needs to be ashamed of such a Gospel? This is not the Gospel of the dark ages, not bad tidings of great misery for nearly all people, but the Gospel of the Apostles, of our Lord Jesus, the Gospel which the angel announced to the awe-stricken shepherds when he said: "Behold, I bring you glad tidings of great joy which shall be to all people," not merely to the Jews, not merely to the "little flock," but eventually to all the families of the earth.—Luke 2:10, 11; 12:32; Genesis 22:16-18.

SOME INTERESTING QUESTIONS

CHRIST MY LIFE; DEATH MY GAIN

Question.—In the comment on Philippians 1:23, pages 670-673 of "The New Creation," the statement is made that the Greek word analüsai is used in only one other place in the New Testament—in Luke 12:36—whereas I find the same word used in Paul's second letter to Timothy, 4:6, "the time of my departure is at hand." Here the thought seems to be exactly opposite to that in Volume Six. Kindly explain.

Answer.—It was Brother Russell's intention to alter the comment referred to, that it might conform more clearly to all the facts, but evidently failing strength and press of other matters interfered. We submit the following, first quoting a free translation of the passage involved:

"For as to life, life to me is Christ. As to death, it is gain. Now if to continue to live means fruitful labor I have nothing to say as to my preference. I am strongly appealed to from both sides. But if I should consult my own real desire, it is for the final release and for the being with Christ, for that is by far the best thing. But, on the other hand, I am assured that, for your sake, it is more necessary that I should continue to live; and therefore I know that I shall remain with you, that I may promote your advancement and your joy in your faith; so that, in Christ Jesus, your joy in me may abound through my being present with you again."

TWO THINGS AND A THIRD

Only two things of importance are mentioned by the Apostle up to this point, which might call for an expression of preference on his part. The one is a continuance of his life as a messenger of Christ, which, as he says, involves considerable labor. The other is the rest from his irksome surroundings which the sleep of death would afford. He tells the brethren that he is really unable to determine which of these two is preferable; the former would have advantages for the believers and the latter would have an advantage to himself, for aside from his privileges of service he felt that there was small incentive to continue to live. But there was yet a third thing which he did desire, about which there was no uncertainty and which he expressed as a thing much better than the undecided subject which he had just mentioned.

Those who translated our King James version, and many others of equal ability, have felt justified in making the Apostle say that he had a desire "to depart and to be with Christ." There has seemed to them defense for such action in the fact that the Greek word rendered "depart" is the same as that employed by the same Apostle in 2 Timothy 4:6, where he says: "The time of my departure is at hand." As a matter of fact, neither of these passages is translated as accurately as could be desired.

Literally, the Apostle says in Philippians 1:23: "Having a desire for the releasing." The Greek word here employed is to analüsai. Ana as a prefix is exactly correspondent to our English prefix re, and lüsai is readily recognizable, even without the Greek lexicon, as related to our English words loose and lease. Analyze is the English cognate form of the Greek word analüsai. If a thing is analyzed it means that it is broken up into its constituent parts; the component particles or elements are released from one another, either in one's mind or in fact. But in the literary or general sense, the exact English equivalent is release. It will be noted that in this word there is no indication whatever as to what course, if any, the released person or object would take after the release. The word in itself means neither depart nor return, though either of these thoughts might attach to the word if the circumstances surrounding the release were well enough known.

This word occurs only two other times in the New Testament, namely, Luke 12:36 and 2 Timothy 4:6. In the Luke passage the Master says: "And ye yourselves [be] like unto men that wait for their Lord, when he lets loose [analüsee] from the nuptial feast." In other words, 'when he disconnects or disengages himself from the social obligations which he took upon him when he went to the celebration.' Since he was not at home and the circumstance describes the Lord's servants as watching for him, it becomes a fair translation to use the word return, but it is confusing when compared with other usages of that word in the sacred writings. Our modern expressions, "when he breaks away," or "when the party breaks up" have a similar thought at the bottom of them.

The other instance in which the Apostle Paul uses this word manifestly refers to the time of his death. Here he says: "The time of my release [tees analüseos, release or dissolution] is at hand." It would be merely captious defense to say that this word is a noun and the other two words are verbs, and that thus the significance might be altered, because the words are identical in root and meaning. No amount of argument could prove to anyone who understands the Lord's plan that the Apostle meant return in this instance, for he had never been dead before. He evidently had reference to the time when he would be released from the labors and burdens which were his in the flesh and concerning which he wrote in another letter: "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from this body of death? (Romans 7:24) Again, it carries with it the thought of his dissolution, both socially and physically: the body would return to dust and the spirit of life into the care and keeping which God had provided, awaiting the day of "His appearing," when the faithful Paul should be raised incorruptible and glorious in the first resurrection.

Coming back to the expression of the 23rd verse of the first chapter of Philippians, the Apostle must have had reference neither to departing nor to returning directly, but simply to "the releasing;" that is, either to his own final release from death at the time of the first resurrection, or to Christ's return, when loosed from the heavens, which were to retain him until that time (Acts 3:21), and probably ambiguously uttered as meaning both things, for the two are inseparably linked together. Of one thing we are certain: he did not in this instance have reference to his own demise, because that item is one of the two things concerning which he said he had no preference. Had the inspired Apostle desired to convey the idea of 'going away or departing elsewhere' he would have continued to use the word porevomai, as he does one hundred and fifty times in the New Testament.

But the question might properly arise: 'Why did the Lord allow the Apostle to use the same word in 2 Timothy 4:6 as he does in Philippians 1:23, in the former case referring to his death, and in the latter case having evident reference to his release from death at Christ's second presence?' In response to this we cite the words of our Lord Jesus when he quoted from the prophet of old: "By hearing ye shall hear, and shall not understand; and seeing ye shall see and shall not perceive." It will be readily discernible that no one not possessing a general knowledge of God's plans and purposes would be able to understand and fit into their proper places these apparently inconsistent expressions. Plenty of opportunity is left for the wise ones of the earth to stumble, plenty of margin left for those who prefer to doubt.

"FOR YOUR INIQUITIES"

Question.—"Thus saith the Lord, Where is the bill of your mother's divorcement, whom I have put away? Or which of my creditors is it to whom I have sold you? Behold, for your iniquities have ye sold yourselves, and for your transgressions is your mother put away!" (Isaiah 50:1) What does this passage mean?

Answer.—It was a custom among the Jews that if a wife proved to be undesirable to her husband, she might be given a bill of divorcement and put away. (Deuteronomy 24:1; Matthew 19:6-8) Another part of their law provided that if any one got into debt he and his family might be sold for the debt, sold into a measure of service; that is, they could be compelled to give a certain amount of their time to the creditor to make good the obligation, or debt.

Now, the Lord is saying to these Jews, 'You are sold, but I have not sold you; it was not that I was in need. A debtor could not claim you for debt, as my household. It is not that I became involved and therefore must turn you over, lose control over you. I have no creditors, nobody could come upon me and take you away. I have not put away your mother, the Law Covenant: I still recognize the contract. I still agree to all that I engaged to do under that Law Covenant. Therefore, you are not put away illegally.

'Then what is the trouble? I wish you to think about this. Why is it that you are cast off into a foreign land, into Babylon? What is the reason I am not showing you favor? It is not because I have violated my obligations. The Law Covenant has not been put away by me. It is still in force. I still recognize it. It is not that you have been sold into slavery because I had a debt. Look to the reason. The reason, I tell you plainly is this: You are the violators of the Covenant, you have gone off into sin. I am merely chastening you that you may recover yourselves and return to me. The sooner you get this proper idea, and chasten yourselves and renew your covenant of faithfulness, the better it will be for you, and I will be ready to receive you.'

THE THIEF IN PARADISE

Question.—Does the Greek text of our Lord's words to the thief on the cross, "Verily I say unto thee this day, Thou shalt be with me in paradise," warrant the change of the comma from before "this day" to after it, as suggested in Volume Six of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES.

Answer.—Yes. Grammatically, whenever secmeron, "today," comes after a verb it belongs to that verb, unless it is separated from it and thrown into the next clause by the presence of the particle hoti, "that." See e. g. Mark 14:30; Luke 4:21; 19:9; Matthew 26:34. In the first and last texts hoti is translated, but in the Luke passages it is not, though in the Greek text. A Greek concordance will show how continually hoti is used to divide the clauses. The Hebrew idiom of "today" attached to the preceding verb is very common to Moses. See Deuteronomy 4:26, 40; 6:6; 8:19; 9:3; 11:26, 28; 30:15, 18, 19, and many others. A translation and an interpretation that makes our Lord himself contradict the Scriptures, cannot be correct; must of necessity be false. See further explanation in Volume Six, pages 667-670.

THE MARRIAGE OF THE LAMB

Question.—When will the marriage of the Lamb take place? Who will perform the ceremony?

Answer.—The marriage of the Lamb will come when "his wife hath made herself ready," in the end, the harvest, of this Gospel age. The bride is a multitudinous number and since this marriage began in 1878, its consummation will, we think, take place probably in 1918—forty years from the time it began. We are not sure that we have the matter of the marriage fully correct. What we say about it is merely our opinion. If the Lord shall see fit to take us home this year we shall of course rejoice. When the last member of the body shall have gone beyond the vail, the door will then be shut. After that time none will be recognized as of the bride class.

Then another work will be under way, pertaining to those who are called "the virgins, her companions, that follow her." After having passed through great tribulations, these also will be received on the other side of the vail, but not with the same degree of honor as the bride class. It will be to great honor, though they are not worthy of the highest place. But they will be worthy of the place which they will receive.

When thinking of the marriage ceremony, we are very apt to think of the marriage ceremonies of today, and to draw our conclusions from them. But this is a mistake. The marriage service among the Jews was very different from such as we have now. With the Jews, the father or the brother of the bride would make the arrangements. The bride had nothing whatever to do with it. There was a covenant entered into by which she was engaged to the prospective bridegroom, and certain papers were drawn up, stating what dowry she should have and what provision her husband should make for her in life. Then these papers were sealed.

That agreement constituted the engagement, the betrothal. Nothing more was to be done except that the would-be bridegroom must wait for a number of months, and then at the appropriate time, within a year, he would come to receive his bride to himself. During the interval he would be preparing the home for her. Should she in the meantime prove unfaithful, it would work a cancelation of the contract; for this covenant arrangement was official. When the time came for the bridegroom to receive the bride, he came to the home of the bride, who was immediately received by him and taken to her new home. There was nothing in the way of a ceremony. The friends would then be ushered into that home for a feast, which would last for a week or so. The taking away of the bride was often in the evening, but not always so; it was sometimes in the morning.

THE TIME OF BETROTHAL

All this is the picture, we believe, that the Lord would give us respecting the church and her relationship with Christ. The members of the church do not come into relationship with Christ until the Father first draws them. The Lord said: "No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him." (John 6:44) After the Father has drawn us, the contract is entered into—that we make our consecration. Having done this we receive some token of the Father's favor—we receive the earnest, the holy Spirit. We become espoused to Christ. Then after we have proved faithful to him through the remainder of this life, the great One who is to be the Bridegroom comes to receive us to himself. Jesus, having gone to prepare a place for us, will come again that we may be with him in the heavenly condition.—John 14:2, 3.

As for the marriage feast, it will delay awhile after the bride has entered in, waiting for the bridesmaids; for the Scriptures promise that they shall be present at the festival—the opportunity for expressing good wishes.—Psa. 45:14.

The antitypical betrothal began in the Pentecostal outpouring. There the church was betrothed to her Lord; and the betrothal will not be ended until the Lord has taken to himself the last member of the bride class. We do not regard the Jewish marriage as a type, but as a symbol, a figure of the marriage of the Lamb.

The church class is not at first ready for the high position to which she is called. Indeed, the Scriptures represent that the Lord Jesus was made ready for his high position. (Heb. 2:10) But he was, to begin with, "holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners." We, on the contrary, are imperfect. We need a good deal of preparation in order to make us ready for the glorious position to which we have been called. Among other things, we are to do a certain embroidery work, the pattern for which was given in our Lord's own character.

THE WEDDING PREPARATION

This embroidery represents the fruits of the Spirit; and we are to copy our Lord's meekness, his gentleness, his brotherly kindness, his love. We are to copy his full consecration—to do the Father's will, in every sense of the word. We are to delight in him, we are to do his will, to regard him as our Head, and to order all the affairs of life with that thought in mind.

The bride class must have not only a wedding garment, but an embroidered wedding garment. It must be also without spot or wrinkle. The bride class is a very special order; hence the particularity represented in this robe. Its members are to assist each other in the matter of preparing the wedding robe, and the class will have made itself fully ready for entering into the marriage when the last member shall have passed under the vail.

In the 45th Psalm the picture is given of the Bridegroom bringing his bride into the presence of the great King, Jehovah. Later, the bridesmaids, the companions of the bride, follow her. It will be after the bride class is glorified that she will be presented to the Father—apparently very shortly after her glorious change. The great company, we think, will be presented very soon after; for the Scriptures tell us that they will be present, by invitation, at the marriage supper of the Lamb. This seems to indicate that the principal part of the joys and festivities attending this will be deferred until the great company will be there to participate in them. —Revelation 19:9.

INTERESTING LETTERS

THINKS THE LORD HIMSELF IS SPEAKING TO US!

BELOVED BROTHER RUTHERFORD:—

You will be no doubt surprised to hear that the Seventh Volumes are still missing from South Africa. Our dear Brother Johnston received two copies, and Sister Reeson of Durban, brought one over from England recently. These three are the sum total of Volume Seven in this country.

In the Lord's providence I was the first in the country to read Volume Seven. As you are aware, Brother Johnston was on a pilgrim tour. On her way to Durban Sister Reeson came to the WATCH TOWER office here; and to my unbounded astonishment and pleasure she produced the volume. I could scarcely restrain my tears of joy on handling the precious "wages of the Lord." The dear sister had only a few hours to spare; but I got through 175 pages as quickly as I could. I cannot describe my feelings to you as I read. I was not large enough to contain all the joy that the Lord was literally pouring into me. Who of the Lord's little ones can doubt for a moment the authenticity of this volume? It is the Lord himself speaking to us. Praise be to Jehovah's holy name and to his dear Son!

When Sister Reeson left, I was wondering what would happen next. The following day Brother Johnston's copy turned up. When I went to the office, the volume was lying on the table out of its cover. As Brother Johnston was expected back in a day or two, I made the most of my opportunity, and read until about four o'clock in the morning. The next day I had the volume finished.

I have also read "Light after Darkness" and "Harvest Siftings No. 2." My thought is that the great adversary is attempting to sidetrack you from smiting his evil forces, and he is failing miserably. Not one of the Lord's true sheep will doubt for a moment regarding the channel through which the "meat in due season" is coming. Each WATCH TOWER is a remarkable testimony to the fact.

My heart burns with love to you and to all of "like precious faith." The goal is in sight. The vail is thin; and soon we shall see him who died for us, and shall be presented to Jehovah himself, the very essence of love. The Lord bless you and keep you is my earnest prayer.

In Christian love and service,

Your brother in Christ. H. P. WILLIAMS.—S. Africa.

REPORTS DISAFFECTION SLIGHT

DEAR BRETHREN:—

Instances are brought to my attention where members of the opposing faction are endeavoring to confuse and mislead the Lord's saints into believing that there is a split in many of the classes, and that a considerable proportion of the class numbers are taking side with the opposers of the SOCIETY. As for instance, it is reported that at Pittsburgh 180 have deflected from the ecclesia and are now meeting with the opposition class; whereas in my recent visit to Pittsburgh I learned there is no split, and that the dozen or so sympathizers with the opposers of the SOCIETY are still meeting regularly with the 450 or more members of the Pittsburgh congregation.

As you know I have been regularly in the pilgrim service since the first of last November, and in all that time I have found only about four classes in which there are opponents of the SOCIETY or any antagonistic to the "Finished Mystery" —in fact very few who have any sympathy with the opposition movement; and yet as I move along from class to class, I am told that this or that class ahead of me is reported to be in trouble along this line. When I reach there I find nothing of the kind, and the class members manifest much surprise at having been so wrongly reported. In the few instances where I have found wavering ones I have experienced but little difficulty in setting them straight. By the Lord's grace, and by my knowledge of the facts, I have been enabled to show clearly why the Seventh Volume is really the posthumous work of Pastor Russell, and when the facts are set forth the hesitating ones usually grasp the situation and thank me for having made the matter plain.

I notice, however, that the brethren who are decidedly in support of the opposers are amongst those who are absent from the meeting where I bring the Seventh Volume into my talk. It seems to be the pleasure of the Lord to favor and encourage only those whose hearts are right. I would not presume to judge anyone, but experience teaches me that divine favor rests with the dear ones who are not grounded in the teachings of error and misrepresentation, but who adhere to the policy of the SOCIETY which all along has been the divine instrument for comfort and blessing to the Lord's dear saints. I am heartily glad to find so vast a majority in full harmony, and to note the sweet spirit of Christ manifested by the ecclesias in general.

Your brother in Christ, J. A. BOHNET.—Pilgrim.

REJOICING IN THE TRUTH AT 68

DEAR BRETHREN:—

I desire to express my joy and feeling to you for the unspeakable grace our heavenly Father has been pleased to bestow upon me. He pulled me out of that state of ignorance, darkness and superstition, in which I had been unfortunately plunged, first by having spent the first twenty years of my life as a Roman Catholic, afterward as a member of the Presbyterian Church for some time, and finally as an unbeliever for a number of years.

The blessedness I have experienced since I came to the knowledge of God's wonderful Present Truth is due absolutely to the efforts of that "faithful servant" of our Lord, the late Pastor Russell. Blessed be his memory; for the "Crown of Life" promised to every overcomer on this side the vail must have been his reward.

By the grace of God, I have had the privilege and opportunity to read and study the first six volumes of STUDIES from his pen, and also THE WATCH TOWER you have been kind enough to send me since November, 1916. Being willing to learn, I prayed the Almighty Father to help me, and, blessed be the Lord, the result was that I was brought down to the feet of our Master and Savior Jesus Christ. Brother Nettleton, the elder of our Union Avenue Ecclesia, always stood by me, assisting me in all my wants most generously.

I am an old man, 68 years of age, a widower without children. I am poor and afflicted with bodily pains and infirmities to such extent that, being unable to earn my living by ordinary work, I have been compelled, since a few years, to become an inmate of a benevolent institution. But although poor and afflicted in the flesh, I feel like singing God's praises constantly. Being a French-Canadian, I am thoroughly well educated in the French language, besides being familiar with the English and Italian languages.

Dear Brethren of the Editorial Committee, my prayers go up to the throne of grace for you, and may our heavenly Father help us all to carry on to the end the good work of spreading the glorious Gospel truth, "while it is yet day light for the night will soon come when no one shall be able to work."

Your brother in Christ. JOSEPH DAOUST.—Can.

"CONVICTION TO THE CONSECRATED"

DEAR BRETHREN:—

Please accept my very best thanks for Volume Seven, STUDIES. I am enjoying my study of this work greatly, and think, the more I peruse it, that it is compiled in a masterly way. The interpretations carry conviction to the consecrated mind as to their truth, all being in perfect harmony with the teachings we have received in the preceding six volumes. I have no doubt that we are now receiving the meat in due season through this Seventh Volume for which I desire to thank our loving heavenly Father as the great Author of all the glorious plan. With much love in the Lord.

Your loving brother, MORTON EDGAR.—Scotland.

"TONGUE FILLED WITH SINGING"

DEAR BRETHREN:—

I have hesitated some time about writing you, realizing what an enormous daily mail you must receive. But I can remain silent no longer; I so much desire to be identified with you.

I came out of the Baptist denomination in October last, took the Vow, made my consecration, symbolizing it at the Cleveland Convention, November 18.

What a wonderful experience the coming out of Babylon was! I thought I was making an enormous sacrifice to leave the denomination and associations of a lifetime. And now, brethren, after being out of it for only six months and looking back at it with the searchlight of God's truth, I can see what I really did leave—"a great pile of husks and junk." When I remember how I believed it, taught it, and enjoyed it, I stand amazed. What am I that he was mindful of me? It is wonderful to be brought out of darkness into his marvelous light.

While I feel like the eleventh hour laborer, I am rejoicing in the hope of my calling, and striving daily to be worthy to see my dear Redeemer face to face.

Like all of the friends, words cannot express my feelings of gratitude for our dear Brother Russell; so I will only say, Praise God for the Seventh Messenger.

Yours in the service of our Lord and King.

G. L. B.—Ohio.

EXPRESSES LOVE AND CONFIDENCE

DEAR BRETHREN IN THE ANOINTED:—

Grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to you with our love.

It is our privilege at this time to express to you our love.

We desire also to inform you of our confidence in you as the Lord's channel of blessing and to tell you of our sympathy with you in this your hour of trial.

THE WATCH TOWER is still full of sweet encouragement and refreshment and our hope is being strengthened by the prospect of early participation, while we are bestirring ourselves the more in order to the securing of the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus; laboring the more diligently "if by any means we might attain unto the resurrection of the dead."

Be assured, in conclusion, of our constant prayers on your behalf.

Your brother in the Lord,

THE BRIGHTON ECCLESIA.—England.

SATISFIED WITH THE FOOD

DEAR BRETHREN:—

I am attaching my check for $——— for Good Hopes fund. I assure you that it is a genuine pleasure for me to forward this and sincerely regret that circumstances will not permit my sending a great deal more.

It seems to me the March 15th issue of THE WATCH TOWER was about the most inspiring we have had for a long time, particularly the first article; and as a brother expressed it last evening, I am thoroughly satisfied with the food the Lord is still dispensing through THE TOWER. Undoubtedly it continues to be the greatest journal published on earth, and I hope it is the Lord's will to permit us to continue to receive it unto the end.

Earnestly praying our heavenly Father's richest blessings on the work of the Society, and all engaged in it, particularly those in places of responsibility, I am,

Your brother by his grace, P. H. G.—Tenn.

TAKE FRESH COURAGE

DEAR BRETHREN:—

Greetings in the Lord. Have just received our WATCH TOWER of March 1st. After reading it very carefully, noting its contents, its ring and tone, we take fresh courage.

Dear brethren, continue the good work. The Lord has said: "No weapon formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord."—Isa. 54:17.

We do hereby express by unanimous vote our confidence in the integrity of the present head and management of the Society.

Your brethren in the Lord, HOUSTON ECCLESIA.—Tex.

IN RE SEVENTH VOLUME STUDY

Section 22 of Title XI of the Espionage Act provides: "Whoever in aid of any foreign government shall knowingly or wilfully have possession of or control over any property or paper designed or intended for use or which is used as the means of violating any penal statute or any of the rights or obligations of the United States under any treaty or the law of nations, shall be fined not more than $1,000, or imprisoned not more than two years, or both."

United States District Attorneys and other local officers, we are informed, have compelled the brethren to surrender their personal copies of Volume VII of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES, and have broken up Bible classes. If such surrender is being compelled without search warrant, or such meetings broken up without proper complaint filed charging that such meetings are in violation of law, then such surrender and such breaking up of meetings are in violation of law.

The Seventh Volume of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES is a commentary upon the Bible. We do not understand that the Government desires to interfere with such study at all, but some over-zealous local officials have interfered as above, which we believe is in violation of their instructions; and this matter is being called to the attention of the Department of Justice at Washington. We have no information that the Department of Justice has ruled that the possession by any member of our Association of a copy of Volume VII is in violation of the Espionage Act; and we do not believe that department has made such ruling. We make this statement upon advice of counsel.

KINGDOM NEWS No. 3

KINGDOM NEWS No. 3 is now on the press and will be ready for distribution within a few days. You will receive the same number of copies that were sent to you of the B. S. M. No. 99. We advise that the Volunteer Captains arrange the work and get these papers into the hands of the people as quickly as possible. We regard No. 3 as one of the most important issues of the Volunteer matter, especially at this time. We have had each issue of KINGDOM NEWS carefully gone over by lawyers and other competent persons and are certain that these papers contain not one word that is in any way violative of the law of the land; and therefore there should be no difficulty in putting them out. Where local officers raise objection, ask them to read the paper carefully and then they will see that it is entirely proper, in the interest of the people and the nation, and contains a great deal of information which is particularly pertinent to the time in which we are living. Be diligent and get these issues out quickly. The "dark night" is near at hand, when no man can work.

IN RE PUBLIC MEETINGS

The persecution of the International Bible Students Association has aroused a great desire in the minds of many to know what we believe and teach. We strongly recommend to the friends the great importance of well located halls and properly advertised meetings. This door of opportunity should be quickly entered, that the people may have the truth concerning the Lord's kingdom, which is at hand. One public address should be given in each place on "THE WORLD HAS ENDED—MILLIONS NOW LIVING WILL NEVER DIE.". Let us be zealous in proclaiming the truth while we have opportunity.

CHRONOLOGICAL CHART OF REVELATION

We now have in stock Blue Print Charts of Revelation similar to the one in the Question Booklet of Vol. VII. Size 3 ft. x 6 ft. printed on linen. Price per chart $2 postpaid. These charts are very helpful in class study.

VOL. XXXIX BROOKLYN, N. Y., MAY 15, 1918 No. 10

FAULTLESS BEFORE HIS PRESENCE

"But ye, beloved, building up yourselves on your most holy faith, praying in the Holy Spirit, keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life."—Jude 20, 21.

While the storm against God's little ones increases in fury, those who are anxious to see the heavenly Father's face are setting the things of their house in order, that in due time they may be presented faultless before the presence of his glory. That will be the climax of all Christian experience. The child of God loves to contemplate that blessed time. At the moment of awakening in the morning, the first thought is: "Dear Father, keep me this day so near to thee that, if this be my last on earth, it may please thee to permit thy child to see thy glorious countenance." And when the day's tasks are done, when we have squared our accounts with the Lord and know that all is well, then, as we are folded in the embrace of sweet rest, our last thought is: "As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness; I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness."

Seeing by faith this glorious prospect before us, what can we do to make sure of attaining that prize? The above Scripture answers: "Keep yourselves in the love of God." The importance of being kept in the love of God cannot be overstated. St. Jude emphasizes this by pointing out certain stumbling stones or pitfalls that will take God's children out of his love, and announces certain rules which, if followed, will keep one in the love of God. The writings of all the apostles are for the building up of the church on the foundation of holy faith. They wrote aforetime for the benefit of those upon whom the end of the age has come. Jude was not an apostle of the Lord, but one of his brethren, and his epistle contains a message of great value to the church. How like the loving Father to make provision for his dear children, that they might be sustained in the hour of greatest test upon them! With eager mind and thankful heart should each consecrated one avail himself of such provisions.

HUMILITY OF FIRST IMPORTANCE

The first essential to serving God in an acceptable manner is to have a proper appreciation of one's own self, and to have in mind always that Jehovah is the great first cause, with whom none can be compared. It is he who measures the waters of the deep in the hollow of his hand, and metes out the heavens with a span; who comprehends the dust of the earth and weighs the mountains in scales and the hills in the balance; with whom the nations of earth are counted as the small dust of the balance—he who is the author of the great plan of the ages that is working out in an orderly progressive manner, each attribute acting in its proper time and in exact harmony with the other attributes. His love was so wonderfully manifested by sending his only-Begotten Son to die, that man, the very worm of the dust of the earth, might have life and partake of the riches of glory.—Isaiah 40:12-17.

Such contemplations enabled Brother Jude to have a proper appreciation of his position. He was a preacher of God's Word; yet he applied to himself no high-sounding titles, such as Right Reverend, Doctor of Divinity, Bishop or Cardinal, but delighted to designate himself a slave of Jesus Christ. To be the Lord's slave is much to be preferred to all the titles, honors and emoluments that can be conferred upon one man. From this example of humility manifested by Jude we learn a lesson of much value. As our knowledge of the character of our loving Master increases, the more we rejoice to be his slaves. That such an attitude of mind is pleasing to the Father, we are assured by St. Peter's words: "God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble." Pride and ambition, the very opposite of humility, have been the cause of many falling away from the love of God. With confidence, then, we can say that humility is of first importance to keep ourselves in the love of God. The more we realize our dependency upon the Lord, the safer is our position.—1 Peter 5:5.

"Keep thou my way, O Lord;
Myself I cannot guide;
Nor dare I trust my falt'ring steps
One moment from thy side."

MERCY, PEACE AND LOVE

Jude, the loving slave of Jesus Christ, addresses his words not to the world, nor to those who have merely named the name of Christ, but "to them that are sanctified by God the Father, and preserved in Jesus Christ, and called. Thus we are sure that the entire epistle applies to those who claim, at least, to be in the Lord. Sweetly to the brethren, he says, "Mercy unto you, and peace, and love, be multiplied." Clearly, then, this shows that one who would be kept in the love of God must be merciful to his brethren, not magnifying the faults of his brother and holding him up to the ridicule of others; but looking with loving compassion upon his brother's shortcomings and weaknesses, and having always a keen desire to render him aid as a new creature in Christ Jesus. "Blessed are the merciful; for they shall obtain mercy." St. Jude makes it clear that mercy is one of the essential rules to observe, saying, "Keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life."

The degree of one's consecration is often determined by the sincere effort made to keep the commandments of the Lord. The servant of God is enjoined that he shall not strive with his brethren. Strife indulged in would ultimately exclude one from entering the kingdom. (Galatians 5:21) Sad it is to note that some of those who profess full consecration to the Lord seem given to strife and contention. After having been long in the narrow way, after the brethren have traveled together in harmony for a long time, suddenly strife arises amongst them. This is one of the means the adversary seizes upon to keep the Lord's little ones away from him and to keep them out of God's love. St. Peter wrote: "Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." Would that the dear friends, who have desired to see the Lord, would keep this admonition ever before their minds!

We offer the suggestion that whenever strife arises in the class those engaged in it at once meditate upon the question: Will this help me or prevent me from being presented faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy? "Let nothing be done through strife or vainglory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves." Following this rule, peace would prevail amongst the brethren. God has made it clear that he will grant life everlasting to none except those who grow in love. Those who will be granted the privilege of seeing his face must develop the highest degree of love—a love that leads one to sacrifice his own rights, privileges and comforts, yea, even life itself, that others may be blessed. Such is the kind of love manifested by Jesus, who died for us. To those who will be the members of his body and whom he will present faultless before the Father, he says: "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another even as I have loved you." With these Scriptures before us it is easy to see why St. Jude says that mercy, peace and love should be multiplied unto those who are following in the Master's footsteps.

FAITH OF THE SAINTS

Only the faithful unto death will be presented faultless before the presence of his glory with joy unspeakable. The positive promise is that such shall see the Lord in his beauty and glory. (Hosea 2:19, 20; Revelation 2:10) Then the author of the epistle emphasizes the necessity of continuing faithful: "Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints."

The common salvation here mentioned is not an ordinary one, but is that salvation which is common to all the saints. "Ye are all called in one hope of your calling" to membership in the royal family of heaven. None is called to any other position. Our hope of attaining to that exalted place is based upon faith in God's arrangements, all of which radiate from the great ransom sacrifice. The faith once delivered to the saints the Apostle Paul specifically mentions in 1 Corinthians 15:3-5. To contend for this faith does not mean that one should indulge in strife or manifest a bitterness of spirit; but it means steadfastly holding to the great doctines of truth which the Lord has graciously given to us. Every doctrine or theory offered can be measured and its truth or falsehood definitely determined by the ransom. If out of harmony with the philosophy of the ransom, then we may always know that it is false. Holding fast to these fundamental truths is absolutely vital to keeping ourselves in the love of God. Abiding in him faithfully to the end will assure us of being presented faultless before the glory of his presence.

ENEMIES OF THE TRUTH

Satan has seized upon every means to destroy the seed of promise; and one of the methods he has employed has been to corrupt the faith once delivered to the saints. Jude mentions this in verse 4 of his epistle. First there came into the church, at the instance of Satan, heathen philosophers, who embraced the name of Christ for a purpose, but who denied the merit of his sacrifice. Such men substitute their own theories, acquired from Satan, for those of Christ Jesus and the apostles. Stealthily they came in, until they acquired power; and then they boldly proclaimed their God-dishonoring doctrines before the world. Satan's original lie—the doctrine of inherent immortality of man—came prominently to the front; and then his kindred doctrines—the mass and the trinity—followed quickly after, these denying the wonderful and beautiful plan of God, and indirectly, if not directly, denying the value of the great sacrifice of our Lord Jesus Christ.

It has ever been the policy of Satan to thrust in amongst good men some ungodly men, against whom St. Jude in this epistle warns the church at all times. He describes them as "ungodly men, turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness." Lasciviousness means looseness; and therefore the words mean a loose handling of the Word of God, or wresting the Scriptures for a selfish purpose. It seems that the Adversary has at all stages of the church succeeded in getting some such men amongst the true sheep. How may we know them? "By their fruits ye shall know them." (Matthew 7:16-20) Such manifest the fruit of the flesh and not the fruit of the spirit. (Galatians 5:19, 20) Only those who accept and serve the truth in the love of it and who continue in the faith unto the end are safe from this snare of the Adversary; and such only will ultimately receive the approval of the Lord.

FOREWARNED OF PITFALLS

Jude then enumerates a number of things which will take the Christian out of the love of God and that will make it impossible for him ever to be presented faultless before the presence of his glory. Verses 5-16, inclusive, give examples of these things. Unfaithfulness and disloyalty lead certainly to disaster. The experiences of Israel foreshadowed such results. The people of Israel in Egypt typed, or illustrated the church in the world. The Christian is here reminded that after God had miraculously delivered the Israelites out of Egypt, he destroyed them because they believed not; that is to say, because they failed to continue faithful to the Lord. The child of God has been translated from the kingdom of darkness (of this world) to the kingdom of God's dear Son; he by faith dwells in the light of heavenly things. To fall into the pit of unfaithfulness means certain destruction. All the trying experiences through which the Christian passes are permitted to test his faith and loyalty. "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even your faith."

DEMONS AS EXAMPLES

"The angels which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation, he hath reserved in everlasting chains, under darkness, unto the judgment of the great day." It seems clear that this fact concerning the demons is here recorded to teach a valuable lesson to the new creatures in Christ Jesus. These angels at one time were creatures of glory and beauty. The first estate of such was that of usefulness, in which Jehovah placed them. Having assumed human bodies, they yielded to the baneful influence of Satan, debauched the daughters of men and filled the earth with violence. So great was their wickedness that God imprisoned them in tartarus until their judgment time, at which time those continuing in wickedness will be forever destroyed. The Lord Jesus, through the Revelator, foretold the loosing of these angels and intimated that such loosing would take place after the saints of the living God were sealed. It seems clear that the sealing is now completed and that the demons are loose. The evidence of this is daily increasing. Without a doubt the judgment of these evil ones is now in progress.—1 Corinthians 6:3.

The first estate of the Christian is that of blessedness, as by faith he rests in the finished work of Christ Jesus and looks forward to the time when he may possess his glorious body and be faultless. From the time he is begotten and anointed he may be said to be a spirit being. "If any man be in Christ Jesus, he is a new creature; old things have passed away, all things have become new." "Ye are not in the flesh, but in the spirit, if so be that the spirit of God dwell in you." (Romans 8:9) Truly, then, he is a spirit creature, having his habitation in an earthly vessel. Should such a new creature willingly return to the things of the world, he may for a time be kept in darkness concerning God's great plan. He may come to the point where he will even deny that there is such a thing as the second death. Satan and the fallen angels may induce him to believe that God will save every one and that, therefore, he is in no danger of destruction. He may continue in this attitude and condition of darkness until his final judgment. Thus is explained how some, once rejoicing in the merit of Christ's sacrifice, become blind. The safety of the Christian from such a pitfall is to avoid all demon influence or fellowship with any one who is under the influence of demons, not even engaging such in conversation. "I will keep my mouth with a bridle while the wicked is before me."—Psalm 39:1.

Further illustrating pitfalls, the writer of the epistle refers to the people of Sodom and Gomorrah, who, "giving themselves over to fornication, and going after strange flesh, are set for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire." Fornication as applied to the new creature refers to illicit relationship with things inimical to the new creature. Once enlightened with the truth and tasting of the heavenly things, any voluntary fellowship with evil spirits would lead such a one ultimately into destruction. Even the beginning of this for the satisfaction of curiosity is exceedingly dangerous. Our vow of faithfulness particularly emphasizes this point, and we call upon the Lord to enable us to resist everything akin to spiritism and occultism, knowing that such influence is from the Adversary.

SPEAKING EVIL AND DESPISING DOMINION

"Likewise also these filthy dreamers defile the flesh, despise dominion, and speak evil of dignities. Yet Michael the archangel, when contending with the devil, he disputed about the body of Moses, durst not bring against him a railing accusation, but said, The Lord rebuke thee. But these speak evil of those things which they know not; but what they know naturally, as brute beasts, in those things they corrupt themselves." Christ is the head of the church; God is the head of Christ. "God has set the members in the body as it pleased him." Any arrangement the Lord has made in the church is therefore a part of his dominion. The disposition to despise the Lord's arrangement, disorderly conduct, walking disorderly, all lead to the pitfalls here mentioned.

A dignity, or dignitary, is one who stands high amongst the people. All the members of the body of Christ will ultimately be kings and priests unto God and unto Christ. Those this side the vail who are faithfully running for the prize are counted in as members of the body, being designated now as "the feet of him." Therefore all such are "dignitaries" within the meaning of this text. To speak evil, then, of such means to speak evil against the Lord. The Lord loves the members of his body, and Jehovah looks upon all of them as the apple of his eye (Zechariah 2:7, 8); and thus we can understand how displeasing it is to the Father and to the great Master for one claiming to be consecrated to speak evil of the brethren. Discussing this same matter, the Apostle James says: "Speak not evil one of another, brethren. He that speaketh evil of his brother, and judgeth his brother, speaketh evil of the law, and judgeth the law; but if thou judge the law, thou art not a doer of the law, but a judge. There is one lawgiver, who is able to save and to destroy: who art thou that judgest another?"—James 4:11, 12.

Law means a rule of action. God has provided his own law as a rule of action which governs and controls the members of the body of Christ. Therefore any one who speaks evil against God's children speaks against the law of God and sets himself up as a judge of God's law. And any one who takes this position cannot be fully obedient to the law; for it is contrary to God's law to indulge in evil-speaking. Thus the Apostle makes it plain that Jehovah is the lawgiver and he has the power to destroy, and that he is the judge, and that no member of the body is authorized to pronounce judgment against another.

In verse 9 Jude says that Jesus in his prehuman existence as God's representative did not indulge in a railing accusation even against Satan, but merely said, "Jehovah rebuke thee." From this we gather the lesson that the new creature in Christ is never to indulge in bringing a railing accusation against any one. It is not our business to rebuke or pass sentence upon others. The province of the Christian is to proclaim the message of God's truth always manifesting the spirit of love, remembering that Jehovah is the judge. "Recompense to no man evil for evil. Provide things honest in the sight of all men. If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men. Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves; but rather give place unto wrath; for it is written, Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord."—Romans 12:17-19.

In verse 10, St. Jude proves that one who indulges in evil-speaking is using the natural mind, the mind of the flesh; and that in thus doing he corrupts himself as a new creature in Christ. Basing a conclusion upon evil surmising and giving expression to that surmising by evil words shows an evil condition of heart. Without a pure heart it would be impossible to be kept in the love of God. Therefore we are admonished, "Speak evil of no man." "Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life."

THREE CLASSES DESCRIBED

In verses 11-13, inclusive, St. Jude gives a description of three classes that come in amongst the Lord's people, namely, Cain, Balaam and Core. Cain yielded to evil suggestions from the Adversary and permitted his heart to be poisoned against his own brother. Hatred was developed there, which led him on to murder his brother. The new creature in Christ who is once illuminated, and who afterwards harbors evil in his heart against another, may be led to the point of hatred. Of such St. John says, "Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer; and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him."—1 John 3:15.

Balaam was a teacher of falsehoods for profit. And thus is pictured a class who, even though enlightened and knowing better, willingly teach that which is false, that they might receive profits from men in the way of emoluments and honor, or position and preferment. Thus is the Christian warned against taking any course that is prompted by a motive other than that of a pure, loving desire to serve the Lord and his people.

Core, or Korah, pictures a class that refuses to hold the head; that is to say, who have not the proper respect or regard for Christ Jesus, the head of the church, but who walk after their own selfish desires and insist on their own selfish ways. These at one time had places amongst the elect in the church. The Adversary injects into the mind a thought leading to the desire to have one's own way; and where such a one manifests a selfish and stubborn disposition he is in danger of the pitfall described in Core's experience.

How many of the Lord's people may be drawn into one of these classes is not known, but we hope very few. To enable his people to escape these pitfalls, the warning evidently was recorded in the Scriptures. It is always helpful for each one to examine himself or herself to see that none of these examples apply, that he is free from any such manifestations of the wrong spirit.

"SPOTS IN YOUR FEAST"

If one finds himself disposed to go to the class for any selfish purpose, as for instance, for the purpose of asking catch questions, for criticism, or fault-finding, or for the purpose of entrapping or confusing any of the Lord's little ones, he should awaken to the fact at once that this is a pitfall into which the Adversary is leading him. St. Jude describes such as "spots in your feasts of love, when they feast with you, feeding themselves without reverence." Any assembly of God's people for the purpose of building one another up on their most holy faith is a feast of love; and any one who permits himself to mar such a feast by a wrongful course is here described as a spot upon such feast of love. Continuing in such a course would take him out of the love of God. The Apostle admonishes all of the Lord's little ones, saying, "By love serve one another."—Galatians 5:13.

Again, these unruly ones are described as "clouds without water." Clouds are vessels bearing water, and are distributed over the earth that they might drop the refreshing rain upon the fields and flowers. In the hot, dry seasons, when refreshment is needed, a cloud without water is useless. Water is a symbol of truth. The Lord's people are vessels for bearing the truth one to another to refresh the thirsty souls. Concerning such, the Apostle says: "Be ye filled with the spirit," meaning that we should be full of the Lord's love and his message of truth and gladly give it out for the refreshing and blessing of others. Thus the new creature grows and develops by serving others in love.

The writer also pictures this class as "trees without fruit." If a tree fails to bring forth fruit the gardener digs it up by the roots and casts it into the fire for destruction. One of the Lord's little ones that fails, after much opportunity, to bring forth the fruits and graces of the spirit is useless, and therefore would be removed. "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit." (John 15:8) Those who have been once enlightened by the Holy Spirit and who afterward lose it are described in verse 13 as "raging waves, . . . foaming out their own shame." And thus are we warned against any development of spirit which leads in this direction; and thus may we know how to avoid those who are manifesting the wrong spirit. One who repudiates the truth and turns against the Lord's little ones becomes far more violent and more severe in persecution than those who have never known the Lord.

"MURMURERS, COMPLAINERS"

The three classes above mentioned are again referred to in verse 16 as "murmurers, complainers, walking after their own desires; and their mouth speaketh great swelling words, having men's persons in admiration because of advantage." Such prefer the approval of men rather than the approval of God. They murmur and complain when they have not the honor and approval of men. Verses 14-16 clearly show that this epistle has its special application in the close of the age. The Adversary has even sought to destroy The Christ; and it is reasonable to expect that he would make a last desperate effort to destroy the "feet" members. This is particularly borne out by the words of the Lord addressed to Satan, "Thou shalt bruise his heel." The "heel" members are the last of his body to pass beyond the vail into the kingdom. The lesson, then, which we gather from this warning of St. Jude is that we should avoid the spirit of murmuring or complaining; that we should not seek our selfish desires; and that we should not desire to please men, but rather to please God.

Lovingly, then, Brother Jude reminds the church of the words of admonition and warning spoken aforetime by the apostles of the Lord Jesus Christ; "How that they told you there should be mockers in the last time who should walk after their own ungodly lusts." This describes a class once having a knowledge of the truth, who later repudiate the messenger and the message of the Lord sent to the church through him. Moved by a wrong spirit they, he stated, would manifest the cunning disposition of the wolf, not sparing the flock, but seeking with perverse talk to draw away disciples after themselves. "These be they who separate themselves, sensual, not having the spirit." Such forsake the truth in its beauty and simplicity. Such depart from its spirit and, exercising the fleshly mind, gratify the ambitions and tastes of the old nature. Warning against such a disposition and showing that such a spirit would take one out of God's love, St. Jude adds: "But ye, my dearly beloved, building yourselves up on the basis of your most holy faith and praying in the Holy Spirit, keep yourselves safe in the love of God, waiting for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ, which will result in life everlasting."

Then St. Jude clearly intimates that there will be some who will have a greater degree of wilfulness, and these will succeed in entrapping others to follow after them. He then advises that there is a clear distinction which we should observe in dealing with them. In proportion as we find the brethren to be copies of the Lord in heart, in motive, in intention, in loving zeal for righteousness and truth, we should manifest greater love and consideration for them. The Lord Jesus set us an example in this behalf. He thus shows us that he desires his followers to treat such as walk after the flesh in a different manner from that in which we treat those who manifest a greater degree of his spirit. Toward all we are to be tender-hearted, and even though their garments are much spotted, our efforts should be by word and precept to try to save them as brands plucked from the fire. "Above all, exercising fervent [overspreading] love, because such love covers a multitude of defects." (1 Peter 4:7, 8) With fear and trembling should we walk before the Lord, watching and praying, being at all times of sober mind, avoiding the pitfalls and observing the rules that will keep us in the love of God.

At times the journey becomes wearisome and we long for home. Our wise and loving Father knows just what things we have need of that we might be made meet for his use in glory. He is too wise to err and too loving to be unkind. The conditions imposed are exacting upon all who will ultimately occupy the favored position of joint-heirship with Christ Jesus in his kingdom. Snares and pitfalls are many along the way; yet a means is provided of escaping from them all. The rules for keeping ourselves in the love of God are made plain and explicit. Constant vigilance and diligent perseverance are required; and these are accompanied by many fiery trials, under which conditions the child of God must serve. And yet, all is but a reasonable service. We must share the ignominy of our Lord and be faithful followers in his footsteps that we might share his dignity and majesty.

Often we feel so weak, so inadequate to meet our enemies, because they are legion and very subtle. We know we must continue this warfare even unto death. We know we must suffer persecution. And yet, when we look at self, we often think, How could God perfect one like me to be meet for his use in glory? And then there comes to us great consolation in the words of St. Paul: "It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption [immortality]. It is sown in dishonor; it is raised in glory. It is sown in weakness; it is raised in power. It is sown a natural [animal] body; it is raised a spiritual body." And then we know that if we hold fast the beginning of our confidence with rejoicing firm unto the end, such glory, and immortality will be our portion, through the merit of him who bought us and justified us before God.

All who have fled for refuge to this glorious hope set before us find great consolation in the promises upon which this hope is based. With abiding confidence we feel that our anchorage is sure within the vail, in Christ Jesus, our Lord and head. The character of each one in the body of Christ must be perfected by fiery experiences, that the dross might be destroyed and the gold made manifest. How beautiful, then, will these creatures be! God predestinated that it should be so. The beloved St. Paul strengthens and consoles us with the words, "He hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be [ultimately] holy and without blame before him, in love; having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of his will, . . . that in the dispensation of the fulness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven and which are on earth; even in him: in whom also we have obtained an inheritance, being predestinated according to the purpose of him who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will; that we should be to the praise of his glory, who first trusted in Christ."—Ephesians 1:4-11.

"BEAUTIFUL ARE THE FEET OF HIM"

Dear, loving, tired feet members of the body of Christ, despised and rejected as was the Head, hated of all nations for his name's sake; yet beautiful they are and how blessed their portion! Beautiful as they declare the message of Messiah's kingdom to the nations of earth now in travail. Beautiful as they bear the reproaches that fall upon them because of their faithfulness and loving devotion to the cause of their king! Beautiful as they bring good tidings of good, declaring the kingdom of heaven at hand! Blessed is their portion, soon to be inherited.

In the final conflict upon the members of Christ's body, are they able to stand alone? No, not in their own strength; but there is One who is able to make us stand and to keep us from falling. "The eternal God is thy refuge and underneath are the everlasting arms." (Deuteronomy 33:27) Weak and imperfect now, yet by the eye of faith, behold the conditions of glory awaiting the faithful ones; and be of good courage. Soon that kind, wise and loving Bridegroom will present all the members of his bride faultless before the presence of Jehovah with exceeding joy. Will there be no flaws then? No, not one. No fear? No sorrows? No disappointments? No, not even the thought of such things. Faultless then shall we be, because we shall be like him—he who is the fairest of ten thousand, the one altogether lovely—and be with him, Yea, "in thy presence is fulness of joy, and at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore."

Let us, then, forget the things that are behind. Be not dismayed with the trials that now abound; but with the eye of faith behold his beauty and glory and the unspeakable joy of being in his presence forever.

"Oh, what wondrous visions wrapped me!
Heaven's gates seemed opened wide,
Even I stood clear and faultless
By my dear Redeemer's side.

"Faultless in his glory's presence!
Faultless in that dazzling light!
Christ's own love, majestic, tender,
Made my crimson snowy white!"

"THE DUST OF HIS FEET"

In beautifully poetic language the Prophet Nahum describes Jehovah's part in the present distress of nations: "The Lord hath his way in the whirlwind and in the storm, and the clouds are the dust of his feet."—Nahum 1:3.

Certainly clouds, which have long since ceased to be the size of a man's hand, hang thick over human affairs. To the worldly these clouds are sources of uncertainty, apprehension, dread; but to the watchful child of God these "clouds and darkness" are sure harbingers of the establishment of Messiah's reign. Like children at evening who watch for their father's return from the fields and know him from afar by the cloud of dust raised by his equipage, so the Lord's people now have keenest interest in all the happenings in the world, even though some of the dust is blowing into their eyes, ears, noses and throats. They recognize the Lord even through the clouds, first, because the time has come and, secondly, because of the character of the work which is being performed.

Our Master warned us and told us we need not expect to be spoken well of by all men, because the majority of men, being dominated by self interest and selfish institutions, lavish their approval upon "the false prophets." (Luke 6:26) Whatever the Lord's people do, they will not be understood by the world, because they have different standards of judgment, as well as different aims in life. But while the world is losing more and more even that measure of good judgment which was formerly possessed by it, the Lord's people should strive more and more to keep steady heads and to order their conduct with sobriety—giving no reasonable occasion for offense.

Our attitude on the war, Red Cross, Liberty Bonds, etc., has been misunderstood by many people. Few persons do much thinking in war time and what little they do is mostly in line with their natural emotions. We cannot therefore expect much calm and dispassionate thinking now from the worldly. Therefore in our honest effort to render our proper dues to the Government under which we are privileged to live we should be doubly careful not to "speak evil of dignitaries" nor to do anything which would avoidably embarrass them in the solution of their weighty problems. See Matthew 17:25-27; Luke 20:22-25; Romans 13:7; 1 Peter 2:13-17.

OUR STATEMENT TO THE PRESS

Statements have been recently made to several newspapers which requested an expression from us. But the statements, if printed at all, have been so garbled as to be well nigh incoherent. We therefore print below in full a statement prepared by the President of our Association for the Brooklyn Eagle at its request:

"On my return to Brooklyn I learned of the unpleasant occurrence at the Brooklyn Tabernacle last Sunday, April 28th. Mr. W. T. Baker was in the pulpit and at the conclusion of his discourse a request was brought to the platform that the congregation hear a speech by some one on the Liberty Bonds. Mr. Baker put the matter to a vote and the majority voted in the negative.

"I am sure this action was not intended as any reflection on the Government, nor to be taken as against the Liberty Loan. Those who worship at the Tabernacle believe in worshipping the Lord in spirit and in truth. To them a religious service is the most sacred; and while at religious service they always refrain from discussing temporal matters. This congregation at no time ever held a social tea, a grab-bag party, a bazaar, or anything of that kind in the church. The Tabernacle auditorium is used exclusively for religious matters, especially on Sunday. No previous request had been made to use the Tabernacle by any one in the interest of the Liberty Loan campaign. The worshippers had just listened to a helpful spiritual lesson on the Bible. They desired to withdraw from the building with these sacred thoughts in mind and therefore deemed it inappropriate to discuss any temporal matters whatsoever, or to hear them discussed by any one else. We are pleased to grant the use of the Tabernacle for a meeting in the interest of the public when the same does not interfere with our religious services.

"The people of our Association are not against the Government, nor against the Liberty Loan. Our thought is that the Liberty Loan is not a religious question, but purely one pertaining to the affairs of the Government; and that each person should be left to the free exercise of his individual conscience as to whether he will or will not purchase Liberty Bonds. Our views are very well expressed in a statement given to the public press some weeks ago, as follows:

"'The International Bible Students' Association is not against the Liberty Loan. Many of its members have bought and hold Liberty Bonds. Some have not money with which to buy.

"'The Liberty Loan is not a religious question. It has solely to do with the Government. Every person who mails a letter supports the Government to that extent by paying the additional postage on account of the war.

"'The International Bible Students' Association is composed of Christians. Every Christian gladly obeys the law. The United States has always stood for religious liberty and freedom of speech. Every Christian appreciates the privilege of living in such a country and gladly meets his obligations in the payment of taxes. When the Government asks to borrow his money and gives its promise to pay in the nature of a bond, if he can do so he should buy the bond.

"'The Association has no power to direct members thereof with reference to buying Liberty Bonds. It certainly will not and has not advised any one to refuse to buy bonds. That is an individual matter which each person must determine for himself according to his ability. The Association believes in supporting the Government in every way it can and each one should do so according to his ability and his conscience.'

"Some members of the Brooklyn Tabernacle congregation had previously purchased Liberty Bonds. Doubtless all had been personally solicited before that time. They are surrounded on all hands by opportunities to purchase, and to them it seemed inappropriate to transact business in the church on Sunday. There are six days in the week for the transaction of business and Sunday is regarded by them as a day for sacred worship of the Lord.

"It is to be regretted that one representing the public press should so disgrace himself as publicly to encourage mob violence against inoffensive people. It seems that any one wearing the uniform of the United States Army would have more respect for that uniform and for law and order than to disturb the peace by loud and uncouth language and in encouraging mob violence. We cannot believe that any responsible person in the Government would approve of such action.

"As to the members of the Bethel Home, it is well known that those who labor there receive merely their food and lodging and a small allowance for incidental expenses. This was thoroughly aired in the Brooklyn Eagle libel case, as the record shows. At that time the amount received was only $10.00 per month, which since, on account of increased cost of necessities, is now $15.00 per month. At the opening of the Third Liberty Loan campaign, a very elegant gentleman of the Borough of Brooklyn called on me with reference to soliciting the members of the Bethel Home to buy bonds. I invited him to see each one of them personally. He questioned me as to their ability to buy; and when I told him of the amount they received monthly he said, 'Then they cannot buy on that amount and it is useless for me to see them. I am sure you must be doing much good here in your own way when men and women sacrifice their time for such a small allowance.' It is a well known fact that there are other institutions that are not asked or even expected to buy Liberty Bonds because of their financial inability.

"Members of our Association who have some personal means have bought Liberty Bonds, including Tabernacle workers who are paying 25 per cent. of their monthly allowance to purchase a bond. We do not believe the Government would expect any one to purchase bonds who receives barely enough for his daily expenses.

"The picketing of the Bethel Home on last Sunday morning and accosting every one who passed out and demanding that they buy Liberty Bonds seems to be a very uncalled-for and unusual thing, when any one authorized to solicit for bonds can have free access to the Bethel Home to interview any person there at any reasonable hour during the day or evening. As above stated, a gentleman had called for that purpose some days ago. The action of the men on Sunday morning seemed not only wholly uncalled for, but was taken designedly for the purpose of placing the members of the Bethel Home at a disadvantage. We cannot believe that order-loving, law-abiding people of Brooklyn at all approve such action or conduct."

BEGINNING THE CHRISTIAN LIFE

JULY 7.—ACTS 16:13-15, 25-34.

THE GOSPEL CALL A LIMITED ONE—THE RIVER OF WATER OF LIFE A SYMBOL OF RESTITUTION BLESSINGS—WHAT IT MEANS TO BE A CHRISTIAN—TESTS OF DISCIPLESHIP—RELATIVE VALUE OF THE SACRIFICE PRESENTED BY THE CHRISTIAN—CONSECRATION A DEFINITE, POSITIVE CONTRACT WITH GOD—BLESSING OF WORLD AND CHURCH CONTRASTED.

"He that will, let him take the water of life freely."—Revelation 22:17.

We have already pointed out that according to the Scriptures there is no river of the water of life flowing at the present time, nor will there be until the church is glorified and the kingdom established. Then the river of life will flow from the throne, the Millennial kingdom power and authority established in the earth, and then it will be the glorified bride of Christ with the holy Spirit that will give the invitation to the world in general. We have also pointed out the Master's words to the effect that whoever now has the water of life receives it not from a fountain or river or pool, but from the Lord himself, "a well of water springing up into everlasting life." (John 4:14) Since there is no river of water of life to which to invite any at the present time, our Golden Text must belong to the incoming Messianic age.

In our day, when the public teachings of the ministry of nearly all denominations is so different from the teachings of the Bible, we believe that the degeneracy of faith and practice would be much more rapid than it is were it not that very many feel obligated to read a portion of the Scriptures daily, even though understanding little of their meaning. In such readings the lines of true discipleship are often so distinctly drawn that the mere nominal professor is made to shudder as he determines by the grace of God to seek so to conform his life that he may become more and more a copy of God's dear Son.

The general thought of our day as expressed in the pulpits, in private conversation and at funerals seems to be that in civilized lands everybody is a Christian and sure to go to heaven eventually, except moral reprobates, such as are to be found in prisons and penitentiaries; and even for these the hope is entertained that ere they die they may express some regret for their misdeeds. Such regrets are seized upon by their friends as evidence that the erring ones became Christians and went to heaven.

NATURAL CONSEQUENCE OF FALSE DOCTRINE

While condemning this view as wholly wrong, nevertheless we sympathize with those whose confusion of thought is manifest. Their unscriptural views as to what constitutes a Christian are the result of two things: (1) Teachings of the dark ages handed down through the creeds of Christendom, creeds inspired by those who in bygone centuries persecuted one another to the death because of differences of opinion on doctrinal subjects, who tortured one another with rack, sword and fagot. (2) To this bad foundation of error there has come within recent years a larger spirit of enlightenment and generosity, in which we rejoice. But the errors of the past and the generosity of the present make a very bad combination of doctrine for modern churchianity, a doctrine which seeks to be reasonable with itself, but which in so doing runs counter to a great many Scriptural teachings.

It is only when we rid ourselves of the smoke, darkness and confusion resulting from the creeds of the dark ages, and return to the pure, unadulterated teachings of our Lord and the apostles, and by the grace of God have the eyes of our understanding somewhat opened, that we can see these matters in their true light.

With all kindness toward those who are deceiving themselves and others, the truth compels us to acknowledge that the vast majority of those professing Christ are not Christians at all. Remarkably few members of any denomination know what they believe. We would not be misunderstood. We are not complaining that there are not noble people connected with all the churches. On the contrary, we compliment them upon their education, their refinement, their wealth, their influence, their humanitarian sympathies, as represented in hospitals, asylums and other benevolences. But all these things are shared by people who are not church members. Participation in good works is by no means a proof that one is a Christian. A Christian is a person who has entered into a very special relationship to God through Christ; and this relationship exists without respect to education, wealth, color or sex.

ONLY THE TRUTH IS CONSISTENT

In his discourses our Lord constantly reiterated the fact that he was seeking for some who should be accounted worthy to constitute his kingdom, to sit with him in his throne, to be his joint-heirs, to rule and to judge Israel and all other nations. Not until we learn to differentiate between this kingdom class, otherwise styled his bride, the members of his body, his church, and the world that is to be ruled and judged by this class in due time, can we get a clear conception of the divine purposes progressing throughout this Gospel age.

From this viewpoint we can most clearly see that no one can be of this kingdom class unless he reach a standard of faith and character development above and beyond that of the world in general. We can see why this class should be called upon to bear the good fruits of character in a superlative degree and to walk the narrow way of self-denial and self-sacrifice, in order to be fitted and prepared for the great work which the Lord has for them to do for the world during the incoming Millennial age. It seems peculiarly difficult for the majority of people long blinded by false doctrines to see the heavenly Father has special times and seasons for the development of the various features of his plan of salvation.

During the present time the world is getting a certain kind of experience which will be very valuable in the future, when God's due time shall have come for blessing all the families of the earth. Meantime, with those experiences come the disciplines of the laws of nature, under which poverty, sickness and mental and moral derangements follow excesses of evil doing even as pain follows contact with fire. And it is not unreasonable to hope that with the lessons of the present time before them, the world will act more wisely during the Millennial age than at present; that under the favorable conditions then prevailing many will not only rejoice in the great plan of salvation but will also avail themselves of it; for many are now careless in such matters because they can neither see nor walk by faith.

SURRENDER SELF—SACRIFICE TO GOD

According to the Bible no human being is fit for fellowship with God or fit for life eternal, for the reason that all mankind are sinners. The explanation for this condition is that father Adam sinned when he was perfect, in God's image, and so came under the death sentence; and that, cut off from God, Adam's posterity deteriorated as a race, imperfections of mind and body passing from parent to child. Imperfect beings would be altogether out of place among the perfect; and as long as imperfection continues, sin will continue, and with it of necessity sorrow, pain and death; for these are the consequences of sin.—Romans 5:12, 19; 1 Corinthians 15:21.

God declares his sympathy for the sinner, and has made provision through Jesus Christ for man's recovery from his present deplorable state. Not only so, but a time has been set for that recovery; and the Bible tells us that human uplift from sin and death conditions will be accomplished by Messiah during his Millennial kingdom. We pray: "Thy kingdom come; thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven," not with the thought that God will neglect his promise to establish that kingdom, but by way of acknowledging the fact that the Messianic kingdom is the hope of both world and church.

The church's hope in the kingdom is that of becoming sharers with Christ in the glory, honor and immortality of that kingdom, for the blessing and uplifting of mankind out of sin and death. At the present time there is no attempt being made on God's part to convert the world. Few now hear the Gospel message, and still fewer believe it. Mankind are deluded by the adversary into thinking that for the past six thousand years God has been trying to convert the world, but has made a miserable failure of it all along; and that if anything is done, man must do it for himself. Thus has unbelief been cultivated, and trust in God and in the teachings of the Bible thrust aside.

For nearly nineteen centuries the Gospel message has gone hither and thither, quietly, unostentatiously. The world and the nominal church would say that it had accomplished nothing, that everything worth while had been accomplished by them. But we prefer to stand by the Bible and to recognize that God's consecrated ones have indeed lifted up a light which the world has hated, and on account of which the light-bearers have frequently been put to death, have had their names cast out as evil or have been boycotted socially or otherwise. If their hopes were merely in the present life, these light-bearers would be making a miserable failure of their opportunities. But not so. They are waiting for their reward in the future, in the glorification of the church.

HOW TO BECOME A CHRISTIAN

The question asked by the jailer of Philippi, "What shall I do to be saved?" is one which presents itself to earnest souls who are seeking for rest of heart and mind, who desire to draw near to God, if haply they can find him. St. Paul's reply is one which commends itself as the proper one. The one seeking salvation should believe on the Lord Jesus Christ as his Redeemer, as the one who died on his behalf, through whose stripes he might be healed, saved, and through whose sacrifice he might rejoice in atonement with God. Having thus believed with all his heart, whether it required a moment or an hour to explain and to understand the simple first principles of the Gospel, the jailer's next step was to consecrate himself, to be baptized into death with his Redeemer, and to symbolize that consecration into death by a water immersion. Moreover, he was encouraged to hope that his family might be sharers with him in his salvation, to become disciples of Christ.

Let us learn from this brief statement of the Gospel made by the Apostle Paul the wisdom of simplicity and directness.

He might have preached a long discourse about the Jewish failure to keep the Mosaic Law. He might have discussed the various philosophies of the false religions of the Gentiles. But while these themes might be proper at the right time, evidently this was not the time suitable for them; and hence the Apostle confined his remarks to the general statement that Jesus was the Christ, the Messiah, that he had died for the world, that he must be laid hold upon by faith, and that to all who thus laid hold on him he became the power and the wisdom of God.

To become a disciple of Christ is to become his follower, his pupil, to walk as he walked. The proposition is self-denial, self-effacement. To become a Christian is to give one's self wholly to God. As the Apostle has said: "Present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, your reasonable service." (Romans 12:1) No one needs to go far to make his consecration. Each, at his own bedside, can give his little all to God.

COUNTING THE COST

It should not require long to count how much more we shall receive than we give; for we have only a condemned and dying existence to give. We give mental, moral and physical imperfections; and Jesus our Savior, by imputing the merit of his sacrifice, makes ours of value in the sight of God. But in exchange we receive riches of grace in the present life—peace, joy, blessing of heart which the world can neither give nor take away; and in the life to come we shall receive glory, honor and immortality, joint-heirship with our Savior in the heavenly kingdom which shall dominate the world for a thousand years, for the blessing and uplift of the Adamic race.

Really, after counting the cost, there is a danger that we would feel so ashamed of the littleness of our offering that we would fear to come to the Lord with it. We gain courage to present our bodies a living sacrifice only by a knowledge of the Word of God and by a realization of the mercy and favor which has prompted his kind invitation for an exchange of something of little value for great things of inestimable value. But unless we take this very step and definitely and positively enter into a contract with the Lord, we have neither part nor lot with him. We are still a part of the world, however much we may try to pattern our lives after decent models and to avoid the grosser and the finer sins. The covenant with the Lord is the beginning of the Christian life; and to each covenanter there comes "grace to help in every time of need."

But says some one: "Surely this is not the only way of coming into God's family, of becoming a Christian!" Yea, we reply, it is the only way. "There is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." (Acts 4:12) Jesus is the only one who can save mankind from their condition of condemnation and bring them back into the family of God. The Master himself makes the distinctive terms that in order to have the privilege of discipleship we must become full disciples.

The limitations and obligations of the Christian are clearly defined in the Scriptures. With regret we must say that the facts have been hidden from the people by the clergy, who have sought to set aside the words of Jesus because these conflict with their theories. For this reason many who have been seeking the truth have been unable to find it in the nominal churches. Therefore we urge all to return to the Bible simplicity of a fully consecrated church of Christ.

The blessing upon the world will be earthly restitution to perfect human nature, instead of a change to the divine nature, as promised to the church. All who refuse both the call of the present time and the opportunity of the future restitution will die the second death, which St. Peter declares is like that of the natural brute beast.—Acts 3:19-23; 2 Peter 2:12.

READING GOD'S WORD

JULY 14.—ACTS 8:26-31, 35-39; PSA. 19:7-11.

THE FREEDOM WHEREWITH CHRIST MAKES FREE—KNOWLEDGE OF THE TRUTH NOT INSTANTLY ACQUIRED—THE TRANSFORMING POWER OF THE WORD OF GOD—DIVINE METHOD OF REVEALING THE TRUTH—THE MOST PROFITABLE WAY TO STUDY THE BIBLE —THIS METHOD ILLUSTRATED—HELPFUL SUGGESTIONS FOR TRUE STUDENTS.

"Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:32.

God's approval should be the highest aim of every one who professes to believe in him as the Creator, and especially of those who have begun the Christian life, who accept Jehovah God as their Father, and who claim to hold the precious relationship of children to him. His will should be their highest law; and it should be a part of their daily and hourly pleasure, as it is their privilege, to seek to know his will and to do it. This implies study, consideration, not a mere formality of thoughtless reading or of perfunctory worship, but the diligent use of every available means to learn what is the will of our heavenly Father.

Divine truth is found only in the divinely appointed channel, the Word of God as set forth by our Lord, the apostles and the prophets. To continue in the doctrines set forth in the inspired writings we must study them, meditate upon them, trust implicitly in them and faithfully conform our character to them. This is what is meant by "continuing in the Word of God," and is entirely compatible with the heeding of all the helps which the Lord raises up from among our brethren in the body of Christ. (Ephesians 4:11-15; 1 Corinthians 12:12-14) All through the Gospel age the Lord has raised up such helps for the edification of the body of Christ; but it is the duty of every member carefully to prove the teaching of these helps by the infallible Word of God.

If we thus continue in the Word of the Lord as earnest, sincere disciples, we shall indeed "know the truth," be "established in the present truth" (the truth now due) and be rooted and grounded in the truth. (2 Peter 1:12) Thus we shall be firm in the faith, "able to give a reason for the hope that is in us," able "to contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints," to war a good warfare, to witness a good confession," and firmly to "endure hardship as good soldiers of Jesus Christ," even unto the end of our conflict.—1 Peter 3:15; Jude 3; 1 Timothy 6:12, 13; 2 Timothy 2:3.

HOW WE ATTAIN THE TRUTH

We do not come into the knowledge of the truth at a single bound but gradually, step by step, are we led. Every step is one of sure and certain progress to a higher vantage ground for further attainments both in knowledge and in established character. The truth thus acquired, step by step, becomes a sanctifying power, bringing forth in our lives its blessed fruits of righteousness, peace, joy in the holy Spirit, love, meekness, faith, patience and every virtue and every grace, which time and cultivation ripen to a glorious maturity.

Not only shall the true disciple thus know the truth and be sanctified by it, but as the Lord said, the truth shall make him free. Those who have received the truth of God's Word know by blessed experience something of its liberating power. As soon as any measure of the truth is received into a good and honest heart, it begins to strike off the fetters of sin, of ignorance, superstition and fear. Its health-restoring beams begin to penetrate the darkest recesses of our hearts and minds, and thus invigorate the whole being. It quickens our mortal bodies.

It is good to meditate upon, to ponder, the Word of God; for only in so doing can we receive the nourishment it is designed to give. A hasty reading of the Scriptures and a quick return of the mind to other thoughts and pursuits makes a spiritual dyspeptic, incapable of assimilating the spirit of the truth, and lacking the strength and power of mature, developed Christian character.

GOD'S WORD AND ITS EFFECT

Psalm 19:7-11 refers us to the superior glory of God's special written revelation of himself, given through his inspired human agents, the prophets and the apostles. This testimony not only declares the existence, power and wisdom of Jehovah, with a silent intimation of his goodness and grace, but with overwhelming force it bears to the thoughtful mind the convincing testimony of all his glorious attributes and of his love toward us in Christ.

Other influences may lead to temporary and partial changes of course and action; but nothing else equals God's revealed truth in producing a change of being, character, soul. It is because other converting agencies and powers are so often used that there are very many glossed-over, nominal Christians, as compared with the few whose entire beings are turned and fully consecrated to the Lord. People may be converted from savagery to civilization by a general knowledge, or from intemperance to sobriety by a study of the advantages of the latter over the former, or from dishonesty to honesty by learning that "honesty is the best policy." But none of these are soul conversions. Only God's truth can produce soul conversion, as also our Lord indicates in his prayer: "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy Word is truth."—John 17:17.

The testimony of God's Word is not doubtful, but clear and positive, making wise the single-hearted who have no will or plan of their own which they wish the Lord to adopt, but who seek the Lord's will only. His statutes, his appointed plans, are right, rejoicing the heart. Yes, indeed! God's glorious plan of the ages rejoices the hearts of all who have come to a knowledge of that blessed arrangement. The precepts or teachings of the Lord are clear, showing us the unmistakable course and end of righteousness and of unrighteousness. The reverence of the Lord is a pure and lofty sentiment based upon love and gratitude, not upon a servile recognition of tyranny and power; and this proper fear, or reverence, will endure forever.

Once, when following the leadings of mistaken teachers and of catechisms, we thought of the judgments of the Lord, his "eternal decrees," only with horror, supposing that they provided for the salvation of but a mere handful of our race and for the everlasting misery of the masses. But what a change of sentiment has come since our eyes of understanding have been opened to the truth! Now God's decrees are sweet to our taste; we appreciate them greatly; we see that he has decreed a great Savior and a great salvation, open to the acceptance of every child of Adam; and that he has provided that all shall be brought to a clear knowledge of the truth, that they may have the fullest opportunity for everlasting life upon the only condition that God can make, that of righteousness. Moreover, the thoughtful servant of God who meditates on God's decrees, judgments, is warned thereby; and in remembering and obeying them there is great reward.

GOD'S METHOD OF TEACHING

In the story of Philip and the Ethiopian eunuch we have an illustration of the divine method of teaching the Word. Many believe and teach that God teaches by impressions made upon the mind rather than by the written Word, the Bible. Others hold that God teaches by impressions which illuminate the Bible to each individual student. But the lesson of the eunuch's experience agrees with all the teachings of Scripture on this subject, and sets forth God's usual method. He uses his inspired Word as the text, and sends especially qualified representatives to expound it as the due time for understanding it approaches.

The hand of divine providence is here again manifested in the choice of the Scripture reading which the eunuch did not understand. Beginning at that portion of Isaiah's prophecy, Philip showed him how Jesus' sacrifice was the propitiation for the sin of the whole world; how that in the dawn and vigor of manhood our Lord was cut off from life without any posterity to perpetuate his name, and yet is to have a numerous posterity; for God raised him from the dead, and in due time would make him the Everlasting Father of all mankind, who would be brought back from the dead under the uplifting conditions of the Messianic kingdom.

Philip's teachings must have been very comprehensive. He had evidently progressed from the foundation doctrine of justification by faith in Christ as the Redeemer to the doctrines of the resurrection of the dead and the restitution of all things, and then to the special privilege of the fully consecrated during the Gospel age, that of becoming joint-heirs with Christ and in due time sharing his crown if now they willingly bear his cross. This seems evident from the fact that the eunuch was anxious to be baptized at once. His promptness in this respect was another evidence of his acquiescence in the will of God and of his desire to be in full accord and coöperation with the Lord.

The eunuch's meek, teachable spirit made it easy for him to receive the Gospel message in its simplicity and beauty. He was already a believer to the extent that he knew the truth. He was already justified by his faith in the Redeemer promised. Now that justification became actually his, as his mind and his heart grasped the thought that the Crucified One was the Son of God who bought us with his own precious blood. He was already devoted to the Lord as far as he knew the divine will. But now, with clear knowledge sent directly to him through Philip, his consecration was revived, renewed, enlarged, applied.

It is not so much the amount of time given to Bible reading that counts, but the amount of study done and the information gained. We all know people who have spent days, weeks and years in reading the Scriptures, but who have learned little or nothing about God's plan for human salvation. It is a great mistake to think that Bible study is merely the time spent in handling a Bible and in reading so many chapters per day.

ADVANTAGES OF TOPICAL STUDY

THE STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES are not merely comments upon the Bible, but are practically the Bible itself in an arranged form for topical study. Our thought is, therefore, that these SCRIPTURE STUDIES are a very valuable help in the understanding of the Word of God. These books will be of no practical value to us, however, unless we see in them loyalty to that Word and, as far as our judgment goes, see them to be in full harmony with the Scriptures. Therefore in reading them for the first time, and perhaps the second time, and before we accept their teachings as our own personal faith and conviction, we should prove every point by the Word or disprove it, as the case may be. We should be satisfied with nothing less than a thorough investigation of the Bible from their standpoint.

This is not a putting of the SCRIPTURE STUDIES as a substitute for the Bible; on the contrary, the STUDIES continually refer to the Bible. Whoever, therefore, is doubtful as to any reference, or has forgotten any point in any degree, should refresh his memory, and should make sure that his every thought is in harmony with the Bible, and not merely in accord with the SCRIPTURE STUDIES, although we firmly believe them to be in full accord with the Word of God.

Quite a considerable number of the friends make it a rule to read from eight to twelve pages of the STUDIES daily; and we might say here that we do not know of one who has followed this course and made use of the various means of grace provided by the Lord—such as the different meetings, the Berean lessons, the Manna text, etc.—and who has gone out of the truth.

Furthermore, we would suggest that merely reading a given number of pages of the SCRIPTURE STUDIES would not be studying in the proper sense of the word. A proper study would be to think of the meaning of every word and every sentence. The thought is not to see how much one can read, but to make sure that one goes no further than he understands, whether that means one page or twenty pages. We would not consider it a Scripture study in any sense of the word unless our thought has grasped the matter from the standpoint of seeking to know what the Scriptures teach on the subject under consideration. Whoever will faithfully do this will not be merely reading, but studying; and whoever reads a few pages of SCRIPTURE STUDIES daily, with the suggested texts connected with those pages, will do more Scripture studying in that time than he could by any other known method.

CHRIST IS ALL

Though all thy life seem full of care
And trials seem too hard to bear,
Upon thy Father call.
He'll from his Word send message meet
And grace sufficient, promise sweet;
For Christ is all in all.

If little tests thy walks harrass
And troubles small thy way compass,
In these thou must not fall.
Thy Father lets thee have them, so
Thy character may stronger grow
And Christ be all in all.

If for a while thy life be bright
Nor foes assail nor storms affright
Nor darkened hours appall,
In heaven above still find thy joy.
Earth's good is but a transient toy;
Let Christ be all in all.

"LET PATIENCE HAVE HER PERFECT WORK"

"Let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing."—James 1:4.

Patience is the fruitage of enduring trust. To many minds the thought behind the word would be better expressed by constancy, perseverance, or cheerful endurance. Patience is often confused with long suffering. That word is suggestive of meek, uncomplaining endurance of suffering, with humble resignation. But patience is more positive; it is a trait which indicates strength and self-discipline. It cannot be predicated of inexperienced persons but only of characters which have been subjected to trials or affliction, pain or loss; and it always shines brightest when manifested under the glowing heat of severe affliction. This trait takes a very prominent place in the galaxy of Christian virtues; for without it the heart would grow faint, the head weary, and the steps would soon falter along the narrow way in which the Church is called to walk.

"In your patience possess ye your souls," said the Master, implying the danger of losing our souls, our existence, if we fail to cultivate this grace which is so very necessary to our continuance in well doing.

The Apostle James does not overstate the matter when he intimates that the perfect work of patience will make its subjects perfect and entire, wanting nothing; for the Apostle Paul assures us that God, who has begun the good work of developing character in us, will continue to perform it until the crowning day—the day of Jesus Christ. (Philippians 1:6) All his children will be subjected to just such discipline as they need for the correction of faults, the implanting and developing of virtues, and for their training and establishment in righteousness, so that they cannot be moved. "If ye be without chastisement [discipline and correction], whereof all [true sons of God] are partakers, then are ye bastards, and not sons; for whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth. If ye [patiently] endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons; for what son is he whom the father chasteneth not?"—Hebrews 12:8, 6, 7.

DEVELOPMENT A SLOW PROCESS

This great work of developing and training character is necessarily a slow and tedious one, and not infrequently it is a painful process; and the patience that cheerfully submits to it is begotten of a high appreciation of the ends to be attained. Patience is begotten of a love of righteousness, truth and godliness, and is therefore most noble and praiseworthy.

But how can we let patience have her perfect work? Just by meekly doing the best we can each day, and doing it cheerfully and well; making the best of every thing and going forward daily with true Christian fortitude to act the noble part in every emergency of affliction, pain or loss. Today's trial may be a light one, perhaps almost imperceptible; or today may be one of the sunny days in which God bids our hearts rejoice in his overflowing bounty. Tomorrow may bring its cares and its petty vexations that irritate and annoy. Another tomorrow may witness the clouds gather above our heads, and as the days follow each other the clouds may grow darker and darker until we are forcibly reminded of that strong figure of the Psalmist—"I walk through the valley of the shadow of death." Yet never will the valley grow so dark that the patient, trusting one cannot triumphantly exclaim: "Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou [my Lord] are with me: thy rod and thy staff, they comfort me." Yes, there is comfort in the "rod" (of chastisement), as well as in the "staff" (of providential care); for both are designed for our ultimate profiting.

TRIBULATION WORKETH PATIENCE

The Apostle Paul tells us plainly that tribulation is necessary for the development of patience. "Tribulation worketh patience; and patience, experience; and experience, hope." (Romans 5:3, 4) Consider how your own experience has verified this, you who have been for some time under the Lord's special care and leading. How much richer you are for all the lessons of experience, and for the patience that experience has developed in you! Although, like the Apostle, you can say that "no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous; nevertheless, afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruits of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby." (Hebrews 12:11) In the exercise of patience the lessons of experience have made you stronger. They have increased your faith and drawn you into closer communion and fellowship with the Lord. They have made you to feel better acquainted with him, to realize more and more his personal interest in you and his care and love for you. And this in turn has awakened a deeper sense of gratitude and an increasing zeal to manifest that gratitude to him. Gratitude and zeal deepen the sense of fellowship with God, and give confidence to the hope of final and full acceptance with him as a son and heir, worthy through Christ.

"Wherefore lift up the hands which hang down and [strengthen] the feeble knees"—"Let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing."

The Apostle James urges that we take the prophets who have spoken in the name of the Lord for an example of suffering affliction and of patience. Then he cites the example of Job and the manifest end or purpose of the Lord in permitting him to be so sorely tried: how the Lord was really very pitiful and of tender mercy, although the pity and mercy were not manifest except to the confiding faith that said, "Though he slay me, yet will I trust him"—until the long and painful discipline had yielded the peaceable fruits and the subsequent rewards of righteousness.

MORE THAN POLICY

There is little virtue in the patience that endures merely from motives of worldly policy, though even that often has much advantage in it. Men in business dealings with fellowmen well know that an impetuous, turbulent disposition is greatly to their disadvantage, while patient consideration, temperance in judgment, and good self-control are of immense value, even from a worldly, business standpoint. But the patience that is begotten of deep-rooted Christian principle is the kind that will endure all trials and shine the brighter for every affliction through which it may pass.

Job, the servant of God, was accused of selfish policy-motives for his remarkable patience and faithfulness; and it was boldly affirmed that if he were tried by adversity his mean motives would be manifest; that he would curse God to his face. But God knew better; and it was in Job's defense that he permitted him to be tried to the utmost that the loyalty of his heart might be manifest. Some of his poor comforters viewed Job's afflictions only in the light of chastisements, failing utterly to comprehend the divine purpose, and this only added stings to his afflictions but through them all the Lord brought his servant and most fully vindicated him in the eyes of all the people.

Thus will God ever do with all who patiently maintain their integrity and trust in him under affliction. If any man recognize affliction as a chastisement of the Lord for the correction of some evil way in him, let him be quick to learn the lesson and repent; or if it be refining discipline, let patience under the tedious process have its perfect work.

PATIENT ONES OF OLD

The Apostle Paul (Hebrews 11) calls up a long list of patient, faithful ones who endured cruel mockings and scourgings, bonds and imprisonment, who were stoned, sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword, who wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins, being destitute, afflicted, tormented; of whom the world was not worthy; who wandered in deserts, and in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth. All this they endured patiently for righteousness sake, looking by faith to God for the reward of their patience and faithfulness in his own good time. Then again, says the Apostle (Hebrews 12:3), "Consider him [Christ] that endured such contradiction of sinners against himself, lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds." Yea, consider him, "who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously." He left us an example that we should follow his steps.

While we see the great necessity for pruning, cultivating and discipline in the development of character, it is manifest that none will be able to endure it unto the desirable end of final establishment in righteousness who do not from the beginning diligently devote themselves to the exercise of patience. "He that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved." "In your patience possess ye your souls."

NON-COMBATANT SERVICE DEFINED

Many have written asking us what constitutes non-combatant service within the meaning of the Selective Draft Law. We have recently procured a copy of President Wilson's order and take advantage of this first opportunity to publish the same for the benefit of any who desire to know. It is dated Washington, D. C., March 20, 1918, and reads as follows:

EXECUTIVE ORDER

1. By virtue of authority contained in Section 4 of the act approved May 18, 1917, entitled, "An act to authorize the President to increase temporarily the military establishment of the United States," whereby it is provided—

"And nothing in this Act contained shall be construed to require or compel any person to serve in any of the forces herein provided for who is found to be a member of any well-recognized religious sect or organization at present organized and existing and whose existing creed or principles forbid its members to participate in war in any form and whose religious convictions are against war or participation therein in accordance with the creed or principles of said religious organizations; but no person so exempted shall be exempted from service in any capacity that the President shall declare to be non-combatant."

I hereby declare that the following military service is noncombatant service:

a. Service in the Medical Corps wherever performed. This includes service in the sanitary detachments attached to combatant units at the front; service in the divisional sanitary trains composed of ambulance companies and field hospital companies, on the line of communications, at the base in France, and with the troops and at hospitals in the United States; also the service of supply and repair in the Medical Department.

b. Any service in the Quartermaster Corps, in the United States, may be treated as non-combatant. Also, in rear of zone of operations, service in the following: Stevedore companies, labor companies, remount depots, veterinary hospitals, supply depots, bakery companies, the subsistence service, the bathing service, the laundry service, the salvage service, the transportation repair service, and motor-truck companies.

c. Any engineer service in the United States may be treated as non-combatant service. Also, in rear of zone of operations, service as follows: Railroad building, operation and repair; road building and repair; construction of rear-line fortifications, auxiliary defenses, etc.; construction of docks, wharves, store-houses and of such cantonments as may be built by the Corps of Engineers; topographical work; camouflage; map reproduction; supply depot service; repair service; hydraulic service; and forestry service.

2. Persons ordered to report for military service under the above Act who have (a) been certified by their Local Boards to be members of a religious sect or organization as defined in Section 4 of said Act; or (b) who object to participating in war because of conscientious scruples but have failed to receive certificates as members of a religious sect or organization, from their Local Board will be assigned to non-combatant military service as defined in paragraph 1 to the extent that such persons are able to accept service as aforesaid without violation of the religious or other conscientious scruples by them in good faith entertained. Upon the promulgation of this order it shall be the duty of each Division, Camp, or Post Commander, through a tactful and considerate officer, to present to all such persons the provisions hereof with adequate explanation of the character of non-combatant service herein defined, and upon such explanations to secure acceptances of assignment to the several kinds of non-combatant service above enumerated; and whenever any person is assigned to non-combatant service by reason of his religious or other conscientious scruples he shall be given a certificate stating the assignment and reason therefor, and such certificate shall thereafter be respected as preventing the transfer of such persons from such non-combatant to combatant service by any Division, Camp, Post, or other Commander under whom said person may thereafter be called to serve, but such certificate shall not prevent the assignment of such person to some other form of non-combatant service with his own consent. So far as may be found feasible by each Division, Camp, or Post Commander, future assignments of such persons to non-combatant military service will be restricted to the several detachments and units of the Medical Department in the absence of a request for assignment to some other branch of non-combatant service as defined in paragraph 1 hereof.

3. On the first day of April, and thereafter monthly, each Division, Camp, or Post Commander shall report to the Adjutant General of the Army, for the information of the Chief of Staff and the Secretary of War, the names of all persons under their respective commands who profess religious or other conscientious scruples as above described and who have been unwilling to accept, by reason of such scruples, assignment to non-combatant military service as above defined, and as to each such person so reported a brief, comprehensive statement as to the nature of the objection to the acceptance of such non-combatant military service entertained. The Secretary of War will from time to time classify the persons so reported and give further directions as to the disposition of them. Pending such directions from the Secretary of War, all such persons not accepting assignment to non-combatant service shall be segregated as far as practicable and placed under the command of a specially qualified officer of tact and judgment, who will be instructed to impose no punitive hardships of any kind upon them, but not to allow their objections to be made the basis of any favor or consideration beyond exemption from actual military service which is not extended to any other soldier in the service of the United States.

4. With a view to maintaining discipline, it is pointed out that the discretion of courts-martial, so far as any shall be ordered to deal with the cases of persons who fail or refuse to comply with lawful orders by reason of alleged religious or other conscientious scruples, should be exercised, if feasible, so as to secure uniformity of penalties in the imposition of sentences under Articles of War 64 and 65, for the wilful disobedience of a lawful order or command. It will be recognized that sentences imposed by such courts-martial, when not otherwise described by law, shall prescribe confinement in the United States Disciplinary Barracks or elsewhere as the Secretary of War or the reviewing authority may direct, but not in a penitentiary; but this shall not apply to the cases of men who desert either before reporting for duty to the military authorities or subsequently thereto.

5. The Secretary of War will revise the sentences and finding of courts-martial heretofore held of persons who come within any of the classes herein described, and bring to the attention of the President for remedy, if any be needed, sentences and judgments found at variance with the provisions hereof.

[Signed] WOODROW WILSON.

Local Boards composed of men of different temperaments have not ruled uniformly in cases where application has been made for deferred classification on account of religious belief. President Wilson, however, has provided for such contingency in the aforementioned Executive Order, as follows:

> "Persons ordered to report for military service under the above Act . . . who object to participating in war because of conscientious scruples but have failed to receive certificates as members of a religious sect or organization from their Local Board, will be assigned to non-combatant military service as defined in paragraph 1 to the extent that such persons are able to accept service as aforesaid without violation of the religious or other conscientious scruples by them in good faith entertained."

It is not the province of THE WATCH TOWER to tell any one what he should or should not do; but we can and do say that every Christian should be obedient to the law. The order of the President is a part of the Selective Draft Law. Where one in good faith has applied to the Local Board for classification and the Board has not issued to him a certificate granting non-combatant service, then when called he should readily respond to the call by going to the cantonment and presenting himself to the commanding officer, who, under the President's order, has the power and authority to issue to him a certificate assigning him to non-combatant service.

The President further provides that it is the privilege of such conscientious objectors to request assignment to some branch of non-combatant service aside from the Medical Department.

INTERESTING LETTERS

WRESTLING NOT WITH FLESH AND BLOOD

DEAR BROTHER:—

Acting on advice I am writing to you of my experience with the fallen angels.

For seven years my brain has been in a vise, my head feeling like a rock weighing thousands of pounds—a dull intense, drawing sensation much worse than pain. My mind seems full of colors—green, yellow, blue, pink, and then suddenly the whole head will seem to turn blood-red, producing hysteria, intense fear, and my mind becomes flooded with thoughts vile beyond description, with a total absence of faith in God. On page 127 in Vol. 7 this same condition is described precisely.

Will give you a brief synopsis of my life. At twelve I consecrated and joined the Methodist church, but becoming disgusted I backslid. Living in a lonely, desolate country town, nothing to think of besides eternal torment, very easily I fell prey to Spiritism. First it seemed a light frivolity, a mysterious truth, but I became deeper involved to the extent of developing into a clairaudient, clairvoyant, writing and trance medium, giving complete will to the good (?) spirits. In four years time I read extensively the Progressive (?) Thinker, studied deeply "Occult Life of Jesus,"—what a deadly insult to our dear Lord—and many books written by the "departed"; at eighteen I found I was being made a dupe, because these people became weak, degenerate and immoral. My life was ahead of me. I dropped Spiritism like a hot cake but too late. An indefinite something began bothering me, affecting my mind. I next looked into Evolution, Reincarnation, New Thought, Palmistry, Phrenology, to drop them all as empty.

Walking streets and fighting insanity, eventually in a public library I picked up "Science and Health." I read it—ah, here is the truth at last, I thought—was healed (?) almost instantly, laid off glasses and was transformed into another girl. I lived in the clouds for two years, joined the church and got along lovely with occasional trials which "Science" always met. Then I became wise to the fact that again I was duped. Two-thirds of these people made jackasses of themselves, became silly, dishonest, and off their balance, and usually got some ailment, finally, which "Science" couldn't meet. Then one day suddenly my head went off. I fought desperately for three years, was insane; tried thirteen different "Science" practitioners, all told me I was "making something of it." Asking what "it" means, was told "it" was an illusion, a belief in another power opposed to God, principle. That left me in the dark, and I continued having violent raving spells. Next I tried medical doctors, chiropractors, etc., and finally went back to Christian Science but it was empty as a gourd and had a "missing link" which no one could explain. Now I know this missing link to be found in Isaiah 14th chapter, 12th to 14th verses, which clarifies the whole thing.

After five years of this misery and no solution anywhere, desperation followed and suicide was attempted different times. One Sunday at dinner table I suddenly felt myself taken hold of and pushed out. Like a flash I thought, "This is no illusion, something having power and intelligence is possessing me"; but I knew not what it was and went into a violent spell. But in that spell came a confession beginning with the words, "She has caught me. I have been here twenty years."

Will not go into details. I had three spells in which this "thing" talked. It was vicious, evil-loving, sexless, nameless, said it was thousands of years old and hated God; but "it" couldn't use me to do the worst of evils, which it cursed about. I was too high-minded.

We all thought this was just delirium. A few weeks after a colporteur sister called with Volume I SCRIPTURE STUDIES. I was pacing the floor, putting down my hair, fighting this demon (as I now know). She pulled out the chart in front of "The Divine Plan of the Ages." Here was something I never looked into. I sat down, mother went out, and I fired questions at the sister, which she answered satisfactorily. She took up my case, read the volumes to me, and instructed me orally. Although the booklet on Spiritism was read, the friends did not credit the demon confession, but thought it was merely physical trouble. I again grew worse, felt abandoned and made a desperate effort at suicide, but failed. Then I said, "Lord, whoever thou art, I'll give myself to thee"; and I fully consecrated. A Seventh Volume, with page 127 marked was sent me through the mail. I was astounded at that page describing minutely my case.

Some friends in this city who had experience with fallen angels heard of my case and tried to reach me to help. Events transpired that led me to come here to stay with them. I have been here five weeks studying, praying, making special study of Volume 7 and "Spiritism" booklet, but so far my "head" condition cannot be helped nor will the demon let me alone. It threatens, torments me and I have been thrown into several spells, which are less violent in the presence of God's people. Brother Bohnet was here and made my case a matter of special prayer.

These demons seem in appearance to be beautiful, fascinating, but their character is vile. They do not desire to return to their "first estate" and say they will do more and worse evils now, so many minds being open. Well, they are having their trial now, and if I must endure them for a time what a help I may be, in the coming age, to the poor mental and moral wrecks that have been made by them! My prayer is for grace to endure if God doesn't see fit to remove this torture. It may be valuable some day, otherwise I would destroy myself. Please excuse mistakes. A presence at elbow, is being fought with to get this written—badly, I know, but will send it on. Too nervous to rewrite.

May the dear Lord bless you and the dear Seventh Volume that is so misunderstood. I didn't accept it at first, but now it is the biggest comfort I ever had.

Your sister in Christ, L. M. W.—Iowa.

PERSECUTED BY GERMAN CLERGY

DEAR BRETHREN:

You will be pleased, dear brethren, to know that the Lord's work is progressing here, notwithstanding the pressure of prevailing conditions. In Germany, however, the brethren report great difficulties, owing to the opposition of the clergy, who are making their influence felt in a greater measure than ever before. But the truth is gaining headway nevertheless; the "stone" of Daniel's vision is rolling in upon and smashing one stronghold of the adversary after the other; and all who are truly the Lord's rejoice.

Wishing you the Master's grace and continued blessing and praying that we may all be counted worthy of a share in the kingdom soon, I remain with much Christian love to you all,

Your fellow servant in the Lord,

C. C. BINKELE.—Switzerland.

STRENGTH FOR THE LAST STAND

DEAR CO-LABORERS:

I cannot refrain from asking a precious moment or two to express my appreciation of the recent TOWERS.

After reading the greater portion of the last one (Apr. 15th) aloud to Mother, whose eyes prevent her from reading much for herself, I exclaimed: "How can any one read that TOWER and not read the spirit of Brother Russell and the spirit of Christ in every word of it? How can one help recognizing that God is using it to feed, strengthen, encourage, advise and sustain his little ones for their last, strong stand!"

Now the Lord of peace himself give you peace always by all means. The Lord be with you all.—2 Thess. 3:16.

Yours "hid with Christ in God," E. S. L.—N. Y.

HOPES STILL BRIGHT IN FRANCE

(Translation)

DEAR BROTHER RUTHERFORD AND BETHEL FRIENDS:

Yesterday we, 21 brethren and sisters, had the blessed privilege of commemorating the death of our beloved Savior, our own participation in the experiences of his body and in the cup of suffering, while still waiting for the real participation in the kingdom. It is a sweet thing to think that under such circumstances as these we can remember the dear people of God scattered here and there over all the earth, and meditate upon the grand drama which has been in process of enaction for nineteen centuries.

The friends at this place and in various other parts request me to advise you that we no longer receive the French WATCH TOWER, or other literature, from Geneva, on account of the restrictions on matter coming from Switzerland. Brother Freytag informs us that he has taken the situation up with the military authorities, but we feel dubious about his success. But we do thank the Lord for this much, that everything sent us from Brooklyn or from London has come to hand regularly.

The Lord bless you and guard you and the other members of the Editorial Committee—such is our daily prayer.

With much love, your brother in Christ, our Hope.

LEQUIME SAMUEL.—France.

WILFUL SINS OF THE WORLD

Question:—Do you understand that the only sins which the sufferings of the great company will expiate on behalf of the world will be deliberate sins against the Lord's people?

Answer:—Yes.

Question:—Is it your opinion, then, that all other sins of the world will be ignored; i. e., will be atoned for by the merit of Christ?

Answer:—Yes; except that each man, as we have said, keeps an account in his own mind and his own body. Whoever violates the laws of nature brings the penalty upon himself, as a result of his course or his action. It is just as when one eats too much food at a meal, or eats what does not agree with him; he will have some distress, some impairment of health, whether he is a saint or a sinner. His discomfort will be the natural result of a lack of the exercise of proper judgment or of the necessary knowledge. It is a matter of judgment on God's part, an automatic penalty.

We understand, however, that in the great time of trouble now coming upon the World, God is judging the nations as nations; and, of course, this will mean much suffering to the individuals of the world. God's time has now come to supplant all these earthly arrangements and institutions, based upon selfishness, and establish his own righteous government for the blessing of all mankind—the living and the dead. This procedure will be something unique, never before known. God will here judge down, judge to destruction, everything that is not in perfect harmony with his righteous laws. But it will be for man's good, even though involving much suffering and trouble.

"BE INSTANT IN SEASON AND OUT OF SEASON"

Recently the SOCIETY addressed a letter to all the classes suggesting that they put forth a special effort to advertise a large public meeting, on the topic "THE WORLD HAS ENDED—MILLIONS NOW LIVING WILL NEVER DIE." Some of the classes got the impression from the letter that we would send a Pilgrim to them for a Sunday appointment in the near future, and on the strength of this secured halls and wired us they were ready. The thought suggested in our letter, however, was that when a Pilgrim comes, whether on a Sunday or on a week day, each class should put forth a special effort for one public meeting on the above topic if possible. We find many people are anxious to hear this subject discussed. It was not our thought to send any special speakers long distances to address merely Sunday meetings, but rather a special effort for public witness should be made in connection with all regular traveling and visiting Pilgrims' appointments, regardless of the day of the week on which their visits occur. Let us "preach the Word; be instant in season, out of season." (2 Tim. 4:2) The time is short, the opportunities precious, the reward great and glorious!

CANADIAN BRANCH OFFICE

In a recent issue we announced the purpose of opening a branch office in Canada. The office is now established. Please address all communications to WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY, 143 Donald Street, Winnipeg, Manitoba.

The duties of this branch office will be limited. Exchange is so excessive that we find it better to have an office in Canada to handle all financial matters pertaining to the work in that country. The Canadian branch will receive remittances for subscriptions to THE WATCH TOWER, "Good Hopes" and Tract Fund donations, orders for supplies, books, etc. Orders will be filled from there so far as possible.

All Pilgrims will be routed from the Brooklyn office, a copy of the routing being furnished to the office in Canada. All requests for Pilgrims should be sent to the headquarters at Brooklyn. Arrangements for specially advertised public meetings will be made through the Canadian branch office.

VOL. XXXIX BROOKLYN, N. Y., JUNE 1, 1918 No. 11

OUR PERFECT PATTERN

"Consider him that endured such contradiction of sinners against himself, lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds. Ye have not yet resisted unto blood, striving against sin."—Hebrews 12:3, 4.

With increasing fury the storm is raging against the dear flock of God. Wild and wilder grows the gale; high and higher the waves are rising, beating against the walls of Zion. If God's children, weak, timid and inoffensive as they are, should look always at the storm, they would become faint in mind. Hence we do well, in this strenuous hour, to call to mind that Jesus is with his church in the storm. "Lo, I am with you, . . . even unto the end of the age." "Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." God in his perfect wisdom foreknew the experiences that would be the portion of those following Christ Jesus, and out of the abundance of his riches he made provision for their comfort and sustenance. Lest, then, we should become wearied in our minds from suffering superinduced by the storm or by the fiery chariot, let us come aside for a while and consider him who led the way through which Christians must follow, Christians who will ultimately attain to the place of glory, honor and immortality.

Because man violated God's fixed law, it was required of him that he should suffer the penalty. "The wages of sin is death." Man was perfect when he sinned. It was after the judgment upon him and after his imperfection began that his children were brought forth. Hence all his offspring were "born in sin and shapen in iniquity."—Psalm 51:5; Genesis 3:20.

Satan was the moving cause of man's fall. Therefore we should expect Satan and the forces of darkness under his control to cause man to continue to suffer. It is also to be expected that every effort to relieve man from sin, sorrow, suffering and death would be opposed by this great arch-enemy. When man was driven from Eden, God announced that there would be enmity between Satan and his seed and the seed of the woman. A subsequent part of God's Word discloses that the seed of the woman is to be the channel through which blessings will flow out to all mankind. The preparation of this seed according to the promise has been the great objective of God's plan for the past six thousand years. The importance of this seed, the position to be occupied and the work to be done, can be in some measure approximated in our minds when we remember that Jehovah, the great Economist, has devoted so much time and treasure to the development of the seed of promise.

WHO IS HE?

That we might properly appreciate the one who suffered such a great contradiction of sinners, we call to mind that the first and only direct creation of Jehovah, was the Logos. By him all things were created that were thereafter made. It was to him that God offered the great honor of redeeming mankind, becoming the head of the creation, and occupying the position of greatest honor in the universe, next to Jehovah. He was rich in heavenly glory and power, honor and dignity; but he left the courts of heaven and became a man and met all the requirements of the law and its penalty upon the sinner, in order that he might redeem man from death and ultimately bless him.

Concerning the Logos the Apostle writes: "Though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich." (2 Corinthians 8:9) He took upon him the form and nature of man, being born of a woman, yet begotten by the power of Jehovah. He was made holy, harmless, without flaw or blemish. When he reached the age of thirty years, he was perfect as a man—perfect under the law, perfect in organism and mind. He came to this estate in order that he might carry out God's great plan for the redemption and blessing of humankind. Of him the Apostle says: "We see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels, for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor; that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man. For it became him, for whom are all things and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings."—Hebrews 2:9, 10.

CONSECRATION BRINGS SUFFERING

When Jesus reached the age of thirty years as a man, we find him at the Jordan consecrating himself to do his Father's will. Here he said: "Lo, I come (in the volume of the book it is written of me) to do thy will, O God." (Hebrews 10:7) God's will was expressed in his law. It was the will of God that mankind should be redeemed by a perfect human life given as a ransom for the perfect human life of Adam, forfeited by disobedience. The ransomer must take the place of the sinner. He must suffer and die as a sinner.

Satan had caused the suffering and death by his wrongful course. Immediately after the consecration of Jesus he went into the wilderness, and there we find Satan tempting him. Jesus had come to do a good work, the best work for mankind; and Satan was there to resist him in that work. The sufferings of Jesus began at that time, and continued until upon the cross at Calvary he cried: "It is finished!"

During the three and one-half years of his earthly ministry Jesus taught concerning his coming kingdom which would bring blessings to all that would accept it. Jesus did injury to no one. He did only good. He gave the most wonderful demonstration of love ever manifested before men or angels.

The Jewish nation was under a covenant with God, who had provided amongst them a priestly class. Satan had overreached this class. They had become selfish and had formed themselves into a company separate and distinct from the common people. They were the clergy of that day. Satan used them to persecute our Lord. Instead of being used as instruments in God's hand to carry out his purposes, they became instruments of persecution, causing the sufferings of the Master. Jesus was born a Jew under the law. He came to his own people and they received him not. "He was despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief." The leaders of the people, the Pharisaical element—the clergy of that time—in substance said: "We do not want this man; we will have nothing to do with him. His pious attitude is a stench in our nostrils."

Jesus did not seek honor at the hands of men; but, on the contrary, as it is written of him, "He made himself of no reputation." At the expense of his vitality he went about healing the sick, opening the eyes of the blind, teaching those who were teachable and doing good unto all as he had opportunity. Instead of being received and well-treated by the leaders of the people, he was denounced as a vile person, as a sinner, as a blasphemer of God's holy name. He was haled before the civil authorities and charged with sedition. False witnesses were produced against him, and he was unjustly convicted as a traitor. He died the most cruel and ignominious death, being hanged on a tree. From man's standpoint he was accursed both of God and of men. He died as a sinner.

WHY PERSECUTED

Why should leading men of the Jewish nation seek the life of Jesus? Why should they induce the rulers to put him to death, since he was guilty of no wrong? The Apostle Peter, after his mind was illuminated, answers: "I know, brethren, that it was in ignorance you did it, as was the case with your rulers also." (Acts 3:17) Jesus was teaching the people that life and blessings can come to mankind only through his kingdom. He had taught them, saying, "When ye pray, say, Thy Kingdom come; thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven." The people did not understand him. They could not understand him. They regarded him as an enemy of the government and as a blasphemer of God's name. Hence they caused him to die.

But why would God permit this? The Scriptures answer in substance that it was necessary for our Lord to suffer and die in order to become the Redeemer of mankind. It was necessary for him to pass through trying circumstances, fiery trials and sufferings, that he might be perfected as a new creature on the divine plane. He must have certain experiences in order to sympathize with the weaknesses of humankind. "Wherefore, in all things it behooved him to be made like unto his brethren, that he might be a merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God, to make satisfaction for the sins of the people; for in that he himself hath suffered, being tempted, he is able to succor them that are tempted."—Hebrews 2:17, 18.

From the time of Jesus' fasting in the wilderness immediately following his consecration, he knew that he must suffer and die. But the suffering and death did not deter him at all in his course; for he was carrying out his Father's plan. He had the Father's promise that, if faithful to his consecration vow, he should ultimately possess the divine nature and be the head of the new creation; that he would be the Redeemer of mankind; that he would have with him his bride in due time; and that he would have the full satisfaction of carrying out the Father's will. All this was joy to him. Hence the Apostle said: "For the joy that was set before him, [he] endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God." (Hebrews 12:2) By willingly passing through the fiery trials and sufferings, he showed a complete humility, a faith sublime, and perfect love. As a reward for this, Jehovah has granted him the highest position in the universe, God excepted.

HIS BODY MEMBERS

Before the foundation of the world it was a part of Jehovah's plan that the Lord Jesus should have associated with him 144,000 glorious creatures, and that these should be selected from amongst men, participating in the first resurrection and and sitting with Christ Jesus upon his throne. It follows, then, that the ones composing the members of his body should participate in his suffering. Concerning this, the Apostle says: "For even hereunto were ye called: because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps." (1 Peter 2:21) Thus in him we have a perfect pattern, and it becomes our privilege to follow this pattern.

At Pentecost the selection of the body members began; and it has progressed, according to the perfect wisdom of Jehovah, through a period of more than eighteen centuries. In the Scriptures this elect class is designated under many titles, namely, the body of Christ, the bride, the royal priesthood, the seed according to the promise, etc. As Satan resisted and persecuted Jesus, so he has resisted and persecuted, through his various instrumentalities, the members of the body of Christ. Often he has used as his instruments misguided men who had good intentions, who thought they were doing God service. Amongst these was Saul of Tarsus, who stood by at the stoning of St. Stephen and approved his death. Here again we find the various sects stirring up the people and bringing the charge of sedition and blasphemy against Stephen. They produced witnesses who were hired to swear against him, who testified that he spoke blasphemous words against the holy place and the law, saying, "This Jesus of Nazareth shall destroy this place, and shall change the customs which Moses delivered to us." (Acts 6:9-14) St. Stephen was the first martyr to follow Jesus.

SUFFERINGS OF ST. PAUL

Subsequently Saul of Tarsus came to a knowledge of the truth and made a full consecration to do God's will. He saw that he had wrongfully persecuted other Christians. Before St. Paul was permitted to enter upon his ministry as a servant of the Lord, God sent Ananias to minister unto him, and spoke concerning Paul, saying, "He is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel; for I will show him how great things he must suffer for my name's sake."—Acts 9:15, 16.

Thus we see that the Lord has made it absolutely essential that all who are privileged to be with Christ Jesus in his kingdom of glory must suffer with him. The subsequent experiences of St. Paul show how fully he met these requirements. Speaking of his own sufferings, the Apostle says: "Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one; thrice was I beaten with rods; once was I stoned; thrice I suffered shipwreck; a night and a day I have been in the deep; in journeyings often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils by mine own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren; in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness."—2 Cor. 11:24-27.

Following the usual course, the Apostle, because of his faithfulness in declaring the message of Messiah's kingdom, the resurrection of the dead and the blessings that will flow eo mankind during the reign of Christ, was called in question. Like the Lord and Master, his purpose was misunderstood. He was charged with sedition and with stirring up the people; and the clergy element of the Jews sought to kill him and incited others to do likewise. But the Lord preserved him and made him a great witness to God's cause, and his testimony has lighted the world for centuries and has been a beacon light to guide Christians on to the full consummation of their hopes.

Doubtless St. Paul often considered how Jesus, the perfect one, had patiently endured such contradiction of sinners against himself; and doubtless, considering, it had brought him great strength of faith and confidence, which sustained him in the hours of suffering. As a new creature, he appreciated that his treasure was in an earthen vessel, which must perish before he could receive the glorious body. In that earthen vessel he suffered; yet he rejoiced in his suffering. We hear him say: "We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair; persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed; always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our body. For we which live are always delivered unto death for Jesus' sake, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our mortal flesh."—2 Corinthians 4:8-11.

CHRISTIAN'S COURSE CERTAIN

The true Christian is one who follows in the footsteps of his Master. Every one, then, who has made a full consecration and appreciates it, realizes that his course in the present life is not one of ease and comfort to the flesh. It is not one that brings honors and plaudits of men. On the contrary, he is certain to receive the disapproval of men, particularly those in the ecclesiastical class who worship God in name only, and who possess the spirit of the world. Throughout the entire Gospel age there have been many who have claimed to follow Christ, yet who have been wolves in sheep's clothing, and who have preyed upon the members of the flock.

The unalterable course of the Christian is marked out by Jehovah; and this course is not one of ease. All who enter the narrow way must understand that they leave behind their earthly hopes and prospects. Concerning this, Jehovah said: "Hearken, O daughter, and consider, and incline thine ear; forget also thine own people, and thy father's house; so shall the King greatly desire thy beauty." (Psalm 45:10, 11) Thus clearly is shown that one cannot serve the Lord in faithfulness and declare the message of his kingdom and at the same time receive the approval or plaudits of mankind. Jesus made this plain: "The disciple is not above his master, nor the servant above his lord. It is enough for the disciple that he be as his master, and the servant as his lord. If they have called the master of the house Beelzebub, how much more shall they call them of his household? Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves: be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves."—Matthew 10:16, 24, 25.

THE "FEET" MEMBERS OF CHRIST

It becomes the duty of every footstep follower of Jesus to declare the message of his kingdom. (Isaiah 61:1-3) A failure or refusal to make known this message of the kingdom would prove disloyalty to the Lord and unworthiness to be called his disciples. The world in general cannot understand such a course of the Christian; for the message of glad tidings concerning the kingdom is hid from them. The reason for it is given by the Apostle, who says: "The god of this world [Satan] hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them." (2 Corinthians 4:4) Again he says: "The natural man receiveth not the things of the spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned."—1 Corinthians 2:14.

Thus we see that the great adversary blinds the minds of men who understand not the purposes of God, and leads them to believe that Christians are their enemies; and that any one who faithfully proclaims the message of Messiah's kingdom is a dangerous person. It has ever been thus; and Jehovah has availed himself of this condition to permit the followers of Jesus to suffer fiery experiences in order to develop the beautiful character which alone will be pleasing to him in his kingdom. All these fiery trials are trials of the faith of the Christian. The Apostle Peter likens this trial unto gold being refined by fire. Clay is not put in the crucible for the purpose of making jewels; but the heat of the crucible is used to refine the gold. Hence, "the trial of your faith, being much more precious than that of gold which perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honor and glory at the revelation of Jesus Christ." —1 Peter 1:7.

The Christian whose faith is made strong by a knowledge of the precious promises of God's Word and by a confident reliance upon them, can understand why he is misunderstood and persecuted by the world; and so understanding it he maintains a feeling of compassion and pity for his persecutors. As Jesus says: "If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you. If ye were of the world, the world would love his own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you."—John 15:18, 19.

Jehovah made it clear that the seed of Satan would bruise the "heel" of the seed of promise. (Genesis 3:15) The Scriptures point out that the last members of the body of Christ on earth would be the feet members. Having in mind the figure of a human body entering the kingdom, we perceive that the heel would be the very last member passing over. Then we should have reason to expect some special persecution of Christians in the end of the age and some sufferings peculiar to that time. It would not be at all strange to find many of these accused of sedition, of stirring up the people and being against the government. If the adversary used this means to blind the people concerning Jesus and concerning St. Stephen and St. Paul, it is entirely reasonable to conclude that similar methods would be used against the last members of the body.

CHRISTIANS MISUNDERSTOOD

The Harvest period of the Gospel age began particularly in 1878. Since then, the Lord's people have been gathered out from every denomination in the land and from the world and, fully consecrating themselves to follow in the Master's footsteps, have been striving thus to do. Calmly, yet boldly and fearlessly, they have declared the message of Messiah's kingdom. They have sincerely prayed the prayer that Jesus taught them: "Thy kingdom come; thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven." It is manifest that with the coming of Messiah's kingdom the present order of things must pass away. Therefore those who declare this message are misunderstood. The Scriptures indicate that they would be considered as being against war, because of their faithfulness to the Lord.—Jeremiah 38:4.

If the Lord was misunderstood, if the apostles were misunderstood, why should we not expect the last members on earth to be misunderstood? At a time when there is "distress of nations, men's hearts failing them for fear and for looking after the things coming upon the world," it would be expected that Christians would be misunderstood. And thus it is. Jesus was asked what would be an evidence of the end of the world and of his presence and of the establishment of his kingdom. Amongst other answers, he said, "Nation shall rise in arms against nation, kingdom against kingdom; and there shall be famines and pestilences and earthquakes [literal and symbolic] in various places. At that time they will deliver you up to punishment and will put some of you to death; and you will be objects of hatred of all the nations because you are called by my name. Then will many stumble and fall; and they will betray one another and hate one another. Many false preachers will rise up and lead multitudes astray; and because of the prevalent disregard of God's law, the love of the great majority will grow cold. But those who stand firm to the end shall be saved. And this good news of the kingdom [kingdom news] shall be proclaimed throughout the whole world to set an evidence before the Gentiles [the peoples of earth, all of which are representd in America]; and then the end will come."

There is no nation, no sect, no ecclesiastical organization on the earth today, that loves the faithful follower of Jesus. Hence we have a clear fulfillment of the Lord's prophecy. Satan's kingdom is falling. The demons are loose, and the forces of evil are arrayed in the final conflict against the last members of the Christ on earth. Jesus plainly stated that Babylon would become the habitation of demons and that from these agencies the persecution would come.

"The kingdom of heaven is at hand." Never were these words so true before. Those who enter the kingdom henceforth must enter shortly. Shall we expect tribulation now? "We must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God." (Acts 14:22) Are you among those who have been experiencing special trials and tribulations in recent days? Have you witnessed the fulfillment of the prophetic statement of God's Word relating to the closing of the age? What, then, should be our attitude? Jesus answered: "When these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption [deliverance] draweth nigh." (Luke 21:28) Shall we fear what man can do unto us? Jesus answers: "Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul [the new creature]. . . . Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing? and one of them shall not fall on the ground without your Father. But the very hairs of your heads are all numbered. Fear ye not therefore; ye are of more value than many sparrows. Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven."—Matthew 10:26-33.

The Psalmist in beautiful poetic phrase refers to the time of stress upon the Christians in the close of their earthly career. He describes them as praying unto God when they are about to be overflowed by the great floods of the peoples, and that by faith they can hear, wafted back from the angels of heaven, the sweet songs of deliverance. "For this shall every one that is godly pray unto thee in a time when thou mayest be found; surely in the floods of great waters they shall not come nigh unto him. Thou art my hiding place; thou shalt preserve me from trouble; thou shalt compass me about with songs of deliverance."—Psalm 32:6, 7.

THE CHRISTIAN'S ATTITUDE TOWARD THE WORLD

What, then, should be the attitude of the Christian toward those who engage in persecuting him? Shall the Christian be resentful? It is written concerning Jesus, "When he was reviled, he reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously." (1 Peter 2:23) The servant must be like unto his Master. (Romans 8:29) The world is blind to God's purposes. The dark night is settling down. There is stress amongst the peoples. But, thanks be to God! ere long the Sun of Righteousness will arise with healing in its beams, dispelling this darkness; and then, gradually, the peoples will understand.

Let us remember that the end of all things hath approached. Therefore let us be of sober mind and watch and pray, looking to the time of our full deliverance into the glorious light of the kingdom of our God. If we are subjected to fiery trials and sufferings, what, then, should be our attitude? The Apostle answers: "Our light affliction, which is but a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen; for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal."—2 Corinthians 4:17, 18.

GLORIES ETERNAL

The glories that await the faithful cannot be described by human tongue or pen. "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." (1 Corinthians 2:9) "It doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is." (1 John 3:2) "God hath appointed him heir of all things." (Hebrews 1:2), and hath provided that the members of his body be heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ Jesus, "if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together."—Romans 8:17.

By the eye of faith, then, we contemplate the glories of the kingdom; and this we can do in a measure only by comparison. We ascend into the mountain top at the dawn of morning and gaze upon the broad expanse below. We mark the broad meadows, the green trees, the placid waters of the rivers, flowing on through their winding course to the great ocean. We mark the blooming flowers, sprinkled with dew-drops which lighted by the morning sun, sparkle like diamonds in the crown of a queen. We listen to the sweet song-birds, and all nature seems to join in to praise the great Creator. And we exclaim, How glorious! How beautiful! And yet this does not begin to approximate the glory and beauty of the kingdom.

Silently we meditate upon God's Word as we stand upon the brink of the mighty ocean. We see its waves tossing the ship like a cockleshell; and we marvel at the power thus manifested. And yet this does not begin to approximate the power of the Lord in his wonderful kingdom shortly to be established.

At night we gaze into the starlit heaven above. We behold the innumerable planets moving silently through space; and we exclaim, in the language of the Psalmist, "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handiwork!" We mark the diversified wisdom of Jehovah; and then we remember that his wisdom is here expressed in a small degree compared to what it will be when made manifest to members of the kingdom. We have in mind that those thus glorified with the King shall dwell eternally in the house of the Lord to behold the beauty of Jehovah and to inquire in his temple.

EXHORTATION TO HOLD FAST

We remember some of the promises of God concerning the beauty of those who shall compose the kingdom class. We are told that these shall shine forth as the brightness of the sun in the firmament. For the encouragement of God's people while they are passing through the valley of the shadow of death, Jehovah holds before them the exceeding great and precious promises. Among these is recorded: "All nations shall see thy righteousness and all the kings thy glory; and men shall call thee by a new name which the mouth of the Lord shall pronounce. And thou shalt be a crown of ornament in the hand of the Lord and a royal diadem in the hand of thy God." (Isaiah 62:2, 3.—Leeser) Now misunderstood, despised of all nations and looked upon with scorn; but when the kingdom of Messiah is established, all the peoples and nations of the earth will know that this one and that one was born in Zion. Thus has God promised when the record shall be written up. (Psalm 87:5) Now they are known by a name that is a by-word; then to be called by a new name which the mouth of God shall pronounce.

The Christ, head and body members, when complete, will be the crowning feature of God's creation thus far made manifest. The prophet describes them as a crown and a diadem in the hand of God. The crown represents authority; the diadem, to which the crown is fastened, pictures regal or kingly authority. Thus it is represented symbolically that the faithful ones shall be kings and priests unto God and unto Christ and reign with him; and that God will exhibit to all creatures in the ages to come this monument of his grace.

Having in mind the glories and beauties of the kingdom, we can with the Apostle exclaim, "I rejoice to fill up that which is behind of the sufferings of Christ for his body's sake, which is the church." (Colossians 1:24) Be of good courage, then, dear brethren. Be not dismayed. May we not now truly say with the Apostle, "I have fought the good fight, I have kept the faith"? And if so, if our work here is finished and we have proven faithful, we may know that in a little while we shall see God face to face, behold his glory and beauty and rejoice with exultant joy.

"Come all ye saints to Pisgah's mountains,
Come view our home beyond the tide;
Millennial Canaan is before us,
Soon we'll sing on the other side.
Oh, there see the white throne of glory,
And crowns which the saints then shall gain!
And all who shall love Christ's appearing,
Shall be bless'd by his glorious reign."

RENDERING GOOD WITHOUT OFFENSE

"Ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven: for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good; and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust."—Matthew 5:45.

It is one of the blessed privileges of the real children of God to be always free to do good. The children of the divine Father are led by the spirit of divine love. (Romans 8:14) They enjoy that liberty of the sons of God at present denied to a world lying in the evil one, but into which in due time—shortly we believe the whole world will be inducted. As says the Word: "The earnest expectation [the good things earnestly desired] of creation [of all created beings] waiteth for the manifestation [in glory and in power to bless] of the sons of God [the divinely begotten children of the God of love]. Because creation itself also [as well as the children] shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption [of death and of evil conditions, ideas, thoughts and feelings] into the glorious liberty of the children of God."—Romans 8:19, 21.

LIBERTY WHEREWITH CHRIST MAKES FREE

Laws are for the restraint of beings in bondage to hatred, envy, covetousness, wrath, lasciviousness, selfish ambition and other fruitage of fallen flesh. (Galatians 5:19-21) But if any 'be led by the spirit, they are not under the law,' and their character-fruitage will be "love, joy, peace long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, self-control." Against the children of God, animated by such a spirit there is and can be no law. (Galatians 5:22, 23) "For he that in these things serveth Christ is acceptable to God, and approved of men." (Romans 14:18) If good men do not approve of Jehovah's children it is because they do not understand them, or because they regard over-much the inevitable errors which may be sequels to the best of intentions—"For that [evil] which I do I allow not; but what I hate, that do I. It is no more I that do it, but sin [imperfection—the fallen condition] that dwelleth in me. For in me (that is, in my flesh) dwelleth no good thing; for to will [to do perfectly] is present with me; but how to perform that which is good, I find not. I delight in the law of God [the royal law of love] after the inner man [the new mind]; but I see another law in my [imperfect fleshly] members, warring against the law of my [new] mind, and bringing me [who purpose and try to do the very best] into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members." (Romans 7:15-23) So when God's children, among whom was the great Apostle Paul, try their very best, they necessarily do and say many things in ways unpleasing to even the best of men, and not approved by them.

Not only is the flesh fallen, but the brain and mind are imperfect. How poor are our memories! How faultily we grasp and understand things said and done! How deficient all are in so acting and speaking as fully to measure up to even customary conditions. Then when conditions change, how slow are our minds in seeing the change and in understanding its significance. But with conditions changing from day to day how important that all should know about the changes, so as to be prepared to think and act appropriately.

As a rule, when good-minded people come to understand the real good intention and effort back of imperfect actions, they make the proper allowance, and approve those who are trying to do good. The new creature in Christ Jesus, being absolutely well-intentioned in everything, is subject to none of the laws directed at the ill-intentioned. Being full of the divine spirit of love he has a true Christian love for everyone and tries to lay down even his life for his fellow sons of God, and as he can, for all men. "As we have opportunity, let us do good unto all, especially unto them who are of the household of faith."—Galatians 6:10.

The true Christian has liberty to do anything that can be done in the spirit of Christian love. His compass ever points to the star of divine love. The loving Master said to his disciples: "A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another." (John 13:34) So the faithful Christian always tries to avoid doing evil, and to do only that which is good. However much his course may seem to alter in direction, divine love is and remains his lode-star. He may, under varying natural conditions, in matters not of principle, do one thing today and the direct opposite tomorrow. He may appear inconsistent in his acts, but to God his heart is always consistent. As to principle a Christian is faithful, but in the application of a principle to given cases, the resultant action may vary as widely as the conditions and circumstances of the cases.

ESSENTIALS, UNITY—NON-ESSENTIALS, CHARITY

There are certain principles, such as the "ransom for all," which are forever vital, but certain subordinate principles may from time to time, with changed conditions, new information, or a new viewpoint be clearly seen to be not necessarily vital. It was vital for a Hebrew to keep himself Levitically undefiled, but after Pentecost this was no longer a vital principle; it was vital that no one but a priest eat the "shewbread"; but "David when he was an hungered, entered into the house of the Lord and did eat the shewbread, which was not lawful for him to eat, but only for the priests." (Matthew 12:3, 4) It is vital, according to Paul, for brothers in Christ to "avoid contentions" (Titus 3:9); but "Paul thought not good to take him [John Mark] with them, who departed from them from Pamphylia, and went not with them to the work. And the contention was so sharp between them, that they [Barnabas and Paul, who had 'lived in all good conscience before God'—Acts 23:1] departed asunder one from the other." —Acts 15:38, 39.

In apostolic times some Christians made it a matter of principle to "observe the days, months, times and years" (Galatians 4:10) of the Hebrew ritual; others did not. "One believed that he might eat all things; another who was weak [in the faith] eateth herbs." (Romans 14:2) "And," says Paul, "he that doubteth is damned [judged] if he eat, because he eateth not of faith [with confidence that it is proper]; for whatsoever is not of faith, is sin." (Romans 14:23) In modern times one Christian can eat pork, another can not; one can observe Sunday, another Saturday, and still another can keep all days holy to God; one can engage in temperance work, another cannot; one can own an automobile, another cannot. At one time a Christian feels unable to do certain things; later, with additional knowledge or thought, he can do them with a good conscience.

A Christian might not have been able conscientiously to engage in the military activities of a country offering only combatant service; later, when the opportunity is enlarged so that he may choose some good work such as the hospital or ambulance service, he may with a free conscience take such service. A Christian to whom may have been presented the perverted viewpoint that the Red Cross work is only the aiding of that killing which is against his conscience, cannot help the Red Cross; then he gains the broader viewpoint that the Red Cross is the embodiment of helping the helpless, and he finds himself able and willing to help the Red Cross according to ability and opportunity. A Christian, unwilling to kill, may have been conscientiously unable to buy government bonds; later he considers what great blessings he has received under his government, and realizes that the nation is in trouble and facing dangers to its liberty, and he feels himself conscientiously able to lend some money to the country, just as he would lend to a friend in distress.

The Christian with the broadest mind is the one who is best informed Scripturally. That Christian who is able to see from but one viewpoint is in danger of being what St. Paul calls "weak," in the sense that his inability to see all around a question limits his sphere of action. Narrow-mindedness invites troubles and persecutions for causes not even indirectly connected with true Christianity. Such trouble may usually well be avoided, and should be avoided in order that such trials or persecutions which are our portion may come upon the clear-cut issue of faithfulness in the consecrated life and not for other causes. The true footstep follower of Christ will have enough to suffer as a Christian. He will do his best to study all sides of every question and remove from himself causes for offense, other than his truly Christian and religious beliefs and principles which are vital.

"If ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye; for the spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you; on their part he [Christ in you] is evil spoken of, but on your part [in you as a new creature] he is glorified; but let none of you suffer as a murderer, or as a thief, or as an evil doer, or as a busybody in other men's affairs. Yet if any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed, but let him glorify God on this behalf."—1 Peter 4:14-16.

PRAYING TO GOD

[Paragraphs 1, 2 and 23 of this article, as it originally appeared in issue of June 1, 1918, were reprinted from article entitled, "Lord Teach Us to Pray," published in issue of July 1, 1906, which please see.]

JULY 21.—LUKE 11:1-13; PSA. 145:18, 19.

WHO ARE PRIVILEGED TO PRAY—HOW WE MAY "PRAY WITHOUT CEASING"—A MODEL PRAYER—ITS ASCRIPTIONS OF PRAISE—EXPRESSIONS OF CONFIDENCE IN GOD'S PROMISED KINGDOM—ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF OUR DEPENDENCE UPON HIM—CONFIDENCE IN HIS POWER TO PROTECT US AND FINALLY TO DELIVER US—PROPER ATTITUDE TOWARD THE EXPERIENCES OF LIFE—PURPOSE OF PRAYER—REQUEST FOR THE HOLY SPIRIT THE ESSENCE OF OUR PETITIONS.

"Let us therefore draw near with boldness unto the throne of grace, that we may receive mercy, and may find grace to help in time of need."—Hebrews 4:16.

The advanced Christian should be so fully in accord with the Father, the Son and the divine program that his entire life will be a prayer and a song of praise. He will have in his mind primarily the thought, 'What is God's will in this matter?' The heart that is thus ever looking for divine direction in all of life's affairs is thus continuously in an attitude of prayer; and no other condition is proper to the Christian.—Prov. 3:6; Psalm 37:4.

WHO IS PRIVILEGED TO SAY, "OUR FATHER"

Only those who have become children of God by forsaking sin and laying hold upon Christ as their Savior are accorded the privilege of approaching the throne of grace to obtain mercy and to find grace sufficient for their time of need. Only those who are accepted in the Beloved are privileged to call Jehovah God by the endearing name, "Our Father who art in heaven." The attempt thus to approach God implies (1) faith in him; (2) realization of dependence upon him; (3) faith that a way of reconciliation with him has been effected through our Redeemer; (4) realization that God no longer condemns the suppliant, but accepts him as a son. Moreover, it implies that the suppliant recognizes the fact that there are other sons of God who, like himself, have fled from sin and been adopted into God's family; for the petition begins, "our Father," not "my Father."

Therefore whoever thus addresses God must have concern for all the interests of the family of God. Whatever selfishness he might formerly have had he must divest himself of when he comes to the Father, and must realize himself as merely one of the favored class of sons thus privileged. It is in harmony with this thought that all of the Lord's consecrated people have special pleasure when permitted to approach the throne of grace together, whether but two or three or in larger numbers.

The more clearly we recognize that the privilege of prayer is an exclusive one, the more we shall be inclined to use it in a most reverent manner. The kings of earth make regulations respecting times, seasons, dress, etc., to be observed by those who wish to enter their presence; and all who have a proper appreciation of the majesty of the King Eternal, the only true God, will approach in a worshipful, reverent spirit, implied in the expression: "Hallowed be thy name." Our holy God is to be revered. His sacred name stands for everything that is just, wise and loving.

THE KINGDOM FOR WHICH WE PRAY

In the older manuscripts the words, "Thy will be done, as in heaven so in earth," are not found in Luke's Gospel, but in Matthew's. They are therefore properly to be considered a part of the petition. Be it noted, however, that while this petition as it stands is appropriate enough as a prayer, it evidently was not our Lord's intention that these words should continually be used as the only petition at the throne of grace, but rather he gave it as a sample. The various items of this prayer should therefore be to the Lord's people a suggestion of the general character of their petitions, and not understood as binding their terms, their expressions, their words.

The thoughts of true disciples are directed to the fact that the present condition of sin and death is not to be everlasting; that God has provided for a glorious kingdom through his Son and the church, his bride, under which all evil will be conquered and brought under complete subjugation to righteousness. Those in proper heart relationship to the Lord must recognize this fact, and be so separated from the spirit of this world that they will long for the installation of the reign of righteousness, even though they know that this will imply the overthrow of the present order. Their hearts are so in accord with the Lord that they are out of accord with every form, institution and vine not of the Father's right-hand planting. (Isaiah 60:21) Longing for the Kingdom that will bless the world, they also long for the promised privilege of being joint-heirs with their Redeemer as members of that kingdom class which shall bless the world and uplift mankind out of sin and death.

PROVISION FOR ALL OUR NECESSITIES

The next petition is for our needful bread. There is no attempt here to supplicate delicacies, but merely an expression of trust in the Lord and of confidence that he will provide, in harmony with his promise that our bread and our water shall be sure. (Isaiah 33:16) Indeed, when we remember our Master's words, that the heathen have in mind what they shall eat, drink and wear, but that the heavenly Father knows what things we have need of (Matthew 6:31-33), we perceive that to the spirit-begotten and developed Christian these words respecting daily bread imply more particularly the spiritual food than the earthly food. Provision for all our necessities, both temporal and spiritual, according to divine wisdom, is briefly summed up in this petition.

To suppose that the Master is merely referring to the natural food would imply that the petitioners were merely natural men; whereas we have seen that the prayer was taught only to those who were about to become new creatures in Christ by a covenant to walk in his steps in the narrow way. Therefore it must be understood that it is the new creature who is offering the petition; and this will imply that it is the nourishment of the new creature which is here chiefly under consideration, with whatever provision for temporal necessities the heavenly Father may see best. This is distinctly brought to our attention in Luke 11:13, wherein the heavenly Father is represented as dispensing the holy Spirit, the spiritual blessings and experiences which develop in his children his own spirit, the spirit of the truth, the spirit of the Lord.

GOD'S MERCY PROPORTIONATE TO OURS

"Forgive us our sins; for we also forgive everyone that is indebted to us." The sins here referred to, or as in Matthew "debts," are in no way related to original sin, which we are not to pray to have forgiven, but which the heavenly Father has already made provision to forgive unconditionally to those who accept Christ. Original sin is not forgivable, as that word is generally used. But God in his mercy provided a Redeemer; and so we read: "Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures." (1 Corinthians 15:3) He is the propitiation for our sins, the Just for the unjust, to bring us to God. This prayer relates not, therefore, to that sin the forgiveness of which permits us to approach God and by covenant through Jesus to call him our Father. The sins mentioned in this prayer, the "debts," are those which are ours after we have become new creatures in Christ, children of the Highest. Because of the imperfections of our flesh we cannot do the things which we would, the things which we know to be the perfect will of our Father in heaven.

In a certain sense these are our debts or obligations to the Father from the time when we start to walk in newness of life, not after the flesh but after the Spirit. Walking after the Spirit, we find that we cannot come up to it; hence the debts. It is for the forgiveness of these that we are privileged to petition—matters of omission and of commission not wilfully done, not intentionally omitted.—Romans 7:19-23.

According to the divine arrangement the merit of Christ not only covered the sins that are past, but made provision for our weaknesses and blemishes en route for the kingdom. God could indeed apply the merit of Christ to these debts, excuse us from them and not require us to mention them at all; but for our advantage he has arranged otherwise, that we must make application for the covering of these debts, for exoneration in the name of Jesus our Lord and Redeemer.

WISDOM IN THE DIVINE ARRANGEMENT

In making daily application for forgiveness of our unintentional shortcomings we learn three important lessons: (1) to keep track of our blemishes; (2) to keep in mind that we are always dependent upon the merit of our Savior, the merit of his precious blood; (3) to be merciful, compassionate and generous toward those who may be our debtors in matters great and small. Thus we are better assisted in warring a good warfare against the world, the flesh and the devil.

How just and how wise is the divine arrangement which requires that in applying for mercy we pledge ourselves to the Lord to see to it that we are also merciful, forgiving, to others, that we do not attempt to exact justice from those with whom we have contact and who are under some obligation to us! This is a wise provision in that it will assist us in the right direction, will assist us in the development of character which the Lord will approve, and which will be meat for those who would be inheritors of the kingdom. It will assist us in our endeavors to be copies of God's dear Son, and like unto our Father in heaven in the sentiments of our hearts at least. It is just; for God has not arranged simply to show us favors above the remainder of mankind, except as we shall receive his mercies with proper appreciation and with a desire to attain the condition which would be pleasing to him and which he would be pleased to reward with the life everlasting and the kingdom glories.

THE ARCH ENEMY OF THE CHURCH

These words, "Deliver us from evil," are not in the original of St. Luke's account of this prayer; but they are found in St. Matthew's account, and hence are properly a part of the petition. The Revised Version reads: "Bring us not into temptation, but deliver us from the evil one." (Matthew 6:13) This statement is a little confusing; for elsewhere we have the assurance that "God tempteth no man." (James 1:13) The thought then seems to be that there is an evil one ever ready to attack the Lord's people to the extent that God will grant the opportunity, as in the case of Job.

We remember, too, that trials, testings and temptations are necessary for our development as new creatures; and since these are necessary and of divine arrangement or permission, it would not be appropriate for us to pray that the Lord would spare us from all trials and temptations. (Hebrews 12:8) Therefore we must paraphrase this petition in our thoughts and suppose it to mean: 'Bring us not into temptation that would be too severe for us,' or 'Abandon us not in temptation, but deliver us from the evil one.'

This thought is in full accord with the entire testimony of the Word of God. The promise is: "He will not suffer us to be tempted above that we are able, but will with the temptation provide a way of escape." (1 Corinthians 10:13) The evil one would indeed utterly destroy the Lord's consecrated people, but he will not be permitted to do so. Thus far may he go, but no further. If God be for us, who or what power can prevail against us? Nothing shall by any means separate us from the love of God in Christ.—Romans 8:31-39.

THE PURPOSE OF PRAYER

Although our Lord did not teach his disciples to pray until they had requested instruction, yet this was evidently not because he was unwilling to assist them, but because he wished them to desire further teaching. Some may argue that no one needs instruction as to how to pray, but this thought is not borne out by this lesson. Evidently there are proper and improper prayers. We might as well say that no one needs instruction in singing or in playing music. While singers and players are born with the talent, nevertheless the most talented musicians reach their proficiency through instruction.

So it is with prayer. We have already seen that great mistakes have been made as to who may pray and what may be prayed for; and we have already considered the Lord's outline respecting a proper form of prayer, beginning with ascriptions of praise and proceeding to expressions of confidence in God and in the promises of his kingdom, continuing with acknowledgments of our dependence upon his provisions day by day, and ending with expressions of confidence in his power and goodness to protect us and ultimately to deliver us. This is the general form which our Lord commends to us as proper.

On the other hand, it is interesting to note that the Lord does not wait until we have become proficient in the use of language and in the form of expressing our petitions to him, but that so broad and so gracious are his arrangements that we may come in imperfection and with stammering tongues to tell him of our devotion, our appreciation, our confidence, etc., in any manner we please. The suggestion is, however, that in proportion as we appreciate the privilege of prayer, we shall desire to use the privilege in the manner most acceptable to the great One whom we thus approach.

Why should the Lord wish us to ask before he gives his blessing? For a wise purpose we may be sure! He would have us feel our need; he would have us appreciate the privilege; he would have us look for the response; and in all these experiences he would develop us as his sons of the new creation. Therefore we are to ask, seek and knock if we would find the riches of God's grace, and have opened to us more and more the wonderful privileges, mercies and blessings which he is so willing to give us as we develop in character and in preparation for his mercies.

The clear intimation of the remainder of the lesson is that the essence of our petitions to our heavenly Father should be a request for more of his holy Spirit; and that we should look to the experiences of life, its trials, disappointments, discouragements, oppositions, as being not really injurious to us, not as stones, scorpions and serpents, but as blessings in disguise, if we but receive them in the proper spirit. Our God is able to make all things abound in the interest of his children, the new creatures in Christ Jesus. These know from experience that some of their severest trials and disappointments of an earthly kind have worked out for them development of character, elements of the holy Spirit, which they probably could not have so well received in any other manner.

Hence, when we pray to the Lord for his blessings, we are with patience to wait for them, and to seek and find them in the various circumstances of life which his providences will permit. Remembering that the holy Spirit is the spirit of meekness, gentleness, patience, long-suffering, brotherly kindness, love, we may well ask ourselves how else could the Lord work out for us these elements of character which we desire did he not permit to come upon us the trials necessary for our development.

PROMINENT BRETHREN ARRESTED

On the 7th day of May warrants were issued by the Federal Court of the Eastern District of New York for the arrest of brethren connected with the management of the Society or with the Editorial Committee of THE WATCH TOWER, or identified with the preparation or circulation of "The Finished Mystery." The brethren for whom warrants were issued were: Joseph F. Rutherford, William E. Van Amburgh, A. H. Macmillan, Robert J. Martin, Clayton J. Woodworth, George H. Fisher, Robert H. Hirsh, Giovanni De Cecca, Fred H. Robison. On the 8th of May most of these warrants were served by United States Marshal Power. The charge given in the warrants was that these brethren were united in a conspiracy to obstruct or impede the war work of the United States.

Shortly after their arrest the brethren were arraigned in the Federal Court, Judge Garvin presiding, and all eight were met with an indictment previously returned by the Grand Jury, charging

(1, 3) The offense of unlawfully, feloniously and wilfully causing and attempting to cause insubordination, disloyalty and refusal of duty in the military and naval forces of the United States of America, in, through and by personal solicitations, letters, public speeches, distribution and public circulation throughout the United States of America of a certain book called "Volume Seven—SCRIPTURE STUDIES—The Finished Mystery"; and distributing and publicly circulating throughout the United States certain articles presented in pamphlets called, "BIBLE STUDENTS MONTHLY," "THE WATCH TOWER," "KINGDOM NEWS" and other pamphlets not named, et cetera;

(2, 4) The offense of unlawfully, feloniously, and wilfully obstructing the recruiting and enlistment service of the United States when the United States was at war.

The first four brethren named faced a second indictment of trading with the enemy. This was based upon a claim that the Society's officers sent $500 to the manager of the Swiss branch at Zurich, Switzerland.

Each of the brethren arraigned was held over on bail of $2,500 for each of the indictments for appearance in court on May 15th—the group bond aggregating $30,000. Some inconvenience and difficulty was experienced in getting bail, because most of the bonding companies had agreed not to give bail for us, but after the second day it was arranged.

The eight brethren appeared in court on May 15th and were held over until June 3rd, at which time the trial may occur, though that point is not certain. The space in the court room is very limited and we suggest that it would be more advisable for the friends generally not to try to attend. Your prayers and interest, however, as already expressed in many communications, are deeply appreciated. Needless to say, the brethren pleaded "not guilty" to both indictments, as they consider themselves innocent of the charges made. They all affirm their motive in connection with the Seventh Volume, or associated matters, to be merely the desire to advance the interests of the Kingdom of Christ by announcing its near establishment. If anything has been said or written that is in any measure unwise or indiscreet it certainly was not with a view to interfering with the prosecution of the war, which war was foretold in the columns of this journal as early as 1885. It was there pointed out that Jehovah saw the world war to be a necessity. It it not within our province to interfere with the Lord's affairs, and no true Christian could intentionally do so. Our business is to announce Christ's Kingdom and the blessings it will bring. In connection with such announcement it is necessary to point to the false position which Churchianity holds in relation to earth's affairs. But that is very different from interfering with the military operations of the United States.

Many of the brethren in different parts of the country have been arrested on a like charge. We are certain that their arrest has followed as a result of their zeal for Christ and not as a result of any desire to interfere in any measure with the civil authorities. We counsel sobriety of mind under all circumstances and an attitude of prayerful, watchful waiting upon the Lord. His kingdom is at hand; his will be done. The "Overman Bill" has now become a law and it makes wisdom and discretion in speech very appropriate. The bill was not designed to interfere with the preaching of the Gospel, but many things can be misconstrued by enemies. "All who will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution," but let none suffer needlessly.

OBEYING GOD

"If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments."—John 14:15.

"THE GOOD NEWS OF THE KINGDOM"

Andrew and Peter, James and John, fishermen, were invited by the Master to be his followers, his associates in the great work of calling the "elect" and, if faithful, subsequently to sit with him in his throne as part of the glorified church. They left all to follow him. His terms were these: "If any man will be my disciple, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me." The Lord does not open the door of opportunity to all of his disciples throughout this Gospel age to become prominent ministers of the truth after this manner. Yet he accepts none as his disciples except those who forsake all to follow him. In their hearts they must give up all else. They have the spirit of discipleship and self-sacrifice, and would gladly forsake all actually if the door of opportunity opened to them.

OUR LORD'S COMMANDMENTS TO HIS PEOPLE

Every follower of the Master should realize that if he has entered the service of the Lord he has pledged his very life to the service of truth and righteousness. Although he is not under the Mosaic law, nevertheless the will of God, which is the spirit of the Jewish law, is binding upon him in proportion as he knows it. Speaking of the spirit of that law, Jesus declared that it was briefly comprehended in two commandments. The first of these is: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, mind, being and strength." The second is: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Every Christian and every angel recognizes the divine law and feels a responsibility to it to the extent of his ability; but neither angels nor Christians are under the Law Covenant. That covenant was made with Israel only.

How could any truly consecrated child of God do less than his very best to love and serve his heavenly Father with all his mind, being and strength? How could he decline the divine requirement to love his neighbor as himself—to be kind, generous, unselfish? True, the new creature may find difficulty in devoting all of his mind and strength to the Lord and in dealing with perfect fairness with all of his fellow creatures. But this is his desire and intention; and to accomplish this he must strive daily against the natural inherited weaknesses of his old nature, his flesh. In proportion to his love for the Lord will be his zeal in this strife; and proportionate also will be the reward that will be given him in the end by the heavenly Father.

"A NEW COMMANDMENT"

At first it would appear that these two commandments itemized by our Lord Jesus would include everything that could be required by justice; and so they do. Justice requires nothing more than what these two commandments include.

But we find that our Lord gave his disciples another command, a third one, a new one, over and above anything that the divine law required, a commandment not applicable to any except those who become the disciples of Jesus.

This new commandment the Father did not put upon the Son. Jesus voluntarily put this regulation upon himself and laid down his life sacrificially, something no law could justly demand. The heavenly Father did not require that Jesus do this in the sense of commanding our Lord to do it. He did require it, however, in the sense that he promised glory, honor and immortality, the divine nature and the Messianic kingdom to the saintly one who would enter the covenant of sacrifice. —Psalm 50:5.

In entering this covenant of sacrifice, therefore, our Lord Jesus did more than what the law given to Israel required. Consequently when pointing out to his disciples the terms upon which he would become their advocate and guarantee them a share with himself in the heavenly things, he specified the importance of this third commandment: "A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another as I have loved you." (John 13:34-35;15:12) St. John points out that Christ loved us to the extent of dying for us, and that all the true followers of Jesus, possessed of his spirit, should likewise count it a joy to be permitted to lay down their lives in the service of the brethren.—1 John 3:14-16.

Gradually our eyes of understanding have been opening wider and wider to see the breadths, lengths, depths and heights of the love of God. As a result we have been striving more and more to love and to serve our God with all our heart, mind, being and strength. More and more, also, have we learned to appreciate the necessity for dealing justly and kindly with the members of our families, with our neighbors, with all mankind—loving our neighbors as ourselves. We may have been congratulating ourselves on the progress we have been making, and surely we all need some encouragement while battling with the old nature.

But now, behold the new commandment, requiring a still greater devotion to the will of our Father and to the leadership of our Redeemer! We are obligated to observe the rule of righteousness toward our heavenly Father and toward all our neighbors; but toward the brethren of the household of faith we are to do more than the right. We are to suffer, to sacrifice, on their behalf, in their interest. "We ought to lay down our lives for the brethren." Oh, what a searching proposition this covenant of sacrifice is! How strange it is that it should be on behalf of the brethren that we are expected to sacrifice, to lay down our lives!

"HEREBY MAY WE KNOW"

It seems remarkable that in pointing out one of the surest signs whereby the Lord's people may know positively that they have been begotten of the holy Spirit, the Apostle John says: "Hereby we know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." Long ago we pointed out that one of the final and most searching tests upon the church, and the one under which many will fall, will be love for the brethren. Seemingly many will fail at this point, and be therefore accounted unworthy of an abundance entrance into the kingdom of Christ. Like all other tests this will be most pointed and conspicuous during this time of special privilege and special trial in the last hours of the Gospel age.

How strange that love of the brethren should be the crucial test, as we have already pointed out in the STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES! As we may seriously fear, it will be more and more manifest as we come down toward the consummation of our hope. This is a personal matter. Each one who has named the name of Christ is under this testing. If not yet, then sooner or later this willingness to sacrifice in the interests of the brethren will prove each of us either as loyal, faithful to our covenant or else as disloyal, unfaithful to our obligations. Let us make this matter of love for the brethren and of laying down our lives for them one of personal study and of practical application to our own hearts, minds, thoughts, words, actions. Moreover, let us pray for one another, as well as exhort one another along these lines, striving to be filled with the spirit of the Master.

"UNSPOTTED FROM THE WORLD"

Addressing the Lord's people the Apostle James declares: "If any man among you seem to be religious and bridleth not his tongue, that man's religion is vain." Because the tongue is the index of the heart, because "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh," therefore the unbridled tongue speaking selfishly, enviously, bitterly, boastfully, slanderously, proves that the heart from whose fullness these wrong sentiments overflow is unsanctified, unholy, grievously lacking in the spirit of Christ. Hence whatever religion such a man may have attained is thus far in vain; for that heart is not saved nor in a salvable condition.

To avoid the development of any such wrong condition of heart the Apostle urges us to keep ourselves unspotted from the world. This implies that there is a possibility of our having our robe of Christ's righteousness spotted. This does not signify that anything we could do could destroy Christ's work or make of none effect his sacrifice for sin. The robe signifies that share of Christ's merit which has been freely imputed to us by him with the Father's consent. If through receiving the spirit of the world we blemish or sully this robe we shall be unfit to be of the bride class and shall be rejected.

Yet in our present imperfect condition and our many unfavorable surroundings and besetments it would be miraculous if we never came so closely in contact with evil as to spot our garment or wrinkle it. (Jude 23; Revelation 3:4; 16:15) However, we find that God's gracious provision in Christ is not only that our Lord Jesus' sacrifice was sufficient for all our imperfections of the past, but that it is sufficient for any unintentional blemish or weakness or misstep resulting from our own imperfections or the weaknesses of others, after we become the Lord's children from the time of consecration.

In other words we are provided not only with the robe covering all the past, but also (in the same sacrifice of Christ) with a spot-remover; and any who through weakness or temptation stumble by the way and soil their garments are to be restored by the brethren 'in the spirit of true meekness, considering themselves, lest they also be tempted.' To restore another, means to help him to see the spot and by faith to apply the provided cleansing, through penitence and prayer. All who are in the right condition of heart, appreciating the purity of the robe, appreciating the Bridegroom and his favor, appreciating the great King and appreciating the honor of being called to the marriage, will be very careful indeed to keep themselves unspotted from the world, and very careful to remove as quickly as possible any spot that might appear thereon. Thus the bride of Christ makes herself ready for the marriage of the Lamb.

MAY 30 FOR PRAYER AND SUPPLICATION

In accordance with the resolution of Congress of April 2nd, and with the proclamation of the President of the United States of May 11, it is suggested that the Lord's people everywhere make May 30th a day of prayer and supplication. God was graciously pleased to cause this nation to be formed and to grow under the most favorable conditions in the world for the preservation of liberty, civil and religious.

This is the land divinely "shadowed with wings"—overshadowed by the providential watchcare of God's Word—where God has lifted up an ensign on the mountain (kingdom), and where he has blown the trumpet message of the truth. Here the love of truth has for three hundred years attracted from all quarters of the world people who love God, love the Bible and love religious liberty. Here, practically alone of all the nations, exists in the fundamental laws of the land the safeguard that so long as the Constitution stands no law may be made nor any governmental action taken prohibiting the free exercise of religion, or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press.

Countless blessings have flowed to devout people through the wise provisions of the laws of the United States, blessings whose influences have been felt to the remotest corners of the earth, wherever even a spark of love for God-given freedom might be fanned into a glow. Here, more perhaps than elsewhere, exists that "present" which shall be brought unto Jehovah (Isaiah 18:7), earth's oblation (Ezekiel 45:1) to God of that class who, when in the age to come the restitution hosts shall be numbered, shall be found to have been "born in Zion" (Psalm 87:5, 6), taken out of the world and given, in a figure, as humanity's present to their God, to be forever sons and servants of the Most High.

This class love to "assemble themselves together, and so much the more as they see the day approaching" (Hebrews 10:25), and they will be of all people the most ready to embrace an opportunity of gathering in an additional service of prayer and supplication. As says the spirit through the Apostle Paul: "I exhort, therefore, that first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions and giving of thanks, be made for all men; for kings, and for all that are in authority; that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty. For this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Savior." (1 Timothy 2:1-3) Let there be praise and thanksgiving to God for the promised glorious outcome of the war, the breaking of the shackles of autocracy, the freeing of the captives (Isaiah 61:1) and the making of the world safe for the common people—blessings all assured by the Word of God to the people of this country and of the whole world of mankind.

INTERESTING LETTERS

LOVE AND CONFIDENCE

DEAR BRETHREN:—

The ecclesia at this place at a recent meeting voted unanimously that all the dear brethren at Brooklyn be advised of our loving interest and sympathy in this hour of trial upon the church. The hand of Herodias and her daughter is surely being made manifest, thanks to "that servant's" warning to the church. And more and more we realize, as events transpire, how faithfully he labored for our instruction and edification in the truth, ceasing not to warn us night and day.

In this connection, the ecclesia would like to express its fullest confidence in the Lord's chosen servant at this time to direct his great work. We rejoice that we have had so many evidences of his approval of the management, viz., by the wonderful distribution of literature and books, the great bulk of the Lord's people held together by the strong ties of Christian fellowship, the grand visits of THE WATCH TOWER semi-monthly, laden in each issue with spiritual fatness, and we can say without exaggeration that it is better than ever before; but greatest of all these evidences is, we believe, that the clergy, seeing their opportunity to deal a deathblow to the truth under the cloak of "patriotism" are, so to speak, making hay while the sun shines. But we know their efforts, while designed to work evil to the Lord's people, can only result in ultimate good through the loving oversight of our dear heavenly Father in all of the affairs of his people.

We are pleased to notice that you counsel wisdom and extreme care on the part of the Lord's people, and avoidance of acts contrary to the law, thus putting the entire responsibility upon the clergy and those who support them.

Our prayers continually ascend to our Father on behalf of all you dear ones at Brooklyn, and those in every place who have been deprived of their liberties in one way or another, and as the great night settles down upon the earth we lay hold more securely than ever upon the wonderful promises which belong to God's children.

With loving greetings in our dear Redeemer's name, I am very sincerely your brother, W. W.—Md.

REJOICING BECAUSE DELIVERANCE IS NEAR

DEAR BRETHREN IN CHRIST:—

Enclosed please find money order, and receive it as my little share in the work.

As I am sure the realization of our glorious hope is very near and I make ready to leave at any minute my beloved Master may call me, I want to thank you for all the grand spiritual blessings I have received through the Society during the many years I have enjoyed the wonderful truth. Oh, what would life have been if it were not for the truth, the light, the joy of the Lord! I am rejoicing because I see my deliverance draws near. I want to be faithful and strong in the Lord, no matter what shall be required of me.

I am alone here and often miss the fellowship with others of the same precious faith. I therefore ask you to remember me before the Throne of Grace.

Yours in his name, C. S. C.—Ala.

ASSURANCE OF LOVE AND LOYALTY TO TRUTH

DEAR BRETHREN:—

Please find our check enclosed, to be used in the Lord's work as you may see fit to direct.

We certainly feel that the Lord is using the Society to spread the message to his people, and we intend by the Lord's grace and help to stand by the Society in its trials and persecutions to the end. We have been rejoicing in this present truth for about three years, and would not part with it for all this world, although many times we wonder why the Lord was so good to any so unworthy as we are.

Every day we pray for the Lord's guidance over you and all at Bethel, some of whom we are personally acquainted with; and we desire your prayers that we may meet before our Lord. With Christian love and best wishes, we are

Your brother and sister in the Lord,

E. J. and G. J. M.—Ill.

SUNSHINE, WIND AND RAIN NEEDED

DEAR BRETHREN:—

Considering the end of the Gospel age harvest, numerous truth friends inquire respecting the taking away of all the saints reasonably soon, or during this year 1918. My thought is, that the harvest is over only in so far as the cutting of the antitypical grain is concerned. There is no more wheat to cut, but there may be some more to bind into sheaves, and set up in the field to be cured—subjected to the elements, sunshine, wind, and rain and other developing influences designed to make such fit for the garner.

We, as the wheat of the Lord's harvest, may need some similarly trying experiences to harden and fit us for the ingathering. In other words, we are waiting for the wagon to take us to the barn.

The harvest storms may upset us, but the good man of the farm picks us up, reshocks us, and we are ready for the next testing of our strength to stand.

Some of us may go home in a nice wagon, some of us in a ramshackle affair amid much jolting, but, if faithful, we shall all get there somehow, in due season.

Does any of us feel that he is sufficiently developed and fit for the in-gathering? Or do we all realize the need of a little more hardening of character, a little more buffeting from the earthly elements to prepare us for the threshing floor? Shall we not patiently wait for the vehicle to haul us home? In Christian love.

Your brother, J. A. BOHNET.—Pilgrim.

READY TO DIE FOR CHRIST

DEARLY BELOVED BRETHREN IN CHRIST:—

Full of rejoicing because of having come to a knowledge of the marvelous light now shining from the presence of our Redeemer, who has showed me the unfathomable riches of our heavenly Father's character through his glorious Plan of the Ages, I am writing you these few lines to express my sincere appreciation of the work the Lord has placed in your hands. Continually do I pray that he will bless you richly, filling you more with his holy Spirit, in order that you may continue in the precious way which he has shown us and which, though strewn with difficulties and dangers of all kinds, is the most sublime way ever opened up, or ever to be opened.

Perhaps we shall very soon be compelled to give our testimonies with our lives, or rather with those of our Lord; for we have consecrated our lives unto death. How great will be the privilege of dying as loyal soldiers of the great Captain, not having rejected the teaching of the cross, but confessing before the blinded world the name of him who redeemed us from sin and death and whose we have been from birth! May the Lord give us grace and strength to die at the side of our Savior and our beloved brethren in the precious faith, so that thus we shall see one another face to face beyond the vail, having gained the crown of life and being forever freed from the power of Satan, of the world and of our poor, weak, fallen nature!

I cannot find words with which to express to the Lord my deep gratitude for the "meat in due season" which he gave me through the volumes of our well beloved brother, Pastor Russell, whose memory is a powerful influence on our way toward the heavenly Jerusalem.

With Christian love, Your brother and servant in Christ.

ABEL ORTEGA.—Mexico.

REFRESHING CONVENTION IN AUSTRALIA

DEAR BRETHREN:—

Greetings in the name of our Lord and Master.

It is my privilege to furnish you with a brief report of a two-day convention recently held here, the purpose of our gathering being the special recognition of the Lord's goodness in blessing our efforts in the extension field, and the linking up of those brethren, numbering some 50, who had responded to the truth message, and who expressed the desire to come under the general administration of the church, which arrangement is now working admirably.

Notwithstanding the fact that traveling facilities were limited on account of strike conditions, on the Sunday approximately 150 assembled, while on Monday 70 to 80 were present.

At the baptismal service four brothers and seven sisters symbolized their consecration.

The occasion proved to be most helpful and inspiring, and we believe the most happy season of fellowship ever enjoyed by the Lord's people in Sydney. The testimonies of the various brethren gave strong evidence of love for and determination to stand by the truth at all costs, and to hold fast the beginning of their confidence firm unto the end. We are convinced that our little gathering was a real time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord, and will prove a stimulus to the faith of these privileged to attend.

With Christian love, praying our heavenly Father's richest blessing on your efforts for his people.

Yours in the Master's service,

D. H., (Sydney Class)—Australia.

STRUCK WITH THE TRUTH

DEAR FRIENDS:—

I have signed the petition to the President and six of my best friends with me. Let me briefly state how I came into possession of "The Finished Mystery."

It was on the night of March the sixth, about 11 o'clock; I was walking down Third Avenue, thinking about practically nothing, and with a heavy thud I was struck on the shoulder by what I thought was a brick, but, alas, it was "The Finished Mystery." I brought it home and read it all, and then traded my old fiddle to a boy for the other six volumes—and have read them all.

I find they all go straight forward, without making a turn. I have since learned that it was a preacher of the M. E. Church who threw the book from his window in a rage of anger. I have nothing to say to the dishonor of that preacher, for he is at least one of Great Babylon's teachers that sends out the truth in volume, and by that one act of his I firmly believe that he converted more people to a living hope than by any other act of his life. 'Surely the wrath of man shall praise him,' and through this preacher's wrath we now praise God. Yours in the Truth, W. H. K.—W. Va.

THE "BLINDING HAZE" DISPELLED

DEAR BRETHREN:—

I heard a little news I thought might cheer your hearts; it did mine, at least. As you know, Brethren, some of the friends have thought the Lord had nothing much to do with the language used in Volume Seven and B. S. M. 99, especially concerning Methodism. But I am more convinced than ever that the Lord overruled it all.

A young man who was studying to be a Methodist minister told me his experience. He said that the morning on which we put out the "Fall of Babylon" issue he was in a testimony meeting. Almost everyone talked about it, and said they had put the papers right into the stove. He thought: "Why are they so afraid of it? It cannot be that they are very well established in the Scriptures." So he hurried home and looked to see if he could find one; and he did.

He sat down and read; and when he came to that part which says "a blinding haze came out of the bottomless pit," he said: "That describes it to a 'T'; if those people can show me that the churches are wrong, I will withdraw tomorrow." I was notified, called at his house and talked with him about two hours, then asked him what he thought of Babylon. He said: "I don't see how I can ever go back again." And he never did.

Last Sunday he helped us put out "Kingdom News," having made a consecration. This has given us positive evidence of the Lord's hand in writing the Seventh Volume.

Your brother by His grace, J. R. G.—N. Y.

"REVELATION"—SINAITIC READING

We now have in stock a vest pocket edition of the Book of Revelation, according to the Sinaitic Manuscript. We believe the friends will be much pleased with this little volume, in convenient form, and meeting quite fully the requirements of all who desire to know the meaning of this wonderful portion of the divine Word. Not only is the accurate rendering of the ancient Sinaitic Manuscript given, with headings and subheadings in bold-face type for convenient location of passages, but explanatory notes and comments are included, with many illustrations. The book contains 200 pages, same size as the Vest Pocket Manna. Full black leather, gold edges, 70c postpaid. Cloth, red edges, 35c. In lots of 50 or more, 50c for the leather and 25c for the cloth edition, charges collect. We suggest that each of the brethren approximate how many copies he can use for himself and friends, and then order them all at one time, and quickly, as the edition is limited and probably will not be reprinted.

VOL. XXXIX BROOKLYN, N. Y., JUNE 15, 1918 No. 12

THE CHASTENING OF THE LORD

"My son, despise not the chastening of the Lord; neither be weary of his correction; for whom the Lord loveth he correcteth, even as a father the son in whom he delighteth."—Proverbs 3:11, 12.

Many excellent people have the thought that special sorrows, trials, difficulties, are marks of divine disfavor and that the best way to avoid trouble is to become a Christian. But the Scriptures show that if one is not already in trouble and wishes to get into it and to stay in it for the rest of his natural life, his best course is to become a true follower of Christ.

One of the first characters who received a special invitation to walk with the Lord was Father Abraham. We are told that, "By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out, not knowing whither he went." (Hebrews 11:8) At the time this call was extended to Abraham he was seventy-five years of age, rich according to all the standards of earthly riches of his time, and no doubt comfortable and happy among his friends and relatives in the pleasant and productive region of Mesopotamia where he had been born and in which he grew to manhood. We can imagine that his relatives were very much displeased with the choice he made. They no doubt considered it a species of insanity that this man, happy, prosperous and well established in life should at his age leave the environment with which he was familiar, and travel hundreds of miles through the sands of the Arabian desert to a land which neither he nor his fathers had known.

One of the first crosses that must be taken up and borne by one who would walk in fellowship with the Lord is the certainty that he will displease his earthly friends by so doing. Nevertheless, the Psalmist urges, "Hearken, O daughter, and consider, and incline thine ear; forget thine own people and thy father's house; so shall the king greatly desire thy beauty." (Psalm 45:10, 11). Right well did the Lord know that our act of becoming his foot-step followers would bring us into difficulty with our earthly loved ones, our relatives according to our "father's house," else would he never have said: "Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword. For I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law. And a man's foes shall be they of his own household."—Matthew 10:34-36.

"WATERS OF A FULL CUP"

The experience of the Psalmist was that his efforts to live a godly life brought upon him the reproaches of those who could not understand his motives. David was a type of the Christ and said of his opposers and of ours: "They set their mouth against the heavens, and their tongue walketh through the earth. Therefore his people return hither: and waters of a full cup are wrung out to them." (Psalm 73:9, 10). David was in the wilderness and because he was in the wilderness was a target for slander and ridicule until his cup of sorrow was filled.

If we would see how God has been pleased to deal with those who give themselves unreservedly to him during the time in which sacrifices are acceptable, we have only to consider the fact that after the Beautiful One had laid his perfect sacrifice at the Father's feet, he was immediately "led up of the spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil." (Matthew 4:1) And he has not held out to his followers any expectation that the result of their consecration to do the Father's will would differ from his own; rather, he has assured us: "The disciple is not above his Master, nor the servant above his Lord. It is enough for the disciple that he be as his Master, and the servant as his Lord. If they have called the Master of the house Beelzebub, how much more shall they call them of his household?"—Matthew 10:24, 25.

Lest, in the midst of our trials, we should be inclined to fear that these are evidences of divine disfavor, we are especially invited to "consider him that endured such contradiction of sinners against himself, lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds." (Hebrews 12:3) And as we consider him we recall especially the last events which crowned his three and a half years of faithful doing of the heavenly Father's will. We remember that he allowed himself to be smitten, crowned with thorns, mocked as a royal impostor, spit upon, and his beard to be torn out. He allowed himself to be sentenced to a felon's death. Under a cross which he had not the strength to bear he passed through the streets of the same Jerusalem over which he had wept—but five days previously lined with the crowds that then were shouting, "Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord" (Luke 19:38), but that now were eager for his death. In the midst of this throng for whom he was about to die, the just for the unjust, he permitted himself to be stripped of his clothing, nailed to the cross, and hanged between two thieves until the sacrifice was completely finished in death.

WEARIED AND FAINT IN MIND

The Apostle says we should consider this, 'lest we be wearied and faint in our minds.' The word 'wearied' here (Greek kamon) is the same word that is translated sick in the passage of James 5:15. Thus the Lord would tell us that the surest protection against soul-sickness is to keep our sacrifice on the altar as Jesus did and to comfort ourselves with the assurance that in some degree the experiences which were permitted to come to him are permitted also to come to us.

When that sincere and zealous man, Saul of Tarsus, had met the Lord on the way to Damascus, and in prompt obedience to the heavenly vision had said, "What shall I do, Lord?" (Acts 22:10) and had remained without sight and without food or drink for three days (Acts 9:9), the Lord sent him a message of comfort by the hand of Ananias, one of his faithful servants. The message was: "He is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel: for I will show him how great things he must suffer for my name's sake." (Acts 9:15, 16) The Apostle Paul never forgot this lesson. On his first missionary tour, after he had preached the gospel at Iconium, Lystra and Derbe, and after the Jews from Antioch and Iconium had persuaded the people of the latter city to stone him into insensibility so that they supposed he was dead, then it was that "as the disciples stood around about him, he rose up, and came into the city: and the next day he departed with Barnabas to Derbe. And when they had preached the gospel to that city, and had made many disciples, they returned again to Lystra, and to Iconium, and Antioch, confirming the souls of the disciples, and exhorting them to continue in the faith, and [telling them how] that we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God."—Acts 14:20-22.

The Revelator shows that the experiences of the Lord Jesus and the Apostle Paul constitute a picture of the experiences of those members of the Lord's body who come in contact with the earth—"his feet were like unto fine brass as if they burned in a furnace." (Revelation 1:15) No doubt in a very special sense too, this picture is true of the last members, the feet members, of that glorious body.

NONE WITHOUT CHASTENINGS

We have the Father's Word for it that "if we be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then are we spurious, and not sons." (Hebrews 12:8) It does not follow that all will be partakers in the same degree, nor in the same manner. For some a look is sufficient, for others a word, still others require scourgings, and some repeatedly, but the chastisements, whatever they may be, serve the grand purpose of giving us opportunities for overcoming, for proving our fidelity, for developing self-control, sympathy, forgiveness, gentleness and patience.

The children of Israel were to eat their passover lamb "with bitter herbs" (Exodus 12:8), so that they might be able to partake of it more freely. Christ is our passover; and the effect of every bitter experience, on one who belongs to the Lord, is to drive him closer to the Lamb of God that he may feed more and more upon that Lamb.

In the typical ceremonies of Israel one of the duties of the high priest was to dress the lamps which burned in the Holy. (Exodus 30:7) Those who live in country districts understand very well what this means. If one would have good light, not only must a lamp be kept filled with oil and the burner and globe be kept clean, but the burned portion of the wick must be cut off from time to time. This represents the trimming off of the dross of the old nature—the wick through which the holy Spirit operates. If the wick could speak it would protest that it was being injured or wronged by the sharp shears which cut it in two, but the one who trims the wick is thinking not of the wick but of the beautiful light which later shall give joy to all who are in the house. "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven."—Matthew 5:16.

The heavenly Father is developing and training the royal priesthood so that they may be merciful and faithful priests of the poor world when it shall be given its opportunity of reconciliation. They could not become merciful and faithful priests without experiences such as their fellowmen have had; for even of Christ Jesus himself it is written: "Wherefore in all things it behooves him to be made like unto his brethren, that he might be a merciful and faithful high priest."

NEED OF PERSEVERANCE

There would be scanty satisfaction in receiving chastisements if we could not see the end to be gained; but, since we can see, "we glory in tribulations also; knowing that tribulation worketh patience; and patience, experience; and experience, hope: and hope maketh not ashamed." (Romans 5:3-5) Those who are inspired by the hopes which animate God's sons experience no sense of shame under the discipline and trials they must endure, but glory in tribulations and rejoice to be counted worthy even to suffer shame for his name's sake. The apostle tells us: "Ye have need of patience, that, after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise." (Hebrews 10:36) The tribulation which brings that patience is seen in its true light as a friend, and not as an enemy.

How could we ever expect to be made strong enough, as new creatures, for the great future work to which we are called, unless, while still in this tabernacle and by the means which God provides, we are "strengthened with all might, according to his glorious power, unto all patience and long-suffering with joyfulness?"—Col. 1:11.

We are hoping to be earth's future kings and priests (Revelation 5:10; 20:6); but we shall not be fitted for that relationship unless, as a result of the Lord's disciplines, we have first learned to rule our own spirits, for "he that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city." (Proverbs 16:32) To take a city one must have the skill and equipment necessary for so great an undertaking. Small wonder then that the Lord is giving us experiences of a kind that the world cannot at all understand.

Now that we are seeing the good results which are already coming to us and which will forever continue to come as a result of the trials which the Lord permits, let us reflect on what our attitude should be toward these trials. The Apostle tells us: "My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations." (James 1:2) It may take us a little time before we are able always to "count" it just this way; but after a time we shall reach the point where, like the Apostle, we can "reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us."—Romans 8:18.

EVEN GOLD IS TRIED

Most men and women at the present time think that gold is a very precious thing, but we who know of the new order of things know that its value will diminish when it will be easy to have all that we require. We know something which the world does not know; and we are able to rejoice in the conviction "that the trial of our faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honor and glory at the revelation of Jesus Christ." (1 Peter 1:7) Here and now, "many shall be purified, and made white, and tried" (Daniel 12:10); and here and now our Lord urges us: "I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich."—Revelation 3:18.

It seems a very strange thing to the world that any who profess to be true Christians should have special trials above those which come to other men, but we are specially forewarned to 'think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try us, as though some strange thing happened unto us: but rejoice, inasmuch as we are partakers of Christ's sufferings.' (1 Peter 4:12, 13) Some time we shall be glad when we see how these experiences have proven to the Lord our love and loyalty, how they have strengthened our characters and caused the principles of truth and righteousness to take deep root in our hearts.

God does not purpose that our sufferings shall continue beyond this life; and even here it is not his design that they should be incessant. They are to be only for "a while." Most of us had many years of childhood in which our sufferings were very slight. And if we have some during the time that yet remains to us here, it is all intended to fit us for the eternal glory to which we are invited: "The God of all grace, who hath called us unto his eternal glory by Christ Jesus, after that ye have suffered awhile, make you perfect, establish, strengthen, settle you."—1 Peter 5:10.

How else would the Lord know to a certainty who are his truly loyal people except by the trials of faith and love which he permits to come upon them? By these, "the Lord your God proveth you, to know whether ye love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul."—Deuteronomy 13:3.

God's people are different from other people in that they alone find real comfort in the heavenly Father's rod of discipline.—Psalm 23:4.

"By this we may our calling prove,
When Father 'plies the rod;
We kiss the chastening hand of love,
Beloved sons of God."

HEAVEN-SENT MESSENGERS

When we get to the end of the way we shall find that the sorrows, "o'er which we grieved with lashes wet," were heaven-sent messengers to preserve for our everlasting enjoyment the exceeding great and precious inheritance for which we are in training. "Before I was afflicted, I went astray: but now have I kept thy Word," said the chastened singer of Israel. (Psalm 119:67) How can we look with disfavor upon anything which prevents us from going astray and keeps us safe in harmony with the Father's Word in the evil day?

Observing now, as we have studied the matter, that trials, yes, even fiery trials, are the inevitable accompaniments of a close walk with God, what should be our attitude when we enter some one of those many new and strange miscarriages of justice with which the history of God's sons abounds? The Psalmist has laid before us the method which he pursued under similar circumstances: "I will take heed to my ways that I sin not with my tongue: I will keep my mouth with a bridle while the wicked [who tempts and tries the righteous] is before me. I was dumb with silence, I held my peace, even from good [from doing or saying what seemed good in my own sight] and my sorrow was stirred. My heart was hot within me; while I was musing the fire burned [the fiery trial continued]: then spake I with my tongue, Lord, make me to know mine end, and the measure of my days, what it is; that I might know how frail I am." Thus realizing that present vexations and sorrow will soon be over I shall be better able to control my tongue.

David was the one who also said: "Thou art my hiding place; thou shalt preserve me from trouble; thou shalt compass me about with songs of deliverance." (Psalm 32:7) David could figuratively hear the heavenly messengers singing songs over his deliverance, even while he was in the midst of his chastisements.

What should be our attitude toward the instruments the Lord may allow to be used in bringing sorrows upon us? A great principle is set forth by the Apostle when, in writing to the Corinthian brethren concerning a brother who had brought suit against another in a worldly court for rectification of an injustice, he said that, rather than permit hard feelings in the church with the possible defilement of some, he would better have meekly accepted the injustice. His words are: "Why do ye not rather take wrong? Why do ye not rather suffer yourselves to be defrauded?"—1 Corinthians 6:7.

NEITHER MURMURING NOR REPINING

The attitude of the true Christian toward his sufferings is not to repine because of them but rather to rejoice because of them, as did the noble Apostle Paul, who could say of himself: "I rejoice in my sufferings for you, and fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh for his body's sake, which is the church."—Colossians 1:24.

His spirit beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God and shall be his heirs. But there is a condition attached to that inheritance and the condition is that we joyfully suffer with Christ as did the Apostle Paul. "And if [we be] children, then heirs; heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him." (Romans 8:17) "If we suffer, we shall also reign with him," but not otherwise.—2 Timothy 2:12.

There will be no crowns for those unwilling to endure with patience whatever the Father may have seen best to pour into their cup. But, on the other hand, "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him."—James 1:12.

We have it in our power even after starting upon the heavenward way to draw back by endeavoring to avoid the sacrifice which we have covenanted to make, or through fear that the Lord has forgotten us in our trials or through unwillingness to submit longer to the polishing. At first this drawing back may consist in only looking back with a sigh, then in a little disposition to compromise truth in favor of the cravings of the fallen nature, and finally in complete surrender. "But we are not of them who draw back unto perdition, but of them that believe to the saving of the soul."—Hebrews 10:39.

We are not therefore to consider the trials and difficulties of our Christian pathway as marks of divine disfavor, and we are to be sorry for those who have not made a careful study of this question and have not seen the precious comfort contained in the words of our text: "My son, despise not the chastening of the Lord, neither be weary of his correction: for whom the Lord loveth he correcteth; even as a father the son in whom he delighteth."—Proverbs 3:11, 12.

SUNSHINE OR SHADOW?

"Be anxious for nothing."—Philippians 4:6.

Our lives may be bathed in sunshine or steeped in somberest gloom, according as we are close by or far removed from the fountainhead of light. The patches of light and shadow which alternate upon the landscape do not determine the seasons and temperature of that locality; nor do petty anxieties or passing pleasures make us altogether warm or gloomy Christians. It is the long night of the Arctic region or the long day of the tropic clime which makes the one a barren waste and the other a fruitful land. Life and light go hand in hand; the "Father of Lights" is also the Father of Life: whereas death is the region of gloom, night.

The King James version renders our text: "Be careful for nothing." The thought is the same as, "Be anxious for nothing," if we remember that careful is not here used with its present signification. A few definitions of words which naturally arise in a consideration of this subject may not be out of place.

Anxiety is uneasiness or distress of mind respecting some uncertain event which may involve danger or misfortune. Anxiety produces a morbid condition of restlessness and mental agitation with a distressful feeling of tightness and oppression in the region of the heart. Anxiety is, according to its derivation, a choking disquiet, akin to anguish.

Anguish is in respect to the known: anxiety in respect to the unknown. Anguish is because of what has happened; anxiety because of what may happen. Anxiety refers to some future event, but is a little milder yet than apprehension, fear, dread, foreboding, terror, all of which suggest despair. In matters within our reach anxiety always stirs up the question as to whether something can be done. But with the Christian it is often difficult to ascertain just what is within our reach. When joined with such perplexity, anxiety produces foreboding, dread, and dread commonly incapacitates one for helpful thought or endeavor.

Worry is a more petty restlessness and manifest anxiety. Anxiety may be quiet and silent; worry is communicated to all around. Solicitude is a milder anxiety. Fretting, or fretfulness, is a weak complaining without thought of accomplishing or changing anything, but merely as a relief to one's own disquiet.

Care concerns what we possess; anxiety often what we do not. Caution has a sense of possible harm and risk only to be escaped, if at all, by careful deliberation and observation. Care inclines to the positive; caution to the negative.

Anxieties, like barnacles on a ship's hull, hinder progress and, if they be not removed, will surely keep the Christian from reaching his haven of peace. They will weigh him down until, out of sheer inability to resist, he will seek relief by letting himself sink into the elements of the world.

Entrance into the body of Christ does not change our outward environs. The world is still worldly; it is still filled with imperfection and unbalance. The same impressions seek to gain our attention through the avenues of sense. There are just as many occasions for anxiety as before, or rather as many occasions out of which anxieties naturally arise. But not only is a state of over-solicitude opposed to the divine will for us, but it is also directly injurious to mind and body. It contracts and stiffens the walls of the blood-vessels and thus cuts off the refreshing supply to the brain; we cannot think as well as we should. The muscles, too, become inert; for their waste products are not well carried away. A slow poison ensues.

The cares, the anxious feelings, will come again and again: what then is to be done? Ah! The beloved Peter says the word: "Casting all your care upon him; for he careth for you." It is not, then, that we are miraculously made immune to care, but that we are furnished with a recipe for ridding ourselves of it. We are not immune to dirt; it will collect of its own accord. But we can bathe, if we have the needed equipment.

ANXIETIES CONCERNING PRESENT AND FUTURE

The anxieties which naturally rise in our lives pertain either to the immediate future or to the future life in another state.

We may feel anxious about the body, in respect to food, raiment, shelter. But does not the Apostle tell us a few verses further on in this same chapter: "My God shall supply all your need, according to his riches in glory"? And does not our Master, knowing how these things would tend to worry us, tell us gently but plainly:

"Do not accumulate for yourselves treasures upon the earth, where moth and rust consume, and where thieves break through and steal; but deposit for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust can consume, and where thieves break not through nor steal. For where thy treasure is, there thy heart will also be. The lamp of the body is thine eye; if, therefore, thine eye be clear, thy whole body will be enlightened; but if thine eye be dim, thy whole body will be darkened. If, then, that light which is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness! No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate one, and love the other; or, at least, he will attend to one, and neglect the other. Ye cannot serve God and Mammon [Syriac for riches]. Therefore I charge you, be not anxious about your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink; nor about your body, what ye shall wear. Is not the life of more value than food, and the body than raiment? Observe the birds of heaven; they sow not, nor reap, nor gather into storehouses; but your heavenly Father feeds them. Are not ye of greater value than they? Besides, which of you, by being anxious, can prolong his life one moment? And why are ye anxious about raiment? Mark the lilies of the field. How they grow! They neither labor nor spin; yet I tell you, that not even Solomon, in all his splendor, was arrayed like one of these. If, then, God so decorate the herb of the field (which flourishes today, and tomorrow is used for fuel) how much more you, O ye distrustful ones!"

But some good brother may say: "Yes, but you've got to get out and hustle for it." But if by "hustling for it" we mean to wrest the responsibility from God's own hand and to choke our spiritual enjoyment by fear of loss or failure, it is wrong, very wrong, and an insult to the Almighty by implying that he is not able to fulfil his promises, or is too fickle to be relied upon. But if we are diligent in duty, leaving the results with the Lord, we have already a blessing, because we are "workers together with God."

But read on:

"Therefore be not anxious, saying, What shall we eat? or, What shall we drink? or, With what shall we be clothed? for all the nations seek after these things; and your heavenly Father knows that ye have need of them. But seek ye first his righteousness and kingdom; and all these things shall be added to you. Be not anxious, then, about the morrow; for the morrow will be anxious for itself. Sufficient for each day is its own trouble."

Hard though each day's trouble be, it is only intolerable when we imagine an endless vista of just such days. But we do not know that all the days will be just like this one; or, if they be like it, who knows but what other outward or inward experiences may be ours, which will completely alter the aspect of things which now seem so heavy? Unquestionably our weightiest burdens are the ones we make for ourselves.

The Apostle Paul says concerning our sometimes frantic efforts to gain more than our daily bread: "Piety with a sufficiency is great gain. For we brought nothing into this world, and it is evident that we are not able to carry anything out: and having supplies of food and clothing, with those let us be content. But those wishing to be rich fall into a temptation, and a snare, and into many foolish and injurious desires, which sink men into destruction and utter ruin; for a root of all kinds of evil is the love of money; which some, longing after, wandered from the faith, and pierced themselves around with divers sorrows. But thou, O man of God, flee from these things, and pursue righteousness, faith, patience, love, meekness."—1 Timothy 6:6-11.

And again: "Charge those rich in the things of the present age not to be high-minded, nor to confide in wealth so uncertain, but in that God who imparts to us all things richly for enjoyment—to do good, to be rich in good works, to be liberal, willing to bestow; treasuring up for themselves a good foundation for the future, that they may lay hold of that which is really life."—1 Timothy 6:17-19.

We might toil early and late, work ourselves gaunt and gray-headed, and still not have more than those who trust in the Lord and who enjoy his fellowship all the while. Remember the story the Master gave us about the man who toiled after riches and who put off the higher life until he should have enough. When he had what he thought was enough he purposed to enjoy it but, to his surprise and chagrin, was met with the rebuff: 'Why, man, you have worked yourself to death; your bank account is fat enough, but your heart is lean and scrawny.'

The worldly at our very elbow, father, brother, sister, friend, may prosper greatly; but if we walk close to God it is likely he will keep us poor, for few have ballast enough of character or experience to "know how to abound."—Philippians 4:12.

THE HUNGER OF THE MIND

But all our anxieties do not arise from wondering what we shall eat or with what we shall be clothed. The mind has needs, both real and fancied. Eve's oversolicitude about supplies for the mind was a powerful influence contributing to her downfall. We may be anxious about the Lord's providence for us and think: 'Yes, it looks as though the Lord were leading me into this place, but shall I have the proper stimulus to my mind?' How absurd! Why talk of our minds as though they were a museum of geology, some precious, fossil fragment of which might be lost! Are our minds nothing more than rows of shelves and cases into which are stored items of information chanced upon?

No position is too humble to be entirely without opportunity of ministering to others in a mental way. The precious knowledge we have of God and his beneficent designs makes us able to give a word in season; and how good it is! We need not worry about our precious minds, as long as we use them; for "he that watereth, shall himself also be watered."

Are we feeling the need of wisdom? No need to be distracted on that score; for the discretion which comes down from above is at our disposal. We have the Apostle James' word for it that the call of faith is all that is needed to open the boundless storehouse of Jehovah's wisdom. If we have not sufficient wisdom to decide the questions which confront us, and that with conscientiousness, let us ask for more wisdom. Sometimes the wisest way is simply to wait on the Lord for further indication of his will. Our greatest and worst mistakes have been made by taking some trying situation rashly into our own hands and deciding it at once. The Devil delights to get us into a dilemma and, mocking, to tease us into choosing one of the two ways he points out, when the Lord's way is possibly still a third and far better one.

No mind culture which the world has to offer can give us an appreciation of the deep things of God. As Paul, the truly wise one, said: "And when I came to you, brethren, I came not with excellency of speech, or of wisdom, declaring to you the testimony of God; for I determined to make known nothing among you, except Jesus Christ and him crucified. And I, in weakness and in fear, and in much trembling was with you. And my discourse and my proclamation were not in persuasive words of wisdom, but with a demonstration of spirit and of power; so that your faith might not be by the wisdom of men, but by the power of God. Wisdom, however, we speak among the developed; but wisdom, not of this age, nor of those rulers of this age who are coming to an end; but we speak the wisdom of God which was hidden in a mystery, and which God previously designed, before the ages, for our glory: which no one of the rulers of this age knew; for if they had known they would not have crucified the Lord of glory; but it has been written: 'Things which eye hath not seen, and ear never heard, and to which the heart of man has not aspired—things which God hath prepared for those who love him'—God has revealed even to us through the spirit."

We need not worry even if we do not have all the opportunities for "mind-culture" which some of the world possess. It is even more likely to hinder than, of itself, to help us in the discerning of spiritual truths. When the confident Peter boldly declared our Lord to be "the Christ, the son of the living God" he was answered with half commendation, half rebuke (or shall we rather say, warning?): "Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona, for flesh and blood hath not revealed this unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven"—i. e., 'Thou art blest with a clear recognition of this great fact, which most people are so slow to perceive; but do not think that it is due to extraordinary brilliance on thy part, but rather is it because my Father has been pleased to honor the spirit of devotion and love for truth which thou hast displayed.'

THE HUNGER OF THE HEART

The hunger of the heart will be laughed at and tabooed only by the novice in life. Loneliness, the heart's hunger, is but a covert acknowledgment of the fact that no one is self-sufficient, that "no man liveth to himself or dieth to himself." Our most complicated anxieties and distractions arise from this field and, like an evening damp, tend to choke our newborn hopes of a better life and to estrange us from the source of light and joy.

But has Jehovah erred? Are there no compensating magnets to keep the compass of our hearts true to the pole? Has he invited us upon this perilous voyage and abandoned us without chart or rudder? Why, even man is wiser than that, and more provident. The great ships which plow the sea have their great master compass. In theory the needle of that compass points true to the magnetic pole. But that pole is leagues removed; and every piece of iron in the ship's hull, in her engines, in passing vessels, in deposits in the bottom of the sea, influences that needle, too. So, very carefully made smaller magnets are so placed as to counteract the influence of things close by, that the subtle influence of the North may still lead the ship true. It is not wrong that the great compass should feel or be moved by the local forces; but if, and to the extent that it is so moved, it ceases to be a reliable compass and will cause confusion, dismay, perhaps even shipwreck. If it could speak it would say: "But I want it; I need it; and see, it wants me, too."

These local magnetic fields do not harm the ship if they but pull in the same direction as the North Pole. And, if the influence we exert on one another is the influence of the spirit of unselfish love, of the image of Christ in us, we shall draw one another toward that image, we shall build one another up in the most holy faith and not tear down. When the heart's yearning seems more than we can bear, when it dumbly grasps for the strong arm of support or the tiny arms of human joy, shall we say the thing is wrong? The God of Nature made us so.

But we have undertaken a voyage; and we must not blindly answer every call without listing to the compensating magnets —the example of holy conquerors before us, or the words of the Apostles, such as, "Center your minds on things above . . . . that when Christ, who is our life, shall appear, ye also might appear with him in glory." Surely we would not wish to sell our glorious birthright for a mess of pottage, be it ever so fine.

But this is all passive. We are not merely inert needles waiting to be acted upon by worldly or heavenly power. The hunger of the heart is best satisfied not by receiving but by giving. The chief of givers gave his best, his only son; our Savior gave himself. But we may say: 'The people with whom I meet are so crude and ungenteel, I don't know how to give them anything.' But can they be more crude and coarse than the best of mankind was to our Lord? When he fed the four thousand he had very little to give; yet, under Jehovah's blessing, it accomplished wonders, feeding not only himself and his close associates, but the multitude as well! Is it not more blessed to give than receive? How commonplace it would have been had someone driven up with a cartload of bread that he might merely receive it! He gave what he had; it was enough. It is seldom that our storehouse of blessings is so scant that we cannot give even a smile. And who knows how much warmth it starts?

Besides all this we have a love, a fellowship, nearer, dearer, truer than all the best there is on earth. "The Father himself loveth you," and "truly, our fellowship is with the Father and with his son Jesus Christ." Can anything surpass that for honor? Can even the dearest human tie come so close or know our needs so well? Adam, with more spleen than spine, when driven to the choice, took the human companionship without God—and lost them both. But better than the touch of the tenderest hand is the consciousness of his nearness and interest who said, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee."

If we keep our hearts ever sensitive to the drawing of that far away, yet mighty magnet, though beset with blizzard, cloud and mist we shall pass safely into port and "meet our pilot, face to face."

To be over-anxious about our heart's supplies means to invite self-pity, that insidious poison which, like the vapors of the Flanders field, seeps into the trenches of our nobly gained redoubt and kills the guardians of our better self. We cannot expect to have the world kowtow to us if we are 'following the Lamb whithersoever he goeth'; for the world comes to the stubborn, obstinate, one-idea-at-a-time man who blows lustily his own horn.

We need not, then, be distracted about our lack of Wisdom; for it is ours, as soon as we are sure we need it, and ask for it. We need not be anxious or hopeless over what seems impossible to us; for divine Justice is such that God would not expect anything of us which we could not perform. Divine Love is too great to give us needless occasions for anxiety; and divine Power stands guard to see that no temptation shall befall us but such as we are able to bear.

OTHER PRESENT OCCASIONS FOR ANXIETY

The possibility or the probability or the fear of loss tends to cause many a cautious one much anxious thought. We fear to lose our friends, our money, our health, our influence, our prestige, our mental acumen, our youth. The effect of losses on others is more or less responsible for this fear which we have. But have we not learned that loss does not always mean loss? We lose one thing only to find that after all it was not so important as we had supposed. We lose one thing and find in its stead a keener appreciation of what we have left. We lose our life-in-self and find a life in more abundant measure. We lose the warm hearth-glow of the valley and gain the clear starlight of the mountain peak. We lose the warm hand-clasp of a friend and gain the unspeakable pleasures of the life of faith. Can we not trust God? Shall we not have the choicest portions, if we leave the choice to him? "Oh, rest in the Lord, wait patiently for him . . . . and he will give thee thy heart's desires."

Shall we worry over disappointments? Is it not rather finding fault with Omniscience?

Delays make us anxious because of the element of uncertainty. But must we know all things before the time? Having used the means at our disposal to avoid delays, shall we not wait in peace? "Blessed are the men who fear him; they ever walk in the ways of peace."

Restraints tend to chafe us. We wanted this scheme to work out thus and so, and when we are unable to push it ahead we feel peeved. But if we left it with the Lord at the start and said 'If the Lord will,' where is our ground for worry?

Shelvings, on a bed of sickness, or otherwise thrown into a bayou off the main current of activity, arouse apprehension lest we become wholly useless. But perhaps there are some lessons for us to learn before we can be trusted with further activities. Or maybe we can do something 'on the shelf' which we had not known to do before.

Our faults would drive us to distraction if we did not remember that the Lord knew all about them before he called us. Nonchalance is not the proper mind toward them, but useless worry is just as bad. Balance is what we need, as well as conscience.

Others' faults make us anxious, for fear we may be the victim of their injudition. But shall we not remember that "the battle is not to the strong, nor the race to the swift"? "Our lives are hid with Christ in God" and cannot be injured.

Our failures in the past tend to discourage us regarding the future and to make us anxious about the outcome. But "we have not a high priest unable to sympathize with our weaknesses; but one having been tried in all respects like ourselves, apart from sin. We should, therefore, approach with confidence to the throne of favor, that we may receive mercy and favor for seasonable help." It is not so much the breaking of the lines of conventionality, the makeshift for virtue, which constitutes a mistake or failure. The deadly mistake is to give up hope and stop trying. It is more vanity than devotion if we wish to give up just because we are not able to make as prominent a showing as others or as we had hoped for ourselves. A mistake is not necessarily a fatal thing.

Chastisements, when wrongly viewed, fill us with foreboding. But is it not true that in many ways love and pain go hand in hand?

Hardships cause us anxious thought; for we wonder whether we can endure them. But we have the Apostle's cheering words: "I can endure all things through Christ who strengthens."

ANXIETY ABOUT THE FUTURE LIFE

No undue care need be taken for that which is beyond our realm. We are promised the holy Spirit if we ask it; and the holy Spirit, dwelling richly in our minds, will guarantee the development of the fruits of the spirit; and we are distinctly told that 'if these things be in us richly and abound, so an abundant entrance shall be ministered unto us into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.' Again: "He that hath begun the good work in you shall complete it unto the day of the Lord Jesus." Again, the consoling yet stirring word: "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life"—not I may, if I feel so inclined at the time, but "I will give thee a crown of life."

Fear of the great change affects some. But why should it? we have nothing to lose and all to gain. Moreover our Master desires to have us there; for he prayed the Father, "I will that they be with me where I am."

DROP OUR BURDENS AT THE THRONE OF GRACE.

To dispel anxiety, reverence is necessary. But much more than reverence is necessary. We might have reverence and think of God as a mighty being, too great and too far removed to care for our welfare. We must fellowship with him, as he invites us. Undoubtedly the relationship of children to a father is the one which Jehovah seeks to encourage in us. He says, "in everything." Not merely may we take the great trials of life to the Burden-Bearer, but also the little things that nag and annoy us not less.

"Oh, what peace we often forfeit!
Oh, what needless pain we bear!
All because we do not carry
Everything to God in prayer," not complaining, but thankful for God's part in them.

We have seen how many natural occasions for care may arise in our daily lives. And the Apostle knew all this; so he, as the mouthpiece of the Lord, gives us the recipe for losing them. He says, "Be anxious for nothing; but [instead of that] in everything by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known to God." Constant touch with Jehovah, then, is the potion which drives from our spiritual systems the germ of care, and makes us sing, though in prison.

As we come to realize him as our Father we shall wish to make our requests known to him. As the wisest of fathers he deals with us individually according to our several needs. He seeks to encourage us to decide for his way, but he never coerces us. Sometimes we are rebellious and foolishly insist on having our own way; and he lets us have it, only to find with godly sorrow that his way had been untellably better.

In a large family or school many children suffer great nervous irritation from the habit of being considered collectively instead of individually. Demanding instant and unquestioning obedience is also harmful, as coercive restraint weakens character. But how long-suffering is the Lord! He knows we must eventually do his way if we love the right.

A child shows the desire to exercise its own reasoning faculties by constantly asking, "Why?" in its attempt to find the balance between the true and the false. The answer, "Because I told you so," may silence, but never satisfies. But how kindly are the words of our Father: "Come now, let us reason together"—'Come and tell me what worries you; perhaps I can make some suggestions that will help you to see.' He gives us real aid; for he helps us to harmonize submission and liberty, to substitute co-operation for obstinacy, and noble independence for slavish subserviency.

TRUE SOURCE OF OUR PEACE

If something worries us, let us take it to the Master-Mind. If we are in need, let us make it known to the Giver of every good and perfect gift. If then his providence or reason suggest that we might properly expect a supplying of our need through some other channel than ourselves, it would not be amiss to let our request be made known there also—but to him first. Turmoil and strife of heart and mind are not conducive to the development of the richest character. But great care must be exercised in discerning between outward turmoil and that of the heart. Only when we are habitually losing our anxieties in the bosom of him before whose face every perplexity is plain as nooniday can we have that truest Christian experience of the following verse: "And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall guard your hearts and minds in Christ Jesus." Only in that peace which comes from a consciousness of our vital union with God Almighty can we use our powers, great or small, to the best advantage.

Our confidence in him is not merely the blind and heathen confidence of the poet who, observing the passage of the waterbird across the heavens, said:

"He who from zone to zone
Guides through the boundless sky thy certain flight,
In the long way that I must tread alone
Will guide my steps aright."

That is good; but ours is better. Ours is a warm, sweet and personal faith in God, based on his word and on our own experience, "so that we can boldly say: The Lord is my helper, I shall not fear what man may do unto me"—be it Gethsemane, Hall of Judgment, the Way of Tears, or even Calvary.

"Under his wings I am safely abiding,
Though the night deepens and tempests are wild;
Still I can trust him. I know he will keep me;
He hath redeemed me, and I am his child."

"IF"

If I can warm with Love some lonely heart,
Hope's lustre to some listless eye impart;
If I can make a straight path for the lame,
Or fan some smoldering Faith to fervent flame;
If I may help some faltering foot to keep
The painful, narrow way, though rough and steep;
If thou, dear Lord, wilt use me, even me,
To draw some trembling soul more close to thee;
If, when the end of all things is at hand,
My feeble efforts may help one to stand;
If I may live to make truth's message plain—
Ah! then, 'twill ne'er be said, my life was vain.

GROWING STRONGER

LUKE 2:42-52; 2 PETER 1:5-8.

[The first 12 paragraphs of this article were reprinted from an article entitled, "Holy, Harmless, Perfect," published issue of January 15, 1906, which please see.]

OUR LORD'S CONSECRATION AND BAPTISM

Being free from sin, our Lord required no justification by another; and when he had reached manhood's estate, at the age of thirty years, he presented himself wholly, unreservedly, to do the Father's will. At the moment of consecration his earthly life was yielded up as a sacrifice for the sin of the whole world; and this consecration was symbolized by his immersion into water at Jordan. The remaining three and one-half years of his life were already on the altar; and he merely waited for his sacrifice to be consumed, crying with his last breath, "It is finished!"

Quickly following our Lord's consecration and its symbolization came the evidence that his sacrifice was accepted of God. We read that the heavens were opened unto him. This probably signifies that he was granted a vision of heavenly things, an insight into the deeper things of the Scriptures, an understanding of the higher things of God's Word. Hitherto he had in a measure understood about the lamb that was to be led to the slaughter, but saw nothing to identify the one who was to be the great deliverer or to explain the wonderful pictures in the Scriptures. But just as soon as he was begotten of the holy Spirit, he began to see that if he would accomplish the great work of blessing all the families of the earth it would be by a manifestation of loyalty and of righteousness. As soon as his mind was illuminated he saw the things pertaining to the sufferings of the Christ.

At his consecration at Jordan our Lord agreed to give up the human life, all rights and privileges as a human being. The ultimate purpose of this full surrender of his life was that he might bring everlasting life to mankind. The Father's arrangement with him, however, was such that our Lord might retain his personality, his identity. But after he was begotten of the holy Spirit, he was a new creature; and as a new creature he had his human body in which to develop character suitable for the high condition to which his successful accomplishment of his mission would lead. The latter part of our lesson for today calls to our attention the elements which enter into that character and which must be developed by all who would attain to membership in the body of Christ.

GROWTH IN THE FRUITS OF THE SPIRIT

The matter of cultivating Christian character is not one to be accomplished in a few hours or days. It is the work of a lifetime, a process of addition, virtue added to virtue, grace to grace, and assimilated by the spiritual germ of the new nature, until the embryo new creature is formed; and then it must continue to develop to completion.

St. Peter indeed describes a most amiable character. But who can meditate upon his description without feeling that to attain this high eminence will be the work of a lifetime? Day by day, if we are faithful, we should realize a measure of growth in grace and of development of Christian character. We must see to it that we have the truth of God's Word, and that it is having its legitimate and designed effect upon our lives. And if the truth is thus received into good and honest hearts, we have the assurance of the Apostle that we shall never fall, but that in due time we shall be received into the kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

QUESTIONS CONCERNING EZEKIEL'S TEMPLE

Question.—Does Ezekiel's Temple represent God's finished work only?

Answer.—It represents both the finished work and the work in process. But when we apply the picture to the Gospel age the same gate, including the porch, symbolizes the tentative and the vitalized justification of the little flock and the great company, and the gate up to the porch the tentative justification of others of the household of faith. In the Gospel age picture the Holy represents the tentative condition of those begotten to the divine nature. After each age is over, the part of the Temple which had represented a work in process during that age represents the memory of that same work in the mind of God, of Christ and of the beings concerned in the work.

Question.—Does the east gate of the inner court symbolize the fact that the members of the great company are developed after having been "raised to the spirit condition"?

Answer.—It depends on the meaning attached to the expression "raised to the spirit condition." "Raised" means resurrected, and is properly figured by the porch of the gate. A porch represents vitalization, resurrection, raising to the condition of the plane indicated by the court to which the gate belongs. The outer-court north-gate-porch shows the final resurrection, or full life, through the process of resurrection, which will be gained by the hosts of mankind. Such a resurrection requires that all the conditions of obedience be met, and they will be met by all the loyal portion of mankind by the end of the thousand years, and by many individuals much sooner. The porch of the outer gate (east) represents the vitalization of tentative justification. For the little flock and the great company this takes place, after having met the conditions for justification, at the instant of begetting to the divine nature in the Holy. The ancient worthies will receive the vitalizing, or making alive of their tentative justification, at the beginning of the earthly phase of the kingdom of heaven, we believe in 1925, having met all the conditions during their first earthly lives.—Hebrews 11.

On the divine plane (the building) and on the spirit plane (inner court) the vitalizing, raising, takes place first, in the begettal to the divine nature, as shown in the porch of the Temple building. Those begotten to divinity find themselves in the Holy, having by the act of consecration unto death passed over the threshold—assuming that the consecration was accepted. The faithful 144,000 remain in the Holy till death; many of them passed into the Most Holy in 1878, following the Head, who went in A. D. 33. Those proving more or less unfaithful have been put out of the Holy by the millions, into the inner court east gate, there to meet all the conditions necessary for the birth to the spirit plane, represented by passing out of this gate into the inner court. While originally begotten to the divine nature, in the porch of the Temple, the great company nourish themselves poorly or poorly assimilate their spiritual food, the Word of God. This begettal therefore not resulting in divinity, they must count themselves as having been in the porch of this east gate; for it results in birth to the spirit plane, but not to the divine stage of that plane.

It is after the begettal, the quickening, the raising to sit in the heavenlies (Ephesians 2:6) in this life, that those begotten to the spirit plane or to the divine plane become overcomers (Revelation 7:9), or more than overcomers (Revelation 3:21), as the case may be. In other words they meet all the conditions of the Word of God as represented in the chambers of the gate or in the picture-lessons on the walls of the Holy. After having been born to the proper plane of being, they will grow greatly in knowledge and will forever practice the graces of the spirit; but they can never have any further change in plane of being, as far as we have any knowledge.—Ezekiel 48:12, 14.

Question.—What is signified by Ezekiel 46:24, "The ministers of the house shall boil the sacrifice of the people"?

Answer.—These passages from Ezekiel read as follows: "After he brought me through the [priests'] entry [S], which was at the side of the [inner north] gate, into the holy chambers [I, I, I, I] of the priests, which looked toward the north; and behold there was a place [J, J] on the two sides westward [west of the priests' chambers]. Then said he unto me, This is the place where the priests shall boil the trespass offering and the sin offering, where they shall bake the meat offering."—Ezekiel 46:19, 20.

"Then he brought me forth into the utter [outer] court, and caused me to pass by the four corners of the court; and behold in every corner of the court there was a court [W, W, W, W], in the four corners of the [outer] court there were courts joined [made with chimneys] of forty cubits long and thirty broad: these four corners were of one measure. And there was a row of building round about in them, round about them four, and it was made with boiling places under the rows round about. Then said he unto me, These are the places of them that boil, where the ministers [servants, Levites, the great company] of the house [the little flock] shall boil the sacrifice of the people."—Ezekiel 46:21-24.

The foregoing refers to an important part of the treatment of the private sacrifices made by individuals among the people during the year after the day of atonement. The sacrifices of the day of atonement typified the "better sacrifices" of Christ (Hebrews 9:23), Head and body, during the Gospel age. In a general way any sacrifice pictures the consecration, the setting apart to divine service of the offerer (Romans 12:1), the specific purpose or object being indicated by the peculiar ritual of each sacrifice.

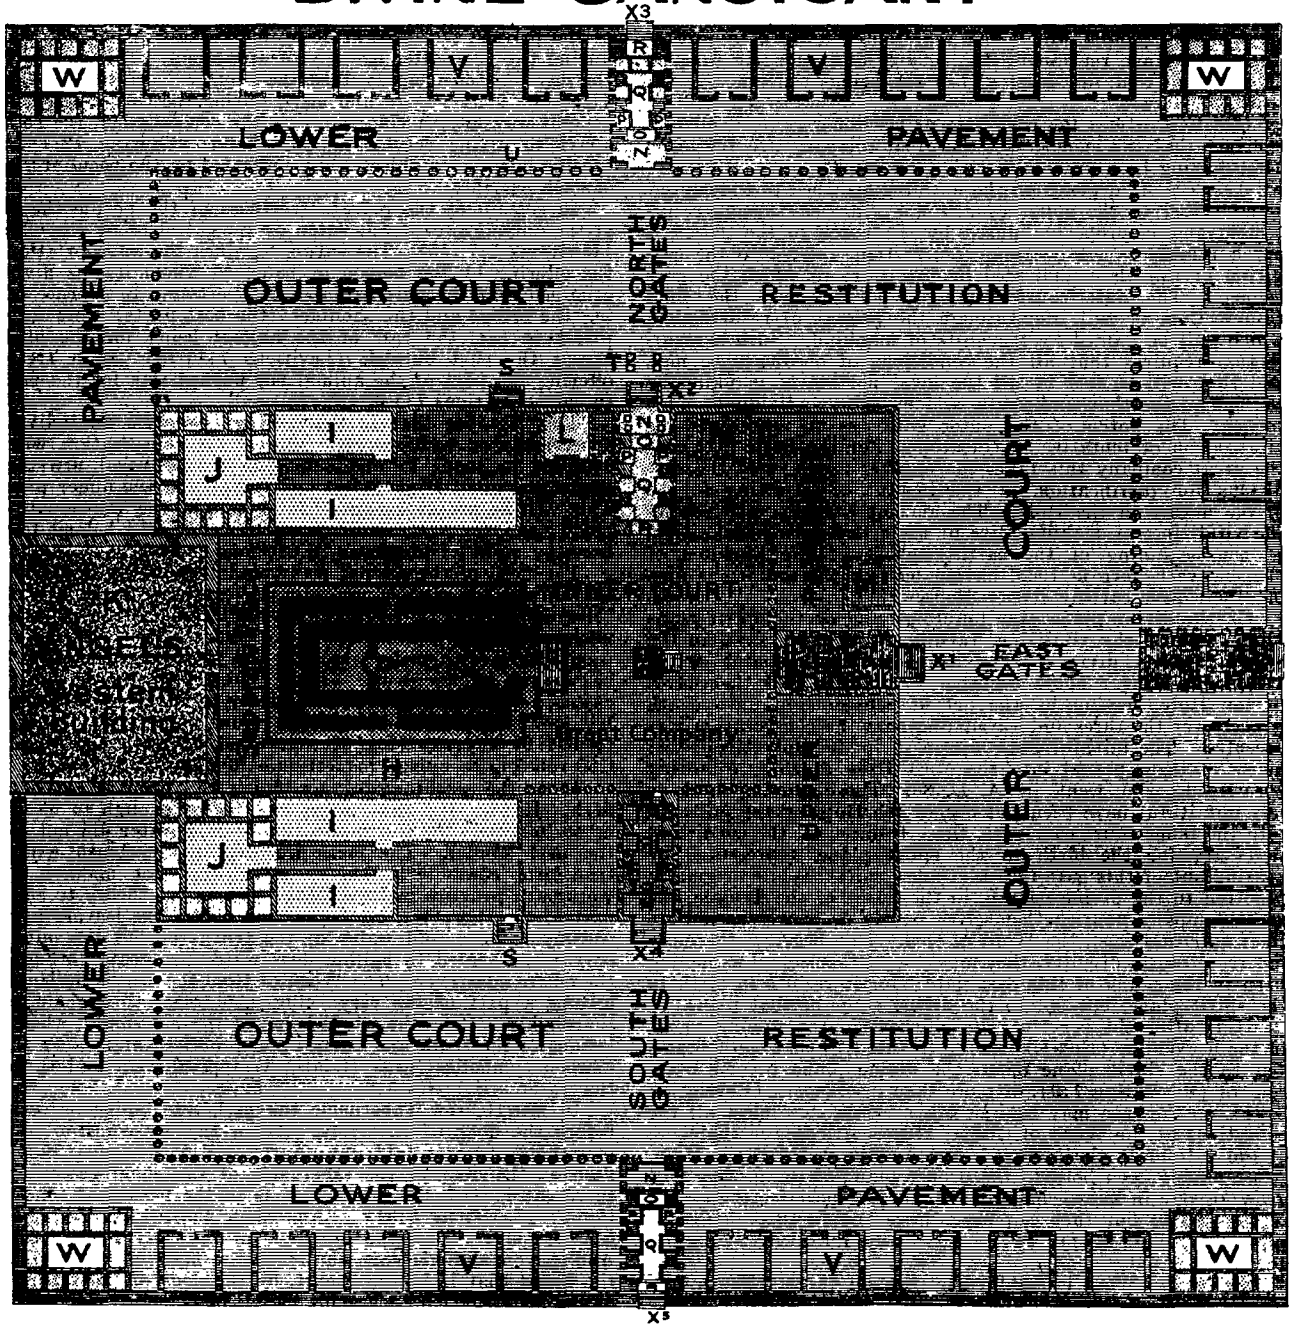
In certain of the private sacrifices of the people the flesh of the animal offered was eaten by the priest or by the offerer. (Leviticus 7:7, 15) The eating signifies the appropriation of the offering by the person or being to whom it was divinely ordained that the part eaten should pertain. In a peace offering the breast and the shoulder (the best parts) were for the priest to eat, the rest of the animal being for the offerer, except the part burned. (Leviticus 7:11-18) In a trespass offering the part of the animal not burned was for the priests to eat.—Leviticus 7:1-6.

This signifies that in the coming age when an individual consecrates or reconsecrates himself his consecration will be accepted as made to and belonging to the royal priesthood, Christ the great High Priest and the church the under priests. This will be proper because Christ bought the world with his blood; and for a thousand years everyone will belong to our Lord by right of purchase.—Ephesians 1:14.

The flesh of the animal was not fit for eating immediately the animal was slain; nor will the consecration by a human being of himself be ready for assimilation by the priesthood until something more is done. As before being eaten the flesh was washed with water; so, too, the person consecrating will be washed by the water of the Word. His being must be cleansed and made to approach closer to the divine standards. His new human mind and will must continually be transformed by the renewing of that mind, through the Word of God relating to human perfection.—Romans 12:2.

Even the washing did not finish the preparation of the flesh. It was still raw, tough, not tender enough to be eaten or assimilated; for the application of cold water did not make the flesh tender. The mere learning of the truth will not transform character. Theory alone does not make a good workman; practice under difficulty causes the theory to become part of the character, the being, and makes the learner a good workman. The cold water of the truth touches the outside; only when heated to boiling does water penetrate throughout the entire substance. The Word of God, the truths destined to become a part of the very being, penetrates throughout, and thoroughly softens the whole being of the individual, when the lessons of the truth are learned and practiced amid fiery trials —when symbolical heat (trials) is applied with and through the water.—Hebrews 5:8.

In the Hebrew Tabernacle the flesh was boiled or seethed before the door of the Holy. As in the consecration of the priesthood, "Moses said unto Aaron and to his sons, Boil the flesh at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation; and there eat it with the bread that is in the basket of consecrations." (Leviticus 8:31) "And thou shalt take the ram of consecration, and seethe his flesh in the holy place [court]. And Aaron and his sons shall eat the flesh of the ram, and the bread that is in the basket, by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation."—Exodus 29:31, 32.



The significance is much the same here as in the subsequent private sacrifices of the people. In the private sacrifices the boiled flesh was eaten by the priest alone, or by priest and offerer, typifying the assimilation of that degree of human perfection which was signified by the flesh of the particular creature sacrificed. In the antitype the degree of perfection attained or desired by the offerer will be taught him by the royal priesthood—will originate with them, as will the character development accompanying the merit of Christ applied to and assimilated by the consecrator.

The receiving of the flesh by the priesthood is from our viewpoint the receiving back by the Christ of the mental and moral development of the consecrator, which is but their own; for the consecrator will have received it from them. (1 Corinthians 4:7) Thus will the people acknowledge their dependency on the priesthood as the source of all the attainments and of the ideals connected with the gaining and the enjoyment of human perfection through restitution. They will separate themselves to the ownership and control of the royal priesthood; they will give themselves to the Christ as Lord (owner) and Master. (Isaiah 2:3) They will acknowledge their new selves, their beings to be transformed by the renewing influences of the divine instruction and guidance of the coming age, as of the Christ and to and for the Christ, by whose merit and through whose ministry they may be made ready to be "delivered up to God, even the Father," at the end of the thousand years of probation, after which, "when all things shall be subdued unto him [the Son], then shall the Son also himself be subject to him [God] that put all things under him [the Son], that God may be all in all."

Only through sacrifice, trial and suffering can the imperfect approach unto God. (Psalm 51:17-19) The imperfections of the people can be eliminated only through great effort, spurred by chastisements; effort against the flesh engenders suffering, though finally that suffering emerges into the peace and joy of ripened character. (Hebrews 12:9-11) The chastisements and the sufferings will be the "boiling" of the flesh—the outcome of which will be a character of tenderness, like to the mind and character of the divine Christ, and fit to be acknowledged by and assimilated as their own by the Christ, Head and body. In that way it will be true that "that servant which knew his Lord's will and prepared not, neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes. But he that knew not, and did commit things worthy of stripes, shall be beaten with few stripes." (Luke 12:47, 48) Those whose natural characters, whose fleshly minds, are tough and unassimilable for the priesthood, shall be "boiled" thoroughly until they are tender-hearted; but those who are readily responsive to the "ministry of reconciliation" will need but little of the trials administered by and through the water of the Word of God.

The eating of the flesh by the offerer is the thorough assimilation, by the consecrator, of the new human character ideals presented in the restitution teachings. There, too, 'tribulation worketh patience; and patience experience; and experience, hope; and hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God [on the natural plane] is shed abroad in [their] hearts by the holy Spirit which is given' (Romans 5:4, 5); for all the willing and obedient, at least, shall receive of the holy Spirit, as says Jehovah, "I will pour my spirit upon all flesh" (Joel 2:28) in the world-wide blessing, soon to come.

In the Ezekiel Temple the boiling of that part of the sacrifice to be eaten by the offerer was done in one of the boiling places in the outer court (W, W, W, W), symbolizing the infliction of chastisements on the natural restitution plane. It was done by the Levites, symbolizing the fact that of all who are on the spirit plane the great company will be the most directly identified with earthly matters. This flesh when "boiled" was eaten by the offerer, representing his moral assimilation of the ideals presented by the Word of God, touching upon human perfection. The flesh belonging to the priesthood is boiled in the boiling places (J, J) in the rear of the inner court, symbolizing the consecration of the offerer's new natural mind, as sharing in the holy Spirit poured out upon all flesh, and symbolizing also the trials which he must endure mentally in connection with his chastisements. This boiling was done by the priesthood, suggesting that they will exercise supervision and direction over the acts of the great company. They collectively constitute a 'merciful and faithful priesthood in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of the people. For in that they themselves have suffered [in this life], being tempted [tried to the uttermost, "boiled"], they are able to succor them that are tempted.'—Hebrews 2:17, 18.

THE TRIAL IN BROOKLYN

The trial of the eight brethren from these headquarters was set for the criminal term beginning Monday, June 3, in the Federal Court of the Eastern District of New York. Affidavits had been filed by the eight defendants stating their reasons for believing that Mr. Justice Garvin was biased against us and our work. This action automatically removed him from the trial and adverted the case to Mr. Justice Chatfield. He, however, referred it to a judge specially brought here from Vermont—Mr. Justice Howe.

At this writing, one week of the trial has elapsed, with perhaps a little more than half of the testimony presented by the prosecution. Our legal counsel, Messrs. Sparks and Fuller, are loyally looking out for our interests, and under great handicaps, for the government has had three months for preparation and our counsel is obliged to prepare as we go along, because no disclosures were made in the indictment as to what portions of our literature were objected to.

It seems we have a fair-minded jury, but it is too early to be able to discern which way the trial will go. Of one thing we are certain: all concerned are perfectly willing to accept the Lord's providence in the matter, and rejoice that they are accounted worthy to suffer shame for his sake.

VOL. XXXIX BROOKLYN, N. Y., JULY 1, 1918 No. 13

A SOUND MIND

"For God hath not given us the spirit of fear, but of power and of love and of a sound mind."—2 Timothy 1:7.

Fear is one of the principal things that make life troublesome. It was doubtless for this reason that our Master admonished us, saying, "Fear not, little flock." Fear, when it is unbalanced by hope, becomes desperation; and desperation spells misery. Fear is a prodigious magnifier, especially when it has been excited by any unusual object. The traveler rarely sees a small tiger; the landsman seldom experiences a gale at sea that is not a hurricane.

In a Christian, the "fear of man that bringeth a snare" is counterbalanced by the fear of displeasing his Lord. As the Master said: "Fear not them that destroy the body but after that cannot touch the soul; but fear rather him who after he hath destroyed the body is able also to destroy the soul in Gehenna fire."

We fear usually one or all of three things: weakness, disesteem, mistakes—and the uncertainty which follows in their wake. Fear instilled into the mind of childhood unconsciously impresses and influences the whole life, years after the small incidents which gave rise to the fears have passed into oblivion.

But the Apostle intimates in our text that the Father has not been content merely to advise us to be fearless, but that he has given us those things which are necessary to put fear out of our lives. He has given us the spirit of power, i. e., power of purpose, which is courage; he has given us the spirit of love, and the spirit of a sound mind. This is the powerful alliance against fear. For if we have power and courage we do not fear weakness; if we have love overflowing in our hearts we have that which makes us estimable in the Father's sight, and even to some extent in the sight of others. Hence we do not fear disesteem; for "there is no fear in love; perfect love casteth out fear." And if we have prudence, judgment, common sense, we have no fear of the desperation which needless mistakes bring.

Courage may be likened to the little brother, love to the little sister, and common sense to the watchful guardian. Power might be disposed to use itself roughly at times; love might be too much impelled by tender feeling; but a sound mind modifies and directs them both.

SOUND MIND MEANS SOUND JUDGMENT

That quality which the Apostle terms "a sound mind" and which is popularly designated as "common sense" may be defined as the sound judgment of the mind when reflecting upon problems of truth and conduct, without bias from logical subtleties or selfish interests. Balanced judgment is as valuable as its application is rare. It is sometimes possessed to an astonishing degree—on matters of purely human import—by those outside of covenant relations with God. But this should not discourage us; for they were merely better born.

But the Lord's people have a power within them which, if responded to and followed, will help develop the main features of a sound mind in them, no matter where they start on the scale. That power is a desire for the truth. Honesty, or a love of truth, is the basic requisite of a sound mind; for if we do not really desire the truth, then we are bound to become immersed in a hopeless tangle of illusions. One of earth's wise men has said: "The love of truth is the most noble quality of the human intellect, the most enjoyable in the interchange of confidences, yet of all qualities it is the most rare."

Coupled to this desire for the truth is the capacity for its apprehension, which is possessed by every spirit-illumined child of God, and not by others. This fact is made plain by the Apostle: "The things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God. Now we have received, not the spirit of the world, but the Spirit which is of God; that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God. Which things also we speak, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the holy Spirit teacheth; comparing spiritual things with spiritual. But the natural man receiveth not the things of the spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned . . . . but God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God."

Both the desire and the capacity for understanding the truth come from God. As we are again told: "It is God that worketh in you, both to will and to do of his good pleasure." (Philippians 2:13) The desire for truth is from God, in the first place, while we are still natural men, in the sense that it is a fragment of the original likeness to our Creator. After we are begotten and illuminated by the holy Spirit this desire becomes stronger and stronger and at the same time our minds are enabled to grasp the truth to an extent hitherto impossible.

The Master himself places truth at the bottom of the structure when he says: "If ye continue in my word, then are ye indeed my disciples, and ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." It is not merely doctrinal truth that we shall know, but also truth concerning ourselves and our spiritual status. How could we be set free from our own errors, if we did not desire and recognize the facts concerning ourselves? Common sense, or a sound mind, in the measure that it is possessed, enables one to see things as they are and to do things as they should be done.

There is a number of elements which go to make up a sound mind, none of which must be overlooked. But let it not be thought that a sound mind is a passive thing, a kind of reference library. In some ways the everyday term "common sense" is to be preferred; for a sound mind means simply the capacity for sound, accurate, reliable judgment on the problems of life as they arise from day to day.

PHILOSOPHY OFTEN UNESSENTIAL

And let us observe right here that the philosophy of character development cannot be called a requisite as long as we are developing with reasonable satisfaction. It becomes valuable to us chiefly when something is wrong. It assists us to recognize just how far we have progressed and how far we have retrograded, and where the greatest pressure should be exerted, to start us on again. But perception and reflection will accomplish nothing in us worth while without obedience. Obedience, or conformity to the instructions given us by our Lord, is the vital thing in any case, whether we understand all of the steps of the process or not. More than one scriptural expression emphasizes this thought: "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them"; "If ye do these things, ye shall never fall," etc.

Our Christian course is like an apprenticeship at a trade. The master workman might sit down and attempt to explain the whole thing to the boy at the start, but very little would the boy understand or remember. What he does do is to say: "Now you do just as I tell you; and I will guarantee that after so long a time you, too, will be a master workman." So the Lord says, essentially, to us: "If ye love me keep my commandments"; 'and I will make you meet for the inheritance of the saints in light.' The Lord does invite us to 'reason with him' and to 'think on these things,' still he makes it likewise plain that we can know only in part, until that which is perfect is come.

We have probably all known some old brothers or sisters who had grown rich in the spirit of the Lord, not because they were able to explain the process of growth, but because, like the lily, they lent themselves to sun and air, and growth was a natural result. It never occurred to them to wonder why a certain command was given. It was enough to know that it was given. When they heard the Lord say: "Love your enemies; bless them that curse you and pray for them that despitefully use you and persecute you for my sake," they simply loved their enemies, they blessed and they prayed without doubt or hypocrisy. When he said to them: "If ye forgive not men their trespasses, how can ye expect your heavenly Father to forgive your trespasses?" they simply forgave freely, up to seventy times seven and, like God, were too courteous ever to mention an account once cancelled. When he said: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness," they sought that kingdom. When he said: "Centre your mind on things above and not on things on the earth," they have simply done it, and in doing it have shown the greatest wisdom that was ever shown. When he said: "Speak evil of no man." they have kept their lips from speaking guile.

It is largely when we realize ourselves at a standstill, or as making very slow progress that we can most profitably consider the whys and wherefores.

STEPS TO GOOD JUDGMENT

Perception, memory, thought, alertness, deduction, foresight, reason, judgment: these are the steps which must be taken, consciously or unconsciously in the formation of sound judgment on any question.

Perception stands for the first impress of an idea through one or more of the senses. When we see, hear, feel, touch or taste a thing we have perceived it. While this is an elemental step, still it is a very necessary one. Even the little mollusks and tadpoles are capable of receiving impressions, and power to perceive increases with the elaborations and sensitiveness of the organism. The Apostle represents hearing as being that sense which is employed to announce the truth to us. He says: "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God." That is, God's Word contains a message which acquaints us with certain facts, without which we would be unable to form an accurate judgment or to make a reliable decision. The Master intimates that this message has gone forth; still, "Who hath believed our report?" Not many. "Blessed," therefore, "are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear. For indeed I say to you that many prophets and righteous men have desired to see what you observe, but have not seen; and to hear what you hear, but have not heard."

But while hearing is a blessing, it is merely the start. The parable of the sower goes on to explain this matter further and to say: "When anyone hears the word of the kingdom, but considers it not, the Evil One comes and snatches away that which was sown in his heart. This explains that which was sown by the road." Those who do not consider the Lord's message do not go very far toward the development of a sound mind. "Israel doth not know; [because] my people doth not consider," complains the Prophet Isaiah.

"That which was sown on rocky ground denotes him who, hearing the word, receives it immediately with joy; yet having no root in his mind, he retains it only a short time; for when affliction or persecution arises on account of the word he instantly stumbles." Such a one perceives, thinks, and is alert, but he fails on deduction. He does not, or perhaps cannot, hold the proper relationship between the value of the truth, the present condition of the world, and the privilege of persecution for the Word's sake. He does not exercise common sense, or he would know that anything of value must cost him dearly. Note the distinction between that man and the one who so valued the pearl of great price that he went and sold all that he had to obtain it.

"That which was sown among thorns denotes that hearer in whom the cares of this life and the deceptiveness of riches choke the word and render it unproductive." Such a one fails on foresight, reason and the final judgment or decision.

"But that which was sown on good soil and produced fruit, one a hundred, one sixty and one thirty, denotes him who not only hears and considers, but obeys the word." To hear, to consider and to obey, then, are the three main steps to the acquirement or to the manifestation of a sound mind on any given subject. But aside from these three steps, there are five other intermediate steps which are well worth considering.

PERCEPTION, MEMORY, THOUGHT

Here, say, is a problem before us on which we wish to exercise common sense. Though we have heard and received the general message of the Lord, it may be that we have not yet perceived all the instructions he has given on the immediate question under hand. Here we should "search the Scriptures" with that love of directness and simplicity without which it is impossible to come to an accurate decision.

For instance, we encounter the statement: "The righteousness of the law is fufilled in us who walk not after the flesh but after the spirit." We roughly perceive the ideas of walking after the spirit and walking after the flesh. Memory is at once called into play, for the meaning of the individual words themselves, then in a brief search of the mind to see if we can find anything that sounds similar. We 'call to mind the former things' and are thus enabled to profit not only by our own past experiences but also by the experiences of others. Without memory life would be a blank—a dreary void.

Perception and memory merge into thought. We begin to consider—that is, if we love the truth above all things else. We ponder, we reflect, we contemplate; but, if we desire the truth, we do not dream. We are informed that, "as a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." If he thinks deceitfully, he is deceitful to that extent. Thought determines character.

Thinking, not natural growth, makes perfect manhood. There are some who, though they are done growing, are only boys; the reasoning is feeble. Many who can run and jump and bear fatigue cannot observe, cannot examine, cannot reason or judge, contrive or execute—they cannot think. To have a sound mind it is necessary that we examine ourselves about our thinking. We should set ourselves to understand whatever we see or read. The Apostle assures us that if we "think on these things"—the things that are true, noble, pure and lovely—we will be built up to them. We cannot use common sense to walk either after the flesh or after the spirit without thinking.

It is not reading, but thinking that gives us possession of knowledge. A person may see, hear, read and learn whatever he pleases, and as much as he pleases; but he will know very little, if anything, of it beyond that which he has thought over and made the property of his mind. Like certain silk worms which yield silk colored according to the food they have fed on, so our life gradually takes the tinge and hue of the thoughts to which we most accustom ourselves. If we think about the things of the flesh, make provision for pampering its desires and appetites, we are living after the flesh, and if we are thinking about the things of the spirit, the great principles which Jehovah has established, and seeking to apply them to ourselves in harmony with his Word, we are living after the spirit.

ALERTNESS—MENTAL ENERGY

Alertness is the next requisite. We are admonished to be "vigilant," to be "watchful," to be "ready," not to "sleep," nor be "slothful." In one place the Apostle seeks to "stir up our pure minds by way of remembrance." Alertness is energy applied to attention. It is like steam in a boiler. The boiler and the engine may be in perfect condition; but if there is no steam, no work will be accomplished.

On this very point of mental vigilance comes, perhaps, the severest test of our honesty in our search for the truth on any given subject. Our own faults, like our own noses, are so close we cannot see them without great effort and insight. But, as the poet says: "Self-love is not so great a sin as self-neglecting." For want of spiritual energy we allow the precious, though oft-times unpleasant truth concerning our motives to lie hidden; and we do not make progress.

The value of our thought depends much upon the course we take—whether the subject in hand is examined fully and carefully, or only given an undecided glance, our thoughts reverting to other matters, to be treated in the same desultory way. That mental disposition is of great value which will enable us to give our close and undivided attention to any subject which we wish to investigate. Some may try to investigate a matter, but find that the mind wanders. It needs alertness, effort, vigilance.

However splendid may be a man's genius, brilliant his talents, and profound his intellect, if devoid of energy he is practically lifeless, and his powers are useless to the Lord, to himself and to the world. Energy, literally from the Greek, means inwardworkingness; the bloom of the flower is energy, the increase of fruit is energy, the growth of the body is energy, yet in all these there is no violence. So with the holy Spirit, power or energy in us; its efficacy is not destructive, but none the less vital.

A man may possess a high degree of refinement, with stores of knowledge, and even a well-disposed mind; but if he is destitute of energy, he is like a watch without a mainspring, beautiful but inefficient and unfit for service. God has given us new courage, he has refreshed our despondent spirits by a message of cheer and hope, and he does refresh them by continual reminders of his grace. Let us, therefore, not stop in our efforts toward right decisions because of a dearth of alertness; for we cannot dream ourselves into a character. But with the instruments and the forces which the Lord has given us we must forge one.

DEDUCTION AND FORESIGHT

Our alertness or mental energy opens up new avenues; it broadens the field of attention. Mental energy pushes the mind to draw deductions from the new things observed. Time and again our Lord and the apostles invite us to deduce the logical conclusion from the facts which have hitherto been made known to us. Our Lord chided the Pharisees, saying that they were able to draw correct deductions regarding the weather from the appearance of the sky, yet they were not able to discern the outcome of the most apparent spiritual situations. "Have ye not known?" "Do ye not see?" "Know ye not?" are all arguments which the Scriptures use and which show that we are expected to use our powers of deduction. But let us not deduce something that is not there. Our brethren in the centuries gone by made mistakes in this way. They saw that most of the world was not fit for the state of heavenly bliss and they deduced that the unfit must therefore go to eternal torment. If eternal torment had been a divine arrangement, so stated in God's Word, and if there had been no other time of trial or arrangement for mankind, then the deduction would have been correct.

We are supposed to draw deductions from facts, not fancies. With the help of other Scriptures we can safely deduce that if we are walking after the flesh we are not walking after the spirit. We can safely deduce, too, that if we are walking after the spirit the righteousness of the law is being fulfilled in us, though we may not be able to see very much of that righteousness.

"LET US REASON TOGETHER"

Next in the attainment of a sound mind on any given problem comes foresight. Foresight is the power of looking ahead to determine the probable effect which the carrying out of our deductions will have. Closely linked to it and really growing out of it is precaution. We are not only told in the Scriptures that 'if we live after the flesh we shall die' but we are also told to make straight paths for our feet. If we stand on a railroad track and see a train coming, that is foresight; if we get off before it hits us, that is precaution. Foresight is a prerequisite of sound judgment, or common sense. How often we hear the exclamation: "Why didn't I think of that?"—meaning, "Why didn't I foresee that?"

All these things lead us up to the point of reason, which is the process of comparison. We are admonished to "prove all things, hold fast that which is good." To prove a thing is to compare it with some known standard. It is a direct violation of this precept to allow such facts as we may possess to become rusty from disuse or to submit our minds implicitly to another without proper reasons therefor.

Reason is the art of fixing the relativeness of things. It is by means of reason that it is possible to differentiate facts and to indicate to what category they belong. Thus and thus only can we "rightly divide the word of truth." Thus and thus only can we "give a reason for the hope that is in us." Only thus can we fulfil the Apostle's prayer that 'our love may yet abound more and more in knowledge, and in all perception, in order that we may examine the differences of things.'—Philippians 1:9, 10, Diaglott.

To reason about a thing is to dissect it, to examine it from every point of view before adopting it, before deferring to it or rejecting it. Only by reasoning can we judge ourselves dispassionately. The Psalmist approaches the question thus: "Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse [rectify] his ways? By taking heed thereto according to thy word." Applying this principle to ourselves we see that we are to look at our ways, our thoughts, our words, our actions and compare them with the standards given us in the Lord's Word. If we be impelled by a desire for the truth and if we "judge soberly" we shall see wherein we have already attained to those standards and wherein we are still lacking. "Come now, let us reason together, saith the Lord of hosts."

DECISION, THE SOUL OF CHARACTER

We now come to the decisive factor of a sound mind, judgment or decision. We may perceive the things of the spirit; we may reflect upon and contemplate them; we may be keen in our interest and draw some very accurate deductions as to advantages to be derived; we may foresee ourselves enjoying the fruits of the spirit and acting as an ambassador of the Lord; we may count the cost by process of comparing the things of this present life with the joys that shall be revealed in us, but when we definitely make the decision and say, "I will do it; I will pay the price, cost what it may," then, and first then, is character really molded—and devils step back an extra pace.

Some one has aptly said: "A wise man is like a pin, his head keeps him from going too far." If a whole man be like a pin, then certainly decision is the point of that pin: for by decision his powers become penetrative and effectual. Decision is like a ratchet brake on an incline railway; it keeps one from slipping back over the ground just gained. Again, decision may be likened to the skin of an apple. Not only is it the most beautiful part, but it preserves the rest of the fruit, as decision preserves the process of thinking just passed through with more or less labor. It is really better for the character to decide wrong than not to decide at all. We can always decide something about a question. We can decide to let it alone, or decide to let it rest until more information is at hand.

"A double-minded man is unstable in all his ways." "Unstable as water, thou shalt not excel." These texts show the disadvantages of indecision. How many occasions for doing good are passed by from irresolution! While we are saying to ourselves, Shall I, or shall I not? the moment flies away and the blossom of joy which we might have given to it is withered and often cannot be revived by any tears of repentance. The irresolute man cannot perform any action well.

On the other hand, decision of character is one of the most important of qualities to attain and maintain. In fact we must possess a good deal of it before we can give ourselves to the Lord. Knowledge is not our chief end; it is action—action inspired by love, but still action. We may have a fine education, learn to think most correctly and talk most beautifully; but when it comes to action, if we are weak and undecided we are of all beings the most wretched. All mankind feel themselves weak, beset with infirmities, and surrounded with dangers; the acutest minds are the most conscious of difficulties and dangers. They want above all things a leader with that boldness, decision and energy which, with shame, they do not find in themselves. Just such a leader we find in our Lord, who not only trod the way we tread, but trod it alone.

Next to being upright and faithful in the performance of duty, we should be decided; and then we shall make either friends or foes worth while. It is in vain to hope to please all alike: "Woe unto you when all men speak well of you." Let a man stand with his face in whatever direction he will, he must necessarily turn his back to one-half the world. If a thing be right, let us do it boldly; if it be wrong, leave it undone. Every day is a little life, and our whole trial time is but a day repeated.

FOES OF A SOUND MIND

There are three foes to the exercise of a sound mind. One is impulse, a perversion of power and judgment. Another is sentimentality, a perversion of love and wisdom. The third is illusion, a perversion of deduction and reason.

Impulse is like a spring trap that operates generally to the injury of someone. It is action under snap judgment, wherein all the steps between perception and decision, except alertness, are almost completely overlooked. Adam's transgression itself was largely of this nature. He felt, he was keen on the subject, he acted. When Uzzah steadied the ark he did it under impulse and paid for his lack of reasoning with his life. Had he remembered the Lord's commandments, had he thought of them sufficiently beforehand, had he been alert with a sense of obedience, had he been exercising the foresight which moments of quiet contemplation should have taught him as he walked beside the ark, he would have been prepared to stop his tendency to an impulsive meddling in matters not his own.

Peter was impulsive in proclaiming his lasting fidelity to the Lord. He merely perceived that Jesus was the Christ, the son of the living God, and assumed that everything must be outwardly favorable to our Lord, who was one, naturally, with whom Peter would like to be always associated. His judgment lacked the calm, careful consideration and insight which became his at Pentecost. No one can allow his impulsiveness to govern and at the same time exercise a sound mind well, because a sound judgment includes careful and moderate comparison of the facts involved. The impulsive ones are very apt to be prejudiced in their conclusions; for prejudice is premature judgment. They jump from perception to energy and from energy to decision. They are always starting something, but it is oft-times something they wish they could stop. Sometimes they are like the man looking through the yellow-stained glass, when everything appears peculiarly bonny: then they are like the other one who looked through the blue-stained glass, when everything looks sombre and hopeless. Neither had an accurate judgment of the situation.

Impulsiveness is a false enthusiasm traceable not to our fixed ideals, but to our wishes. It is often true: "Thy wish was father to the thought." Impulsiveness was the difficulty with the Galatian brethren; as the Apostle says: "Ye did run well for a time . . . . O foolish Galatians, who hath bewitched you?" They had not properly fortified themselves with the reasons for their faith and were in danger of losing all.

It is doubtless because we tend to jump to conclusions and to other associated actions that the Lord has laid upon us certain restrictions such as, "Render not evil for evil." The impulsive tendency is to strike or speak back when we are injured. Occasionally such action might be right in itself. The Mosaic law provided for such retribution. But if we have carefully pondered the various phases of the Lord's will for us and if we have grasped the thought that he would be better pleased to have us consider a situation before we act, we are to that extent guarded, and our energy and decision are forced to wait on thought, foresight and reason. "He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his own spirit than he that taketh a city."

Another hindrance to sound judgment is sentimentality.

SENTIMENT VS. SENTIMENTALITY

Now sentiment is a noble thing. It was the noblest sentiment which God had toward the world which prompted him to make the arrangement for its redemption. No one can ever have a sound mind who absolutely ignores sentiment, if that were possible. But sentimentality is the quality present when sentiment overrules reason, or when it forces a decision before reason has time to consider. Impulse and sentimentality often go hand in hand, like their legitimate prototypes, power and love. It was sentimentality when the inhabitants of Lystra named Barnabas Jupiter, and Paul Mercury, and said: "The gods are come down to us in the likeness of men." Again, when St. Paul shook off the poisonous serpent from his hand and lived, the people of the island would do him worship, thinking he must be a god.

Never will common sense have a chance to manifest itself in those who permit such ephemeral and enfeebling impressions to govern the judgment and who fail to harmonize common sense and the emotions of the heart. Sentiment reasons and is capable of devotion. Sentimentality excludes reflective thought and ignores generosity. We are capable of sacrificing ourselves for sentiment. Sentimentality exacts the sacrifice of others.

We have seen mothers oppose the departure of their sons, preferring to oblige them to lead an obscure existence near to them, rather than impose upon themselves the sorrow of a separation. Sentimentality and its derivatives, puerile pity and false sensitiveness, create illusions for those who do not practise the art of reasoning.

ILLUSIONS LIKE WILL-O'-THE-WISPS

Both impulse and sentimentality contribute to or lead to illusions. Illusions, like ideals, are made by imagination and hope. Inaccuracy is the difference. Imagination, in the sense of power to form and hold a mental image of an idea or of its effect on us, is really necessary to any process of reasoning. The Apostle sets this thought forth in the following words: "We behold as in a mirror the glory of the Lord and are changed [by the effect of that image on our minds], from glory unto glory." That is, from the fragmentary descriptions in God's Word we are able to form a mental image or conception of his character.

But imagination is usually so linked with sentimentality that the word has come to have a bad savor. So the Apostle says: "Casting down imaginations and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge [the exact knowledge or acquaintanceship] of God, we bring into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ." The idealist and the illusionist perceive alike, but the latter is not impelled by a desire for the truth. His wishes take the place of his memory of previous experience and of the promises and directions of the Lord. With such a one reverie takes the place of thought. There is indolence instead of alertness; fancy instead of deduction; desire instead of foresight; sophistry instead of reasoning. Is it any wonder that the decision, such as there is, is erroneous, and that illusion enshrouds the true powers of discernment?

The "righteous" Jews of Jesus' day deluded themselves into thinking that no blessings could pass them by; but they, with the rest of the world, were drunken. They thought that, not because of a passion for the truth, but because of prejudice, which is traceable to nothing more than mental and moral indolence.

"BE OF GOOD COURAGE"

"Be of good courage and he shall strengthen thine heart."—Psalm 27:14.

Jesus gave us a perfect example of true courage based upon implicit confidence in the divine promises—such a courage as is needed by all of his people at this time. The Apostle suggests that we consider him, lest we become faint and weary in our minds. There is one kind of fearlessness, however, which is begotten of self-esteem, lack of humility. This is not the kind enjoined upon the Lord's people. They are to be both tender-hearted and humble-minded. The spirit of courage possessed by the saints is based largely upon their faith in the Lord. Realizing the divine love and providential care, these can apply to themselves the gracious assurance that "the Father himself loveth you," and that "all things shall work together for good to them that love God, to the called ones according to his purpose."—John 16:27; Romans 8:28.

It is this realization of divine all-wisdom and all-power that gives the strength of heart referred to in our text. It will be readily seen, then, that this courage is based upon faith, though of course the faith must have a foundation of knowledge. The proper relationship of our growth is primarily knowledge: faith, courage, activity, and all of these continue to grow, and in their maturity make us wise, faithful, courageous overcomers in respect to the spiritual matters to which we have been called through the great and precious promises.

Sometimes we realize our deficiencies and are not able to locate the cause. Some one says, 'I want to be an overcomer, to gain the victory over the spirit of the world, over the tendencies of my own fallen flesh and over the wiles of the adversary, but somehow I cannot; I fail.' Such should learn to look for the source of failure, the deficient element, and should fortify himself in respect to the same. Let him ask first, 'Is my failure to overcome due to a lack of courage? Am I fearful, and hence unable, to fight the good fight of faith and, by the Lord's assistance, to gain the victory?' If he has the courage he may find that he has not been sufficiently trusting the Lord, but leaning too much on his own strength. Such should remember the Apostle's words, "When I am weak, then am I strong"; reversely, 'when I am strong in self-assurance, I am then weak, because the Lord wishes me to rely not upon myself, but upon him, his strength, his grace.' If the courage be found deficient, the reason evidently is that the faith is lacking; and if so, there is a reason for it—either a lack of knowledge on which to build a faith, or a lack of exercise and development of faith. The knowledge is to be sought from the right quarter, in harmony with the Lord and his Word, and the faith is to be exercised continually, recognizing the Lord's interest in us as his children, as testified to by his Word and by noticing the leadings of divine providence in our daily affairs.

LOVE CASTS OUT FEAR

There is a proper fear, or reverence, and disinclination to offend our heavenly Father and our Redeemer, which we wish never to lose. Perfect love will not cast out this fear, but rather intensify it. The fear which love casts out is timidity, a servile fear or dread of the Lord or of Satan or of the fallen angels or of men and what they might do unto us. Perfect love cannot be attained without knowledge, faith, courage and overcoming. It is the result of the exercise of all this divine arrangement that brings us nearer to God and makes us truly thankful and appreciative of his gracious purposes and omnipotent power for their accomplishment.

The spirit of courage needs special cultivation by the Lord's people; and this cultivation means growth in all the graces. For instance, if calamity befall us or threaten us we should immediately think of the fact that our Lord assures us that even an insignificant sparrow cannot fall to the ground without the Father's notice, and that we are of much more value than many sparrows. This thought at once strengthens the heart, nerves the arm, quickens the pulse of endeavor, provided we can realize that God is for us, that no earthborn cloud intervenes between our souls and the love for us which he has declared. If a cloud does obscure the Father's love we must the more earnestly, the more persistently get from behind it by getting our hearts right with the Lord, by going to him in prayer, by confessing our trespasses and by requesting mercy and grace to help and to restore us to his favor.

"Be of good courage and he shall strengthen thine heart," is one of the blessings assured us in his Word. In the divine order courage is necessary to strength and victory. Some one has said, "One with God is a majority." With courage to grasp this thought and to hold it, things almost superhuman seem possible to the Lord's people, while without this courage they may naturally be weak and easily vanquished.

COURAGE IN THIS EVIL DAY

Never before, perhaps, was courage so needed as it is now needed in this evil day; but the prophets' descriptions of this great trouble time are very figurative when they speak of fire and clouds and pillars of smoke, saying of this time, "I will show wonders in the heavens and in the earth, blood and fire and pillars of smoke," etc. But the consecrated children of God need have no timidity in respect to these matters if they have the proper courage, developed by proper exercise and built upon proper faith, founded upon the knowledge of divine revelation. Their attitude of heart will be, "I will fear no evil, for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff, they comfort me."

Whether, therefore, storms financial, political, religious or demoniacal come his way the child of God may rest secure and be of good courage. The Lord is both able and willing to care for his interests and bring him off victor. Should the fallen angels be permitted again to materialize and personate either the dead or living, this class need have no fear. Their perfect love for the Lord, based upon a knowledge and appreciation of his truth, will lead them to triumph courageously over all the wiles of the adversary and his hordes.

THE ELECT TO BE UNDECEIVABLE

The Scriptures abound with testimonies to the effect that the severe trials of the near future will be along the lines of deception. They speak of lying angels and deceivableness of unrighteousness and "lying wonders," and tell us that the Lord will send or permit a strong delusion that they may believe a lie. (2 Thessalonians 2:9-11) If we gain the right conception of the matter these deceptions are to affect the whole world, including its wise men, and indeed practically everybody except the "elect"; and the "elect" will be preserved, not through their own wisdom or superiority, but through the power of God. "For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall shew great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive even the elect."—Matthew 24:24.

Our Lord in the parable of the wheat and tares tells of the harvest work and how he would "gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other." (Matthew 24:31) It is by thus gathering them that they are protected in this time of strife and trouble when others are deceived. But they are not gathered physically into one place, but spiritually; their minds, their hearts, their affections are gathered together, centered. Our text tells us that our Lord is this great Center to which his elect must all be gathered if they would have rest or peace, if they would overcome the world, the flesh and the peculiar snares of the adversary, which will now be laid for the feet of all and will more or less entrap all except the elect class.

"GATHER MY SAINTS UNTO ME"

Figuratively all of these "elect" ones are gathered, and the place is thus described, "I will say of the Lord, he is my refuge; in him will I trust"; and again, "He that dwelleth in the secret place of the Most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty." Ah! no wonder that we also read, "No harm shall come nigh thee." How could harm come to any who are thus close to the Lord? "A thousand shall fall at thy side, ten thousand at thy right hand; but it shall not come nigh thee; because thou hast made the Lord thy refuge; thou hast made the Most High thy habitation."—Psalm 91:1, 2, 7.

This nearness to God, into which his "elect" are gathered, is the source of their protection. And the dangers to others are in proportion to their distance from this citadel of strength, this fortress, this refuge or tower.

"Then let our songs abound,
And every tear be dry;
We're traveling through Immanuel's ground
To fairer prospects nigh."

"ALL POWER IS GIVEN UNTO ME"

These were our Lord's words after his resurrection. They were true then. They have been true throughout the Gospel age, and they are still true today, because we are now living in the time of which it is written, "He shall take unto himself his great power and reign." His reign has in some senses of the word already begun. He has already marshaled forces which will complete the overthrow of everything opposed to his kingdom and its righteous laws. And we may be sure that the members of his body still in the flesh this side of the vail are no less subjects of his providential care than are the world and its affairs. We may be sure that nothing is transpiring, either in the nominal church or among the kingdoms of the world, among socialistic or political parties or in the financial world contrary to what will best serve our Lord's purposes in connection with the events just before us and the outworking of the same in fullest accord with the prophecies.

Oh, that we could get this thought rightly settled in our minds! Yea, as the Scriptures say, "Settle it in your hearts"—that our Lord is at the helm superintending all of earth's affairs at the present time in a much more practical sense than ever in the past. And have we not seen his graciousness towards the church during the forty years of the harvest period that are already past? And can we doubt his continued supervision of the affairs of his betrothed to the grand consummation? "He who hath begun the good work in us is able to complete it," and he who has thus conducted the harvest work is able still to direct his cause, to order, bless and use it to his own praise and to the blessing of his people.

"Who led thee first will lead thee still;
Be calm and sink into his will."

Let us not be timid either as respects the affairs of the church in general, or as respects our own personal relationship to it and to the Lord. Let us learn more and more to be on the lookout for the leadings of his providence and for utilizing knowledge which he has given us from his Word. Let us not be surprised concerning the fiery trials which try us and the stormy billows which may at times seem about to overwhelm us; "for greater is he that is on our part than all that are against us"—however numerous, however strong, and whether demons or men. Let us remember that we are called to be overcomers and that the victory that overcometh the world is our faith.—1 John 5:4.

REMEMBER OUR VOW

"Resist the devil and he will flee from you," is the Lord's testimony, through James. This implies an assault by the adversary. It implies that he should be resisted and can be resisted and that in the end he will flee from us, not because of arrogance or power on our part, but, as our Master said, "He hath nothing in me"; so if he finds it useless to continue his assaults he will probably flee also from us to other fields of service. We remind all of our readers that whoever comes under the influence of Spiritism, Christian Science, Hypnotism or any other form of Occultism is thereby endangering himself, not only for the moment, but also for the future, because the evil spirits operating through these various channels seek, some in one way and some in another, to delude, bewilder, confuse the reason and bring into subjection the minds of those with whom they have to do. Hence any of the Lord's people who have affiliation at any time with any of these are specially warned of liability to intrusion by these spirits now. We remind all that the special channel through which they have had special success is human curiosity. We urge all of the Lord's people to restrain their curiosity, to rely on the Lord's Word and to have no dealings whatever with any of these occult systems. Let us remember our Vow unto the Lord along this line.

One dear sister told us recently that before coming into the truth she had dabbled with Christian Science and Spiritism, and had been entrapped with mediumship. She was a writing medium and could distinctly feel something take hold of her hand and guide her pencil while she wrote on topics of which she had no personal knowledge. After coming into the truth, and realizing the source of this power, she resolutely repelled it in every way, asking the Lord by prayer for assistance. She gained strength to resist this influence, but has again been annoyed by the spirits taking her hand and endeavoring in various ways to arouse her curiosity so that she would yield her hand to them in order to learn their message for her. She remarked that she has now a fear and a dread of the evil spirits and a strong desire to be free. She finds herself freer from their influence when in the company of the Lord's people. We advised her against fear and against refusing to remain in a room by herself. By so doing she would be cultivating fear and subserviency and bringing herself into a condition of mind much more amenable to their intrusions. We advised her, and now advise all similarly affected, to set the will resolutely in opposition, to refuse all communication, to ask no questions, to receive no answers in any manner, but in the name of the Lord to command the evil spirits to depart, meantime going to the Lord in prayer "for deliverance and grace to help in every time of need." In times of peace and freedom from assault the mind can be stocked with strengthening Scriptural passages or helpful poems or words, so that these may be drawn upon in times of need.

In conclusion, then, dear brethren, let us be of good courage, of strong faith, of heroic determination. Let each see that his faith is not in himself, nor in his vows, nor in his very best endeavors, but in the Lord. Trust in the Lord and practise with your faith at controlling your thoughts, words and deeds and at bringing yourself closer to our Father and Redeemer. We live in a time when worldly wisdom is taking note of this need of courage; and much courage there is. But the greatest courage is moral courage, the true courage which the Word of God inculcates and through which we may not only rejoice in all of the present experiences of life, but ultimately come off "conquerors, yea, more than conquerors through him who loved us and died for us." "Be of good courage and he shall strengthen thine heart."

"THERE WAS ALSO A STRIFE AMONG THEM"

Alas! that in his last, sad, sacred hours on earth,
There should be strife among the Master's chosen twelve—
A strife to be the greatest, seeking selfish ends,
Ignoring their sweet privilege to minister
Unto their Lord, in this, his time of saddest need.
Ah, me! that he, the alpha and omega, first
And last, in lowliness must wash their dust-stained feet,
To show that he who serveth most is chief of all!

Ah, then! shall we not daily watch and humbly pray
That no defiling "root of bitterness" spring up!
Shall we seek selfish honors here, or rather wait
Until we reach the other side, where he, our king,
Shall seat us in his throne, exalt his lowly bride!
Dear Lord, oh, make us gentle, merciful and wise,
Help us in honor each the other to prefer,
Fulfilling thus the law of Christ, the law of Love!

WORKING IN THE CHURCH

ACTS 2:41-47; 4:32-35; 6:2-4.—AUGUST 18.

[Paragraphs 2 to 21 inclusive of this article, as it originally appeared in issue of July 1, 1918, were reprinted from article entitled, "The Early Church," published in issue of January 1, 1902, which please see. The remainder is printed below.]

Whoever today refuses to acknowledge Christ Jesus as the Messiah, the Sent of God, whoever refuses to obey his teachings, to follow him, is unrepentant no matter how fully he may believe that Jesus of Nazareth was the Messiah, the Sent of God. Even though one may sorrow at the record of the sufferings of Christ, he has not come to the point of repentance until he has renounced the sins for which Christ suffered, and has become a follower of the Master. Only such as are thus repentant have part or lot in the household of faith. God's proposition is not to save people in their sins, but to save them from their sins; and during this Gospel age the first condition of acceptance with God is that the sinner shall renounce his sins, accept our Lord as his personal Savior and follow in his steps.

PROVIDING FOR THE POOR

Some time later an emergency arose in the church, calling for a force of seven deacons to look after various temporal matters, all of whom were chosen by the congregation—not by the apostles—as men of honest reputation, wise, and filled with the holy Spirit. This incident suggests to us the loose character of the organization of the early church. It did not have cast-iron rules and laws, except that the Lord Jesus Christ, the Redeemer, was the Head of the church, and that no one could be recognized as a member thereof unless he had recognized our Lord as Savior and made full consecration to him, thereby receiving his spirit, and had also recognized as of his appointment and of the holy Spirit's designation his especially appointed apostles, as the authorized instructors of the church. Aside from this, the necessities of each case seem to have guided; and yet we may safely presume that in all the arrangements of the church, as well as in the teachings of the apostles, the holy Spirit directed, for the benefit also of those believing on the Lord throughout the entire age.

We are not to suppose that there was an intentional partiality or neglect of the Grecian more than of the Hebrew women. Possibly it arose from the fact that the apostles appreciated more keenly the needs of the native widows than of the foreign-born. These were all Jewesses, of course, whether born in Palestine or in Greece; for up to this time the Gospel had not been sent to the Gentiles. Doubtless there was some reasonable cause for the murmuring. In any event the apostles manifested their honesty of purpose in the matter by promptly instituting measures for the correction of the difficulty.

In this incident there is a lesson for all of the Lord's people. If difficulties arise, based on temporal questions, likely to sprout a "root of bitterness" or to cause a schism in the church, the proper course would be to throw the responsibility upon the shoulders of the entire congregation, by asking for the election of some of the number who could give the matter better attention and could see that all were justly dealt with. We are not to forget that in this as in other ways the Lord has clearly indicated that the church as a whole is under his supervision, and that it is therefore proper that the general affairs of the church be conducted by the congregation, and not by one man nor by a clergy class.

SPEAKING FOR CHRIST

ACTS 1:1-8.—AUGUST 25.

[The first 12 paragraphs of this article, as it originally appeared in issue of July 1, 1918, were reprinted from article entitled, "Good Confession Versus Bad Confession," published in issue of January 15, 1914, which please see.]

Whatever circumstances may arise, the Lord's people will have such faith and trust in God that they will conduct themselves courageously, relying on divine power. The Greek here seems to give the thought: 'Do not be worried when you shall be brought before kings and judges.' The way in which God will give us a mouth and wisdom may vary according to circumstances. Perhaps it may be by suggestions from another, perhaps in the hearing of the testimony of some one else; or it may be that an especially helpful text of Scripture would come into our mind. But the thought is that our trust is in the Lord, and that we are not to be in fear and trembling.

If we find ourselves in any straits, any difficulties, we are to remember that the Scriptures assure us that "the angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear [or reverence] him, and delivereth them." (Psalm 34:7) This thought should tend to make us cool and collected in mind, and should enable us to conduct ourselves courageously, feeling our close relationship with the Lord and having the confidence this would give us. Furthermore, we realize that we are not wise enough to know just what God's purposes concerning us may be. We know not, therefore, just how the Lord may prefer to have this or that matter eventuate. But "faith can firmly trust him, come what may."

WORK OF THE CHURCH IN THE FLESH

The Scriptures invariably teach that the church of Christ in the flesh is his representative. As the Apostle Paul says, we "fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ, for his body's sake, which is the church." (Colossians 1:24) As we have to do with the suffering of the Anointed One, so we have to do with the witnessing or ministry by which the members of the body have been called out from the world, separated, instructed, and thus prepared for a share in the glorious kingdom and for the great work of judging the world which that kingdom will inaugurate. It is in this sense that our Lord declared to his disciples after his resurrection: "Ye shall be my witnesses both in Jerusalem and in Judea, and in Samaria and unto the uttermost part of the earth."

Primarily, the apostles were the witnesses who testified to us respecting our Lord's words, his death, his resurrection, his ascension, and his promises of a return to accept his faithful followers to a share in his kingdom, when he shall take unto himself his great power and reign. In a secondary sense all who receive the apostolic testimony and who declare it to others are likewise Christ's representatives and witnesses.

In order that the apostles might fill this position of witnesses and might be enabled to give a clear testimony on the important subject of Christ's death and resurrection, which constitute the foundation for our hope, our Lord was present with them after his resurrection and, as St. Luke declares, demonstrated the fact of his resurrection "by many infallible proofs," meanwhile explaining to them things concerning his coming kingdom, for which he had taught them to pray: "Thy kingdom come; thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven."

THE MESSAGE OF THE KINGDOM

This explanation respecting the kingdom was necessary because as Jews they had properly looked for an earthly kingdom, and now needed to be informed that before the earthly kingdom could be established a heavenly kingdom must first be inaugurated, and that they were eligible to a place in that heavenly kingdom, through which in due time the blessing would come to the earthly kingdom and would ultimately extend to all the families of the earth.—Genesis 22:16-18.

As long as the Jewish dispensation remained, this information was not due to be given. It would be "meat in due season" only after the Jewish nation, through its representatives, the priests and doctors of the law, had rejected the Messiah and had crucified him. But now that our Lord had died, it was "meat in due season" to the faithful to know that for a time God had rejected fleshly Israel from being his peculiar people in order to gather a spiritual Israel to be the holy nation, the peculiar people, the royal priesthood, to show forth his praises and to constitute his chief agents for the blessing of mankind in due time.

This work of calling the spiritual Israelites, and of inducting such as would heed the call into the new relationship, was the work which our Lord was committing to his apostles. To them he unfolded the things pertaining to the kingdom of God in such measure as they were able to appreciate them, leaving to the future the work of guiding them into all truth, into the deep things of God, under the ministration of the holy Spirit, which he had previously promised would show them things to come.

Our Lord wished the apostles to understand distinctly that they were not then in condition to undertake the new work, that the proper time for action had not yet come, that they would not be prepared until they should receive the holy Spirit, a power and unction from the Father, which would especially qualify and guide them in the important service of their commission. Moreover, it would be to them, and to all believers through them, a divine attestation that our Lord's work was approved of the Father and constituted a basis of reconciliation by which sinners might return to harmony with their Creator. Furthermore, to those who consecrated themselves to the divine service and received the holy Spirit, it was evidence that they were accepted of the Father in the Beloved and owned as children and heirs of his promises, joint-heirs with Jesus Christ their Lord, if so be that they would suffer with him that they might also be glorified together in the kingdom, when the due time should come.—Romans 8:16, 17.

THE TIME FOR THE KINGDOM

It was appropriate at this time, and in view of our Lord's instructions respecting the kingdom and the preparatory work for it, which the apostles were commissioned to do, that they should inquire respecting the time for its establishment. Therefore, not knowing that the Lord was about to leave them, they asked respecting the ancient promises of Israel's restoration, whether or not these promises were now due to be fulfilled, whether or not Israel was to be released from the domination of the Romans and to become the greatest nation of the world, to be used of God in the blessing of other nations.

It is worthy of careful note that our Lord did not rebuke the apostles, nor tell them that the thought in their question was foolish and would never have a realization. On the contrary, his answer clearly implies that their expectations at least approximated the truth, but that he was not at liberty to gratify their curiosity as to the time features of the divine plan. The things to which they referred, and which God had promised, would be fulfilled in due course; but the times and seasons were not for them to know, the Father not being as yet pleased to reveal this information.

Our Lord, however, clearly indicates that before Israel's restoration to divine favor the mission of his apostles must first be accomplished—that to which he was appointing them. He would not inform them whether or not their mission would be quickly accomplished. As a matter of fact, we see that it has extended over more than eighteen centuries. The restoration of Israel to divine favor cannot take place until Christ, his apostles and all his faithful followers shall first have accomplished the work of witnessing to the world and of selecting the full number of the elect, of spiritual Israel. This is the work of chief concern.

The times and seasons for the fulfillment of God's promises to Israel after the flesh and to the world were to be left in God's power, with the assurance that when the due time shall have come the brethren shall not be left in darkness on this subject, but shall be guided by the holy Spirit into this and all other truths, as these become "meat in due season" for the household of faith.

The work of witnessing was properly to begin at Jerusalem, the center of Judaism, which God himself had chosen, as represented in the Temple. It was properly to begin with those who had knowledge of Jesus and his crucifixion. Among these who had this knowledge were some of the most devout Jews from all quarters of the earth. It was appropriate that the truth respecting our Lord's death, resurrection, ascension and glorification with the Father, and respecting the gathering of spiritual Israel and of our Lord's second coming to receive them and to exalt them with himself in the Messianic Kingdom should be declared to those who had been instigators of his ignominious death and witnesses of his crucifixion.

LETTERS FROM AFIELD

SOME WHO SAT IN DARKNESS NOW SEE THE LIGHT

DEAR BRETHREN:—

We wish to advise you that we are still in harmony with the divine plan, and that you have our sympathy and our prayers at all times. In the Lord's good time we hope to meet you at "the general assembly and church of the firstborn, who are written in heaven."

For the past twenty-six years I had been employed here as agent of the —— without even a reprimand or a demerit mark. Suddenly, without a moment's notice or a word of explanation, I was dismissed and another man put into my place. I appealed to our superintendent for an explanation of this strange procedure; and he advised me that I had been dismissed by request of ——, the reason for which I was no doubt aware. This occurred four weeks ago.

This procedure was all brought about by some Catholic priests who were sore because some of their flock had left them and had gone to the Methodist church. Later, these converts heard Brother —— in a public lecture here, and thereafter they came to our class. These friends are all Polish, but understand English quite well; and they are so delighted with the truth that they are very enthusiastic. There were thirty-eight immersed here on April 7; and the next day eight more came for immersion. We have heard that there are forty more who would be glad to come our way if it were not for the intense opposition. The population here is mostly Polish Catholic, and there is a wonderful awakening among them. A Polish speaker and three colporteurs came here, and were all arrested, and thrown into jail. The colporteurs are out on $10,000 bail; but the speaker will have to remain in jail until the war is over.

May our dear Lord direct us in our efforts to serve the cause until we finish our pilgrimage here below is the prayer of

Your brother in Christ, R. S.—Wisc.

GLADLY ENTERED THE GATE OF SACRIFICE

DEAR BRETHREN IN CHRIST:—

Find enclosed a money order to be applied as you see fit in the interests of the Lord's work, and especially if needed in connection with the trial of the faithful brethren at this time. I wish also to express my appreciation of the truth and its service I have enjoyed each volume of the SCRIPTURE STUDIES as only a truth-hungry soul could; and I cannot doubt that the author was divinely aided.

I have always sought after God; and at the age of fifteen I began teaching a class of little girls in a nominal church. This was really a sacrifice to me in that I missed the fellowship of the other young folk in the older classes. But I stayed by it faithfully; and in the three years of my teaching I missed only three days, two of them being on account of sickness. But when I received the truth on God's plan for the whole world I saw how far short we Sunday School teachers were fallen. And how I did rejoice in the knowledge, which came to me as fast as I could assimilate it! I gladly entered the low gate of sacrifice in October, 1917, and am striving each day and hour so to run that I may win.

As would be necessary to one coming in so late, things came to me rapidly; and I advanced accordingly. So I am now enjoying the meat of the Word, and praising God's holy name for his many favors toward me and for his numerous manifestations that I am his child. I am especially thankful for the "meat in due season" furnished through THE WATCH TOWER at this time. It has encouraged me so much to press on untiringly and to help in the reaping of the vine of the earth, to the extent of my ability. I am also rejoicing in the fulfillment of prophecy as manifested in the recent fiery trials, and am glad that you have been accounted worthy to suffer for him who bore it all for us.

Praying continually for all the dear brethren, and looking forward to the great convention beyond the vail, I am

Your sister in the one hope of our calling, G. B.—Ind.

GRATEFUL APPRECIATION OF THE WATCH TOWER

DEAR BRETHREN:

Beloved in the Lord, greetings in the name of our dear Savior. The Father's bounty supplied through THE WATCH TOWER during the past twelve months has been lavish indeed. The last issues especially give evidence of the near approach of the kingdom of Messiah, for which we rejoice with you and all the dear family. May the Lord's grace and strength abide with you in your closing labors for all the saints.

With the assurance of my deepest love and sympathy and constant prayers, I am humbly, W. A. T.—Canada.

HERALDS OF THE MESSIANIC KINGDOM

DEARLY BELOVED BRETHREN IN CHRIST:

With peace and love we greet you. We are remembering you dear brethren in our prayers, and we rejoice to note how wonderfully our Lord and Savior is guiding you and directing the work in these closing hours of the Harvest. Rejoice with us, beloved ones, to know that all the saints of the Most High have been sealed and are now waiting their deliverance, when and as our heavenly Father deems best. What a wonderful time, to be standing on the verge of the inauguration of the Millennial Kingdom of our Master, for which the poor groaning creation has so long waited! Let us constantly keep our hearts within the vail, firmly trusting our Lord. "Faith can firmly trust him, come what may."

Dear brethren, continue to fight the good fight of faith; for without it we may as well drop out of the race at this time, and thereby lose the greatest prize ever proffered by our Creator, an offer never to be repeated. So may we voice the words of our dear Brother Paul: "I have fought a good fight; I have finished my course; I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all who love his appearing."—2 Timothy 4:7, 8.

We are the heralds, the antitypical John class; and surely we are rejoicing very heartily to know that the Messianic Kingdom is so near its establishment, and that we shall have a share in it if we but remain faithful to the end of our way. If we do, Satan will be sorely disappointed; for we are the objects of his intensest hatred now. But let us keep our minds filled with our Father's rich promises. His generous assurances should not only anchor our hearts and thoughts within the Most High, but dispel every approach of gloom. We are in the light, which is shining stronger and stronger unto the perfect day. We have long known and experienced the force of the Master's words, "If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you." Not being greater than our Master, we need not be concerned in the slightest degree what the world's attitude is; for we are sure of our heavenly Father's love. Let us pilgrim on, and not cease until we reach our heavenly Canaan. With loving wishes, I am

Your brother by his grace, F. T.—Ohio.

DUE CONSIDERATION FOR THE RIGHTS OF OTHERS

DEAR BRETHREN:

Pardon me for taking your time just to ask if you would be so kind as to put into THE WATCH TOWER a piece asking brethren not to give such long talks in opening a testimony meeting and such long prayers in public. We have had to endure this for a long, long time. It seems to take the good spirit out of the meeting to have such long talks at the very beginning. I do not wish to find fault but the practice mentioned above does not seem to be the proper way of conducting a meeting. Your sister, M. M.

[The above suggestion should be taken into very careful consideration by all who are leaders of devotional classes—prayer and testimony meetings. See suggestions on pages 319-322 of Volume Six STUDIES. Those who are chosen as class leaders should of all persons be the most careful in their consideration of the rights of others.]

"APPLES OF GOLD IN PICTURES OF SILVER"

DEAR BRETHREN IN CHRIST:—

I feel impelled to express in this inadequate way my very deep appreciation of the May 15th TOWER. My heart leaped for joy to see it arrive this morning, bearing these words of life and cheer to help us on to God. When we learned that the dear brethren were in bonds, we hardly dared hope for further "apples of gold in pictures of silver." But truly "God is good to Israel, even to such as are of a clean heart."

The article, "Let Patience Have Her Perfect Work," seemed like a heart to heart talk with God, meat in due season, strength to the weary. We do appreciate your labors of love on our behalf and your faithful ministry towards the Lord's little ones. Who could doubt the organization or the message through the TOWERS? As we ponder over their precious messages we think, 'He knows and loves and cares.'

May God bless and sustain you all in every trial, and at last grant you the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. With sincere Christian greetings to all at Bethel, I am

Yours in Christ's service, M. A.—B. C.

THE TRIAL AT BROOKLYN

Thursday night, June 20th, shortly after 10 o'clock, at the end of a fifteen-day trial, the jury returned a verdict of "Guilty" against all the brethren who had been arrested here early in May. Each one of the defendants feels absolutely innocent, knowing that he has no desire or motive to do injury to any one. At exactly 1:00 o'clock the next afternoon [in reality exactly at noon, as all clocks were running an hour fast on account of the daylight-saving act] the sentence was pronounced by the Court: Twenty years imprisonment in the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta, Georgia, for each, excepting Brother Giovanni De Cecca, the Court reserving sentence in his case until his past record could be investigated.

We feel that the Lord, in his perfect wisdom, has permitted it all for a good purpose and will overrule it ultimately for good and to his glory. Brother Russell stated that the work of the harvest would end in the summer of 1918, that the door would close and the dark night would settle down. The Master said, "When ye see these things begin to come to pass, then look up and lift up your heads; for your deliverance draweth nigh."

Take courage, beloved in the Lord, the kingdom is here; and soon by his grace we shall be forever with him and with each other. In the next issue of THE WATCH TOWER we hope to give a more detailed statement concerning the trial. Be calm, be trustful, keep close to the Lord. Continue to pray for us, as we do for you. We all hope in a little while to be in the presence of our king, where we shall have joys unspeakable and pleasures forever more.

VOL. XXXIX BROOKLYN, N. Y., JULY 15, 1918 No. 14

THE NEW COMMANDMENT

"A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another."—John 13:34.

The New Creation is not left without a law. It is a very oft repeated commandment; and the attainment of all the various things to which it is invited rests upon the keeping of it: "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love. This is my commandment, that ye love one another as I have loved you." (John 15:10, 12) This new commandment of the Lord made a great impression upon the mind of the loving Apostle John. He mentions the injunction a number of times: "This commandment have we from him, That he who loveth God love his brother also." (1 John 4:21) "For this is the commandment [marginal reading] that ye heard from the beginning, that we should love one another." "And this is his commandment, that we should believe on the name of his Son Jesus Christ, and love one another, as he gave us commandment."—1 John 3:11, 23.

A great deal that passes for love will not stand the test. Many people have had large numbers of friends while their conditions were prosperous, and have been greatly surprised in the hour of reversal to find that they could count their true friends upon the fingers of one hand and have fingers to spare. The Lord does not wish his people, however, to cultivate an outward love for the fellow-members of the New Creation, but a heart love; nor would he have them as new creatures love each other coldly and indifferently, but fervently: "Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently."—1 Peter 1:22.

A first consideration to the keeping of the new commandment is that the one we are invited to love as a new creature should be one who, like ourselves, is a partaker of God's holy Spirit; for "if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." (Romans 8:9) This love for those who have our Father's likeness is as superior to any earthly love as the heavenly relationships are superior to the earthly relationships. In the history of our Lord's life is an incident which brings this fact forward with great prominence. While he was engaged in seeking those who should ultimately become members of the heavenly family, messengers came to him informing him that his mother and brethren stood without, desiring to speak with him. It is probable that our Lord loved his mother more than any other earthly being. There was a special bond between them due to the circumstances of his birth, which apparently they alone could fully appreciate. (Luke 2:19; John 8:41, 42) But although Jesus loved his mother so dearly that his last thought was to provide for her a home with the Apostle whom he specially loved (John 19:26, 27), yet to those who wished him to leave off his preaching of the Gospel he answered: "Who is my mother? and who are my brethren? and he stretched forth his hands toward his disciples, and said, Behold my mother and my brethren! For whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother," i. e., 'he stands to me in a relationship that is at once close and tender and vital.'—Matthew 12:48-50.

Undoubtedly the reason for the Apostle Paul's advice to unmarried consecrated ones to the effect that they would probably do better to remain so, was not because there is anything displeasing to the heavenly Father in this nearest and dearest of all human relationships, which he himself instituted and for which the creatures of his handiwork are by nature adapted, but because many new creatures are not strong enough in character to make sure always that the Lord occupies the first place in their hearts, and the earthly companion the second place. Every marriage in which this balance is never lost sight of is beautiful, lovely and acceptable in the Father's sight. But it requires great strength of character to keep the Lord always upon the throne of our affections. Hence the sad condition arises that if a new creature becomes soul-sick and withdraws from the altar of sacrifice, his or her companion is very frequently drawn away, too.

TWO CLASSES THAT PROFESS DISCIPLESHIP

The fact that one professes to be the Lord's follower does not necessarily mean that we should bestow upon him the special love which we feel, and which we must feel, for every one who has covenanted to lay his all at the Lord's feet. There are some who apparently feel very free to call upon the Lord's name, but who do not have the spirit of consecration. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven."—Matthew 7:21.

But if we find one who is a true believer in the Lord and who has accepted him as his Savior and Redeemer and who is trying to live an inoffensive life, we are to count him as a brother, even though he may not have seen the privileges of the priesthood which are ours. Such brethren were very dear to the Apostle Paul; and it was among them that he sought for those who shall be worthy of being counted brethren on the higher plane. Thus he said: "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God [tentatively justified], that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God"—that thus you may become actually justified. (Romans 12:1) Those who have taken neither of these steps are not our brethren as yet, but are "by nature the children of wrath, even as others."—Ephesians 2:3.

The privilege of being sons of the divine family and of being recognized as such by other members of the family and of enjoying the blessings of such fellowship is limited. It did not exist before our Lord's day; it was limited then to one nation and to the few in that nation who could and did meet the conditions imposed. The divine sonship could not be reëstablished until Father Adam's ransom price was provided. The terms of the heavenly salvation are not stated in the Old Testament; and until Pentecost not one Jew could be transferred from the house of servants to the house of sons. At Pentecost, however, the new family relationship began; and "as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name."—John 1:12.

Many who suppose that they are children of God, or at least calculation are very worthy and very acceptable servants, do not have the spirit of sonship at all, but have an opposite spirit derived from an opposite source, and for that reason are designated the children of the devil: "Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do" (John 8:44). Christ said to some in his day. From this we can plainly see that the expression, "the fatherhood of God," when applied to all men in the present time, is incorrect. The fatherhood of God now is limited to those who have received the spirit of adoption. "But ye have received the spirit of adoption whereby we cry, Abba, Father"—dear Father.

PRIVILEGE OF COMFORTING THE BRETHREN

One of the blessed privileges which we enjoy towards the other members of our Father's family is the privilege of comforting them in the midst of the sorrows which are peculiarly the lot of the sacrificing priesthood. The Apostle Paul in writing to the Thessalonian brethren said: "Ye know how we exhorted and comforted and charged every one of you, as a father doth his children." (1 Thessalonians 2:11) In writing to the Corinthian brethren, his great heart of love was allowed to overflow with the following wonderful passage of consolation and comfort to his brothers and sisters of the divine family who for the time made their home in the city of Corinth: "May grace and peace be granted to you from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. I thank my God continually on your behalf for the grace of God bestowed on you in Christ Jesus—that you have been so richly blessed in him, with readiness of speech and fulness of knowledge. Thus my testimony as to the Christ has been confirmed in your experience, so that there is no gift of God in which you consciously come short while patiently waiting for the reappearing of our Lord Jesus Christ."—1 Corinthians 1:3-7, Weym.

It is a mistake for new creatures to withhold from one another the words of comfort which mean so much in the midst of storm. If we do withhold these words of comfort, it shows that we are deficient in the holy Spirit; for the holy Spirit was given to us, not only to be a comfort to our own hearts, but to aid us in our efforts to be a comfort to others. The holy Spirit is like the truth—the more of it we give away the more we have left. "I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another comforter, that he may abide with you forever."—John 14:16; 2 Corinthians 1:3-7.

If through faithfulness to his vow of consecration a brother has brought upon himself the reproaches and persecution which the Master promised should be his portion, the love of all who are in the new relationship to Jehovah will be specially in evidence. It will be "without dissimulation" (Romans 12:9), without the hypocritical professions which characterize "the worldly"; and because it is without hypocrisy but is genuine, fervent and continuous, no matter how great the blot upon the good name of the one that loves, it will teach a lesson that will leave a lasting impression for good upon all who witness it: "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." (John 13:35) And not only so, but this evidences to others that we are true Christians and have good grounds for hope of our ultimate acceptance with the Lord; and it will re-act favorably upon our own spirits, and we shall be conscious that we are pleasing to our heavenly Father. Like the Apostle, we shall be able to say, "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren."—1 John 3:14.

If we do not have this fervent love one for another, we can disabuse our minds of the thought that we love God or that we are in his likeness. "He that loveth not, knoweth not God; for God is love." (1 John 4:8) But if we do have that love, we can be certain that we are in close fellowship with him in whom all our hopes of life are centered. "If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and his love is perfected in us."—1 John 4:12.

If our hearts are filled with this heavenly love we cannot, while we have earthly good things, sit calmly by and watch others suffer. "But if any one has this world's wealth and sees that his fellow man is in need, and yet hardens his heart against him—how can such a one continue to love God?" (1 John 3:17, Weym.) There is another side to this question, too; and that is that if we can help ourselves and get along without being burdensome to others we should do so, our thought being as far as possible to help other people bear their burdens but not to expect them to help us bear our own. "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ. . . . Every man shall bear his own burden." (Galatians 6:2, 5) Love is an unselfish desire to do good to others. Therefore we should prefer to assist our brethren rather than have them bear our burdens. "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

PROPER ATTITUDE TOWARD FLESHLY BLEMISHES

The love for the New Creation is not to cease or to become cold when we discover, as we may, that the new creature is for the time occupying an imperfect tabernacle. It is just possible that others may consider that our tabernacles are not perfect, so that there is opportunity for the exercise of the grace of Christian forbearance toward one another, as the Apostle admonishes: "I therefore, the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called, with all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love." (Ephesians 4:1, 2) If all were perfect in the flesh, there would be no opportunity for the exercise of this grace.

There may be times, however, when it will be necessary for us to state some plain truths to those who for a time permit the weaknesses of their fallen flesh to interfere with their welfare as new creatures or with the welfare of others. When the time comes for speaking such truths we should make sure that they are spoken in love, and thus we, "speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ."—Ephesians 4:15.

But there are many times when a quiet over-looking of unintentional faults is the greatest service we can render to an erring brother or to the church with which he is associated. Such patient waiting on the Lord for him to make the correction in his own time and way, rather than for us to disturb the peace of others, the Lord will count as endured for his body's sake. This no doubt was partly what the Apostle Paul had in mind when he said: "I now rejoice in my sufferings for you, and fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh for his body's sake, which is the church."—Colossians 1:24.

When it becomes necessary to speak plainly to a brother who is out of the way we must not forget to deal with the brother in the way that our best judgment leads us to believe will be most to his advantage. The variations in temperament and disposition amongst the Lord's true saints are perhaps greater than in any other class in the world. If there are any two of them alike we have never noticed it. Hence in dealing with them we must "on some have compassion, making a difference: and others save with fear, pulling them out of the fire; hating even the garment spotted by the flesh."—Jude 22, 23.

LOVE PROPORTIONATE TO CHRIST-LIKENESS

There is a reason why we cannot help loving some of the Lord's saints more than others. As new creatures we cannot avoid loving most those who have most of the spirit of Christ, and even Jesus himself specially loved and was specially loved in return by that one of his disciples who had in him the largest measure of the Master's own spirit. John was especially "that disciple whom Jesus loved."—John 21:7.

No matter how hard we try, it will always be true as long as we are in these earthly tabernacles that "in many things we all offend." (James 3:2) The world because of its wrong condition of heart will recognize in our consecration only the odor of death. But while we shall occasionally give some slight offense to some of the Lord's brethren, because of their better condition of heart these offenses will be either overlooked or quickly condoned; and, for the most part, if we are loyal, loving and zealous we shall be to all such a sweet perfume of comfort and refreshment. "To the one we are a savor of death unto death; and to the other a savor of life unto life."—2 Corinthians 2:16.

Honest differences of opinion will arise between ourselves and other brethren. But if filled with a large measure of the Lord's spirit we shall be sure to make every reasonable effort to avoid expressing differences of opinion on non-essentials, which our experience has shown us engender strife. Rather we shall seek to "be of one mind, live in peace."—2 Corinthians 13:11.

THE TRUE SPIRIT OF CHRIST

The whole spirit of the Christian religion is that of service rather than lordship over others. And what a blessing it would be to all those who are ministering to the temporal or spiritual needs of the Lord's saints if they could realize that what they do for the least of these little ones they do in order to "serve the Lord Christ"! (Colossians 3:24) Let us not forget that our greatest honor here below is to render service to those who are the Lord's, and let us not be too choice about the nature of the service, but be as ready to serve in a lowly capacity as in a more conspicuous position, for which perhaps we may not be suited. Of the twelve apostles chosen by our Lord, every one of the twelve desired for himself some great position in the kingdom, as is proven by the fact that when James and John sought the two most desirable positions, the remaining ten "were moved with indignation against the two brethren." (Matthew 20:24) Commenting upon this matter the Lord explained that this was not his own attitude and should not be theirs. His own steadfast purpose of heart was to be their servant and the servant of all, "even as the Son of man came not to be served, but to serve, and to give his life a ransom for many."—Matthew 20:28, Diaglott.

The purpose and the effect of our association with the Lord's brethren should not be that of mere entertainment, but rather to do what we can and all that we can to "build one another up on the most holy faith" and to "edify one another, even as also ye do" (1 Thessalonians 5:11), thus "inciting one another to love and good works." (Hebrews 10:24) Our love toward the Lord's brethren should be dignified, simple, pure, and expressed with only such manifestations as would be proper between brethren. This love, when fully developed, will rejoice more in honors coming to another than in honors coming to self; and thus we shall, as the Apostle expresses the matter, "be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love; in honor preferring one another."—Romans 12:10.

In this as in everything else it will be necessary for us to consider one another, making due allowances for individual peculiarities of temperament, and not forcing honors upon those who would be injured by them, nor failing to make every reasonable effort to see that the self-forgetful and lowly-minded receive the recognition which is their due. Loving the brethren in this way we shall "not love in word, neither in tongue, but in deed and in truth." (1 John 3:18) The desire to bless the Lord's brethren in every way in our power should become the all-absorbing purpose of life. We are aiming to be like Jesus, and this was his spirit: "He laid down his life for us; and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren."—1 John 3:16.

As footstep followers of the Lord we shall be specially desirous to aid by precept and example the faint-hearted, the backward, the diffident, those lacking in combativeness and self-esteem. We shall wish to help the spiritually weak to gain strength by encouraging them to lay hold upon the Lord's promises and to trust in his providences on their behalf. Thus we shall be able to "comfort the feeble-minded, support the weak."—1 Thess. 5:14.

MODESTY A GRACE OF CHRISTIAN CHARACTER

When the heavenly Father designed the mystical body of Christ, he did not design that all the members of that body should have the same office. He did not design that all should be "players" (pilgrims, or elders, or deacons, or have other offices in the church); he designed that there should be many more of the "singers" (the less conspicuous members of the body who gladly join in the chorus of the new song). "And of Zion it shall be said this and that man was born in her: and the Highest himself shall establish her. The Lord shall count, when he writeth up the people, that this man was born there. Selah ['stop and think']. As well the singers as the players on instruments shall be there." (Psalm 87:5-7) "God hath tempered the body together, having given more abundant honor to that part which lacked."—1 Corinthians 12:24.

With hearts filled with love for the brethren we are bound to be very careful to spend so much time attending to our own business that we shall have no time to give to the busy-bodying to which many well-intentioned people give a considerable proportion of their time. Those who interest themselves in matters which do not particularly concern them soon neglect their own affairs, so that they are "not only idlers, but tattlers also and busy-bodies, speaking things which they ought not." (1 Timothy 5:13) Moreover, people who do this are likely to get into trouble and bring reproach upon the cause of Christ; and the Lord would not that any of us should suffer "as a busy-body in other men's matters."—1 Peter 4:15.

Hence if we see where we think a brother could handle his own affairs much better than he is handling them, instead of going to him and telling him how we think that he should conduct matters which are only his private concern we are to remember the Apostle's advice: "Study to be quiet, and to do your own business." (1 Thessalonians 4:11) The Lord would have his people filled with a quiet ambition which would lead them to earnest perseverance and well-doing, not a restless zeal for notoriety, for great exploits and for the direction of the affairs of others not specially entrusted to our charge.

HOW TO DEAL WITH THE BRETHREN

If we love our brethren as we ought, we shall make great efforts to control our tongue, though we shall not be able to do so perfectly; for "the tongue can no man tame" (James 3:8) and "if any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body." (James 3:2) Knowing the weakness of our fallen flesh, the Lord knew we would have difficulty in controlling our tongues even as respects our brethren in Christ, and so he has provided a rule by which slander in the church may be avoided. The rule is well known to all truth people, but it will bear repetition: "If thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: If he shall hear thee thou hast gained thy brother. But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established. And if he neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church: but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as a heathen man and a publican."—Matthew 18:15-17; Luke 17:1-4.

It is hard to realize that one brother in Christ would render evil to another, and harder still to realize that the injured one would violate his covenant with the Lord and render evil in return; yet there have been instances of this kind in the Lord's church. But those who are charged with the responsibility of preserving order in the ecclesias are charged to "see that none render evil for evil unto any man; but ever follow that which is good."—1 Thessalonians 5:15.

If a brother should make a slip and work injury to himself as a new creature and to other new creatures with whom he comes in contact, our spirit toward him should always be one of brotherly love, to help him regain his balance and his standing with the Lord, having due regard for the fact that we ourselves, through our selfish nature, may at times violate some of the requirements of the perfect law of love. "Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such an one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted." (Galatians 6:1) If we do have occasion to reprove or rebuke a brother, we should make sure that it is done only after we have exercised all reasonable patience. Even then we must be sure that it is done in love; and when the brother repents and makes some acknowledgment of his fault, we should be like the father of the prodigal: when we see the repentant one come in an attitude of humility, we should go part way to meet him, and we should never be weary of thus granting forgiveness to the erring.

Let us remember what Jesus said to Peter when he inquired if he should forgive his brother until seven times: "Jesus saith unto him, I say not unto thee, until seven times; but until seventy times seven." (Matthew 18:21, 22) Jesus knew that by the time Peter had reached the place where he was willing to forgive his brother four hundred and ninety times, it would have become a settled habit and he would forget to count. Surely the heavenly Father has forgiven us many more than four hundred and ninety times; and it may be necessary for us to ask for that forgiveness a considerable number of additional times, before that which is perfect shall have come.

GOD'S METHODS OF PROVING HIS PEOPLE

The Lord seems to hold out the hope that toward the end of our earthly career we may expect a larger measure of unity of the spirit than ever before. "Finally, be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another, love as brethren." (1 Peter 3:8) Despite our best efforts to maintain this unity of the spirit, however, it is inevitable that in the tests which God's wisdom shall from time to time apply, some will be found unworthy, and divisions take place. "For it is necessary that there should be factions among you, so that the approved may be apparent among you."—1 Corinthians 11:19, Diaglott.

The way that the heavenly Father is using to prove who of all earth's millions love him most, is to place those who have been begotten of his spirit where they may have opportunities to meet with one another; and by the interest which they show in each other and by the efforts which they make to have fellowship with each other, he judges how much of the spirit of love for himself they possess. "If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother [does not love him enough to seek personal fellowship with him] he is a liar; for if he loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?"—1 John 4:20.

HOW TO MANIFEST BROTHERLY LOVE

We can show our love for our brethren by not being too harsh with them, not expecting more of them than they could render. That was not a proper spirit that was shown toward his fellow-servant by the one who had just been forgiven a great debt which he was unable to pay.—Matthew 18:23-30.

We can show our love for our brethren who occupy positions as elders by avoiding the doing of anything which would injure them as new creatures. A kindly word of commendation or encouragement is occasionally a help to almost any of the brethren who serve in a public way, but we should be sure that it does not go beyond and work injury. If inclined to hold such in undue reverence, to give to them the place that Christ alone should occupy—"see thou do it not."—Revelation 19:10; 22:9; Colossians 2:18, 19.

We can show our love for our brethren by providing for those who properly have a demand upon us. The new creature must learn that it cannot in all matters do as it would prefer, but must in certain matters be governed by the obligations of the flesh; and one of these obligations is the care of those whom the Lord has placed in our charge. "But if any provide not for his own, and specially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith and is worse than an infidel."—1 Timothy 5:8; 2 Timothy 3:5.

We can show our love for our brethren by the zeal which we manifest to meet with those of like precious faith. We are more or less like coals of fire, which, if separated, will tend to cool rapidly, but which, if brought together, will tend to increase in fervency the whole mass. The Lord's people are not encouraged to meet in gatherings in which the world, the flesh and the devil commingle, but to assemble with those who are justified and consecrated and who love the Lord. Such meetings are greatly to the overcoming of the world and the securing of a place in the kingdom. There is good company in such meetings; for Jesus said, "There am I in the midst." (Matthew 18:20) There Jacob's ladder touches the earth and the place becomes, as Jacob said, "the gate of heaven." (Genesis 28:17) "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching."—Hebrew 10:25.

A GUARANTEE OF SUCCESS IN THE RACE FOR THE PRIZE

We can show our love for our brethren by living within our means. The Lord's people should not be paupers; but rather they should "owe no man anything, but to love one another; for he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law."—Romans 13:8.

Whatever we may wish to do for the members of the Lord's body who are still in the flesh should be done soon; for they will not be here long. If Mary had waited a week later before she broke the precious alabaster box upon the Lord's head, she would never have used it on him. "Do not keep the alabaster box of your love and tenderness sealed up until your friends are dead. Flowers on the coffin cast no fragrance backward on the weary road." It may be your privilege to do today the last kind act or to say today the last helpful word to some member of Christ's body.

One of the last things the Lord did was to wash the feet of his disciples. We may be sure that it was not done in the rudest and clumsiest manner imaginable, but with that kindness, sympathy, love and appreciation such as Mary had but a few hours previous lavished upon him, when she wiped his feet with the hairs of her head. Since the Lord thus demonstrated his willingness to serve us in even the humblest affairs of life, it follows that we "also ought to wash one another's feet." (John 13:14) We do not do this literally but with the "washing of water by the Word" (Ephesians 5:26), helping to make the feet members "meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light."—Colossians 1:12.

There is no special occasion, so far as we know, for this lesson on brotherly love. The church everywhere seems to be rich in this grace as never before; and it is true now as in the days of the Apostle that "as touching brotherly love ye need not that I write unto you: for ye yourselves are taught of God to love one another." (1 Thessalonians 4:9) But would you have a prescription that will positively insure your winning the prize of the high calling? Would you have a single text that guarantees that you shall never fall? It is found in connection with this very subject: "He that loveth his brother, abideth in the light; and there is none occasion of stumbling in him."—1 John 2:10.

WHY EVERY FOOTSTEP FOLLOWER OF CHRIST MUST SUFFER

"Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you; but rejoice, inasmuch as ye are made partakers of Christ's sufferings."—1 Peter 4:12, 13.

Literally translated, this text would read "Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial among you that is to try you." This exhortation draws our thoughts back to the Lord's statement through the Prophet Malachi, in which he announces that the Messenger of the Covenant would come suddenly—the One whose coming had been anticipated for centuries; and that it was a solemn question as to who would be able to abide the day of his coming, for he would sit as a refiner and purifier of gold and silver. (Malachi 3:1-3) We apply this prophecy to the time of our Lord's first advent. We believe that he came then, as foretold; and that throughout this Gospel age his work has been that of a refiner of his people.

In our text St. Peter seems to say, 'This is a fiery trial in which the entire church participates.' He did not necessarily mean that all the fiery trials will be among ourselves, but that the entire experience of the true church throughout the Gospel age will be fiery. It is true, however, that our most severe trials usually come from our brethren in Christ, just as it was with our Lord, whose brethren, the Jews of his day, persecuted him. St. Peter's thought seems to be this: Whoever comes into the body of Christ must not expect that his way thereafter will be smooth; for, on the contrary, the church must endure fiery trials down to the very end of her course, in order that she may be prepared for the kingdom glory.

It is true that the fiery trial through which the church has passed has been more severe at some times than at others. It is also true that the Word of God indicates that in the very close of this Gospel age there will be special testings which will try the faith of every member of the body of Christ in the flesh; and that these special testings will be permitted for the very purpose of demonstrating who have built their faith with the gold, silver and precious stones of God's Word, and who have built with the wood, hay and stubble of human tradition and "doctrines of devils." (1 Timothy 4:1) During that "fire of the day of the Lord" the work of the first class will be preserved, but that of the latter class will be destroyed.—1 Corinthians 3:12-15.

We are not to suppose, however, that those who are living in the close of the Gospel age are being more particularly tried than were those who lived during the preceding centuries of that age. No one will be suffered to be tempted more than he is able to bear; for with every temptation the Lord will provide a way of escape. (1 Corinthians 10:13) If God permits heavier trials and testings to come at any time, he puts something in the nature of encouragement upon the other side of the scale. And so the knowledge of the divine plan which the church now possesses should enable us to endure the trials of our day more easily than those who did not understand the Lord's purposes as thoroughly as we do. We should bear in mind the fact that while in some respects our trial is more severe than was theirs, in other respects it is less severe.

SUFFERING PERMITTED FOR A PURPOSE

In our context the Apostle is discussing the various kinds of suffering which Christians must endure. From the worldly point of view—in fact, from almost any other viewpoint except that of knowledge of the truth—it seems very strange that Christians should be called upon to suffer; for when one becomes a son of God, an heir of God and joint-heir with Christ Jesus our Lord, it would seem only natural that divine favor should thereafter extend to all of his affairs. The worldly are inclined to say, 'What kind of God have you that will permit his devotees to suffer? Surely when one gives himself up to do the will of God he should thereafter be exempt from trials and difficulties. Surely God would take such care of his faithful worshipers that nothing could possibly hurt them.'

Christian people are themselves often perplexed about their experiences—yea, ashamed; for they do not understand why a Christian should suffer. Yet St. Peter says, "If any man suffer AS A CHRISTIAN, let him NOT be ashamed, but let him glorify God on this behalf." (1 Peter 4:16) This very suffering which causes perplexity is in harmony with the divine plan; for God is dealing with the church individually in order to manifest their loyalty of heart. This loyalty to God and to the principles of righteousness will be demonstrated either by faith or by works. It will be out of accord with the present order of things, out of accord with the views of the world.

The people of God well understand that long ago he could have restrained sin if he had chosen to do so. Since he has not done this, it is evident that he is making good use of present conditions in the world. If everything here were favorable to righteousness, loyalty to God would be a very easy matter. If those who are the people of God received the very best of everything, the way to life would be both easy and popular. God explains in his Word, however, that everything shall work together for good to his people as new creatures; that is, according to the spirit, not according to the flesh. Even what seems to be the very worst disaster he can make work out good to them who love him supremely.

Only those, therefore, who see the divine plan can properly enter into this thought that a Christian has no cause to be ashamed of suffering, ignominy, persecution, endured for Christ's sake. Only those who can see the purpose in suffering can glorify God on this behalf, can glorify him when they are opposed, misrepresented, slandered. The character of these sufferings—the opposition of the world to God's people—is very much the same as to those which came upon our Lord Jesus. He was despised and rejected of men, even by some who called themselves holiness people. And so it has been all down the Gospel age. Those who have called themselves holiness people have despised and rejected those whom God has recognized as his saints. If we were of the world, the world would love its own; but because our Lord has chosen us out of the world, therefore the world hates us, as the Master foretold.—John 15:18-25.

PERSECUTION AN EVIDENCE OF LOYALTY TO GOD

It was because our Lord would not enter into the arrangements of the Scribes and the Pharisees that he was despised and rejected by them. He did not refuse to eat and drink with sinners. On the contrary, he was willing to talk with them, even with the woman of Samaria and others of similar character. He was not proud, but humble. He did not deal with the world in the way that the Pharisees did. Therefore they rejected him.

We read that the Scribes and the Pharisees were angry because our Lord taught the common people. Apparently they did not wish to have the people taught except in their way. When the average person is angry, he will say all manner of evil against whoever has aroused his ire. If, therefore, any of God's people has had evil spoken against him because he has presented the truth to others, he is not to be ashamed of his sufferings; for they are just what the true Christian is to expect. Such sufferings become strong evidence that he is on the side which God approves. Those Christians who complacently tell us that they are not receiving persecution, that they are not suffering for Christ's sake, have good reason to doubt whether they are walking in the Master's footsteps.

But we are not to consider persecution and suffering as evidences of loyalty to God unless they come as the result of Christian effort. If one were a consumptive before he became a Christian, his sufferings thereafter would be much the same as they were before. If one were to suffer as a busybody in other men's matters, he has good cause to be ashamed; for on account of his greater knowledge, his responsibility is greater. Therefore he should not do what he knows to be wrong. It is a very easy matter to forget that JUSTICE is the great foundation principle which underlies the teachings of the Word of God. This principle is concisely expressed in the Golden Rule—"Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." No Christian should under any circumstances render less than justice to any one. Nothing is more necessary to the people of God than to have the Golden Rule always before their mind's eye and to measure by it every thought, every word, every act.

WHAT IS INCLUDED IN BUSY-BODYING

Busy-bodying is the act of busying one's self about the affairs of other people. A large portion of the suffering which people in general undergo is the result of busy-bodying. We are not to meddle with other men's affairs; for we have all that we can do to keep our own matters straight. Many good people are unconscious offenders in this direction. They do not mean to be busy-bodies; indeed, often they do not realize that they are guilty along this line. God's people should keep so busy with their own affairs that they will have no time to criticise others. If circumstances are such that criticise we must, we should always do so in harmony with the Word of God. But we should be ever on the alert to help others, not to injure them.

In the preceding chapter St. Peter says, "If ye suffer for righteousness' sake, happy are ye." (1 Peter 3:14) Elsewhere the Scriptures explain that the followers of Christ are called to suffer for right-doing; and that if they are properly exercised by such sufferings, they shall in due time reign with their Lord in his Messianic Kingdom; but that now they are called to suffer with him. This is not because God wishes to see his people suffer, but because their interest in his truth, their loyalty to him, will demonstrate the fact that they have developed the character which he approves.

THE DIVINE STANDARD OF LIVING

During the Millennial age, suffering will indicate a failure to be in accord with the principles of righteousness; but during this Gospel age the reverse is often true. This is because the conditions under which the church is called are peculiar, separate, distinct from any other arrangement. God's usual provision for his creatures is a blessing; for example, the angels are not suffering. But here on earth a peculiar condition exists.

Six thousand years ago sin entered into the world. Ever since its entrance Satan has operated to deceive men, to make light appear to be darkness, and to put darkness for light. As a result of his efforts to oppose God and righteousness, the world is bewildered. Mankind now have a natural tendency to do wrong. They are as prone to do evil as the sparks are to fly upward.

While these conditions prevailed, God sent his Son into the world to die for the Adamic race. Throughout the Gospel age the Master's followers have been telling others that whoever is in accord with God's righteous standards is in accord with God, but that whoever is in opposition to God's standard of righteousness is in opposition to God. That standard is, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy mind, with all thy soul, with all thy strength; and thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Mankind as a race are out of accord with this standard. Our Lord Jesus, on the contrary, was in full harmony with this principle, and laid down his life on the side of righteousness. Finally he brought upon himself the hatred of those who had other plans than those of God. The doctors of the law, the Sadducees, the Pharisees, the priests and the politicians—all these had their own ideas and plans, based upon selfishness. Our Lord, who steadfastly followed the lines laid down in the divine Word, was necessarily in conflict with their personal ambitions.

Ever since the darkness of sin has entered the world, fallen man has naturally come to shun the light of righteousness. Therefore humanity does not like to come too close to the light or to the light-bearers. Men do not like to have the light of publicity thrown upon their schemes. When, therefore, our Lord Jesus showed that the doctors of divinity of his day had taken away the key of knowledge from the common people, those who were in sympathy with the darkness of this world became so incensed that finally they crucified him.

The true followers of Christ find that in the same proportion as they take their stand for the truth they will have persecution leveled against them. Whoever will strive to live godly, righteously, will suffer persecution, as the Scriptures have foretold. If they were of the world, the world would not hate them, but would love them and fellowship with them. This persecution which has come to our Lord and his followers does not emanate from any desire on the part of the world to oppose the divine plan, however. It is the result of blindness. (2 Corinthians 4:4-6) If the Jewish rulers had fully understood the situation, they would not have crucified the Lord of Glory.—Acts 3:14-18; 1 Corinthians 2:8.

Take, for instance, the case of St. Stephen. Saul of Tarsus verily thought that he was doing God service when he persecuted the first martyr. He had a zeal for God, but it was so misdirected that he became a persecutor of God's people. He tells us himself that he did this ignorantly, supposing that thereby he was serving God. Eventually it may be found that much of the persecution which the people of God have undergone has resulted not so much from bad motives as from ignorance or superstition. But whether the persecution comes from those who do it ignorantly or from those who do it intelligently need not matter to those who are persecuted; for if they realize that they are suffering for righteousness' sake, they will have that satisfaction of mind which will make them happy. Blessedly happy are all who have suffered for righteousness' sake. Whoever is thus suffering is on God's side. As for the poor world, they are bewildered and know not what to do.

ANOTHER SOURCE OF SUFFERING

Suffering for righteousness' sake may come not only through persecution, but in another way. If, for instance, one engaged in some part of the Lord's service has striven to be wise and reasonable, and yet finds that his service has brought upon him certain disabilities of a physical nature, he may rejoice in the fact that such suffering is for righteousness' sake; for he has been trying to do right, trying to do the Lord's will. We are to recognize, however, that it is possible to suffer for foolishness' sake, also. We recall the record that Satan tried to induce our Lord to jump from the pinnacle of the Temple, declaring that the heavenly Father would not permit him to be injured. Had our Lord jumped from the Temple and broken a limb, he would have suffered for foolishness' sake; for such an undertaking would have been presumption. Yet, on the other hand, one might do something for foolishness' sake and receive a blessing; for God might perceive that he was ignorant of the unwisdom of his act.

It is the duty of every Christian to study the Lord's will, to consider carefully the conditions around him, and to seek to follow so moderate a course in life that he would not only have the divine approval, but would cause as little inconvenience and trouble to others as possible. When he has done this to the best of his ability, he is to go forward, confidently relying upon the Lord's supervising wisdom and providence; for God will surely protect all those who put their trust in him.

Whenever the fiery trouble is the hottest, we may be sure that the Lord's care is over us; and therefore we may rejoice, in that we are partakers of the suffering of Christ. If it was necessary that the great Head of the church should have such an experience with suffering to prepare him for the glory to follow, we may be sure that the members of the church will also need to suffer in order to be prepared to share with him in his glory, honor and immortality. In whatever way the suffering may come—whether it is from our own flesh or from others—if it results from our endeavor to serve the Lord we may be sure that is it for Christ's sake. If, therefore, we remain faithful to the end of our course, we shall have a share in the glory of Christ at the conclusion of this Gospel age, at the manifestation of the sons of God.—Romans 8:19; Colossians 3:4.

"Dare what conscience says is right;
Do what reason says is best;
Do with all your mind and might;
Do your duty and be blest."

THE NEW WILL THE BASIS OF CHRISTIAN CHARACTER

"For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God."—Colossians 3:3.

We understand that there are only two great moral forces in the universe—good and evil, righteousness and sin; and that whatever is not right is wrong. By nature man was originally in full harmony with God. But by the disobedience of the perfect man whom God had made, sin entered into the world, with its resultant penalty of death. This original sin has been transmitted from parent to child until, as the Apostle says, all are sinners, all are in this fallen state.

After Father Adam had disobeyed God, he had the mind of Satan, who had the wrong mind—out of harmony with the divine arrangement. Because of Adam's deflection his posterity are all born wrong-headed and more or less wrong-willed. We do not mean that the mind and the will of fallen man are wholly Satanic, but that mankind are born with depraved minds, and are in more or less bondage to Satan. The only rectification is that we may have a new will, a new mind.

Here the Lord's message reaches us, offering forgiveness, reconciliation to himself, on certain conditions. When we inquire what these conditions are, we find them to be (1) a full surrender of the will to God and (2) an acceptance of the divine will instead. A full response of the body is not expected; for this is impossible in our fallen condition; but a full surrender of the will is demanded.

To those who during the Gospel age fully surrender their wills to God, a new nature is given. Instead of being servants of sin, we may now become servants of righteousness. This we do by stepping from the side of sin to the side of truth, the side of God—away from the side of Satan; for there are only the two sides. Whoever thereafter abandons the new will has gone back to the wrong side. When we became new creatures under the divine arrangement, we ceased to be old creatures. But if we should cease to be new creatures, what are we but old creatures again? The new will has died; the old will has revived—come to life again.

The Master said, "Ye cannot serve God and Mammon." (Matthew 6:24) We cannot be servants of righteousness and of sin, of truth and of error. "His servants ye are to whom ye render service." (Romans 6:16) So long as the new creature maintains his relationship to God he is the servant of righteousness. But as soon as his will is turned away from God, it is turned away from righteousness and is turned back to sin once more. It assumes, therefore, the Satanic attitude.

TRUE MEANING OF CONSECRATION

Many professed Christians do not understand at all what is concluded in consecration to sonship. Many do not understand that it means the renouncing of all earthly rights, earthly hopes, earthly ambitions. They think that consecration to God signifies a willingness to live moral, upright lives—nothing more. They have not seen the depth of the Apostle's statement, "Ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God." St. Paul here means, Your wills are dead, and you have been begotten again as new creatures in Christ. Those who have not understood this have not become dead as human beings—have not taken the step of full consecration to God.

A righteous will is the beginning of a righteous character; for the will represents the intention, the ideal. If this righteous will is maintained and put into action, the result will be the development of a righteous character. But if this righteous will is lost, the character will deteriorate. This would not mean, however, that the intelligence or the personality would be lost, but that the righteous character would be shipwrecked. (Ezekiel 18:24) The Scriptures liken such as lose their new will for righteousness to the dog returning to his vomit, and to the sow wallowing in the mire after having been cleansed.—2 Peter 2:22.

A new will is one's own making. The will of the fallen nature "is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be," the Apostle Paul assures us. (Romans 8:7) A man may take time for deliberation, may have a period in which he is gradually determining what he shall do, during which the different organs of his mind are balancing the question of consecration. But the act of consecrating is the result of his final decision in favor of the Lord. His natural will must be changed from its wayward bent, or at least from its irresolution, to a fixed determination in the right direction, to a determination to renounce the world with all its hopes and ambitions and to accept Christ as his Redeemer, together with all the heavenly promises centered in our Lord. Thus consecration is the first positive act of the new will. After consecration and acceptance by the Father, this new will forms the basis of the new creature. The individual is received of God through Christ for the high calling of the Gospel church.

THE IMPORTANCE OF THE WILL

After one has fully consecrated himself and has been begotten of the holy Spirit, the old will is actually dead. So when our text declares, "Ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God," it is not the body that is dead, nor is it the mind, the intellect; it is the old will that has been surrendered. The old will is not reckonedly dead, but really dead; for one could not have two wills at the same time any more that he could walk in two directions at the same time, or be in two different countries at the same time, or be two different persons at the same time. Therefore, to those who are in Christ Jesus, "old things have passed away; behold, all things are become new."

In one's mental make-up the will occupies the position of king, ruler, despot, autocrat. It rules the entire body—that is, it has the RIGHT to rule; and it should rule. When the old will was rejected, the will of the Lord was accepted as the ruler of the human body of the person who consecrated himself. The right to rule was actually transferred from the old will, to the will of God in Christ. Thenceforth the person is freed from the domination of his old will, and subject to the new will, which is in harmony with the divine will.

This new will, however, has difficulty in establishing its rule over the human body; for its entire empire—the members of the body—is out of harmony with the new sovereign. The mind is more or less twisted and warped by reason of sin. Many of the faculties of the mind rather prefer the old master, and feel restraint under the regulations of the new will. They desire to be rebellious and to have their own way. Sometimes the new ruler, the new will, is too lenient with its subjects. The new creature must remember, however, that there is no alternative—that he must rule with an iron hand; for if the will of the flesh should win the day, should again become master, it would mean that the new will was lost, that the new creature had died. This would mean eternal destruction—the second death.

Whoever has once turned his will to God, and has been accepted by the Lord and begotten by the holy Spirit, is on trial for life or death. If he were to turn to sin, to practise sin wilfully, there would be no future hope for him. Therefore it behooves the new creature to rule his body, his mind, his passions, and to bear in mind the precious promises to which he has become heir in Christ. To do this he is granted the Word of God. Through the guidance of this Word he is to keep guard over his mind, to watch his thoughts, to scrutinize his conduct. No matter how rebellious his flesh may be, it is the part of the new will to oppose any disloyalty, to conquer and control his mortal body, to the full extent of his ability. Whatever he may lack in ability the Lord purposes to cover and excuse, under certain conditions.

The new will feeds on the knowledge of the Word of God. As the child of God considers and admires the grandeur of the divine character—the wisdom, the justice, the love of God—he begins to copy these attributes; and thus he becomes God-like. By degrees he becomes a copy of God's dear Son. By his providences God so shapes our affairs as his children that things which would be too difficult for us will be taken out of our way. If our will remains fully submissive to him, ALL THINGS will be made to work together for our GOOD.—Romans 8:28.

Such children of God will not be tempted above what they are able to bear; for the Lord permitting temptation will also provide a way of escape. (1 Corinthians 10:13) Noting all their deliverances, their succor in times of need, they will be strengthened and will become established in faith. Thus the Christian, as the new will grows stronger and stronger, is not apt to be turned this way and that by false doctrines. The new will cannot expect, however, to gain an easy control of the flesh. It must be continually at warfare with the tendencies of the old body. But through our Lord Jesus Christ the new creature's best endeavors will be accounted as the fulfillment of the divine law.—Romans 8:1-4.

SUGGESTIONS FROM OUR LORD'S EXPERIENCES

In scanning the experience of our Lord Jesus for light on this subject, we perceive that at the time of his consecration at Jordan he gave up his own will as a man, and adopted the Father's will as his own. Thenceforth his human will was dead. When in the Garden of Gethsemane he prayed to the Father, "Not my will, but thine, be done," he had made no change of purpose. He did not mean that he had a contrary will in the matter. His mind was still the same as at consecration. But a condition had arisen in his life which perplexed him. He was not certain as to the Father's desire. So far as his own knowledge went he could see nothing to be gained by his suffering such great ignominy and shame as confronted him in connection with his death as the antitypical Passover Lamb. Perhaps he might he spared death as a malefactor, charged with being a blasphemer, an enemy of the Almighty. He was not sure whether this might not be merely an incidental that could be turned aside. If it could be turned aside, he wished that it might be so. But he desired to have the Father's will done, whatever that will might be. He left himself wholly in the Father's hands. This was his sentiment. He expressed himself here in utter disregard of his human sentiments.

Our Lord still had his human body with its preferences. His human preference would be to be spared experiences of shame. His preference as a new creature would be that he be not put to death as a blasphemer against the Father whom he loved and revered. He had no thought, we may be sure, of any other than a sacrificial death; for he had told his disciples that he would be crucified. But as the consummation of his sacrifice drew near, he saw what he was facing—the mock trial and all that it involved, the false charges, the humiliation, the deep shame—and the matter became all the more serious in his mind. He was not sure whether it was necessary for him to endure this shame and to be regarded as an enemy of God. If this was necessary, he had not a word to say. We do not understand his words to indicate that he had a will in any wise contrary to that of the Father.

DIVINE OVERRULING IN DAILY AFFAIRS

The question might arise here, If our Lord was not certain that the heavenly Father was planning every detail of his experience, should we have the thought that our Father plans and arranges every little incident of our experiences?

There are probably extremes of thought upon both sides of this question. Our brains differ. Our experiences are varied. Apparently different ones of us are naturally inclined to view matters from different standpoints. We believe that naturally many of us are not likely enough to look for the Lord's providences in the details of life. For our own part, we are rather of the opinion that many would have still greater blessings if they would watch more carefully along this line. Some, however, carry the thought of the Lord's overruling providences to an extreme. Such would be inclined to think that if they were to step into a puddle of water the Lord would have to do with it.

But we are assured that "the angel of the Lord encampeth around about them that fear him, and delivereth them." (Psalm 34:7) Personally, we are striving more and more to see the providences of the Lord in all our affairs. We are also assured that "the steps of a good man are ordered of the Lord." (Psalm 37:23) This does not mean that we are to think that everything we do, every step we take, is necessarily ordered of the Lord, even when it proves to be a misstep; but that the general course of a righteous man is under the Lord's supervision. God gives his angels, his messengers, charge over his people. (Psalm 91:11, 12; Hebrews 1:14) We are merely instruments in his hands, if we are guided by him. As respects the work in our own hearts, however, we are more than this; and we are to use our reason in respect to our course, in respect to how we shall employ our talents for the Lord—how we shall do volunteer work, how we shall present a book or a tract, etc. We are to use our brains, seeking to have them guided by the Lord.

We have great respect for those who go to God each morning and ask him so to guide their affairs for the day that they may have some opportunity of witnessing to the truth. It seems to us that the Lord would be pleased with such an attitude, and would feel thus: "Here is a willing servant, and I will give to this one an opportunity of service." We greatly admire that implicit reliance on God which realizes that we are nothing of ourselves, that our sufficiency is of the Lord, that he is using us as instruments, and that we are to be on the lookout for opportunities to serve him and his. We notice that all of our dear Redeemer's steps were ordered of Jehovah God. While at first he was not able to see clearly that his final humiliation was ordered of God, yet a little later he saw that it was so ordered, and that it was a part of the dregs of the cup which he was to drink. His experiences were designed of God.

Probably this is true of many of our experiences. Things that we think are the fault of others or may have come our way by chance are quite probably more or less, perhaps fully, under divine supervision. God would not, we know, interfere with the conscience of any one; but co-laboring with the circumstances of life, many things are surely ordered for the carrying out of the divine purposes concerning us, and he will turn aside whatever would be to our injury.

HOW WILL IDENTITY BE CARRIED INTO THE SPIRIT LIFE?

We have been asked, "How will the new creature, the new soul, in the future be identified with the old creature, the old soul? In other words, How shall we know ourselves?" We reply, There is of course, nothing in nature which would explain this matter; for it is something that is entirely outside of anything belonging to nature. In this new creation God has given us something entirely distinct, new. The new creature is not an earthly creature, and nothing that is of the earthly being will ever have a part, to our understanding, in that new creation, either now or at any time. Nothing will carry over from the human to the divine, from the human to the spiritual.

Rehearsing some of the things we have said: The human being here is more or less depraved. He hears something about God, about the divine nature, about what sin is, about why it is undesirable, about the reconciliation which God has provided through Christ and the invitation given to some to become joint-heirs with Christ in his heavenly kingdom. He becomes conscious of all this through his ears, through his natural perceptions—or through human powers; for he has no other powers. He must have the hearing ear, else he would not heed the message from God at the present time.

Some have more of the hearing ear, some have less. The one who has more of the hearing ear would be more attentive, more pleased, when he would learn that God has some program for the salvation of sinners. The more depraved would have less of the hearing ear. The depraved person would be living on a low plane, therefore he would have less inclination to come to God, less of a disposition to listen to anything that God would have to communicate. Even as respects the class who do hear with greater or less distinctness, the adversary has dulled their ears to some extent with false "doctrines of devils."

But what we hear of God's gracious invitation to become associates with Christ Jesus rejoices our hearts. To us who have the hearing ear this is indeed good tidings. We say, 'I am glad that God has invited me to come back into his family, that he has provided for the covering of my imperfections. I am very much pleased also to know that there is a special invitation now to those who have the mind of Christ and desire to walk in his steps, and I gladly avail myself of God's loving arrangement. In harmony with this invitation I offer myself a living sacrifice.'

VARIOUS STEPS IN BECOMING A NEW CREATURE

Now I have been converted. How? I have turned around. From what? From the way of sin and of my own will to go the way of righteousness and the way of God's will. Was this conversion? Yes. This consecration of myself to God includes everything that belongs to me, all that I am and have—the human ego, the personality, with all its hopes, aims, possessions, in every shape and form.

Did this make me a new creature? No. It put me into the way that made me eligible to that position. The next step was the imputation of the merit of Jesus, to cover all my sins, all my imperfections. Did this make me a new creature? No. Of what use, then, was the imputation? It made me acceptable to God as a living sacrifice. The next thing in order was for God to accept the offering and to indicate his acceptance by the begetting of the holy Spirit. What this means we do not know. We are not wise enough to know. God foreknew our Lord as the Head of the Christ body, and he foreknew the class which is to form that body. And now, by coming in under the conditions which he has laid down, we are accepted of him as members of this anointed company, and become new creatures in Christ. The merit of Jesus still operates on our behalf, because of the imperfections of our mortal flesh. It is now our wedding garment, our bridal robe.

When we have become new creatures is the matter determined? Oh, no! It is only begun. I am to prove my devotion and loyalty, to show that the surrender of my will was a genuine thing. How can I do this? By contact with the truth I am exercised by it. If I have been in error in any way, and the error is clearly pointed out by the truth, my loyalty will be determined by the diligence with which I weigh and decide the matter. If I decide slowly, it means that I am a little obtuse, somewhat dull of hearing, or that I am slow to respond to the will of God. If I decide quickly between the truth and the error, decide for God, it will mean that I am loyal to God's will, his truth, that I am quick to hear his voice and prompt to obey; and I shall be all the more pleasing to him as a loyal, faithful child. If I should decide the matter slowly, would the Lord cut me off? No. Perhaps he would give me some chastisements in the school of Christ. "A bruised reed will he not break, and smoking flax will he not quench."—Isaiah 42:3; Matthew 12:20.

In one Bible picture the newly begotten ones are represented as embryos, not yet born. In another picture they are shown as children, not having attained the stature of manhood, but as growing in grace, knowledge and character. Either picture is a very beautiful one, but we cannot mix the two. We cannot imagine the unborn child growing in knowledge, etc.; and we cannot imagine a prenatal embryo as developing toward manhood. We perceive in the embryo picture that every unborn child must grow, and that it is dependent for growth on nourishment. If some accident should happen, if there should be some miscarriage, the embryo would never be born.

So we see that from the time we are begotten of the Spirit the embryo new creature must develop. The new creature there began its life. It then drew its sustenance from provisions already present. The human mother was the same woman before the embryo life began that she is after the child is begotten. So the Lord's provision and arrangement had supplied all the nourishment and sustenance for the new creature before the new life had its start.

From another viewpoint, this new creature in Christ is now the governing power in the individual life. It is the only existence that God recognizes and that we recognize; it is the only one that is to have any control over this mortal body. How does the new creature have the control? We answer, By the transfer of the will from human interests and domination to the doing of the Lord's will. God's will is now our will. We have no other, no contrary will. The clamorings of the flesh are to be ignored by this new will. As beings of a new nature we have superior rights in the human body, indeed—the only rights; for all the earthly rights imputed to us through the merit of Jesus are relinquished as a sacrifice, that we may gain the heavenly rights, the spiritual blessings. Having accepted our sacrifice God does not give us a new body in which to operate. We have still to make use of the same mortal body with its weaknesses and blemishes.

THE HUMAN BODY OUR SERVANT

What are we to do with this mortal body? We are to see that it is kept under; we are to browbeat it and compel its submission to the new ruling power in our lives. Moreover, we are determined to make this body an active servant to the new creature, to render material assistance in ministering to its growth and in serving the brethren, who are running in this same narrow way. Some might say that we are treating our body unkindly; but from the divine standpoint we are treating it as wisely as possible, in order to get from it the best service for God. If it is God's will that we undertake some great work for him, we will certainly put the body through a course of training to this end.

We say to our body, 'You are my body only for the time being. I, the new creature, purpose to use you in the service of my Lord.' The old creature, the mortal flesh may demur, and may say, 'I have some rights.' We answer, 'You have no rights. They are all relinquished; that is, what rights you may have thought you had; for in reality you were under the condemnation of death and never had any rights. The rights imputed to you when you were offered to God, were granted only that they might be sacrificed with Christ. You are legally dead now, and have nothing to say in the matter. I shall use my judgment as to what you shall or shall not do.'

If I should yield to the desires of the old creature, it would prosper in its aims and projects, and the new creature would be puny and weak in courage, in strength and in every way. The new creature must control all the interests of the body, granting it only what is best for the development and the interests of the new life. The old self-life, reckoned dead, must be daily crucified until the end of the narrow way. It must die of neglect. The new will must admit of no compromise. Thus we shall grow spiritually and become built up into Christ our living Head; and the stronger we become spiritually, the sooner shall we be ready for our change. This change is the birth of the new creature in the first resurrection. It is the receiving of our new spiritual bodies. Not one atom of this mortal body will ever get into the new condition beyond the vail.

This new creature that now lives in a mortal body feeds not upon natural bread, but upon "every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." (Matthew 4:4) But as God has a work for the new creature to do while in this mortal body, this earthen vessel, I am to take reasonable care of my body; for it is the only instrument of operation which the new creature now possesses. If I so misuse my body as to unfit it for service, I would not be exercising the spirit of a sound mind and would not be in harmony with the will of God. But the new creature is to have the control, to dominate the servant and not permit the servant to dominate him.

OUR INDIVIDUALITY, OR IDENTITY, PERMANENT

If we continue faithful to our contract with the Lord we shall soon have new spiritual bodies, and then we shall be new souls. But our ego, our personality, our individuality, our identity, will form a distinctive part of the new soul. It is really the ego, the personality, that makes the soul. The body alone would not make a soul, whether a natural body or a spiritual body. The elements of which the natural body is composed might be disintegrated into their original condition, and would then form no part of the soul.—Genesis 2:7.

Soul is that which comes down from father to child. Adam gave soul, being, to his children. At birth each of these became a soul, a being. This spark of life has come on down through the ages, from father to child. In the resurrection of the new creature, the soul, the being, composed of the new will and the character which has been developed, is transferred to new conditions and becomes a new soul. It has an altogether different body, with new powers and greatly enlarged capacity. This will be a body through which the developed new creature may fully express all the desires and aspirations of its nature. Nevermore will there be discord between the mind and the body. All will be perfect harmony and concord. All our longings will be fulfilled to the highest degree.

"Can you explain to us," it may be asked, "how this new life will be transferred to the new body?" We cannot. In the case of our Lord Jesus we have the statement that the spirit-being left the heavenly condition, came to earthly conditions and became a man, subject to human limitations; and we have the assurance that this same One who came into the world, who died, arose from the dead and who ascended into heaven, was to come again in the glory of the Father. (Matthew 16:27) It is the same ego that came at the second advent. It has changed its status, in that it now has vastly enlarged powers, in that the ego is now operating in a glorious spirit body of the highest nature—the divine. This ego had a spiritual body at first; it had a human body afterward. It has now a new divine body, superior to all. But the ego, the individuality, has persisted under both these changes. So our ego, our personality, is to pass from this earthly body and be given a new body.

The power by which all this can be accomplished is divine power. If anybody can explain to us what were the component elements of the first soul, if he can show what composes the spark of life or what it is, perhaps we could explain the process of the creation of new creatures in Christ. Or if any one can explain what makes the germ of wheat grow, how it gets life, perhaps we could explain how the new creature is a new life-germ, how it grows, and how the identity, the individuality, is preserved and carried into the heavenly condition. We must trust in divine power for this whole matter, as respects both the resurrection of the church and the resurrection of the world. Whoever doubts divine power cannot believe in the resurrection.

PHILOSOPHY OF RESURRECTION INEXPLICABLE

We cannot imagine, for instance, just how it will be that Moses or Abraham or anyone else of the remote past could ever be resurrected so that he could know himself, could read the story of his life in the Bible and remember that it was all true. How that can be only God knows. You do not know; I do not. We believe it because God says it. It is just as difficult to understand about the resurrection of a man and the bringing of him back to life in a fresh, new body as it is to understand how the new creature, the new soul, can be brought into its new body, and can still have its identity and know himself and all that he has experienced in the earth-life.

We are hoping soon to get one of these spirit bodies. When we get it we shall know all about it; for the Scriptures declare that then we shall know even as we are known. (1 Corinthians 13:12) We might find illustrations to help us in this matter—as when a record is taken on the phonograph. Something, a certain vibration of air, went out of the mouth. This force made little indentations upon the cylinder of wax. Now, then, if we know how to reproduce the human voice thus, it gives us a hint how God with his unlimited powers could preserve everything recorded by the convolutions of our brains, all that we call memory, how it could be preserved absolutely—everything by which we could know ourselves in the future. We do not know ourselves now by the number of pounds weight we register or by the cut of our beard or by our clothing. We know ourselves by something in our mind. But if our reason were gone, if our memory were gone, then we would not know ourselves.

God, who has made us new creatures, is the all-powerful One who knows how to preserve our identity, to reproduce our memory in our new bodies. And the more we come to know about him and the length and breadth and height and depth of his wisdom, power and love, the more we are able to appreciate all he has told us, and the stronger is our confidence in him. It is to the wise a glorious thing that God should promise a resurrection. The world cannot understand it; to them it is foolishness. They cannot believe in a resurrection from the dead. Therefore they cannot have the joy that we have through the exercise of faith. Soon will our faith be swallowed up in sight. Then all the mysteries that puzzle us now will be made clear; they will flee away as mist before the morning sun.

PERFECT THROUGH SUFFERING

If he, the holy, harmless, sinless One,
Must needs be perfected through suffering,
Wouldst thou then seek to tread a path less steep
To reach heaven's goal and win thy Father's smile?
Ah, no! My soul, when pain and sorrow cross
Thy threshold, be thou swift to welcome them,
Then whisper low within thy heart of hearts,
"Another opportunity to show
My King how much I love, what I can bear
For him!" And as the weary days go by,
Cling closer to the hand that wounds thee so,
Lean harder on the breast of him who loves
Thee, even as he loved his only Son;
And pray, "Lord, spare me not, burn out all dross,
Let nothing but the purest gold remain,
And help me in the hottest fire hold still!
Do thou, great Lapidist, grind on, that I
May perfectly reflect the glorious light
Of love divine! Oh, fit me for some place Within thy royal diadem to shine!"

N. Y. PRESS COMMENTS ON THE RECENT TRIAL

The following articles from the press will be of interest to the dear friends who have learned through the July 1st WATCH TOWER what verdict was returned by the jury in the trial of our brethren here. We accept this verdict as of the Lord's permission, realizing it to be one of the "all things" which work together for good to them that put their trust in God. "Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid."

Commenting upon the outcome of the case, the Editor of the New York "Evening Post" said on June 22:

"'In the opinion of the court the religious propaganda which these defendants have vigorously advocated and spread throughout the nation, as well as among our allies, is a greater danger than a division of the German army. . . . A person preaching religion usually has much influence and if he is sincere he is all the more effective. This aggravates rather than mitigates the wrong they have done.'

"After uttering these words Judge H. B. Howe, of the United States District Court in Brooklyn, sentenced the religious persons before him to twenty years each in prison, with one exception. It was necessary, he said, to make an example of those who sincerely taught this religion, which, like that of the Mennonites and the Quakers, and many another sect, forbids the taking up of arms. They were guilty plainly of having urged men to follow what they considered the teachings of the Lord and to apply literally the commandment, 'Thou shalt not kill.' So the jury could do nothing less than find them guilty of having violated the statutes of the country, whatever may be the correctness or incorrectness of their attitude toward the moral and religious law. We trust that teachers of religion everywhere will take notice of this judge's opinion that teaching any religion save that which is absolutely in accord with statute laws is a grave crime which is intensified if, being a minister of the Gospel, you should still happen to be sincere. There is no doubt that Judge Howe made his sentences severe enough; they are about double those imposed by the Kaiser upon the Socialists who have been trying to upset his wicked regime, and three times longer than many sentences imposed upon would-be regicides."

The New York "Tribune" of June 22, said:

"Joseph F. Rutherford and six of the other seven Russellites convicted of violation of the Espionage Act were sentenced to twenty years each in the Atlanta penitentiary yesterday by Judge Howe, in the United States District Court, in Brooklyn. Sentence of the eighth defendant, Giovanni de Cecca, was deferred. His companions, each with a pink carnation in his lapel, marched out of court to start their sentence.

"'This is the happiest day of my life,' said Mr. Rutherford, on his way from the court to the jail. 'To serve earthly punishment for the sake of one's religious belief is one of the greatest privileges a man could have.'

"In imposing sentence the judge declared that in his opinion the religious propaganda advocated and spread throughout the nation as well as among our allies was 'a greater danger than a division of the German army.'

"'If they had taken guns and swords,' he said, and joined the German army the harm they could have done would have been insignificant compared with the results of their propaganda. A person preaching religion usually has much influence, and if he is sincere he is all the more effective. This aggravates rather than mitigates the wrong they have done.

"'Therefore, as the only prudent thing to do with such persons, the court has concluded that the punishment should be severe. The sentence is that the defendants, Joseph F. Rutherford, William E. Van Amburgh, Robert J. Martin, Fred H. Robison, George H. Fisher, Clayton J. Woodworth and A. Hugh Macmillan, serve a term of twenty years in the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., on each of the four counts of the indictment, but that the sentences commence and run concurrently.'

"The defendants retained self-possession that has characterized their conduct throughout the entire trial. As the judge's words fell on their ears not a shade of emotion crossed their faces.

"One of the strangest demonstrations that the marshal's office in the Brooklyn Federal Court has ever seen was held by the families and intimate friends of the convicted men soon after the prisoners had been taken to the grand jury room. Messengers were sent out for fruit, candy and sandwiches, and after a short prayer meeting a gala feast was spread. Following this the whole company made the old building ring with the strains of 'Blest Be the Tie That Binds.'

"'It is all God's will,' they told each other with faces almost radiant. 'Some day the world will know what all this means. Meanwhile let us be thankful for the grace of God that has sustained the dear brothers and sisters during their trial and look forward to the great day that is to come.'

"Counsel for the defence announced that they would take immediate steps to appeal the case to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. Jesse Fuller, one of the defence's attorneys, made every legal effort yesterday morning before the sentence was imposed to have the verdict set aside. Every motion was denied by Judge Howe, and one of the motions made on the ground that the 'ascendency of the mind of the court had affected the freedom of the witnesses, the defendants and the counsel for the defence,' evoked from the court a severe reprimand."

LETTERS FROM THE BRETHREN

PREPARATION FOR FUTURE SERVICE

DEARLY BELOVED BROTHER RUTHERFORD:—

We heard this morning of the result of the trial, and hasten to assure you, and all the other dear brethren concerned, of our love and sympathy with you and them. We know that you nor they have the least bit of sympathy with Germany and her devil-possessed ruler, and no jury can make you a traitor. We were not at all surprised at the result, as the report of the proceedings from day to day showed that your conviction was a foregone conclusion. Not only so, but for forty years our dear departed Pastor pointed out to us from the Scriptures just the condition of things which has come to pass, including the prediction (based upon the Word of God) that at the end of this age, the Lord's people would be persecuted and treated as traitors, anarchists, etc. If we had nothing more to prove that we correctly understand the Bible and that we have the TRUTH, the coming about of matters exactly as Brother Russell pointed out from the Scriptures would be sufficient to convince us. We know that we are in the hands of our heavenly Father; and that while he does not approve of injustice, he nevertheless permits it, because he sees that we need these experiences to chisel, polish and prepare us to become the judges of the world in the next age. Men may sneer at us for holding what seems to them such a fantastic idea, but they will in due time find out that we knew what we were saying. Then we shall render to them just judgment along the lines of mercy and love.

Again assuring you and the other dear brethren of our continued love and prayers, we beg to subscribe ourselves,

Your brother and sister in the Lord,

W. W. M., and R. B. M.—Fla.

RESOLUTIONS OF SYMPATHY AND LOVE

DEAR BRETHREN:—

I have the honor to inclose herewith a resolution by the Washington Ecclesia; also another resolution addressed to Messrs. Sparks and Fuller, Attorneys-at-Law, Brooklyn, N. Y., with the request that you cause the same to be delivered to them. These resolutions were passed by unanimous vote.

Yours in the sufferings of the Lord Jesus,

J. A. D., Secy.

A RESOLUTION

RESOLVED by the Brethren in Christ at Washington, D. C., in meeting assembled, Sunday evening, June 23, 1918, that we do tender to our brethren in the Bethel Home and Brooklyn Tabernacle, bereaved of seven of their foremost fellow-members by permission of our heavenly Father, our loving sympathy in their sorrow and their loss; and that we do assure them of our continual prayers on their behalf and of our continued loyalty and support, and of our desire for a continued service by the pilgrim brethren as long as the Lord permits.

A LETTER TO THE BETHEL FAMILY

DEARLY BELOVED IN CHRIST:—

The peace of God be multiplied unto you, and his blessings abundantly be your portion! I think of you often and pray for you much; and I am sure that our Father is blessing you.

Prison life seems strange; and yet every experience is attended with joy, since we look at all such from the heavenly viewpoint. Truly now we can sing:

"Fade, fade, each earthly joy,
Jesus is mine!"

In fact, there are now no earthly joys; but we are looking with joyful anticipation to our gathering home. Seven days in jail changed our appearance somewhat and reminded us that the process of death is working in our flesh. On the eighth day we were removed to a prison with more light and freedom. We now have seven cabins (cells) on a corridor shut out from other prisoners, and we can have fellowship together all the day. At night, when the great iron doors close and each one is locked securely in his cell, we call out to each other and discuss God's precious Word. Then we silently talk with the Lord; and we talk to him about you and all the dear sheep, and beg him to protect you.

If the Lord so wills we would be glad to come to you once more and try to aid you in some manner; and to this end we have hoped that bail may be granted to us. Our Father's will be done! We often feel in a strait betwixt two—whether we would prefer to depart or to come and serve you a season before we go home. His will be done! I feel sure that all these experiences are ripening the church preparatory to the final ingathering. Your letters and letters from the dear ones elsewhere show how sweetly they are yielding to the fire that is consuming the sacrifice. This brings joy to my heart. I count it all joy to be privileged to have some part in filling up "that which is behind of the sufferings of Christ for his body's sake, which is the church." I thank our dear Father for being so good as to send six brethren with me, that we may have these privileges together.

Several years ago it was my pleasure to travel over some of the land which St. Paul traversed while ministering to the saints. I also visited the prison where he was confined at Rome. Now we are having some like experiences in prison; and our Father has permitted it, and will overrule it all to our good. As we now read the experiences of St. Paul they have a keener interest for us. Only if now we can faithfully finish our course, we shall join the Apostle and Brother Russell, and then see the Lord! Weep not for us, beloved; indeed, I am sure that you do not, but that you rejoice with us. If I could come down once a day and look over the place and see that you are all safe and happy, I think I should feel better. But then I wonder if the Lord does not permit Brother Russell to look about Bethel daily. I know the Lord has made all necessary provision.

Let not your dear hearts be troubled, neither fear what man may do unto you. I hardly think the Government powers will attempt to disturb you in the home or in the office. Stay by the ship, trusting in the Lord. Only permit me to suggest that you be calm and do as little talking about the trouble as is possible. Go quietly about your work, but keep at it until the Lord says: "It is enough!" From what I hear I judge that these trials are drawing all of the Lord's dear ones closer together; and such should be the case. We therefore expect that every one at the Bethel will "in love serve one another." Remember the admonition of St. Paul to avoid those who cause divisions, and who have sought to destroy the flock of the Lord. The time is now here for each one to set his house in order. The King is at the door.

Do all you can to encourage the dear sheep of the flock. Comfort them with the sweet promises of an early and glorious home-coming. Never have I loved you so much as now. I miss you—and that is putting it lightly. How sweet it will be to gather around our Father's throne and rejoice with joy unspeakable forever more!

While it is true that we know not what awaits us, I think there may be a short season of freedom and some more service for his dear people. That is all according to his will. His will be done! Your messages to the brethren have been greatly appreciated. May the Lord reward you richly! Know of a certainty that we greatly love you. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you one and all.

Your brother and servant by his grace.

J. F. RUTHERFORD.

PLEDGE HEARTY SUPPORT AND LOYAL CO-OPERATION

DEARLY BELOVED BETHEL FAMILY:—

At a special meeting of the Boston Ecclesia held on Monday, June 24, when about four hundred were in attendance, it was unanimously voted that a committee be appointed to express the sentiment and sympathy of the Ecclesia to you in this your hour of sorrow. While we fully realize your greatest source of comfort comes from the Great Comforter, we also know that the sympathy of kindred minds of the same mystical body is, by the grace of God, a help and consolation in times of affliction.

As it has seemed to be the good pleasure of our heavenly Father in recently removing from active executive service the officers of our Society who have so faithfully served us in the past, the Ecclesia at Boston very heartily, as well as unanimously, indorse the selection of the brethren in whose hands the matter of continuing the harvest work has been intrusted. We believe the WATCH TOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY and kindred organizations to be the Father's only channel for dispensing the meat in due season for the household of faith, and we pledge our loyal support and hearty co-operation.

Yours in the name of our dear Redeemer.

THE CHURCH AT BOSTON.

LOVING SYMPATHY FOR THE BRETHREN

DEAR BRETHREN PRISONERS OF JESUS CHRIST:—

Greetings in our glorious Bridegroom's name. I cannot refrain from writing to you and sending abundance of Christian love to you all in bonds. How gladly would I share your position if it were my opportunity, but I can share and do share part of your sufferings mentally! My heart has been sick when I think of the dear saintly heads that will have the prison pillows to lie upon; but it will soon be exchanged for the Master's breast. What can I say, dear brethren, that could comfort you but assure you of my prayers hourly on your behalf, and to promise I will strive more faithfully to fight on and meet you all in the kingdom of God.

My heart goes out in sympathy to the dear help-mates. May God who alone can comfort and sustain these dear sisters, yea, and the Bible House brethren, too!

Again assuring you of our love and prayers on your behalf, I remain

Your sister in Christ Jesus, MRS. W. T. H.—Ont.

OUR DELIVERANCE DRAWETH NIGH!

"The night is far spent, the day is at hand; let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light." —Romans 13:12.

We can see only one way in which the Apostle could have said in his day that the night was far spent. He evidently recognized the period of time since sin had entered the world as a time of darkness, of night. In proportion as man became alienated from God, the darkness became more intense. As sin abounded, many could not see what was right and what was wrong. This condition still prevails. So far have they fallen from the likeness of their Creator that their minds are benighted. The Apostle says that because men did not choose "to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind." (Romans 1:28) Their minds became darkened, unable to distinguish right from wrong.

St. Paul tells us that all this is what we might expect from a reign of sin—a reign of darkness. Satan's opposition to God made him a leader of those men who would not have God's way; and all down the centuries these have been the majority. In their fallen condition their minds were perverted, and they became an easy prey to the wiles of the great adversary. This darkness, which the Apostle styles night, has been a period of six thousand years. Now, however, we realize that we are in the dawning of a new dispensation. Darkness is giving place to light in matters relating not only to the church, but also to the world. If it was true in the day of the Apostle that the night was far spent, how much more forceful is the expression in our day!

SURELY ALL SHOULD BE AWAKE NOW!

The light of the glorious Sun of Righteousness is even now breaking over the hill-tops. It cannot shine upon the whole world until all the members of the church of Christ are glorified and exalted to power in the Messianic Kingdom. Then the darkness of sin, ignorance, superstition and wrong-doing will be dispersed.

In the verse preceding our text the Apostle points out to the Church at Rome great responsibility saying: "Knowing the time, that now it is high time to awake out of sleep; for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed." But how much more significant are these words to us of today, than to them! The Christian is to realize that the whole world has been asleep, in a sort of stupor respecting the highest, best and noblest things. When the child of God gets his eyes partially opened, he begins to weigh and measure matters after a different fashion from that of his previous course. As his eyes open still more widely, everything takes on a new aspect. He is able more than ever before to estimate rightly the value of things of this life and finds them not worthy to be compared with the glorious things which belong to the life eternal. He sees that for six thousand years the world has been groaning under the bondage of sin and Satan, but that the blessed morning of the great Sabbath of hallowed rest and refreshment is about to dawn.

As the Christian realizes all this, he should feel disposed to arouse himself, shake himself thoroughly from the dust of ignorance, superstition, blindness and sordidness, and to live more fully in harmony with the glorious hopes which he now entertains—living for the new era, the new dispensation. Instructed more fully from the Word of God, he will not expect his salvation, his deliverance, except in connection with the second presence—the parousia—of our Lord Jesus and the establishment of his kingdom. He will see a new force, beauty and meaning in the words of the Apostle Peter: "Wherefore, gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and set your hope perfectly on the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ."—1 Peter 1:13, R. V.

REIGN OF RIGHTEOUSNESS AT THE DOOR

The thought of the second presence of the Lord was continually before the Apostles; and our Lord evidently designed that it should be a constant incentive to the members of his church throughout the entire age. This undoubtedly, was one reason why he did not particularly explain the length of time that would intervene before the setting up of the kingdom. From God's standpoint it would be a short interval; and even from the human standpoint it would be short to each individual, who would have only the few remaining years of his life wherein to make ready for the glorious things of the future; and "in death there is no remembrance."

As St. Paul looked back and perceived that in his day about 4178 years of the reign of sin and gross darkness, upon the world had passed, he could realize that truly the night was far spent, that the blessed day of deliverance was drawing nigh. And now we, who live in the dawn of this great day, are most highly favored by the Lord. We can see the particulars regarding this time, which were obscure in the Apostle's time. We are standing at the very threshold of the Golden Age! As soon as the harvest of this Gospel age shall be gathered, the work of change, the transformation from the reign of evil to the reign of righteousness, will take place; and it is nigh, even at the door. Surely it is now high time that all who are truly the Lord's should awake out of sleep, cast off all "the works of darkness," and put on the "whole armour of God that we shall be able to withstand in the evil day."—Ephesians 6:13.

"ARMOR OF LIGHT" ESPECIALLY NEEDED TODAY

Whatever will not stand the fullest investigation in the light of this day of Christ, whatever will not win approval in the new dispensation now coming in, should be promptly renounced by all who hope for the Lord's favor as his children, as disciples of Christ. If we really are Christ's we belong to the new era, not to the old. We should therefore live in accordance with our citizenship and with our responsibility to the prince of light and in opposition to the prince of darkness.

We are forewarned by the Apostle that this period of time in which the change from the dominion of the "prince of this world" to that of the prince of glory takes place, will be an especially "evil day"—a period in which all the children of light will be crucially tested. It is a day that is to "try every man's work, of what sort it is." It is to be a day of fiery trial, through which only the gold, silver and precious stones will pass unscathed, in which all the wood, hay and stubble of error, sin, human tradition and falsehood will be entirely destroyed. We are even now in the fires of this day, in the time when the wood, hay and stubble are being consumed; when higher criticism, evolution, Christian science, hypnotism (whether known under its own name or whether called mind cures), etc., are devouring as a flame all the faith structure of those children of God who have not continued faithful to the Lord, and who, therefore, have not been kept by his power, through the Word and through his providences.

"WALK AS CHILDREN OF LIGHT"

All who are truly the Lord's should "walk honestly, as in the day." We are not yet fully in the day; but we belong to the day, and are therefore to live as nearly as possible up to the perfect standards of the future. So to live will mean self-denial. It will mean that we shall be misunderstood by the world and all who have its spirit. It will mean that we shall be thought foolish, that we shall be considered enemies—not so much by those who are in gross darkness as by those who profess to be the Lord's people, to be children of the light, but who really prefer darkness and error to light and truth.

We are inclined to lay special stress on the word, "honestly," used by the Apostle, and believe that he used it advisedly and in a particular sense. As we look about us today, we see that dishonesty is very prevalent. Not merely in the world, where we expect to find a certain amount of duplicity, misrepresentation and deception, and to see people passing for what they are not, do we find this kind of dishonesty very prevalent, but amongst professing Christians. We have even known professed ministers of the Gospel to boast of their dishonesty—to declare that they never have believed the creed which they have professed to believe and which they have vowed that they would teach. Intelligent ministers of all denominations are preaching what they do not believe, standing for creeds and confessions of faith which misrepresent their own sentiments. They are acting dishonestly; they are searing their consciences; they are putting themselves into conditions where they cannot make progress into the light of truth; for surely God does not purpose to have dishonest people in his elect Church. If these do not very quickly change and become honest, they will certainly have their portion with the hypocrites; for it is the hypocrites who are dishonest.

HONESTY A BASIC TRAIT OF CHARACTER

Christians, above all other people in the world, should be honest and sincere in their professions. They should be honest in their dealings with their neighbors, with their brethren, and especially in their confessions respecting their God and their faith. This test must be met by every one who names the name of Christ. Those who love the favor of men more than the favor of God, who would rather confess and profess a lie than to espouse an unpopular cause—even when they know it is God's cause—will be given up to their lie. Such are surely proving themselves unfit for the kingdom, unfit to reign with Christ, whatever else they may eventually attain, if later through stripes and humiliation they take the proper course.

This was the very essence of the Apostle's declaration in his second letter to the church at Thessalonica, when he spoke prophetically of this present "evil day," and the great trial that would at this time come upon the church. He declared of those who would prove unfaithful that God would "send them strong delusions that they should believe the lie" —because they were not honest—because they did not obey the truth in the love of it, but acted deceitful, hypocritically. He says of these that God will send them delusions in order "that they may be condemned"—not damned, as in the common version of the Bible—that they may be condemned to suffer the consequences of their dishonorable and disloyal course. They will come to the place where they will be greatly humiliated before those whose esteem and favor they have so sought to retain. They will be seen by all in their true garb, stripped of their cloak of hypocrisy.

Great will be their shame and humiliation then. Through tribulation and in difficulty must they retrace their steps if they would attain eternal life, would come back to the favor of God and of their fellows. But it will be a great blessing if they are restored and led into the way of life, even through very severe chastisements and afflictions. We may well rejoice that so soon all error, dishonesty and fraud, of whatever nature, will be exposed and dethroned, and that truth and righteousness will be enthroned in their place.

STARS TWINKLING IN THE NIGHT

But there has not been utter darkness at any time through all this long reign of evil—not the blackness of night. Throughout the past six thousand years there have been certain lights—like stars in the night-time. During the Jewish dispensation, the Law Covenant as a moon reflected the light of the glorious Sun of Righteousness, later to dawn upon the dark world. Our Lord Jesus, when he came, was the bright star that heralded the coming morning; for his sacrificial work made the morning possible and ensured its dawning.

Throughout the Gospel age true Christians have been lights shining in a dark place. The light that now shines from the Lord's true people is not appreciated by the world in general; for it is a spiritual light. The light of the law given by Moses to the Jews was one which the world could better understand. It was an earthly light; for it gave earthly rewards and earthly punishments. The world cannot understand the light-bearers of the Gospel age. They say: "If these were children of God, and he were really caring for them, he would not permit them to have so many difficulties and have such a hard time as they apparently have. They do not have any easier time than the world, whom they call sinners; and often their lot seems harder. How is this a manifestation of the Lord's special favor?"

But the Word of our God makes all this plain to those who trust in him. There we learn that this is not the time to receive the reward. While those who live a holy life do not have a very peaceable time as respects their outward circumstances and surroundings, nevertheless the peace of God is within, ruling in their hearts. It is a peace that is wholly independent of outward conditions.

We know that our own righteousness is but as filthy rags. We know that our depravities, while covered by the robe of our Savior's righteousness, must gradually be purged away, or we could never be fit for the kingdom. All this we see; but the world and worldly Christians do not see it. So we must not expect to be understood until the new age with its blessed light is ushered in and all the vapors of darkness are dispelled. Then the vail of unbelief and ignorance will be removed from the eyes of all. Meantime, we have a responsibility which those who cannot see do not have, and we could not excuse in ourselves the manner of life which seems reasonable or excusable in others. We know a better way. How thankful we should be that the Lord has graciously opened our ears to the melodies of heaven, which none others can hear!

This "armor of light" which we wear is composed of various pieces, each one of which is essential to our proper protection, especially in this "evil day." First we wear the robe of Christ's righteousness, "the wedding garment." Then, under the other figure, we wear the "armor of righteousness," the "armor of light," which represents not only our standing in Christ, but our spiritual attainments in him. We are to have on the "breastplate of righteousness," and must carry "the shield of faith." We must have "our feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace." We must surely wear also "the helmet," the covering of our intellect from the assaults of this "evil day"; for we need this protection now as never before. We must also have "our loins girt about with truth." We cannot serve acceptably and effectively if girded to service with the girdle of error and dishonest profession. We must have truth in both doctrine and practise, in both head and heart.

We do not understand that either the putting on of the Christian armor or the putting off of the works of darkness is an instantaneous matter. We should put these dark works off as rapidly as possible, however—as rapidly as we are able to see our imperfections and defects. A Christian who has had twenty years' experience ought to be able to do much better than one who has just started in the way—who has but just begun to scrutinize his conduct—his thoughts, words and doings. It seems to take some longer to make this transfer than others. We are all endeavoring, if we are faithful, to put off the works of darkness altogether, and to put on securely the whole armor, seeking day by day to put on more and more kindness, gentleness, meekness, humility, love.

THE TRIUMPH OF LOVE

In the chapter preceding the one from which our text is taken, St. Paul has been giving some wholesome counsel concerning the proper course of the Lord's people in the everyday duties of life. His advice seems to cover a wide range of the little vexatious cares and trials that every one must meet, and to instruct us how to triumph in them through the mighty power of love. He evidently thought of the thin veneer of worldly politeness which often covers deep-seated selfishness, and showed that the politeness and kindness of manner manifested by the Lord's people should be only the genuine article. He says: "Let love be without dissimulation [pretense, hypocrisy]. Abhor that which is evil [all shams and insincere pretensions]; cleave to that which is good. Be kindly affectioned one to another; in honor preferring one another." He remembered the temptations and vexations of life, of our business relations and intercourse with the world and of its natural tendency to engross time, energy and thought.

The Apostle also remembered the poverty and losses of some of the Lord's dear people, and counselled sympathy and hospitality—"distributing to the necessity of the saints, given to hospitality." He tells us that we should "rejoice with them that rejoice, and weep with them that weep"; that we should "mind not high things, but condescend to men of low estate"; that we should "be not wise in our own conceits"; that we should "bless them that persecute" us, and "recompense no man evil for evil"; that we should "provide things honest in the sight of all men"—not only the brethren, but the world also. Thinking of the numerous trials of patient endurance arising from contact with those of undisciplined hearts, he urged, "If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men. Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves, but rather give place to wrath [get out of its way, do not allow it to overtake you]; for it is written, "Vengeance is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord." Therefore, "if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink; for in so doing, thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head." You will make him ashamed of his conduct as he sees its contrast with yours.

Further, he says, "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good." Do not allow the trials and annoyances, or the misunderstandings which sometimes bring us acute pain, to make you sour or vindictive or cold or unsympathetic; nor the more favorable or prosperous circumstances to make you proud or highminded or wise in your own conceits; for the Lord may try us in both ways as tests of character.

He also reminds us that we should be law-abiding citizens, "rendering to all their dues; tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear [respectful deference or submission] to whom fear; honor to whom honor." Finally, he declares that if there be any other commandment, it is briefly summed up in the one word—love. He urges that we be diligent in the cultivation of this supreme quality of character—this all-embracing grace—"knowing the season," knowing that the time is short in which to build up ourselves in this God-like and Christ-like character. We surely have not a moment to lose if we desire to be approved of our God.

If the Apostle could say to the saints of his day that "now it is high time to awake out of sleep," with how much greater force do his words apply in these closing days of this Gospel age! In the clear light of unfolding time-prophecy, we see that we are now living at the very end of the reign of sin and death; that the night of sorrow, pain and tears is almost over; that the glorification of the last members of the Christ body is very soon to be completed. Yes, beloved, "the night is far spent" [about ended] and the glorious day of deliverance and blessing is at hand. Even now the first faint streaks of dawn appear. Then let us cast away every encumbrance, everything that would hinder us in the slightest degree in running successfully our glorious race. Let us press on with renewed vigor, looking neither to the right nor to the left, but keeping our eyes "fixed on the glory of the prize," and soon, please God, the victory shall be ours!

EVERLASTING BLESSINGS

"In the Lord Jehovah trusting, everlasting strength have we;
He himself our sun, our glory, everlasting light shall be;
Everlasting life is ours, purchased by the life laid down;
And our heads, oft bowed and weary, everlasting joy shall crown.

"We shall dwell with Christ forever, when the shadows flee away,
In the everlasting glory of the everlasting day.
Unto thee, beloved Savior, everlasting thanks belong,
Everlasting adoration, everlasting praise and song."

JOSEPH AND HIS BRETHREN

"Come near to me, I pray you. . . . Be not grieved nor angry with yourselves. . . . . Haste, and bring down my father hither."—Genesis 45:4, 5, 13.

What story in all the writings of all the nations compares in simple pathos with that of Joseph and his brethren! Who can read this tale of ancient time and far-off land without tears starting to the eye! Yet this fragment of Hebrew history is not only a beautiful story, but also a possible prototype of things soon to come, wherein the joyous tears of millions of people may bring home to the hearts of all true Christians the same, yes, greater heights of joy than that which moved the hearts of the first Israelitish family. When the whole Israel of God, the true Israel, draw near together, "seeing eye to eye" throughout the length and the breadth of the earth, the final drama of the Gospel age will have reached its climax, preparatory to the grand ingathering into the glories of the kingdom.

The story of Joseph's reunion with his brethren finds its setting at a time when "the famine was sore in the land." There had been seven years of plenteous harvest, and food for all had been gathered in Egypt; but the brethren of Joseph were dwelling in a land where such provision had not been made. Already there had been two years of famine, and in the five years to come it seemed impossible for any one to survive the dearth of bread.

These facts may have been designed to picture circumstances in the present time. Joseph's brethren, dwelling with their father Jacob in the land of Canaan, had all professed faith in God, and had dwelt in abundance. Now, too, God's children have had an abundance of spiritual food, the Word of God, up to the time of the closing of the door of membership in the bride of Christ—at or about the Passover of 1918. Abundantly did the rain, the present truth, come down from heaven; the truth of God descended from the spiritual heavens upon all believers everywhere. Suddenly, about Passover, certain divinely permitted circumstances stopped the rains from heaven; and then the famine set in, a sore famine for the hearing of the Word of God. The only real spiritual food anywhere is that within the storehouse of the antitypical Joseph—Christ, Head and body, on both sides the vail; and the only way to obtain this food is by meeting the conditions set down by Christ.

BENJAMIN, TYPE OF THE GREAT COMPANY

In the picture God seems to be depicted in two offices; as Pharaoh, king over Joseph (the little flock), and as Jacob, father of Joseph and of Benjamin (the great company) and of the other brothers (the professedly justified), including Judah, a class of believers not spirit-begotten but specially loving toward Benjamin, the great company. (Genesis 44:14-34) If we apply the picture to our day, the time may be regarded as between a year and a half and two years after the spiritual famine period began (about April, 1918), or October, 1919, to June, 1920. The countries typify, not places but conditions of the classes involved. Joseph in kingly power represents Christ, Head and body, partly beyond and partly this side the vail, also in kingly power. (Psalm 149:5-9) Canaan pictures the condition of professed relationship to God; while Egypt appears to represent in some respects the kingdom conditions since the closing of the door to the high calling. As in all pictures of this kind, not every detail may be expected to apply. In any interpretation of this nature it must always be understood as tentative, until actual experience has proven or disproven the correctness of the application.

The picture relates to the approaching ingathering of the great company and other believers into present truth. (Jeremiah 40:7-12) The Greater than Joseph has been recognized as bringing about changes since 1874, but he has not been known as Christ; nor have the body or feet members still this side the vail been known. "And when Joseph [Christ] came home, they brought him the present [consecration] which was in their hand [power] into the house, and bowed themselves to him to the earth"—worshiped Christ the Head, in their trouble and distress.—Genesis 43:26.

During Christ's presence he has been searching, judging, the hearts of believers as to their vital relationship to our Father: "And he asked them of their welfare [religiously] and said, Is your father [our Father] well [Is it well with you toward our Father], the old man [the Ancient of Days] of whom ye spake [preached]? Is he in good health [a living reality to you]? Then they answered, Thy servant our father is in good health [It is well with us toward him]. He is yet alive. And they bowed down their heads, and made obeisance [worshiped Christ the Head]."—Genesis 43:27, 28.

Christ, Head and body, has considered the great company (Benjamin) very favorably, and has often spoken of God's graciousness to them: "And he lifted up his eyes, and saw his brother Benjamin [the great company], his mother's son [both children of the Covenant of Grace], and said: Is this your younger brother, of whom ye spake unto me? [All believers have in prayer to Christ made special mention of the spirit-begotten great company]. And he said, God be gracious [show special grace and favor] unto thee, my son."—Genesis 43:29.

MILLIONS SOON TO RECEIVE THE TRUTH

The time will soon have come for the blessing of the great company. The feet members of Christ will yearn in love for the revealment of themselves to the spiritually-minded, but not altogether faithful Christians, soon to be released from blindness and from religious bondage. This class will be the little brother Benjamin of the Joseph class. The two classes started together as babes and children in Christ. It will be in troublous times; but the tears of the little flock will be the tears of a holy joy, shed in the secret place, the Holy: "And Joseph made haste, for his bowels [heart affections] did yearn upon his brother [the little flock will yearn over those dear to them and coming soon by millions into the truth], and he sought where to weep, and entered into his [secret] chamber and wept there."—Genesis 43:30.

"And he washed his face [the priesthood may not show signs of weeping], and went out and refrained himself, and said, Set on bread [present some features of truth]. And they set for him by himself [the feet members feed uniquely upon divine truths], and for them by themselves [mere believers assimilate the Bible truths intended for them], and for the Egyptians which did eat with him by themselves [religious worldlings and believers cannot assimilate the same ideas]; for that is an abomination unto the Egyptians"—worldlings abominate the truths about the blood-bought sacrifice.—Genesis 43:31, 32.

"And they sat before him [all are before Christ in these judgment days], the firstborn according to his birthright, and the youngest according to his youth [before Christ all believers occupy their true and hence appropriate position]; and the men marveled one at another [at the discerning classification of Christians]. And he took and sent messes [measures of Bible truth] unto them from before him [all truth comes from Christ]; but Benjamin's mess [the truths of the great company] was five [a divine or spiritual number]times so much [the great company feed upon spiritual truths] as any of theirs [the professedly justified]. And they drank [imbibed doctrines], and were merry [happy] with him"—in the truth made known to them.—Genesis 43:33, 34.

THE ANTITYPICAL BENJAMIN'S CUP

"And he commanded the steward of his house, saying, Fill the men's sacks [vessels, minds] with food [the truth] as much as they can carry, and put every man's money in the sack's mouth [truth cannot be bought except by consecration]. And put my cup, the silver cup [the Bible truths on spiritual subjects], in the sack's mouth of the youngest [great company], and his corn money. And he did according to the word that Joseph had spoken."—Genesis 44:1, 2.

Then follows the story of the finding of the cup in Benjamin's sack, representing the general recognition by the great company of their possession of the Bible in its spiritual phases. (Genesis 44:3-14) The one who has the cup—the spirit of the Word—is recognized as facing death. The great company members are seen by "Christians" generally to be consecrated in a way that will bring about the death of their flesh: "With whomsoever of thy servants it [the cup] be found, both let him die, and we [the professedly justified] also will be my lord's [Christ's] bondmen"—servants on the human plane.—Genesis 44:9.

Eventually the class having the antitypical cup is to live as the servant of the Greater than Joseph; and the associates of the Benjamin class, former persecutors of the Joseph company, are to be blameless: "He [the great company] with whom it [the cup, the spirit of the Word] is found shall be my [Christ's] servant [Revelation 7:15]; and ye [once persecutors] shall be blameless"—after a Millennial age repentance and cleansing.—Genesis 44:10; Leviticus 16:26-28.

ALL CHRISTIANS NOW ON JUDGMENT

In verses 14-34 Judah represents a specially loving and zealous class among the professedly justified believers, such a class as might, through a good heart condition, become in the earthly phase of the kingdom sons of the ancient worthies and gain life with them on some spirit plane.—Ezekiel 46:16, 17.

It becomes a time of judgment for all the brothers of Joseph; for he says: "Wot ye not that such a man as I can certainly make trial?" (Genesis 44:15, margin) The brothers then acknowledge their wrong-doing toward Joseph: "And Judah said, What shall we say unto my lord? [What can sinful nominal Christianity say?] What shall we speak? Or how shall we clear ourselves? [They cannot clear themselves of the charge of persecuting God's elect and of much other evil-doing]. God hath found out the iniquity of thy servants [through the interpretations of Revelation and Ezekiel and through churchianity's manifest persecution of men of God]; behold, we are my lord's [Christ's] servants, both we and he also [the great company] with whom the cup is found."—Genesis 44:16.

"And he [Joseph, representing Christ] said, God forbid that I should do so [only the spirit-begotten can be servants on the heavenly plane]; but the man [great company] in whose hand the cup [spiritual things] is found, he shall be my servant; and as for you [the professedly justified], get you up in peace unto your father [in the earthly phase of the kingdom]. Then Judah [a specially noble class of mere believers] came near unto him [drew especially near to Christ], and said, O my lord, let thy servant, I pray thee, speak a word in my lord's ears, and let not thine anger burn [as in the troublous days here spoken of] against thy servant; for thou [Christ] art even as Pharaoh"—all should honor the Son even as they honor the Father.—Genesis 44:17, 18.

FUTURE WORK OF THE GREAT COMPANY

In Judah's recital (44:19-34) are the following words: "We have a father [our Father], an old man [the Ancient of Days], and a child of his old age [the great company], a little one [babes, children, little ones in Christ]; and his brother [the Christ, Head and body] is dead [as dead, outcast as sinners to other believers], and he alone [the great company alone, as it seems to the Judah class] is left of his mother [the Covenant of Grace], and his father [our Father] loveth him. [How tenderly does God love all his spirit-begotten children!] If he should leave his father, his father would die [a figure of the Father's great love for the great company class]. And thou [Christ] saidst unto thy servants, "Except your youngest brother come down with you [learn the present truth at the divinely foreknown time], ye shall see my face no more"—no kingdom favor can come to the now professedly justified unless the great company gain the knowledge and character development necessary for its coming great work.—Genesis 44:20-23.

"My father said unto us, Ye know that my wife [the Covenant of Grace] bare me two sons [the little flock and the great company], and one [the Christ, Head and body] went out from me [so it seems to all other believers], and I said, Surely he is torn to pieces [a living sacrifice] and I saw him no more [so it seems to other believers, who have never been able to discern the mystery of Christ in us]." (Genesis 44:27, 28) "His life [our Father's life, through spirit-begetting] is bound up in the lad's life [the great company has its spiritual life direct from God]. How shall I [noble, but not wholly consecrated believers] go up to my father [approach unto God] and the lad be not with me?"—Believers depend greatly on the great company for spiritual assistance.—Genesis 44:34.

MANIFESTATION OF THE BODY OF CHRIST

The divinely appointed time has now about come for the mystery, the great secret of God, "hidden from ages and from generations," to be completely and finally finished, and for the great company and all other believers to see who are the members of the body of Christ. As the narrative proceeds: "Then Joseph [Christ, Head and body, including the body members still this side the vail] could not refrain himself before them all [the time will have finally come, possibly at about the time before mentioned] and he cried, Cause every man [of the Egyptians, worldly churchists] to go out from me!" [In the final fall of ecclesiasticism, wherein the false followers of Christ will be detached from the real. (Jeremiah 23:39; Ezekiel 24:21)] And there stood no man [worldling] with him [the Christ] when he made himself known unto his brethren [when the truth comes to the great company and to other believers as to who are the real feet members of Christ, whom they had sold into Egyptian bondage and oppression]. "And he wept aloud [a great outburst of repressed love on the part of the body members]; and the Egyptians and the house of Pharaoh heard"—it will be manifest even to the worldlings who have gone out.—Genesis 45:2.

"And Joseph [through the Christ, body members] said unto his brethren [it will be made known to all believers] I am Joseph [these hitherto despised and cast out ones are the true body of Christ]; doth my father yet live [is our Father a living reality to you]? And his brethren [mere believers] could not answer him [former persecutors could have nothing to say]; for they were troubled [margin, terrified] at his presence"—in deep trouble because of Christ's second presence and especially because of their treatment of his feet members.—Genesis 45:3.

"And Joseph [through the feet members] said unto his brethren, Come near to me, I pray you [draw near to Christ in renewed consecration]. And they came near. And he said [through the feet members still on earth], I am Joseph [the true members of Christ] your brother [all believers are brethren on one plane or another], whom ye sold into Egypt"—whom ye as believers persecuted.—Genesis 45:4.

"Now therefore be not grieved, nor angry with yourselves [do not weep or gnash your teeth in self-reproach and useless regrets] that ye sold me into Egypt [ostracised, misrepresented, persecuted the feet members]; for God did send me before you to preserve life"—without the help of the feet members the great company and other believers would die religiously in the stress of troublous times.—Genesis 45:5.

"For these two years [possibly from the spring of 1918 to the winter of 1919 or spring of 1920] hath the famine [for the truth] been in the land [among professing Christians]; and yet there are five years [to the spring of 1925, to the resurrection of the ancient worthies] in the which there shall neither be earing nor harvest"—no general religious work for the world can be done.—Gen. 45:6.

FEET MEMBERS LIKE POLISHED BRASS

"And God sent me before you to preserve you a posterity in the earth, and to save your lives by a great deliverance [first from the bondage of a fallen ecclesiasticism]. So now it was not you that sent me [the suffering body members] hither [to the time and conditions mentioned] but God ['the cup that my Father hath poured']; and he hath made me a father to Pharaoh [Genesis 41:38-45], and lord of all his house ['all power in heaven and earth'] and a ruler throughout all the land of Egypt"—'lord of lords.'—Genesis 45:7, 8.

"Haste ye [the time is short for reconsecration before the Gospel age ends]; and go up to my father [reconsecrate yourselves] and say unto him [thank God for the truth revealed], Thus saith thy son Joseph, God hath made me lord of all Egypt [all the world]. Come down unto me ['thy kingdom come'], tarry not [the time for the kingdom is at hand]. And thou [mere believers and great company, and God with them] shalt dwell in the land of Goshen [a specially favored condition in the world], and thou shalt be near unto me [unto Christ, Head and body, including those still in the flesh], thou and thy children, and thy children's children [all whom you have taught to believe in the Lord] and thy flocks and thy herds [animals represent the individuals as to the flesh], and all that thou hast [everything wholly consecrated to Christ]. And there will I [Christ, Head and body] nourish thee [mere believers and great company, with present truth] for yet there are five years [1919 or 1920 to 1924 or 1925] of famine [of the truth to the people generally]; lest thou and thy household [of faith] and all that thou hast, come to poverty"—spiritually.—Genesis 45:9-11.

"And behold your eyes [eyes of understanding, anointed with the word of truth] see, and the eyes of my brother Benjamin [spiritual understanding of the great company], that it is my mouth [the body members in the flesh are Christ's mouthpiece—'in Christ's stead we beseech you, Be ye reconciled to God'] that speaketh unto you. And ye shall tell my father [thankfully acknowledge to our Father] of all my glory in Egypt [not least of all, Christ's glorious victory over apostate ecclesiasticism], and of all that ye have seen; and ye shall haste and bring down my father hither [in your consecrated hearts]. And he fell upon his brother Benjamin's neck and wept [the blessing of knowledge of present truth and of full reconciliation to God will come to the spirit-begotten great company, as well as loving fellowship with the body members of Christ on earth]; and Benjamin [the great company] wept upon his neck"—great joy of the great company over the revealment to them of the Christ in the flesh.—Genesis 45:12-14.

"Moreover, he kissed all his brethren, and wept upon them [enjoyed the mutual spirit of true reconciliation with all believers]; and after that he talked with them"—[the feet members will teach present truth directly or indirectly through preaching and through print to the great company, and through them to all believers during the brief period of opportunity after the fall of ecclesiasticism].—Genesis 45:15.

That it was Pastor Russell's belief that there should come a time when the body members on earth should become manifest, or show forth the truth to everyone, is apparent from the following extract from THE WATCH TOWER of 1916, page 344, in comment on Revelation 1:15: "In the end of the age, the feet members of the body of Christ will be illuminated by the truth and will shine forth as polished brass."

DIVERSITIES OF OPERATION OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

"And there are diversities of operations; but it is the same God which worketh all in all."—1 Corinthians 12:6.

Now, as at all times, there is a variety of operations of the holy Spirit. This Spirit is holy or divine power, the power of God. It is an invisible power, which manifests itself in many different ways. God is a Spirit Being, powerful, yet invisible to human sight. Likewise the angels are powerful, invisible beings, and manifest themselves by their works, their operations. The only way by which spirit beings may become visible to humankind is by the performance of a miracle. The spirit must assume a material body for the purpose of manifestation to human eyes.

During the ages preceding the Gospel age holy spirit beings manifested themselves at various times to godly men and women, to deliver messages from the Lord. In the initiatory stages of the Christian church, also, in the days of the apostles, there were angelic manifestations to God's people. But after the apostles died and the church became established, these manifestations ceased, having accomplished their designed end. It is noticeable that whatever angelic manifestations and revelations have been received since that time have always been misrepresentations, deceptions, leading many away from the revealed truth of the Scriptures. At a time when the canon of Scripture was almost completed, the Apostle Paul put the church especially on guard on this point, declaring that the Word of God is sufficient, "that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto every good work," and warning that in the latter times "some would depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of demons."—2 Timothy 3:13-17; 1 Timothy 4:1.

The Apostle is very sweeping in his statement of the all-sufficiency of the written Word, saying, "All Scripture given by inspiration of God is profitable for doctrines, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness." There was no need for further revelations. And he said: "But though we or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." (Galatians 1:6-9) Evil spirits, fallen angels, have certain powers of manifestation which they received originally from God, but which they have misused. Very many have been deceived by these angels into thinking they were receiving revelations from the Lord; for they often speak in the name of the Lord, transforming themselves, outwardly, into angels of light, as the Apostle forewarned. (2 Corinthians 11:13-15) (See also our pamphlet on "Spiritism is Demonism") To listen to any of these revelations, whisperings in the ear, or impressions upon the mind, is indeed very dangerous. Every mental impression should be tested by the Word of God, written for our guidance. Whatever will not stand this crucial test should at once be rejected. The delusions of today along this line are very subtle, the deluded apostles of the fallen spirits being transformed as apostles of light. God's Spirit always operates in full harmony with his written Word.

SPIRIT'S OPERATION IN DIFFERENT AGES

Every perfect creature made in God's image and likeness is possessed of the holy Spirit. Before his fall Adam had the holy Spirit—the holy mind or disposition implanted by the Creator in the heart of this perfect man. The prophets of old had the holy Spirit, and on certain occasions were operated upon directly by this Spirit, or power of God, to write and speak words that often they did not themselves understand. (Ezekiel 20:49; 1 Peter 1:10-12) In this sense they had God's holy mind to the extent that they sought to do God's holy will; but the operation of the power of God upon them when they received divine messages was mechanical.

Comparing the Spirit's operation in the persons of the prophets before Christ with its operation in the apostles during our Lord's ministry, we see that some of the same things were done by the prophets, though not everything. In some instances sleeping ones were awakened from death by the prophets; leprosy was healed by Elisha; the widow's cruse of oil was supplied by Elijah; bitter waters were healed. In all these instances the miracles were wrought in the divine name, by the holy Spirit, or power, of God.

When our Lord Jesus was in the world, the power which he communicated to his disciples was a measure of his own power, his own spirit. After his resurrection, he breathed upon them and said: "Receive ye the holy Spirit." In this instance there may have been a communication of a measure of power at the time, or it may have been a forceful way of telling them that they were in a few days to receive this power, this holy Spirit, in a special way, after he had ascended to heaven to appear for them. At any rate it is not to be confused with the operation of the holy Spirit at Pentecost.

The communication of the holy Spirit in the outpouring at Pentecost was something altogether new, different from any previous manifestation of divine power. The holy Spirit as it came upon the church at this time was from the Father. The Father had directly recognized them as sons. The Lord Jesus was indeed the agent in bestowing this blessing, but he declared that it was from the Father. He had previously told them to tarry at Jerusalem until they were endued with power from on high—until they should receive "the promise of the Father." (Luke 24:49) Some of the outward manifestations of the holy Spirit at this time and its after results were the same as when Jesus himself had communicated the holy power to them during his ministry.

But a manifestation of the holy Spirit might mean one thing at one time and another thing at another time. In the case of the prophets of old, the outward manifestation was given in order that the people might notice and therefore give the more earnest heed to the message; and the purpose seems to have been the same when our Lord sent forth the disciples, the twelve, and the seventy, in his name—that his message that the kingdom was at hand might be carried all over the country, for the purpose of awakening people to the fact that Messiah had come. After Pentecost, the message of the disciples was that this same Jesus whom the Jews had crucified had been raised from the dead. With great power they gave witness to this fact.

The same holy Spirit now operated for a different purpose, to convict the Jews and lead them to Christ. This same holy Spirit will also operate in the future when it will be poured out upon all flesh. Its operation will be manifested in enlightenment of the mind, in assistance and instruction, in gradually healing the nations—mentally, morally and physically.

BEGETTING OF THE SPIRIT DIFFERENT FROM ALL

But the special feature of the holy Spirit's operation during this present age is different from any other. It consists of a begetting of a new nature, and is accompanied by a supernatural illumination of the heart and the mind, enabling one to grasp spiritual truths, to see into the deep things of God, never seen before. The new mind is small in its beginning, but must grow day by day, feeding upon the Word of God, becoming more and more able to appreciate and assimilate the things of the Spirit, which the natural man perceiveth not. The embryo new creature, the babe in Christ, must grow in grace, in God's favor and in spiritual strength, becoming more like Christ in character, more fixed and established in the truth as it is in Christ Jesus.

In John 7:39 we read, "The holy Spirit was not yet given, because Jesus was not yet glorified." The Father could not give this spirit of sonship to any until Jesus had been crucified, had arisen and had ascended into heaven, the Most Holy, to present his sacrificial merit on behalf of those who would be of the church; in other words, after he had deposited his merit in the Father's hands for the benefit of all of this class; for none could receive the spirit of sonship save through the Redeemer.

During this Gospel age, some have had the blessed privilege of thus receiving the Spirit, of becoming sons of God, on a spiritual plane; and if this class continue faithful to their covenant with the Lord, they shall be born beings of the divine nature. Such an offer was never before made, and never will be repeated. This class receive special instruction and guidance from the Father through Christ for the high position to which they have been called. No longer, as in the apostles' day, do the spirit-begotten receive miraculous gifts of the Spirit; for these are no longer needed. But they have the fruits of the Spirit, which have remained, and which are far more important than were the gifts. These fruits are to be developed in their characters by study of the Word, by prayer and by painstaking effort day by day.

The new creatures in Christ are the anointed class. The anointing and the begetting result from the same operation of the holy Spirit. The begetting represents our individual start in the new life. The anointing represents our coming into the body of Christ. When we present ourselves in consecration and are accepted, we are at once begotten of the holy Spirit and inducted into the body, coming thus under the anointing which flows from the great Head, Christ Jesus. The one operation of the spirit begins the individual work and also the new relationship as one of the anointed company, or body of Christ.

The various fruits of the Spirit which must be developed as we go on in the new life are the most desirable that could be imagined. They are enumerated by the Apostles Paul and Peter in somewhat different phraseology. St. Paul specifies these fruits as love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, self-control. The Apostle Peter lists them as faith, fortitude, knowledge, self-control, patience, godliness, brotherly love, and lastly the broad general love that covers all men even our enemies. This list is very comprehensive and includes all the fruits of the holy Spirit. If we bear these fruits richly, aboundingly, he says, we shall never fall, but shall have abundant entrance into Christ's kingdom.

DEGREES OF SPIRIT'S MANIFESTATION

In considering the fruits of the holy Spirit as given in the Word, we must suppose that all of these are fully developed in any being who is in the likeness of God and has been tested and proven, the difference on the different planes of life being not in kind but in degree, according to the capacity. Mankind have lost the image and likeness of God to a very large degree. Hence in a natural man of today those qualities are lacking which would have been present had he remained perfect. The members of the Gospel church are put through manifold trying experiences designed under divine blessing and assistance to develop these very qualities; for as they are, if faithful, to be exalted to the very highest plane of being, they must develop these spirit-fruits to the highest degree; and supernatural illumination is granted them in order that they may be able to successfully accomplish this.

While we remain in the imperfect tabernacle, the flesh, we cannot manifest these precious fruits perfectly, because the flesh is unable adequately to show forth the sentiments of the new heart, the new mind. Sin has so marred the human brain that it will not perfectly respond to the holy mind within. For this reason the robe of Christ's imputed righteousness must be supplied to cover our need until our earthly course is finished.

VARYING DEGREES OF GLORY

Considering the restitution of the world in the age just before us, we see that God has set aside the thousand years of Messiah's kingdom for the purpose of instructing mankind and of bringing them back to full perfection of mind and morals. This bringing of men back to the image of God will mean that they will become sons of God, and will then possess all the fruits and graces of the holy Spirit that the church must now develop. What, then, will be the difference between these different classes? We answer that as we have stated above, the difference will be one of quality and of quantity, not of kind. The operation of the holy Spirit in human conditions would necessarily be limited; for men will be sons of God on the human plane. Similarly, the manifestations of spirit-fruits in angels would correspond to their plane of being.

To illustrate these various differences, we might take some of the precious jewels. We might let the emerald represent human perfection, the topaz angelic perfection, and the diamond divine perfection. These are all precious, all beautiful. Each is perfect on its own plane, but their planes are different one from another. The diamond emits the greatest degree of light. Thus it will be with the divine nature. The Lord has promised that the faithful church shall have the very highest glory and honor—immortality. Hence she will manifest all the glorious attributes of perfect character in the highest degree of any of Jehovah's intelligent creatures.

But all of the sons of God, on whatever plane, will have God's holy Spirit. None others will be permitted to continue their existence beyond the final test to follow the Millennium. God will have a glorious universe throughout the ages of eternity; and from every inhabited world pæans of praise shall resound, to be taken up and repeated by every loving, loyal heart in every part of Jehovah's boundless domain. Existence will be sublime in that glad day, for which all other days have been made; and the most glorious heritage of all will be the heritage of the Christ of God.

WINNING THE WORLD TO CHRIST

SEPTEMBER 15.—MATTHEW 5:13-16, 28; ACTS 16:9-15.

RETURN OF CHRIST THE ONLY HOPE OF THE WORLD—TWO THOUGHTS FORMING THE BASIS OF THE THEORY THAT THE WORLD MUST BE CONVERTED DURING THE GOSPEL AGE—COMMISSION OF THE CHURCH—DISCIPLES TO BE GATHERED OUT OF ALL NATIONS—THE GOSPEL TO BE PREACHED WORLD-WIDE AS A WITNESS TO THE PEOPLE—THIS PORTION OF THE WORK FINISHED.

"Go ye into the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation."—Mark 16:15.

From time to time we have demonstrated that there is no hope whatever of general world-blessing through Christ along the lines commonly held by Christian people; that is, the conversion of the world by present-day missionary efforts. We herewith review this subject, not with the purpose of casting disrespect upon all missionaries, but in order to demonstrate afresh the fact that this world-conversion-through-foreign-missions delusion is doing positive and serious harm to the Lord's true people by leading to false expectations and, consequently, to misdirected efforts.

Foreign missions were undertaken with two convictions, one correct, the other false: (1) The correct, scriptural conviction that the only name by which any can be saved is the name of Jesus—faith in his sacrificial death, and obedience and devotion to him; (2) The false, unscriptural conviction that there is no hope for any who die in ignorance of the only name whereby we must be saved. These intertwined theories have been the cord which has drawn hundreds of noble lives to self-sacrifice, especially during the first half of the nineteenth century. They have been the cord also which has drawn, and still draws, millions on millions of money from sympathetic purses. And we need not wonder if the money has in turn drawn some into the missionary work simply for an honorable and easy living.

REMOTION BOUND TO COME

We are not objecting to the sacrifice of noble lives and of consecrated money, however; for we firmly believe that lives and money given with sincerity have been pleasing to the Lord, even though given under some serious and discreditable misapprehensions of the divine character and of the plan for human salvation. But we hold that this mixture of truth and error is very injurious to the people of God, in that it diverts their hearts and their efforts away from the truth, away from Bible study, away from growth in knowledge and in the graces of the holy Spirit. Moreover, it inculcates instead the thought that the chief object of life for all Christians should be the snatching fellow creatures from the hands of an angry God intent upon hurling them into eternal torment at the hands of demons; or, if not this, the making and contributing of money to pay the expenses of those who do the snatching.

As a result Christian people "have no time" to study the Father's Word, no time to study the divine plan, no time to cultivate their own hearts. They often say to themselves, and sometimes unguardedly to others: 'Bible study? Nonsense! We already know enough when we know that millions of human beings are going down to hell. By and by we hustlers who have been less careful for our own spiritual development and for Bible study, but more on fire and burdened for souls, will have brighter crowns than will these hair-splitting Bible students, if indeed they are not rejected from heaven entirely.'

But with the advance of intelligence a reaction from so unreasonable a position was bound to come; and it has come. People in general no longer believe in the horrible devil-god of the past, seeking for any possible pretext for the torture of as many as possible of his creatures. Reason is asserting itself; and man no longer poses as the sinner's only friend to save him from a malicious God. Any such proposition is too absurd for the enlightenment of the twentieth century.

But men will have theories; for these are still, as ever, the basis of action, the rudder of human effort. It has become evident to all thinkers that one or the other of the strands of the original mission-cord is false, unreliable, rotten. Question: Which of the two strands will they reject?

We answer that the true one will be rejected and the false one retained. Men will continue to believe that all hope ends with death; and they will reject the inspired declaration that faith in Christ is the only hope, and his the only name. They have already concluded, and are becoming more and more convinced, that although the name of Jesus is a good rallying cry, especially when missionary contributions are called for, yet it is not the only name for salvation. They have concluded, but do not care to declare it in so many words, that education and civilization are, rather, the only names for salvation. And at home and abroad the term salvation is more and more coming to mean, not a personal relationship to him who is the light of the world and in whom alone is life everlasting, but social progress, municipal and national reform—social uplift. Thus has the false idea of missions and of their conversion of the world led God's people farther and farther away from his Word, which in their zeal without knowledge they reject.

MISSIONS TO SUCCEED DURING THE MILLENNIUM

To those who are rightly instructed on the subject by God's Word, who lean not to their own understanding, but who daily search the Scriptures to be thereby taught of God, the utter failure of missions to convert the world to even the imperfect conditions which prevail throughout Christendom is faith-strengthening. This failure demonstrates beyond question the truth of the Scripture teachings that God is not yet attempting the conversion and salvation of mankind, but is leaving that great work for the future, to be accomplished by the Messianic kingdom, when it shall be established in power and great glory during the Millennium. It corroborates fully the Bible declaration that the present work of God is the election of a church which, when polished, finished and glorified with her Lord and Head, shall by and by bless all the families of the earth as Abraham's seed. (Galatians 3:8, 16, 29) Then will be fulfilled the petition of our Lord's prayer: "Thy kingdom come; thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven."

Many students of the Bible derive a wrong thought from our Lord's commission to his disciples just before his ascension. That commission divides itself into three parts: (1) Making disciples of all nations; (2) baptizing them; and (3) teaching them. (Matthew 28:19, 20) The Greek word which in the Authorized Version is rendered teach in verse 19 is altogether different from that so rendered in verse 20. (See margin) The former Greek word signifies to proselyte or make disciples; the latter, to instruct. Thus it will be seen that a wrong thought is derived from this text by those who interpret it to mean: 'Go and convert all nations.' This is not the thought; but rather, 'Go ye and gather converts from all nations, and baptize and teach these converts.'

This view is in accord with our Master's declaration on other occasions, when he testified that the world would not be converted at his second coming, but quite the reverse. It is also in harmony with his statement in Matthew 24:14: "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come."

A FRUITFUL SOURCE OF ERROR

Whoever gets the wrong thought respecting the commission of the church is apt to take the wrong course in his endeavor to comply with it. Those who have concluded that the Lord designed the conversion of the world during the Gospel age are led to various subterfuges, in both mind and conduct, in order to attempt to carry out the commission which they have misunderstood. This is leading some at the present time to ignore the Scriptural definition of the terms of membership in Christ's kingdom—to lower the standard of both faith and conduct, in order to admit a larger proportion of the human family and to convince themselves and others, if possible, that the world is growing better and is being converted.

Furthermore, some not only have concluded that the preaching of the cross of Christ and faith in the redemption is unnecessary, but have even gone beyond this and have claimed that even an historical knowledge of Christ is unnecessary, that heathen religions are to be esteemed as part of the preaching of the Gospel, and that the heathen obedience to their own religious customs is to be esteemed as obedience to the Gospel. Thus more or less false views of the church's commission are leading astray many who see no hope in any other way of ever attaining to that which our Lord commissioned nearly nineteen centuries ago, and which otherwise they would feel has so far failed most miserably and can never be accomplished.

On the other hand we hold that, rightly read and understood, the commission has been fulfilled; that the message of Christ and the Messianic kingdom has been proclaimed, directly or indirectly, with more or less force and energy, in every nation under heaven, and that as a result some from every nation have been made disciples; and that incidentally a witness has been given to all the peoples of the earth respecting the redemption and the divine provision for salvation through the Redeemer. Of these disciples gathered out of all nations by the Lord's message a "little flock" will be found to whom it will be the Father's good pleasure to give the kingdom, in joint-heirship with Jesus in glory as the seed of Abraham, through whom during the Millennium all the families of the earth shall be blessed. Only from this standpoint can our Lord's commission be properly appreciated and its fulfillment recognized.

THE WHOLE CHURCH COMMISSIONED

That our Lord gave this commission, not merely to the apostles, but to all who should believe on him through their word, is clearly shown by the words with which he closed the commission: "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the age." The apostles did not live until the end of the age; and hence the Lord's words signify that he will be with all of his followers who avail themselves of his commission and endeavor to present his message to those having ears to hear out of all nations. Of course he did not mean that he would be present with them personally; for he had already told them that he would go away but would return at the end of the age (John 14:2), and his words are not to be understood as contradictory. In the present instance his meaning evidently was that he would supervise their work, would be the real Head of the church, would oversee all of their affairs, would be with them in the sense of supporting, guiding and counselling those who would walk in his way and proclaim his message, in proportion as they were faithful to the charge.

This assurance of the Lord's presence was designed to give the apostles courage for the work which he was committing to them. While he was with them in the flesh they merely followed his directions; and as soon as he was smitten they were as sheep having no shepherd. Now he was going away; but he wished them to realize that his power would be with them and that his supervising guidance of their affairs would be granted them, as surely as while he was with them in the flesh, though apparent only to the eye of faith. According to their faith it should be unto them a strength, a power.

All down the Gospel age the Lord's people have similarly been required to walk by faith and not by sight; and doubtless the lesson has been valuable to them in spiritual upbuilding, much more so than had he remained in the flesh with us. If, then, the thought of the Lord's spiritual supervision of his work was to be a source of encouragement and strength to those who would attempt to teach in his name all down the age, much more may we of the present time realize his actual presence in the close of the Gospel harvest. Although we see Jesus with no other than the eye of faith, yet we who believe have joy unspeakable and both strength and courage for the work; for he is once more present with his church in the harvest work, even as he was with the apostles in the sowing of the seed at the beginning of the age.

INTERESTING QUESTIONS

Question:—Was Adam foreordained to fall into sin? If so, how could it be said that he had a fair trial?

Answer:—Adam was not compelled to sin. God did not foreordain that he must disobey the divine command. That is to say, Adam was not limited in the exercise of his will. He could will to do right or wrong. The decision was left open to himself alone. The fact that God knew in advance what Adam would do is an altogether different matter. While we realize that God is so great that he has power we can neither understand nor appreciate, yet the Bible clearly indicates that Adam had a free will. If he had not a fair, full chance, then he could not have been justly condemned. Therefore the Scriptures clearly present the fact that he was not deceived (1 Timothy 2:14) Not only was he created in God's image and likeness, but he had knowledge and at the time of his deflection understood what the penalty for disobedience would be. However, God evidently had much sympathy with Adam in the fall, and did not purpose that this fall should work Adam's eternal ruin. Hence the Bible tells us that God had arranged in advance that Christ should redeem Adam. Moreover, our merciful Creator has also provided that Adam might have more knowledge before his final destiny would be fixed.

Question:—Do we understand that there is a restitution call now open to mankind?

Answer:—Until the glorification of the church there can be no individual or personal restitution work. There is, however, a restoration work beginning so far as the preparing of the world is concerned. During the past forty-four years a marvelous progress has been made, wonderful inventions that in so short a time have made the world rich and have brought blessings of comfort and convenience never before dreamed of. These great improvements have come because we have entered the "times of restitution" mentioned in Acts 3:19-21. But as far as mankind is concerned, we understand restitution to human perfection is not due to begin until the Messianic kingdom shall have been fully established. That beneficent reign is in process of establishment now. But not until the last of the feet members of the body of Christ shall have passed beyond the vail will the work of restoring humanity under the New Covenant begin; for that covenant cannot be sealed with the blood of Christ until the church has passed into death and the merit released for application to the world. Then the covenant will begin to operate for the benefit of all the families of the earth.

INFILLING OF THE HOLY SPIRIT PROPORTIONATE TO SPIRITUAL CAPACITY

"If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." "Be filled with the Spirit."—Romans 8:9; Ephesians 5:18.

In the use of the word spirit, it is very necessary that we have in mind the wide range of meanings which this word possesses. For instance, God is a spirit, and the angels are spirits; that is, they are spirit beings. This signifies that whatever kind of organism they have, it is so different from the human organism that mankind cannot see them. Angels might be present with us and yet be invisible, unless a special miracle was performed by which they might take on a body of flesh.

Another thought connected with the word spirit is much in line with our general usage of the term—that which is ethereal. For instance, we speak of the mind, the spirit, the disposition of a person. Indeed, in our Common Version of the Bible these words are used synonymously. "If any man have not the Spirit [mind, disposition] of Christ, he is none of his." (Romans 8:9; Philippians 2:5; 1 Corinthians 2:16) We also use the word spirit to mean the life principle, the energizing power which all living creatures possess. The power is something which cannot be touched or handled. Still another use of the word spirit is in connection with liquors. In this sense it has the thought of that which will lightly pass away as a gas, that which will become invisible, which will evaporate.

In our text, however, the word spirit is used in its own peculiar way—to signify the new mind, new will, new purpose, begotten in the consecrated children of God through his exceeding great and precious promises, written in his Word. Originally man was in the image and likeness of God. Then he had a spirit, or disposition, very much in accord with that of his Creator. But after sin had operated for a short time, selfishness and depravity were developed; and in time these evil propensities vitiated his spirit, or disposition. Thereafter instead of having a spirit of holiness, man had a spirit of unholiness, of sin; and all of Adam's posterity have been born with these evil tendencies marked in their brains. Naturally we are inclined to do the wrong thing rather than the right, because of our having inherited these weaknesses and blemishes from father Adam.

THE BEGETTING OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

God has purposed that during the Gospel age and through the Gospel message, those desirous of being in harmony with him may get back his spirit. Very few care to do this, however; and the few who do are said to be holy. This class give up their own spirit, mind, disposition, will, and adopt instead the divine standards, the divine will. What these divine standards are they must learn from the Scriptures.

From the time of his consecration and his acceptance by the Father through the Advocate (1 John 2:1), the Christian is said to be begotten of the holy Spirit. That is to say, a new mind, a new disposition, a new personality, had its start, its beginning, when God accepted him. Just what this spark of the new nature is, we may not surely know. But we recognize the experiences which result from its possession. This begetting of the Spirit of God starts a new life. The start of this new life is not, however, the end of the matter. He is to strive to be "filled with the Spirit."

There is a necessity for this infilling, refilling, continuous filling of the Spirit of God. By nature we have the disposition common to the fallen race to which we belong. This hereditary disposition is more or less influenced by environment, training, etc.; and the new mind has difficulty in getting fully in tune with the Infinite. Additionally, our memories are poor, and our natural tendencies are in the direction opposite to our spirit of consecration, the Spirit of the Lord. It is therefore necessary for the child of God to go frequently to the throne of heavenly grace in order to be filled more and more with the Spirit of the heavenly Father, the Spirit of our Lord Jesus.

INCREASE OF SPIRITUAL CAPACITY

In the case of the Master, it is written that the Father gave not the Spirit by measure unto him. (John 3:34) This statement implies that God gives the Spirit by measure to all of the members of the church. The reason for this difference is that our Lord had a perfect organism. Because he had left the heavenly glory, because his life principle had been transferred from the heavenly plane to the earthly, he was therefore without any taint of Adamic imperfection of being. Being thus perfect, he could receive readily and could comprehend without limitation. He could absorb fully and completely of the Spirit of God; for he was born in the image of God.

With the church it is different. In our case we receive only by measure—not that God has limited us to a measure, but that we are not able to absorb, to receive, a full measure. Some may receive more and others less, according to the natural condition of our body, the condition in which we were born, our environment, etc. In proportion as our life is given up to the Lord and in proportion as we make straight paths for our feet, we will choose a pathway in life that will be most helpful to us and will most assist us in overcoming the weaknesses of our flesh. Thus we shall become the better enabled, and the more quickly, to be filled with the Holy Spirit and to receive a larger measure of it as time goes by.

The Lord's people are privileged to be filled with his Spirit and to enlarge their capacity for greater infilling. Our knowledge enlarges, our appreciation enlarges, and our needs enlarge. Thus we grow in grace and are enabled to receive more and more of the Spirit of God. For this reason a Christian who has had years of opportunity for development ought to be more able to absorb readily, ought to have a much larger spiritual capacity, than when he first entered the Lord's family. He should be filled with the Spirit of God and of Christ. This should give him more and more of the spirit of a sound mind, should make him more God-like.

This Spirit of the Lord, manifested in the lives of his people, is a spirit of meekness. Whoever possesses this spirit will not be proud nor boastful; for he will see that God is not pleased with the proud. Therefore he will humble himself, in order to be lowly in mind and in heart, as was the Master. If he makes a mistake in judgment, he will be the first to recognize and correct the error. Gentleness also is an element of the holy Spirit. Some people are naturally gentle; others are noisy and rude. Those, however, who have the Spirit of the Lord will more and more have a tendency toward gentleness. Such will have kindness and sympathy for others. They will not wish to harm anybody, but rather to do good to all with whom they come in contact. Thus they will demonstrate that they have the fruits of the holy Spirit—meekness, gentleness, patience, long-suffering, brotherly-kindness, love—increasingly developing within themselves day by day; for whoever becomes infilled with the spirit of the truth, the spirit of holiness—and only those—will manifest these evidences in their daily lives.

ANOINTING VS. BEGETTING OF THE SPIRIT

The expressions, "anointing of the holy Spirit," and "begetting of the holy Spirit," apparently refer to the same experience from its twofold aspect. In one sense of the word, the impartation of God's holy Spirit to any one is the begetting of a new life, the start of a new nature. From the other viewpoint the impartation is the start of royalty, distinguishing those who are designed for membership in the divine royal family, according to the divine purposes. The begetting of the holy Spirit is to a new nature—the spiritual. The anointing is to an exalted office—membership in the body of Christ.

Under the divine arrangement for Israel the ceremony of anointing with the holy anointing oil was confined to the priests and the kings. The antitype of this ceremony, we may understand, is fulfilled in Christ and his church, who are anointed to be both kings and priests unto God, a royal priesthood. (Revelation 1:5, 6) From the divine viewpoint there is but one great kingly priest, the Christ, Head and body. In the Jewish type Aaron represented the Head of this great antitypical priest. The type shows that the holy anointing oil was poured upon the head of the typical high priest and ran down to the hem of his garment. (Leviticus 8:12; Psalm 133:2) The sons of Aaron did not receive an individual anointing; for they belonged to Aaron, who was anointed. And so it is in the antitype. Only when we come into the Christ company are we members of the Anointed One.

The phrase, "the anointed," is the English equivalent of the Hebrew Messiah and of the Greek term Christos. In other words, the Messiah, the Christ, is the Anointed One—the long-promised seed of Abraham who is to bless all the families of the earth. Whoever, therefore, becomes a member of Christ becomes a member of the Anointed One, the Messiah; for these terms express the same thought. Hence, when the Apostle Paul declares that the church are members of the body of Christ, he means that they are members of the Lord's Anointed, members of the Messiah.—1 Corinthians 12:12-23.

We have already called attention to the fact that the holy anointing oil was poured upon the head of Israel's high priest and ran down over the skirts of his garment. In the antitype, the heavenly Father anointed the great Head of the Christ at Jordan. (John 1:32-34; Acts 2:33; 10:38) As in the type the oil ran down from the high priest's head to his body, so in the antitype. All the members of the body of Christ receive their anointing through the great Head of the church—Christ Jesus. Hence the Apostle John says, "The anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you"—the entire church. (1 John 2:27) From the moment that any one becomes a member of the body of Christ, he comes under this anointing—under its provision and its influence. When he turned his back upon sin, accepted our Lord as his Savior and offered himself in full consecration, then our Lord accepted him and presented him to the heavenly Father, who in turn received him and begat him with the holy Spirit. He thus became a member of the church which is the body of Christ, and so came under the anointing influence of the Spirit of God.

ILLUMINATING INFLUENCE OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

Throughout the Gospel age our Lord becomes surety for all who are accepted of God and begotten of the holy Spirit. To these our Lord imputes the merit of his righteousness and accounts them as members of his body, members of the Anointed company. This acceptance will continue until every member of the Christ shall have been received. The heavenly Father purposes to receive this entire company—all for whom our Lord acts as Advocate.

The anointing of the holy Spirit has the effect of enlightening the eyes of understanding of those who receive it. The thought of unction, oiling, is also connected with the phrase. The holy Spirit smooths out, modifies, mollifies the disposition of all who receive this "unction from on high." This work begins in their minds and their hearts, and gradually shows itself in their conduct, as they manifest the fact that they have been anointed with the holy Spirit of God.

In the case of the Christian the begetting is a power which he receives from the heavenly Father and which is the start of a new life. As no human child is conscious of the moment of its begetting, so no spiritual child of God can know the exact time of his begetting. In either case the best evidence is the indication that life exists. As in the case of natural birth the first manifestation of life is the quickening, so it is with the Christian. Those who are begotten of the holy Spirit are quickened, energized, made lively or active. From the moment of begetting they make a measure of development, growth in grace and in knowledge of the Lord, until they reach the place where they wish to do something to show their love, their devotion. Then, and not until then, will others 'take note of them that they have been with Jesus and have learned of him—will perceive that the same mind is in them that was in Christ Jesus our Lord.

The work of Christ and the church during the Gospel age is outlined in Isaiah 61:1-3. This outline has no reference, however, to the work of the Millennial age. The entire Christ is anointed to preach the Gospel. As the Apostle declares, preaching is the method by which God is selecting those who respond to the preaching. (Romans 10:13-15; 1 Corinthians 1:21) God is always pleased with those who endeavor to do right; but during the Gospel age he has been inviting a special class to give him their hearts. The first of this class was our Lord Jesus, whom the Father anointed with the holy Spirit at Jordan. In due time, at Pentecost, the same holy Spirit that had anointed our Lord came in anointing power upon his followers assembled in the upper room in Jerusalem. The antitypical holy anointing oil, poured out upon the antitypical priest at Jordan, had begun to reach the body of Christ.

Throughout this Gospel age the message has been proclaimed, promising joy, peace and comfort to those who have ears to hear. Not many have responded; not many have received the blessing. Not many have seen the privilege of sacrificing now with our Lord in order to share in his glory later on. This message of the kingdom is not one of damnation, but of comfort. Therefore the broken-hearted of the present time are the most ready to respond. The self-satisfied and prosperous, those who have all that they desire, are not at all likely to hear the message of God; for the world holds too many attractions for them. Yet in due time they will find that the things which look so bright and beautiful to them turn, sooner or later, into ashes, as it were—prove merely to be disappointments.

THE ANOINTING INDICATIVE OF OFFICE

In studying the typical priesthood, we note that Aaron and his successors in office were anointed with the holy anointing oil as indicative of the divine blessing and authority. The kings of Israel also were anointed to their office. Even in the case of our Lord it was necessary for the Father to manifest the antitypical anointing in some way. At the age of thirty years Jesus presented himself to God at Jordan to be the promised "priest after the order of Melchizedek." (Psalm 110:4; Hebrews 5:1-10) He had received the divine invitation to become a priest, and had accepted it. Had he not been thus invited by God, he might have gone through the form of baptism at Jordan without any further results. That is to say, if God had not invited our Lord to consecrate himself to the divine service, his baptism would have been merely an empty form; it would not have been followed by a begetting of the holy Spirit to a new nature—the divine. But since he had been "called of God, as was Aaron," this course was followed by the proper results. He was begotten to the divine nature. He became a new creature.

After our Lord had presented himself to be a servant of truth, of righteousness, and had offered himself to be the antitypical priest, the Father indicated his acceptance of the sacrifice by imparting the holy Spirit to our Lord; and the fact that our Lord received the holy Spirit demonstrated that he was the one who was to be the "priest after the order of Melchizedek." John the Baptist bore witness to our Lord's special anointing of the Father. After his baptism at Jordan, the Scriptures speak of Jesus as the Anointed, the one who had received a special anointing from on high, an anointing to the office of priest—ordained, if you please.

Just what our Lord received from on high we can only conjecture. That he actually received some power from God is evident from the record of the Scriptures. When he went up out of the baptismal water, "the heavens were opened unto him" as they had not been at any previous time or to any previous person. (Matthew 3:16) This opening of the heavens we do not understand to have been a rift in the sky. The thought is that the higher, spiritual things were thenceforth opened up to his understanding.

THE PURPOSE OF THE ANOINTING

This anointing of the holy Spirit which our Lord Jesus there received was the divine evidence that he was to be this priest after the Melchizedek Order, and it was followed by the illumination of his mind by the heavenly Father. This illumination had the effect of so enlightening his perceptions that thereafter he could understand the purpose and object of his experiences. Thus he was enabled to appreciate the things which were taking place, and to carry out his consecration to sacrifice his own flesh. This work he finished at Calvary, as he declared with his dying breath. On the third day after his death on the cross, the Father raised him from the dead to be a priest in the full sense of the word, a priest with a spirit body. "The Lord is that Spirit." (2 Corinthians 3:17) "He was put to death in flesh, but quickened in spirit."

As we study the records of our Lord's experiences after his anointing with the holy Spirit at Jordan, we receive a proper conception of the subject of anointing. We recall the statement of the Apostle Paul, that God gave Jesus to be the Head over the church which is his body, and that the spirit-begotten followers of Christ are the members of that body which is the church. (Ephesians 1:22, 23; 1 Corinthians 12:27) This the Apostle terms "a great mystery"—that the Messiah was not to be merely an individual, but a company over which Jesus would be the Head. Then he points out the fact that our Lord Jesus is the Anointed Head of the anointed company.

In Psalm 133:2, the Prophet David also points out that this anointing of the holy Spirit would not be merely upon the High Priest, the Head of the Christ, but also upon the members of the body—that the holy anointing oil ran down from the typical high priest's head over his entire body. This signifies that all the members of the body of Christ would have the same divine authorization—ordination by the same holy Spirit—as had the great Head. As the Head of the anointed company was anointed to preach the glad tidings of great joy which shall be to all peoples, so all the members of that Christ company are anointed to preach the Gospel. As the Head of the church was to do a work of sacrifice, so all the members of the body are to do a work of sacrifice and to lay down their lives in the service of God. As the Head was divinely appointed to do a great work, so all the members of the body of Christ are to be his joint-heirs in the blessing of all the families of the earth.—Romans 8:17; 2 Timothy 2:11, 12; Galatians 3:8, 16, 29.

THE EFFECTS OF THE ILLUMINATION

These thoughts give us a clear appreciation of the church of Christ and of her opportunities through Christ Jesus her Head. The Scriptures point out the fact that of themselves the individual members of the body can do nothing, but that only as they abide in Christ can they partake of the divine promises. If we abide in him and surrender our lives to him, if we seek to know and do the will of God, then we shall become joint-heirs with our Lord in all those things to which he is to become heir. Only one class is to possess the Messianic kingdom—the Christ of God, the anointed company; and only by walking in the footsteps of our Redeemer may any one become a member of that class. Only one priesthood is to bless the world during the incoming age; and only by becoming a member of the Christ can any one become a member of that royal priesthood.

Whoever receives the anointing of the holy Spirit will thereby become illuminated. The effect will be the same as it was with our Lord Jesus. In his discussion of this subject the Apostle points out that those who received this illumination were afterward put through a great fight of afflictions. (Hebrews 10:32, 33) Without the illumination of the holy Spirit the members of the body of Christ would not understand the meaning of their peculiar experiences. All mankind learn something from their experiences, except those who are hopelessly dull. But only the church of Christ are properly qualified to get the full blessing out of all the trials and sufferings of the present time.

This increase of knowledge on the part of the church is due to the illumination of mind which results from spirit-begetting. We learn from experience that all things are working together for good to us because we love God and are called according to his purpose. We come to realize that only by much chiseling and polishing can we be fitted and prepared for a place in the Messianic kingdom. We gradually perceive that the dross in our nature must be separated from the gold, and that the gold must be refined. We come to know that only by threshing and winnowing will the wheat be prepared to be part of the loaf which is to be broken for the world of mankind. We realize that if we remain faithful unto death we shall ultimately shine forth as THE SUN in the kingdom of our heavenly Father.—Matt. 13:43; Mal. 4:2.

God has a great work for the church to do in the future, as well as the comparatively small work of the present time. In order to be qualified for that future work we must have a new nature. When St. Paul declares that the church is God's workmanship, he means that the body of Christ is a new creation. (Ephesians 2:10; 2 Corinthians 5:17) God created man in the divine image and likeness; but man has fallen from his original perfection. Since man's creation the heavenly Father has rested, so far as humanity is concerned, leaving the entire work of man's restoration for Messiah to accomplish during the Millennial age.

A NEW CREATION

Meantime God is bringing forth a new creation, different not only from men, but from angels, cherubim and seraphim. This new creation is to be on the divine plane of existence. The begetting of the holy Spirit is with a view to transforming some members of the fallen Adamic race into new creatures in Christ. Whoever does not receive this begetting of the holy Spirit cannot become a member of the new creation. The begetting which we receive from father Adam is the begetting of the flesh. The begetting which we receive from the heavenly Father is the begetting of the holy Spirit.

Unless we receive a new life we cannot become new creatures in Christ. This new life is represented by the begetting of the holy Spirit. At the moment that we receive this begetting of the holy Spirit, we are also given life-rights as new creatures and are received into the family of God. As new creatures in Christ we must continue to grow and develop, in order that we may be born in the resurrection. Our Lord Jesus was the first born to this new nature, this new being. The church are also to be the first born from the dead.

In order for any one to be born on the spirit plane of existence in the resurrection, it is necessary that he should be developed as a new creature. This would not necessarily mean that he would attain the same perfection of works that our Lord had; for this would not be possible, since we have not the same perfection of mind, of brain power. But it means the same perfection of will. Only as we keep our wills submitted to the heavenly Father's will shall we grow as new creatures. To whatever extent we permit self-will to come in, to that extent we are not submissive. As new creatures we must be fully submissive to the will of God in Christ. Thus shall we be copies of God's dear Son; and only in thus becoming copies of our Lord and Head shall we have a share in the first resurrection. The begetting will receive its verification in this resurrection, when all who have been spirit-begotten will be born on the spirit plane. But the anointing will not reach its verification until after the resurrection; for those who attain unto the first resurrection will be the perfect Anointed Ones, ready to begin their future work.

THE CHRISTIAN'S CROWN OF LIFE

The life which the spirit-begotten will receive in the resurrection will be of a different kind from that which we have now. The animating principle with which we now have to do is the same which we have had since our birth. We have not yet surrendered this life except in our minds. In our consecration we surrendered both our wills and our life as human beings. We have surrendered the right to control our human life, even unto death. The new life will differ from the old in that it will operate through a different organism. We are trusting that according to the Lord's promise we shall attain inherency of life—"the crown of life, that fadeth not away."

Now the spirit-begotten new creatures in Christ are in the embryotic condition. They are not yet born of the Spirit. They are actually new creatures, however, in the sense that the new nature is begun in them; but they are not new creatures in the sense of completion of being. In our Lord's case, although he had devoted his life at baptism, nevertheless he was three and one-half years in giving it over. But not until he had fully laid it down could he receive the new nature in its completeness. Up to that time he did not possess his new life except in the sense that when he had surrendered his earthly life at Jordan, he there received the new life by faith. When on Calvary he surrendered his earthly life, the new life was awarded him; and when he arose from the dead, he received it in its fulness.

We are now new creatures who have not yet received the new body. Although God has given us the earnest of the new nature (Ephesians 1:13, 14), yet an earnest is not a completion of the matter. As long as we have this treasure of the new nature in an earthen vessel, that vessel must invariably be taken into consideration. When we shall have fully surrendered the things of an earthly nature, then will be the time of our "change," when our Lord will give us the glorious spirit body promised to the faithful overcomer: "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."

RIGHT MUST WIN

"God's glory is a wondrous thing,
Most strange in all its ways,
And, of all things on earth, least like
What men agree to praise.

"Thrice blest is he to whom is given
The instinct that can tell
That God is on the field when he Is most invisible.

"And blest is he who can divine
Where right doth really lie,
And dares to take the side that seems
Wrong to man's blindfold eye.

"And right is right, since God is God;
And right the day must win;
To doubt would be disloyalty,
To falter would be sin."

THE DIVINE SANCTUARY AS SEEN IN EZEKIEL'S VISION

STUDY I

TABERNACLE SHADOWS—TEMPLE SYMBOLISMS—NEW IMPORTANCE—THEIR SCOPE—ALL IN CHRIST

The actual Hebrew Tabernacle and its ritual were merely types of realities to come. The Temple of Ezekiel, seen in a vision, and perhaps never intended to be actually constructed, was a symbol both of things to come and of things that have been.

The Tabernacle was of the first or Mosaic Law Covenant, and had nothing of real merit in its services, "having a [mere] shadow [an unsubstantial representation] of [actual and substantial] things to come, and not the very image [exact likeness or substantial reality] of the [actual] things." The participants in the Tabernacle ritual believed themselves cleansed from sin, not perceiving that "the law can never with those sacrifices [of bullocks, goats, rams, lambs, etc., for sin, trespasses, etc.] which they offered year by year continually, make the comers thereunto perfect [justified before God]."

There was no more actuality about the sin-cleansing efficacy of the Tabernacle rites than in the shadow-figures upon a motion-picture screen. Both are pictures for the instruction of those for whom they are intended; the former being "types and examples for our admonition" (1 Corinthians 10:11) The Tabernacle rites "served unto [the purpose of] the example [type] and shadow [obscure representation] of heavenly things [the real things]." (Hebrews 8:5) They were but an evanescent "shadow of [genuine] things to come; but the body [the real solid substantial or essence] is of Christ (Colossians 2:17)"; for "the things which are seen are temporal [evanescent, transitory], but the things which are not seen [the things connected with the divine Word] are eternal [like 'the word which abideth forever']."

SPIRITUAL EDUCATION PROVIDED FOR

Anything intended for purposes of instruction must be made with the utmost accuracy, in order not to mislead but to edify. It is not surprising that, in preparing the shadows and types for the spiritual education of the very sons of God himself, to be educated to become the actual priests and kings of the eternal and all-embracing kingdom of God, "Moses was admonished of God when he was about to make the [typical] Tabernacle [so filled with absolutely essential lessons for the coming royal priesthood]; for, See, saith he [God], that thou make all things [exactly] according to the pattern showed thee in the mount [Mount Sinai, where the typical law was given]." "According to all that I shew thee," said God to Moses, "after the pattern [of the Tabernacle, and the pattern] of all the instruments thereof [each thing in nearly every detail being typical, educational], even so shall ye make it" (Exodus 25:9); "after their pattern, which thou wast caused to see in the mount."—Exodus 25:40, margin; Hebrews 8:5.

In the carrying on of this educational ritual, every act had to be done exactly right; indeed, it was in a sense an impossibility for anything to be done wrong; for any error in performing a rite was prevented by the death of the careless or ignorant priest, as in the instance: "And Nadab and Abihu [priests] the sons of Aaron [the high priest], offered strange fire [fire not taken from off the brazen altar] before the Lord, which he commanded not [God authorized the use of the altar fire alone]. And there went out fire [like lightning] from the Lord [out of the Most Holy], and devoured them [killed them]; and they died before the Lord."—Leviticus 10:1, 2.

To the father and the brothers, horror-stricken, but bound by divine command neither to manifest grief at the death even of son and brother, near and dear (Leviticus 21:10), nor to interrupt the holy ritual (Leviticus 21:12) prepared for the education of the tentatively divine sons of God, the solemn warning came from Moses, God's representative; "Uncover not your heads [murmur not], nor rend your clothes [manifestations of grief]; lest ye die. And ye shall not go out from the door of the tabernacle of the congregation [the Tabernacle structure] lest ye die."—Leviticus 10:6, 7.

TABERNACLE AND TEMPLE TEACHINGS

The Tabernacle was peculiarly the type for the instruction of the little flock. The lessons taught by it, as presented in "Tabernacle Shadows," were almost exclusively concerning the consecration of the priesthood and the sacrifices of the day of atonement, with brief treatments of the ashes of the red heifer and of the sacrifices subsequent to the day of atonement. Most of it in anti-type concerns the work of the anti-typical day of atonement, the Gospel age, the consecration of the little flock, and the tentative justification of the believers, the household of faith of the Gospel age. Not much attention is given to the great company or to the work of the Millennial age.

The Temple of Ezekiel deals symbolically in very small measure with the overcomers prior to the Gospel age; to a larger degree with the Gospel-age overcoming of the little flock; in quite distinct detail with the great company; and to a considerable amount with the Millennial age work, including that of the little flock, the great company, the ancient worthies, the Jews and other people of the world. It supplements the "Tabernacle Shadows," particularly in respect to the obscure treatment of the great company in the "Tabernacle Shadows" and the meagre attention devoted to the great age about to be inaugurated in power and glory.

Throughout the Temple chapters of Ezekiel and in the study of the plan and ritual of the Temple, the condition and the work of the various classes are shown; first as living actualities as the classes struggle through their warfare with sin and imperfection; and finally as memories when the overcoming has been accomplished and the days of struggle may be lived over again in the minds of the blessed ones on the various planes of being, who shall not have "received the grace of God in vain."

"TABERNACLE SHADOWS" A PROFITABLE STUDY

The importance of the Hebrew Tabernacle is difficult to overestimate. It was the dwelling place of Jehovah among his people: "At the door [type of Christ, the Word of God, 'I am the door'] of the Tabernacle [type of Christ, Head and body] of the congregation [type of all people ultimately in covenant relationship with God] before the Lord; where I [Jehovah] will meet you, to speak unto thee. And there I will meet with the children of Israel [all in covenant relationship], and the Tabernacle [Christ, Head and body] shall be sanctified [set apart, consecrated] with my glory [Christ, Head and body, the glory of God]." "And there will I meet with thee [Moses the mediator, type of the Christ the Mediator], and I will commune with thee from above the mercy seat [divine justice], from between the two cherubim [divine love and power] which are upon the ark [Christ, Head and body] of the testimony [covenant, the word of God], of all things which I will give thee in commandment [the new commandment, the spirit of the law] unto the children of Israel [all who shall ultimately be in covenant relationship to God]."—Exodus 29:42, 43; 25:22.

The wonderful divine lessons to the consecrated Christian lie in the fact that "Christ [Head and body] being come an high priest of good things [divine blessings through the Word] to come [in the two-phase kingdom of God], by a greater and more perfect Tabernacle [the Christ, Head and body], not made with hands [but the divinely begotten new creatures], that is to say, not of this building [not the earthly tabernacle], entered in once [once for all] into the holy place [the Most Holy, type of the divine condition], having obtained eternal redemption [deliverance by purchase] for us."—Heb. 9:11, 12.

Of what immeasurable importance it is for the consecrated Christian to understand the Tabernacle! For there, by God's grace, he is to live forever: "Lord, who shall abide in thy Tabernacle [the divine condition]? who shall dwell in thy holy hill [in the royalty of divinity]? He that walketh uprightly and worketh righteousness, and speaketh the truth in his heart." (Psalm 15:1, 2) Speaking prophetically of the great Christ, Head and body, David says: "I [the Christ] will abide in thy Tabernacle forever; I will make my refuge [margin] in the covert [secret place, the divine condition, the Most Holy] of thy wings [provided for in the divine Word]." (Psalm 61:4) How much the child of God should want to know about his future eternal home! Especially now that the great tribulation spoken by the Lord is right upon the royal priesthood, how comforting to realize that "in the time of trouble he shall hide me [the Christ] in his pavilion [his beautiful abode]: in the secret [the holy, the divinely begotten condition] of his Tabernacle [the new creature in Christ, the new mind, the word of God] shall he hide me." (Psalm 27:5) The church has joyed greatly and grown strong in the study of "Tabernacle Shadows."

EZEKIEL'S TEMPLE ALSO PROFITABLE

Of scarcely less profit to the new creation is the study of the divine sanctuary shown by the Prophet Ezekiel. Twice does the prophet emphasize the extraordinary privilege of understanding the significance of his wonderful vision, and urges not merely the giving of the keen attention of the spiritual eye and ear, but the setting of the heart upon the deep things of God therein revealed to the sons of Jehovah: "Behold with thine eyes [of the new mind], and hear with thine [spiritual] ears, and set thine heart upon all that I shall shew thee; for to the intent that I might shew them unto thee [this is the purpose of bringing the new creature to the knowledge of these things] art thou brought hither [to the present time and opportunity, for the Ezekiel Temple contains lessons indispensable now to the sons of God]."—Ezekiel 40:4.

It is important to the new creation's welfare now, as a preparation for future service of the Lord, to give attention to even the minutiae of the Temple: "Set thine heart [margin], and behold with thine eyes [of divine understanding], and hear with thine [spiritual] ears [unstopped], all that I shall say unto thee concerning all the ordinances [ritual] of the house [the house of sons] of the Lord, and all the laws ['out of Zion shall go forth the law.' (Isaiah 2:3)] thereof; and set well thine heart [margin] upon the entering in [the porch and the Holy, the begettal and the divinely begotten condition] of the house [the divine condition of the Christ, Head and body, both in this life and in the divine life to come], with every going forth [gates, Christ, the Word of God] of the sanctuary [the entire structure, the divine kingdom in all phases and planes]."—Ezekiel 44:5.

It would scarcely be possible for our Father to tell his children in stronger language the importance of the message of the Temple of Ezekiel's vision. The Temple teaches more plainly than hitherto some lessons about the condition and the work of the royal priesthood, the great company, and the ancient worthies.

A MARVELOUS FAMILY SECRET

The Apostle Paul makes very clear that "ye [the little flock] are the Temple [eternal abiding place, where God will meet with men] of God, and that the Spirit [power, influence, word] of God dwelleth in you [the Word of God abides in the consecrated Christians]. The Temple [Christ, Head and body] of God is holy [set apart from everything else to the divine service of Jehovah], which Temple ye [the little flock] are." (1 Corinthians 3:16, 17) "Your body [the body of Christ] is the Temple of the holy Spirit [through the Word; God often identifies himself with his Word], which is in you [the Word of God is in our mind, heart and character], which ye have of God [the divine Word comes from God exclusively]." (1 Corinthians 6:19) The Temple which Christ spoke of, "Destroy this temple [the body of Christ] and in three [one-thousand-year] days I will raise it up [resurrect it to the divine plane]," was first his literal, perfect body of flesh and also his mystical body, the Church. "For he spake of the Temple [divine sanctuary] of his body [the body members]."—John 2:19, 21.

In gaining knowledge about the Temple of God the church is learning about herself, her present experiences and her coming work and glory. The Temple building was the structure of which Christ spoke; yet it was but the central feature of a system of courts, rooms, walls, pillars, and porches on different planes, which collectively composed the divine sanctuary. The various parts of the sanctuary symbolize the persons, conditions and offices of the classes in the kingdom of God. In due time all beings in heaven and in earth will together become the sanctuary of the holy Spirit, when God pours out his Spirit upon all flesh, as foretold by the prophet Joel.

This is one of the family secrets of the sons of God; for our beloved Father has made it manifest to his sons, "Having made known unto us [the house of sons] the mystery [secret] of his will [the divine purpose, plan], according to his good [how goodness characterizes our God!] pleasure ['thou hast pleasure in uprightness' (1 Chronicles 29:17); 'all things for thy pleasure are [exist] and were created'] which he hath purposed in himself: that in the dispensation [the better order of things soon to come] of the fullness of times [in the Millennium] he might gather together [many need gathering in] in one [one great world-wide and universe-wide church or family] all things [all intelligent beings] in Christ [a being is in Christ who has in him the words of Christ. All are to learn the truth], both which are in heaven [the fallen angels, now out of Christ, are to have the opportunity to return] and which are on earth [few on earth have the truth about the Word of God; practically all, living and dead, need to be gathered into Christ]; even in him." (Ephesians 1:9, 10) The divine sanctuary of Ezekiel's vision depicts all the classes in heaven and on earth which are to learn the pure Word of God and be gathered into Christ.

UNIVERSAL HARMONY WITH GOD

In a sense God and Christ identify themselves with the Word issuing from the Father and uttered by the Son. The oneness between Father and Son is a oneness of mind, word, character. Human beings now learn the Word of God relating to the divine mind and character, and become one with God and Christ, in answer to the Savior's prayer: "Holy Father, keep through thine own name [through sonship] those [the little flock] whom thou hast given me, that they may be one [in mind, and character] even as we are. ['I and my Father are one.'] Neither pray I for these [the twelve apostles of Jesus] alone, but for them also [the whole church] which shall believe on me through their word [ultimately all classes]; that they all [the 144,000] may be one; as thou, Father [through the divine Word], art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us."—John 17:11, 21, 22.

"Be like-minded," counsels Paul, "having the same love, being of one accord [purpose] of one mind." (Philippians 2:2) That happy age of a universe wholly in the mind, Word of God, is pictured by the prophet Jeremiah: "They shall [need to] teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord [learn to know the Word of the Lord]: for they shall all [all on earth and all in heaven] know me [have the mind of God, each appropriately to his plane of being] from the least of them unto the greatest of them." (Jeremiah 31:34) Then will the divine sanctuary be finished. Then the Word of God will be true that is written: "And I saw no [earthly] temple [built with hands] there [in the two-phase kingdom of God]: for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb [through the Word of God in all and all in it] are the Temple [the Divine Sanctuary] of it." (Revelation 21:22) God and Christ themselves will be the Divine Sanctuary; for they identify themselves with their Word; and it will be the indwelling Word of God, appropriate to each being in his function and plane, that will constitute the various beings as members of those classes and as parts of the sanctuary wherein it will give Jehovah pleasure forever to abide.

THE CROSS MUST PRECEDE THE CROWN

MY DEAR BROTHER:

In the name of our Redeemer and King I greet you. Grace be multiplied to you and all of like precious faith.

With eagerness I look for the mail, since every letter brings gladness to my heart. You understand I can write but one letter per week, hence little opportunity to answer all the dear ones who so kindly write me. As opportunity offers, please assure them of my deep appreciation of their words of loving kindness. I learn that the dear consecrated ones are standing steadfast in the Lord, joyfully "bearing the reproaches that reproached him." Dearly beloved they are, from whom I have much consolation.

In our Father's due time we shall be gathered to the great General Assembly. When I find myself asking, "Is my work in the harvest done?" at once my mind turns to the encouraging words of Volume 3, pages 230 and 231, and especially to Hebrews 10:36, 37. With much spiritual profit we can now read Volume 3, Chapters 6 and 7, SCRIPTURE STUDIES. I am patiently and joyfully waiting on the Lord, having in mind the encouraging words of Hebrews 3:6. Thank God for his exceeding great and precious promises!

The Kingdom of God which we seek is not in the things pleasing to the flesh (Romans 14:17) but is of the Spirit, in peace and joyful hope. How glad we are to forget the things behind and look to the great prize where our joy and pleasures will be eternal! How could we better learn the lessons necessary for the royal priesthood than by experience! Such thoughts cause my heart to leap with joy.

My dear wife arrived Friday and spent an hour with me. The messages of love from the family and others I greatly appreciate. Presents are not receivable, except at Christmas time, when the privilege is graciously granted without limitation. I express my deep gratitude for those sent, just the same.

I hope you are all pursuing the Berean Studies faithfully, and growing in the fruits and graces of the Spirit. Be diligent in this, beloved, and be steadfast to the end. I am happy in the Lord in my present situation, and I am confident all the dear saints in joyful anticipation are waiting for his loving smile and the blessings of his glorious reign. But the cross must precede the crown. Saw our brethren Sunday, who send love.

With much love to you, the family, and all of like precious faith, I remain

Your brother by his grace,

JOSEPH F. RUTHERFORD, Atlanta, Ga.

FRUITS OF THE CHRISTIAN LIFE

[Paragraphs 15-23 of this article, as it originally appeared in issue of August 15, 1918, were reprinted from article entitled, "The Teacher and the Lesson," published in issue of February 1, 1910, which please see.]

SEPTEMBER 22.—MATTHEW 25:20-23; 5:3-10.

PARABLE OF THE POUNDS COVERS THE ENTIRE GOSPEL AGE—OUR LORD'S RETURN—RECKONING WITH HIS SERVANTS—FAITHFULNESS REWARDED WITH RULERSHIP—UNFAITHFULNESS LEADS INTO OUTER DARKNESS OF THE WORLD—FRUITS OF CHARACTER ESSENTIAL TO JOINT-HEIRSHIP WITH CHRIST IN HIS MESSIANIC KINGDOM.

"All things are yours; . . . and ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's."—1 Corinthians 3:21, 23.

The parable of the pounds is an illustration of the fact that at his second advent our Lord, before appearing to the world in power and great glory in a time of unparalleled trouble, will be present among his consecrated people, many of whom will know of his parousia, or presence. He will do among them a judging work, and decide their rewards in proportion to their faithfulness.

It is well to keep in memory the difference between the parable of the pounds and that of the talents. (Luke 19:11-27) Both pounds and talents represented money; but a talent is sixty times as valuable as a pound. In the parable of the pounds each servant received one pound; in the parable of the talents the number received varied. In some respects all of God's people have one common footing and one common privilege of service, as represented by the pound. In another respect their opportunities, privileges and advantages vary, as represented by the talents.

The parable of the talents is another parable of the kingdom of heaven. Our Lord Jesus himself went into the "far country," even heaven itself. (Hebrews 9:24) But before he departed, he delivered to his servants certain blessings, privileges, opportunities, "to every man according to his several ability." The beginning of this parable was in the days of the apostles, when Jesus ascended on high and at Pentecost shed forth in the Father's name the holy Spirit, communicating a blessing upon each one of his followers, as represented in the opportunities and privileges given to each.

All down the Gospel age these servants have been making more or less use of their privileges, and more or less wisely exercising themselves to serve the Master. Some traded with their talents—used them in preaching, teaching, etc. Others hid theirs in the earth, perhaps under cares and responsibilities. "After a long time the Lord of those servants cometh and reckoneth with them." This long time is the Gospel age, in the end of which our Lord was to return to hear the report of his servants and to reward them. This is the parousia of Messiah, and his testing, sifting work in his church.

THE RECKONING HOUR NOW PRESENT

We should distinctly note that this testing and proving is not of the world; for our Lord has never recognized as his servants any except the fully consecrated. Many Christian people believe that we are now in the time when the servants of the Lord are rendering up their accounts, and when he is commending some and reproving others. But all of this testing and rewarding of the servants of Christ is evidently prior to any outward manifestation of the king in his glory; for the worthy ones are to share with the Master in his glorious apokalupsis. (1 Peter 4:13) Therefore this testing must demonstrate who are the worthy ones.

In the parable the servant who had received five talents and had used them wisely, energetically, faithfully, loyally, had doubled them, and was invited to share in the Master's joy and glory. His reward would be a position as ruler over many. In other words, the service of the present life is but an insignificant one in comparison to the glorious ministry which awaits the Lord's faithful people in the future, when they shall sit with Messiah in his throne and, as kings and priests, shall bless, instruct, uplift and control all the families of the earth.

The servant who had been given two talents and who was equally faithful received his Master's approval in equally kind and benevolent terms. He also was a good and faithful servant over a few things; he also would be set as a ruler over many things; he also might enter into the joy of his Lord. But the servant who had failed to use his talent was branded as wicked and slothful. He knew in advance that the talent was given him for use, because he had professed to be a faithful servant. His failure to use the talent proved him to be disloyal, unfaithful. Therefore it was taken away from him.

It is not for us to presume to say that the Lord will have no blessing whatever for that unfaithful servant. All the time he was a servant, he respected the talent as his Master's property; he did not lose it. But he did not use it properly. Seemingly he represents a class very similar to that called the "foolish virgins" in another parable. This class will not only fail to get into the glories of the kingdom but will surely get into the time of trouble and its outer darkness, disappointment and chagrin, with which the Scriptures declare the Gospel age will end and the Millennium be ushered in. The Lord grant that this lesson may help some of his consecrated servants to be more faithful, more careful, in the use of their consecrated talents, in order that they may glorify the Lord and may hear his "Well done!" in the end!

OUR LORD'S MESSAGE DIFFERENT FROM OTHERS

Fear of the Master has been one great difficulty with many of us in the past. We should have gotten better acquainted with him. We should have learned more respecting his true character and his real purposes. If now the eyes of our understanding are opening, if now we are seeing the beauty of our talents and privileges of service as never before, let us quickly dig the talent out of the earth, wash it free from all soil and use it carefully, zealously, vigorously, for the praise of our King, redeeming the time, knowing that the days are unfavorable.

Of our Lord we read: "Never man spake like this man!" (John 7:46) He was "the man Christ Jesus"; but he was not a fallen man, not a sinner. His life was not derived from Adam, but was transferred from a heavenly to an earthly condition. Hence as a man he was "holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners." (Hebrews 7:26) More than this, at the time of his consecration unto death he entered into a covenant of sacrifice with Jehovah, and thereupon he received the anointing of the holy Spirit, "the power of the highest." What need have we for wonder, then, when we read that "he taught as one having authority," as one who knew and understood the things which he presented!
